Horizontal gaze nystagmus (HGN) test results constitute a scientific report discoverable under § 17-16-23. The officer's findings are not merely data recordation or notes but are based on a scientific analysis of the defendant's performance of a recognized test. Oral communication of the results to the defendant and even an "open file" policy of the prosecutor do not relieve the state of its burden to furnish a written report to the defendant. The failure to furnish this report requires exclusion of not only the report but also the officer's oral testimony as to the results of the test. However, unless the defendant can show how this evidence has harmed him, its admission constitutes harmless error.

A certificate of inspection of the Intoxilyzer is not discoverable as a scientific report under § 17-16-23.

The prosecution is not required to comply with a defendant's notice to produce documents relating to the Intoxilyzer, such as log sheets showing the results of tests performed on other subjects, service and operation manuals, inspection reports, and service and repair records. Where the prosecutor states at trial without contradiction that the requested documents are not in his possession, he has no duty to produce them.

Because a Brady motion calls for the production of exculpatory evidence known to the prosecution but unknown to the defense, it does not reach evidence of the defendant's performance on field sobriety tests, as that evidence is known to the defense. In preparing his defense, the defendant would have recited his performance to defense counsel or to an expert for evaluation. Moreover, even if the defendant is unaware of his performance on the tests, no Brady violation occurs where evidence of his performance becomes available to him at trial.

Since a DUI suspect's medical records clearly are protected by the right to privacy guaranteed by the state constitution, they cannot be disclosed without the suspect's consent unless their production is required by state law. In the absence of waiver and without notice to the suspect or an opportunity to object, it is not appropriate under § 24-9-40(a) for the state in a criminal case to subpoena a suspect's own personal medical records which are then in the possession of a physician, hospital, or health care facility.

When there is no attempt by the defense to push for discovery of a gas chromatograph printout, no refusal by the state to produce that document, and no request by the defense for a continuance for additional time to examine it, there would be no abuse of the trial court's discretion in admitting the testimony of the state's expert witness concerning this printout, despite the prosecutor's failure to produce it before trial.

h. Chain of Custody

The courts have insisted that the chain of custody of bodily substance samples between extraction and testing must be established for the admissibility of the test results. In Pittman v. State, the Court of Appeals held that there had to be an accounting of who took the sample, how it was labelled, how it was sent to the state crime laboratory and who received it at the lab. The Georgia Supreme Court, in 1968, however, insisted that the custody chain need not be absolutely air-tight. "The circumstances need only establish reasonable assurance of the identity of the sample." Even contamination would not render a blood sample inadmissible.

When a urine sample is routinely handled and nothing in the record raises a suspicion that the urine tested was other than that taken from the defendant, the evidence of tests on such urine is admissible.

i. Right to Independent Analysis of Blood Sample

In order to prevail upon a claim that the defendant's due process rights under the Fourth Amendment to the federal constitution were violated by the state's destruction of his blood sample before he had an opportunity to independently test it, the defendant must show bad faith. Bad faith is a question of fact for the trial court to determine, and the trial court's finding will not be disturbed on appeal if there is any evidence to support it. If there is evidence to support a finding that the defendant failed to show bad faith, the trial's court decision to allow the blood test results into evidence will be upheld.

j. Exceptions

Locomotive engineers are not required, under Georgia's Implied Consent Act, to submit to chemical tests to determine the presence of alcohol or drugs after a train/automobile collision at a grade crossing.

9. Inferences of Intoxication or Nonintoxication

Section 40-6-392(b) constructs a scheme whereby (1) a test result showing an alcohol concentration of 0.05 grams or less may give rise to an inference of nonintoxication and (2) a test result of an alcohol concentration in excess of 0.05 grams but less than 0.08 grams will not give rise to an inference of intoxication or nonintoxication but may be considered by the trier of fact with other evidence to determine intoxication. A test result showing an alcohol concentration of 0.08 grams or more in the person's blood, breath, or urine is sufficient to determine intoxication per se without resort to any inference. The General Assembly's lowering of the alcohol concentration necessary to establish intoxication per se to 0.08 grams or more in 2001 rendered obsolete the provision for 0.08 grams or more as an alcohol concentration giving rise to an inference of intoxication. Therefore, the General Assembly deleted this inference from the scheme outlined in § 40-6-392(b). Nevertheless, it is clear that under this scheme a conviction can be returned where a test result between 0.05 and 0.08 grams is combined with other evidence to establish intoxication.

This statutory scheme does not apply to a person driving a commercial motor vehicle. In such a case, if there was at the time alleged or within three hours after driving or being in actual physical control of a moving vehicle from alcohol consumed before such driving or being in actual physical control ended an alcohol concentration of 0.04 grams or more in the person's blood, breath, or urine, the person shall be in violation of § 40-6-391(i). Nor does this statutory scheme apply to a person under the age of 21. In such a case, if there was at the time alleged or within three hours after driving or being in actual physical control of a moving vehicle from alcohol consumed before such driving or being in actual physical control ended an alcohol concentration of 0.02 grams or more in the person's blood, breath, or urine, the person shall be in violation of § 40-6-391(k).

Former § 40-6-392(b)(3) provided that a certain level of alcohol concentration would give rise to a presumption of intoxication. There were a number of decisions ruling on whether a jury charge given in the language of § 40-6-392(b)(3) created an unconstitutional, burden-shifting presumption that a person with a certain level of alcohol concentration was intoxicated. With the deletion of § 40-6-392(b)(3) in 2001, there is no longer a statutory basis for giving such a charge. Thus, the prior decisions are no longer controlling authority and should not be followed.

It is not necessary that a blood alcohol level test administered by a hospital in providing medical treatment be performed in compliance with the procedures of § 40-6-392(a) in order to be considered a valid test for the purpose of applying the inferences permitted under § 40-6-392(b).

In Stevenson v. State, the court rejected the defendant's contention that § 40-6-391(a)(5) [now (a)(6)] created an impermissible irrebuttable presumption that a person with a trace, no matter how minuscule, of marijuana in his system is an unsafe driver. The court held that this subsection criminalizes a specific act: driving or being in control of a moving vehicle while there is any amount of marijuana or controlled substance in a person's blood or urine. The state must prove the elements of this offense beyond a reasonable doubt, but those elements do not include impaired driving ability.

A jury instruction that the defendant's refusal to submit to a chemical test is admissible against him does not mandate the jury to infer guilt from the refusal. It merely informs the jury that it may consider the fact.

10. Defenses

The basic defense in a DUI case will probably be an attack on the presence of one of the actus reus elements, either the driving or actual physical control of the moving vehicle or the circumstance of being under the influence. No mens rea is specified by the statute, so nothing more than voluntary action need be shown.

In Cook v. State, the court rejected a claim of chronic alcoholism as a DUI defense. The Cook court held that this was voluntary intoxication. If the court were convinced, however, under § 16-3-4, that there was involuntary intoxication, it would seem that there would be a defense.

It is not a defense to a violation of § 40-6-391 that prior to the time of the defendant's arrest, he had been taking a prescription drug, the major component of which was alcohol. The fact that a person is legally entitled to use a drug is not a defense. However, unless that person is rendered incapable of driving safely as a result of using a drug which he is legally entitled to use, he is not in violation of the DUI statute. The state is not required to negate the possibility that one's high blood alcohol level was caused by something other than his consumption of alcoholic beverages. Once the state establishes a prima facie case, it is up to the defense to overcome such evidence; the state need not disprove beyond a reasonable doubt every fact constituting any and all affirmative defenses related to the culpability of the accused.

A person may not defend against a charge that he was driving under the influence of alcohol to the extent that it was less safe to drive by showing that his impaired driving ability resulted from legal drug use as well as alcohol consumption.

Where a jury finds that a defendant was not driving under the influence of involuntary intoxication but was driving under the influence of voluntary intoxication, there can be no logical conclusion that his voluntary intoxication was the result of accident or misfortune. In such a case, the failure to charge the jury on the defense of accident or misfortune would not be reversible error.

A charge on accident or misfortune would be authorized in vehicular homicide/DUI cases, however, if there is evidence that the defendant could not have avoided the collision due to circumstances beyond his control.

Without a factual or legal basis to justify a DUI violation, a charge on justification would be unwarranted.

There is no immunity from prosecution for DUI because the act was committed on private property rather than a public road.

11. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

If the jury reveals which of the lesser included offenses serves as the foundation for finding a person to have been a "less safe" driver under the DUI statute, sentences of the remaining lesser offenses may be appropriate. Since reckless conduct requires harm or danger to "another person," an element not required by the DUI statute to be alleged and proven, it is not a lesser included offense as a matter of law. It also is not a lesser included offense as a matter of fact, unless the accusation includes an allegation of harm or danger to another person and there is proof of such at trial.

Where the facts alleged in the accusation with regard to the DUI charge are not sufficient to establish the lesser traffic offenses as well, the lesser traffic offenses cannot merge with the DUI charge as a matter of fact, regardless of the evidence adduced at trial. Furthermore, where there is ample evidence supporting the DUI charge absent evidence of the other traffic offenses, there is no merger because the evidence required to prove the other traffic offenses has not been "used up" proving the DUI charge.

Public drunkenness is not, as a matter of fact or law, a lesser included offense of driving under the influence of alcohol to the extent it is less safe to drive.

A defendant who has been convicted of only one of two offenses involving driving under the influence of drugs, as contained in two counts of an indictment, has not been subjected to double jeopardy.

Where under the facts in a case the offense of driving under the influence is a lesser included offense in the violation of a probationary license offense under the habitual violator statute, the offenses merge, and the defendant may not be convicted of the lesser included offense of driving under the influence.

The offenses of driving while having marijuana or its metabolites present in the urine and possession of marijuana by ingestion merge as a matter of fact where there is no evidence independent of the blood analysis which shows any possession of marijuana by the defendant. Since all the evidence is used up in proving one crime, it is error for the trial court to sentence the defendant for both charges.

A single act of driving under the influence of multiple substances is a single offense. As the defendant has committed only one offense of driving under the influence, he may not be subjected to multiple punishment for being under the influence of multiple substances.

Where charges for driving under the influence of alcohol to the extent it was less safe and driving under the influence of drugs are not predicated upon precisely the same conduct, the defendant may be convicted and sentenced on both charges.

Where two DUI charges are based on the same conduct, the evidence will not support convictions of two separate offenses. Even though the trial court enters only a single sentence, if that sentence applies to both DUI counts of the accusation, by definition the trial court has convicted the defendant of two counts of DUI. Unless the trial court merges one count into the other or indicates that the sentence applies only to one count, the sentence applies to both counts and is improper.

12. Punishment

The punishment for DUI is set out in § 40-6-391(c). A repeat offender is treated more harshly than a first or second offender. Section 40-5-63(a) expressly requires that the driver's license of any person convicted of violating § 40-6-391 shall by operation of law be suspended, unless the driver's license has been previously suspended pursuant to §§ 40-5-67.1 and 40-5-67.2. The driver's license of any person convicted of a drug related offense pursuant to § 40-6-391 shall be suspended according to the requirements of § 40-5-75. Furthermore, each charge for which a conviction was obtained must be treated as a separate transaction for the purpose of imposing a license suspension, even if the convictions arise from a single incident.

The punishment for driving or being in actual physical control of any moving commercial motor vehicle while there is 0.04 percent or more by weight of alcohol in the person's blood, breath, or urine is set out in § 40-6-391(i).

The punishment for a person under the age of 21 driving or being in actual physical control of any moving vehicle while the person's alcohol concentration is 0.02 grams or more is set out in § 40-6-391(k). Any term of imprisonment served is subject to the provisions of § 17-10-3.1. The driver's license of any person convicted of violating § 40-6-391(k) shall be suspended as provided by § 40-5-57.1.

The punishment for a licensed school bus driver driving a school bus in violation of § 40-6-391 is set out in § 40-6-391.3.

A person convicted of violating § 40-6-391 a second or subsequent time within a five-year period shall have his notice of conviction along with his photograph published in the legal organ of the appropriate county. Any motor vehicle operated by a person who has been declared a habitual violator for three DUI violations and whose license has been revoked and who is arrested and charged with another DUI violation, is declared to be contraband and subject to forfeiture to the state, provided that the forfeiture shall not be absolute unless the defendant is finally convicted of such offense.

Without a showing that there is no rational relationship between the state's compelling interest in protecting the public's safety and the distinction drawn between first offenders contained in § 40-6-391(f), the Georgia Supreme Court held that the exclusion of DUI offenses from the coverage of the First Offender Act does not violate a defendant's right to the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the federal and state constitutions.

In 1998, Heidi Marie Flye along with her children were killed in a motor vehicle collision which involved a drunk driver who had been convicted of driving under the influence in this state less than a year before the collision. In 1999, the General Assembly found that these deaths could have been prevented had the driver been required to have an ignition interlock device installed on his vehicle. If the drunk driver's vehicle had been equipped with such a breath testing device, it would have prevented him from starting his vehicle and driving it. In an effort to strengthen the laws requiring the installation and use of ignition interlock devices the General Assembly enacted what is now commonly known and cited as Heidi's Law. However, Heidi's Law could not be effectively implemented due to several inconsistencies within the law itself and with other Code provisions. Thus, it was extensively revised by the General Assembly in 2000. The law was revised again in 2001. Section 42-8-111 now provides that in addition to any other provision of probation, upon a resident's second or subsequent conviction of driving under the influence within a five-year period, for which he is granted probation, the sentencing court is required to order as a condition of probation that the person must have installed and must maintain in each motor vehicle registered in his name for a six-month period a functioning, certified ignition interlock device, unless the court exempts the person from these requirements based upon the court's determination that they would subject the person to undue financial hardship. Furthermore, that person must have installed and must maintain in any other motor vehicle to be driven by him during the six-month period a functioning, certified ignition interlock device. He is not allowed during that period to drive any motor vehicle whatsoever that is not so equipped.

In the event the court finds that the person has violated the terms of his probation, his driving privilege will be revoked by the Department of Driver Services for one year from the date of probation revocation. Upon a second violation during the same period, his driving privilege will be revoked by the department for five years from the date of the second probation revocation.

A probationer must notify any person who rents, leases, or loans a motor vehicle to him of his driving restriction. Anyone who knowingly rents, leases, or loans a motor vehicle to the probationer without a functioning, certified ignition interlock device is guilty of a misdemeanor. A probationer who requests or solicits another person to blow into the ignition interlock device or to start the motor vehicle for the purpose of providing him with an operable vehicle is guilty of a misdemeanor. Likewise, any person who blows into the device or starts the motor vehicle for the purpose of providing the probationer with an operable vehicle is guilty of a misdemeanor. Finally, anyone who tampers with or circumvents the operation of the device is guilty of a misdemeanor.

The punishment for the offense of endangering a child by driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs is in accordance with § 16-12-1(d), relating to the offense of contributing to the delinquency, unruliness, or deprivation of a child. This offense does not merge with the offense of driving under the influence for the purpose of sentencing.

For additional penalty assessments for violations relating to driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs to be used for compensating innocent victims of crime, see § 15-21-112.

13. Tort Liability of Police Officers

A police officer, who has observed a noticeably intoxicated driver, has no duty to protect a member of the general public from the negligence of the intoxicated driver by arresting or otherwise restraining the intoxicated driver from continuing to drive. Before a special duty can be imposed on the police officer to protect an individual from the negligence of the intoxicated driver, there must be a special relationship either between the police officer and the individual which sets the individual apart from the general public or between the police officer and the intoxicated driver which imposes a duty on the officer to control the driver's conduct. If, when the police officer encounters the intoxicated driver, the individual is not an identifiable victim in immediate danger of harm, there is no special relationship and no special duty to protect the individual from the intoxicated driver's negligence. If the police officer's encounter with the intoxicated driver is a passing one, there is no special relationship and no special duty imposed, because the police officer exercises no control over the intoxicated driver. Although a police officer has authority to arrest a driver without a warrant where an offense is committed in his presence or within his immediate knowledge, this authority alone does not create a duty to arrest for purposes of a tort action.

14. Double Jeopardy

The actions taken by a school to attempt to correct a defendant's drunken on-campus behavior in order to protect others would not be punitive but remedial and would not bar a subsequent criminal prosecution of the defendant on a DUI charge.

I. Fleeing or Attempting to Elude Pursuing Police Officer

Under § 40-6-395(a), any driver who willfully fails or refuses to obey a police officer's signal to stop his vehicle is guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. This provision helps to fill in part of the gap left by § 16-10-52, which covers only escapes from custody or confinement. In order to show a violation of this provision, the state must show that the officer allegedly eluded was in the required uniform and that his vehicle was appropriately marked. It should be noted, however, that this provision applies whether the pursuing police officer is in his vehicle or on foot. The state must also show that the signal to bring the vehicle to a stop was given in the manner alleged. The driver's willfulness may be established circumstantially.

In Harbuck v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court rejected the defendant's contention that § 40-6-395(a) was an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority because its lack of standards for measuring driver compliance with a police directive to stop resulted in a violation of the statute being defined by the judgment of the arresting officer giving that directive. The court held that the General Assembly's failure to include within the statute the amount of time that must elapse or the distance that must be traveled before the driver's failure to stop becomes criminal conduct is not an improper delegation of legislative authority to the arresting officer. The officer, by acting on his determination that he has probable cause to believe a crime is being committed, is exercising the executive branch function of enforcing the law, not the legislative function of defining what constitutes a crime.

The Harbuck court also held that § 40-6-395(a) was not unconstitutional for failing to have within it a justification defense. There is no constitutional requirement that a statute criminalizing certain conduct must contain a statement that a justification defense may be asserted. Moreover, such a requirement is unwarranted given the existing statutory defense that "[t]he fact that a person's conduct is justified is a defense to prosecution for any crime based on that conduct."

Because the offense can be committed by a defendant's failure to respond to a visual signal of the officer either by hand or by emergency light, the failure to allege which type of visual signal the defendant was given would subject an accusation to a special demurrer.

The focus in the statute is on the officer or vehicle being identified clearly as a police officer or police vehicle, and not on any particular officer. Thus, there would be no fatal variance in a case where the indictment alleges that the defendant fled from one officer, but the evidence shows that he fled from another.

Inasmuch as § 40-6-395(a) does not require a lawful stop, a defendant cannot argue that an officer's lack of an articulable suspicion to stop him rendered the evidence insufficient to support his conviction.

Under § 40-6-395(b)(5), anyone who, while fleeing or attempting to elude a pursuing police vehicle or police officer in an attempt to escape arrest for any offense other than a violation of the Uniform Rules of the Road, operates his vehicle in excess of 30 miles an hour above the posted speed limit, strikes or collides with another vehicle or a pedestrian, flees in traffic conditions which place the general public at risk of receiving serious injuries, or leaves the state is guilty of a felony punishable by a fine of $5,000, by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years, or by both fine and imprisonment. The sentence for this offense cannot be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld, and the charge cannot be reduced to a lesser offense, merged with any other offense, or served concurrently with any other offense.

Where all of the evidence is used to prove the crime of felony fleeing or attempting to elude, a misdemeanor conviction for fleeing or attempting to elude would merge into the greater offense.

Since the offense of felony fleeing or attempting to elude requires proof of additional material elements, it cannot merge with the offense of felony habitual violator. Moreover, by law a sentence for felony fleeing or attempting to elude cannot be merged with that of another offense.

Under the facts presented in Gibson v. State, the Court of Appeals found that the crime of obstructing an officer was included in the crime of fleeing or attempting to elude an officer. The indictment's allegations for fleeing or attempting to elude an officer were sufficient also to satisfy the elements of the offense of obstruction. Under the facts, there was no material distinction between "willfully" disobeying the officer's order as prohibited by § 40-6-395(a) and disobeying it "knowingly and willfully" as prohibited by § 16-10-24(a). Because the defendant's testimony provided evidence satisfying the required elements of the offense of obstruction, the court held that the trial court erred in refusing to give the requested charge on obstruction as a lesser included offense. Since the evidence supporting the greater charge was in conflict, the error was not harmless. The defendant was therefore entitled to a new trial.

Where the felony of fleeing or attempting to elude a police officer results in the death of another person, it can serve as the predicate felony supporting a felony murder conviction.

Unless there is evidence that a passenger in the vehicle acted in concert with the driver in an effort to flee from police, the passenger would be entitled to a directed verdict in his favor on a charge of fleeing from police.

Section 40-6-395(c) punishes those who impersonate a law enforcement official by means of a falsely labelled vehicle or motorcycle. The subsection also punishes those who impersonate law enforcement officials in order to control traffic. Because this subsection has no specific penalty, this offense is punishable as a misdemeanor under § 40-6-1.

III. Other Traffic Offenses Under the Uniform Rules of the Road

A. Driving Too Fast for Conditions

Some appellate court litigation has developed concerning the other traffic offenses under the Uniform Rules of the Road. Section 40-6-180 prohibits driving a vehicle at a speed "greater than is reasonable and prudent under the conditions and having regard for the actual and potential hazards then existing." A predecessor statute which was similarly worded was upheld against a claim that the statute was unconstitutionally vague in Teague v. Keith. The Teague case, however, was a civil case as are many cases involving the Uniform Rules of the Road because of the tort doctrine of negligence per se. The Teague court emphasized that this was not a criminal case, relying strongly on a prior Georgia Supreme Court case which made the civil/criminal distinction in dicta and which suggested that a similarly worded statute was unconstitutional in a criminal context. An identical kind of analysis was adopted by the court in Eidson v. Felder in connection with the predecessor statute to § 40-6-123, concerning the proper procedure for turning. In light of these decisions it would appear that a statute may be precise enough in the civil context, yet unconstitutionally vague in the criminal context. The Teague case would appear to doom § 40-6-180 as a criminal statute.

However, it should be noted that §§ 40-6-181 and 40-6-182 are much more specific in expressing speed restrictions in miles per hour and in authorizing administrative establishment of speed limits. Section 40-6-180 meets constitutional certainty requirements when read together with § 40-6-181. In Bilbrey v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court held that while § 40-6-180 standing alone does not meet these requirements, the statute furnishes sufficient criteria when read in conjunction with § 40-6-181. When read together, the code sections make it reasonably clear that when a vehicle encounters one of the listed road conditions or other hazards caused by weather or highway conditions, the law requires a reduction in speed below the maximum posted limit. Although the statutory scheme is not as specific as some, when read as a whole it gives sufficient warning of what conduct is unlawful. This is the result due process requires.

B. Racing

Another statute that has come before the appellate courts for an important interpretation is § 40-6-186(b), which deals with speed races and drag racing. In Perkins v. State, the court held that the section sets out two crimes: (1) racing or speed contests and (2) drag races, the latter of which requires prearranged courses, finish lines, etc. If the defendant is charged with one of the offenses, the court said, it is error to inform the jury with regard to the other one. In Dodd v. State, the court, finding sufficient evidence of racing, held that it was not legally significant that the automobiles involved in the race were capable of going faster than they were or that the distance between the automobiles basically stayed the same.

B.1. Driving with Suspended, Canceled, or Revoked Vehicle Registration

No motor vehicle registration may be issued or renewed unless the tag agent receives satisfactory proof of minimum insurance coverage of the vehicle and, in the case of a private passenger vehicle, proof that such coverage was initially issued for a minimum term of six months.

Any person who knowingly drives a motor vehicle on any public road or highway of this state at a time when the vehicle registration is suspended, canceled, or revoked is guilty of a misdemeanor.

For a first conviction or a plea of nolo contendere, the defendant is subject to imprisonment for not more than 12 months. In addition, there may be imposed a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $1,000, at the discretion of the court.

For a second or subsequent conviction within five years as measured from the dates of previous arrests for which convictions were obtained or pleas of nolo contendere were accepted to the date of the current arrest for which a conviction is obtained or a plea of nolo contendere accepted, the defendant, being guilty of a high and aggravated misdemeanor, is subject to imprisonment for not less than ten days nor more than 12 months. In addition, there may be imposed a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $2,500.

When the Department of Driver Services receives a record of the defendant's conviction, it will extend the period of suspension or revocation of the vehicle's registration for six months and suspend the defendant's driver's license.

C. Other Minor Traffic Offenses

Other relatively minor traffic offenses upon which cases have been litigated include (1) section 40-6-181, exceeding the maximum motor vehicle speed limit; (2) section 40-6-2, willfully failing to obey a lawful order of a police officer who is directing, controlling, or regulating traffic; (3) section 40-6-71, failing to yield the right of way when turning left; (4) section 40-6-72, failure to yield right of way; (5) section 40-6-74, failing to yield to an emergency vehicle; (6) section 40-6-140, failing to yield to a train; (7) section 40-6-163, failing to stop for a school bus which has actuated its flashers and stop-arm; (8) section 40-6-48(1), improperly changing lanes; (9) section 40-6-72(b), disregarding a stop sign; (10) section 40-6-97(b), standing "on a highway for the purpose of soliciting employment, business, or contributions from the occupant of any vehicle;" (11) section 40-6-10, failing to produce proof of insurance; and (12) section 40-6-253(b), consuming an alcoholic beverage or possessing an open alcoholic beverage container while in the passenger area of a motor vehicle.

Another particularly noteworthy offense is the misdemeanor set out in § 40-6-298. Section 40-6-290 et seq., dealing with bicycle riding, sets up certain rules, and § 40-6-298(b) forbids parents and guardians from authorizing or knowingly permitting their children or wards to violate any of these provisions. Thus, a parent who is aware of his child's persistent violation of these provisions and does not halt this behavior is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Other noteworthy statutes include §§ 40-6-270, 40-6-271, 40-6-272, 40-6-273, and 40-6-275, which set up a series of duties for drivers who are involved in accidents with the precise content of duties dependent on the nature of the accident. The failure to stop at and return to the scene of an accident involving death, personal injury, or damage to a vehicle (§ 40-6-270) and the failure to notify the driver of an unattended vehicle of the name and address of the driver striking the unattended vehicle (§ 40-6-271) provide criminal punishment, while the other duties are criminally enforced by § 40-6-1.

D. Defenses

Since most violations of the Uniform Rules of the Road are strict liability offenses, the absence of a criminal scheme or undertaking or of criminal negligence is not available as a defense to one charged with such a violation. Thus, an instruction on the defense of accident would not be authorized.

Where the defendant is charged with a strict liability crime, such as a traffic violation, he is entitled to a justification charge upon a proper evidentiary showing, if he meets the statutory requirements of § 16-3-20, and the entire charge does not otherwise fairly present the defendant's theory to the jury. In such a case, the defendant admits the conduct but is not precluded from showing that his actions were justified under § 16-3-20. Thus, where the defendant's testimony could support a justification charge and it is the sole defense, such a charge should be given by the trial court whether or not requested by the defendant.

IV. Offenses Involving Title Certificates, Identification of Motor Vehicles or Motor Vehicle Parts, and License Plates

A. Generally

Section 40-3-90 makes it a felony to, with fraudulent intent, (1) alter, forge or counterfeit a title certificate, (2) alter or forge an assignment of a title certificate or security interest, (3) knowingly possess or use an altered, forged or counterfeit title certificate, (4) give false information in connection with the obtaining of a title certificate, (5) alter or forge a notice of additional lienholder or security interest holder, or (6) wilfully violate any provision of the Motor Vehicle Certificate of Title Act after having been convicted for a prior violation of the Act.

Section 40-2-72 makes it a felony, punishable by two to five years in prison, to violate the provisions for disabled veterans' license tags to be found in §§ 40-2-69 to 40-2-71.

Section 40-4-22(a) makes it a felony to knowingly buy, sell, receive, dispose of, conceal, use, or possess any motor vehicle, or any part thereof, from which the manufacturer's serial numbers or other distinguishing numbers or identifying marks have been removed, defaced, covered, altered, or destroyed for the purpose of concealing or misrepresenting the vehicle's identity. The guilty knowledge of the alteration has been held to be the gist of the offense and a conviction has been upheld where the defendant sold a car with altered tags and claimed he would produce a bill of sale which he never did.

Section 40-2-7 makes it a misdemeanor to remove a license plate from a vehicle or to affix to a vehicle a license plate not authorized by law for use on it with intent to conceal or misrepresent the identity of the vehicle or its owner. Section 40-2-5 makes it a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature (1) to remove or transfer a license plate from the motor vehicle for which such license plate was issued; (2) to sell or otherwise transfer or dispose of a license plate upon or for use on any motor vehicle other than the vehicle for which such license plate was issued; (3) to buy, receive, use, or possess for use on a motor vehicle any license plate not issued for use on such motor vehicle; or (4) to operate a motor vehicle bearing a license plate which was improperly removed or transferred from another vehicle.

Under prior law, the courts recognized an overlap of these two statutes. Although the court in Dismuke v. State purported to distinguish between affixing (§ 40-2-7) and using (§ 40-2-5) an improper license plate, it was clear that the affixing of the plate could be prosecuted as a use. In Studdard v. State, the court held that where the car was a stolen car and the license plate was stolen from another vehicle, there had to be some proof of knowledge of the stolen nature of either one in order to show an intent to conceal the car's true identity.

Under § 40-2-136(a), upon a person's second or subsequent conviction of violating § 40-6-391 within five years, as measured from the dates of previous arrests for which convictions were obtained to the date of the current arrest for which a conviction is obtained, the trial court must issue an order requiring that the license plates of all motor vehicles registered in that person's name be surrendered to the court. The commissioner must revoke each such license plate upon receiving notice from the trial court. It is a misdemeanor for that person to obtain a new license plate or plates before he has been issued a limited driving permit or probationary driver's license or before his driver's license has been reissued or reinstated, whichever first occurs.

B. Mens Rea

Three cases in the early 1920's interpreting predecessor statutes to current provisions deal with the issue of the required mental element in traffic offenses. Traffic offenses have often been described as "strict liability" offenses in that no culpability is required for conviction. This statement is generally true in Georgia with the important caveat that there is a mental awareness element involved, even if the offense is otherwise a "strict liability" one. In Davis v. State, the defendant was prosecuted under the predecessor to § 40-2-41, which punishes the failure to display a license plate. The defendant asserted that he was aware that he did not have a license plate but that it had been stolen the night before his arrest. He had, in fact, been told by the sheriff that he could drive without a plate until he got a replacement. His conviction was affirmed. In Harden v. State, on the other hand, a conviction under the same statute was reversed where the defendant had a license plate on his car at the beginning of his trip but it apparently was stolen or fell off during the trip without his knowledge.

Davis and Harden are not in conflict and, when taken together, indicate that, while no intent to violate the law need be shown, an intent to do the prohibited act is necessary. Thus, for example, it is not necessary to prove an awareness that running a red light is illegal, but an intent to run the red light is proven by the act of doing so. Therefore, the Harden defendant won a reversal because he did not intend to drive the car without a license plate, while Davis definitely did intend to do so even though it was for a very good reason.

As the court wrote in Nelson v. State, interpreting a predecessor statute to former GCA § 68-1702, "criminal intent is simply the intent to do the act which results in the violation of the law and not the intent to commit the crime itself." It should be noted that while most of the traffic regulations in the title on motor vehicles and traffic have no explicit mens rea requirements, some include words like "knowingly" or "wilfully." These words import a mens rea element beyond the mere intent to do the prohibited act.

V. Offenses Involving Drivers' Licenses

A. Generally

Chapter 5 of Title 40 contains a number of criminal provisions relating to drivers' licenses. For example, § 40-5-120 punishes three specific acts as misdemeanors and additionally makes it a misdemeanor to violate any of the chapter's regulatory provisions. Section 40-5-2(g) makes it a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature for anyone knowingly and willfully to (1) disclose, distribute, or sell a driver's record or personal information to an unauthorized recipient or for an unauthorized purpose, or (2) make a misrepresentation or false statement in order to obtain access to or information from the department's records.

B. Driving without Being Licensed or with Suspended, Disqualified, or Revoked License

Except when a license has been revoked as a habitual violator, any person who drives a motor vehicle on any public highway of this state without being licensed or at a time when his privilege to drive is suspended, disqualified, or revoked is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Generally, the state must show that the defendant had actual or legal notice of the suspension of his license in order for his conviction to be sustained. The state may satisfy this evidentiary requirement by showing that the defendant had notice of the suspension by operation of law automatically upon his conviction for DUI. A Georgia Crime Information Center (GCIC) driver's license history is admissible to show the fact of suspension, but only if the state tenders a certified copy of a department record or proves that the driving record was obtained from a computer terminal lawfully connected to the GCIC computer. Where the state does not satisfy this foundational requirement or does not even offer the defendant's driving history into evidence, it fails to prove that the defendant's license was suspended. Furthermore, a police officer's statement at trial that his computer check of the defendant revealed a suspended license would also fail to establish the fact of suspension. This unsworn representation as to the contents of the defendant's driving record does not qualify as evidence. Finally, a Uniform Traffic Citation, on which the officer has written that the defendant's license was suspended, cannot be used as evidence of his guilt.

Since driving with a suspended license after proper notification from the department is a strict criminal liability offense, the state is not required to show mens rea or guilty intent on the part of the violator.

Whether the convictions or charges serving as the basis for the suspension are either expunged from the defendant's record or subject to collateral attack on constitutional grounds is not an issue. The offense of driving a motor vehicle when one's privilege to do so has been suspended is an offense separate and distinct from the offenses which led to the suspension. Until the license is reinstated, it is illegal to drive.

Prior to 2006, where a defendant's license had been suspended under § 40-5-56 for failing to appear at a hearing for a traffic offense, unless the arresting officer verified and placed the service date on the uniform citation issued to the defendant, under the clear mandate of former § 40-5-121(b)(1), no charge of driving with a suspended license could be made against the defendant. With the General Assembly's elimination of this unnecessary and cumbersome requirement in 2006, this holding is no longer controlling authority.

Where there are sufficient similarities between prior incidents of driving with a suspended license and the offense charged, the admission of the prior incidents would be authorized to show course of conduct.

Upon a first conviction or plea of nolo contendere within a five-year period, as measured from the dates of previous arrests for which convictions were obtained to the date of the current arrest for which a conviction is obtained or a plea of nolo contendere is accepted, the defendant must be fingerprinted and punished by imprisonment for not less than two days nor more than 12 months, and there may be imposed in addition thereto a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $1,000. Such fingerprints, taken upon conviction, are forwarded to the Georgia Crime Information Center where an identification number is assigned to the defendant for the purpose of tracking any future violations by the same defendant.

Upon a second and third conviction within a five-year period, the defendant would be guilty of a high and aggravated misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for not less than ten days nor more than 12 months, and there may be imposed in addition thereto a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $2,500.

Upon a fourth or subsequent conviction within a five-year period, the defendant would be guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years, and there may be imposed in addition thereto a fine of not less than $2,500 nor more than $5,000.

C. Driving After Being Declared Habitual Violator

1. Elements

a. Generally

In prosecutions under § 40-5-58(c), the state is required to prove that the defendant was declared a habitual violator; that his license was revoked; that he received notice that his license was revoked because of his status as a habitual violator; and that he operated a motor vehicle in this state without having obtained a valid driver's license. Evidence of all these material allegations may be submitted by means of a properly certified document or by means of relevant portions of the defendant's driving record. However, the defendant's entire driving record, especially that portion listing numerous prior traffic offenses, is immaterial to the offense of operating a motor vehicle after being declared an habitual violator and should not be submitted.

The elements of the habitual violator offense do not include any specific location in which the habitual violator operates a motor vehicle. Therefore, the location alleged in the indictment, with the exception of the county, is immaterial and pure surplusage.

b. Habitual Violator Declaration

A "habitual violator" is any person who has been arrested and convicted three or more times within a five-year period of various offenses, such as DUI and vehicular homicide. Section 40-5-58(b) sets out the procedure by which the department declares a person to be a habitual violator.

In 1995, the Court of Appeals concluded in Wilson v. Miles that three separate and unrelated transactions were required to supply the three "arrests and convictions" needed for a habitual violator declaration. The court found that by adding the phrase "singularly or in combination" as paragraph (3) of § 40-5-58(a) in 1987, the General Assembly evidenced its intent that "arrested and convicted" within the five-year period meant that the charges "singularly or in combination" had to result from three separate incidents, regardless of the number of enumerated offenses charged during any singular incident. However, the General Assembly, apparently disapproving of this construction of the statute, expressly defined "singularly or in combination" in 1996 to mean that the department "is to treat each charge for which a conviction was obtained as a separate transaction when determining whether or not a person has the requisite convictions" needed for a habitual violator declaration.

A "conviction" for purposes of habitual violator status includes a plea of nolo contendere, a forfeiture of bail or collateral, the payment of a fine, a plea of guilty, or a finding of guilt on a traffic violation charge, regardless of whether the sentence is suspended, probated, or rebated. The Court of Appeals has held that this includes nolo pleas entered before January 1, 1976, the effective date of the statute. Convictions from other states cannot be attacked collaterally in habitual violator prosecutions in this state so long as they are regular on their face.

The Georgia Supreme Court has held that § 40-5-58 is not a recidivist statute so that the prior convictions which caused the license revocation need not be alleged in the indictment. The validity of the prior convictions is not an issue, and a person cannot make it one by defending on the ground that one or more of the convictions have been set aside following the prohibited driving, or on the ground that one or more of the offenses of which the person was convicted and which were used to support his habitual violator status have been eliminated by a change in the law.

c. Notification of Habitual Violator Status

The essence of the habitual violator offense is not the existence of the prior convictions but rather driving a vehicle after receiving notice that one's license has been revoked as an habitual violator. Because notification of one's habitual violator status is an essential element of the offense, the state is required to present proof of compliance with the notification provisions of § 40-5-58(b) in order to establish that the revocation was valid. The date upon which the requisite notice was given to the habitual violator is relevant to whether his subsequent act of driving is punishable as a felony or a misdemeanor. A nonlicensed habitual violator who drives within five years of notification of his status as such is punishable for a felony, whereas a nonlicensed habitual violator who drives more than five years after the notification of his status as such is punishable for a misdemeanor.

A variance between the notice date alleged in the indictment and the date proved at trial is not fatal if the indictment does not allege that the date is material to the charge. Absent a showing that the date is material, the state can prove the elements of the offense by proof that the defendant drove a vehicle within five years of the time he was notified of his habitual violator status.

Under § 40-5-66(a), a person aggrieved by a final decision declaring him a habitual violator has a statutory right of appeal to superior court. Moreover, the Department of Driver Services has also granted such a person a right to pursue an internal administrative review within the department before appealing to superior court. On the other hand, there is no statute or administrative rule granting administrative law judges operating under the Office of State Administrative Hearings the authority to review a ruling by the department that someone is a habitual violator. Because administrative law judges lack jurisdiction to review the department's habitual violator declaration, an administrative law judge's ruling on the issue would be void and of no effect.

d. Operating Motor Vehicle Without Valid Driver's License

Once a license has been revoked, driving a motor vehicle subjects the defendant to the provisions of § 40-5-58(c). The statute prohibits a person who has been declared a habitual violator and whose license has been revoked from operating a vehicle anywhere in the state, including on a private thoroughfare. The defendant's operation of the vehicle may be proven by circumstantial evidence. The term "operate" as used in § 40-5-58(c) does not necessarily mean driving a vehicle, although it can include driving. Thus, a person who has been declared a habitual violator and who has been discovered by police officers asleep in the driver's seat of a motor vehicle which is stopped in the roadway with its engine running, its transmission in gear, and its lights on would be operating a motor vehicle in violation of the statute.

It is not necessary that a traffic offender have a driver's license to be classified a "habitual violator." When a habitual violator is notified of his classification, what is suspended is his right "to operate a motor vehicle in this state." Once this right has been suspended, driving a motor vehicle subjects the defendant to the statute's felony provisions.

An individual may not avoid prosecution for operating a motor vehicle in this state after having been declared an habitual violator by obtaining a valid license from another state.

The premature and erroneous issuance of a Georgia driver's license to an habitual violator is not adequate to show as a matter of law that the defendant's driving privileges have been properly reinstated. Administrative lapses notwithstanding, the fact that the defendant has obtained a driver's license does not give him permission to drive. Ignorance of the laws to this effect is no excuse.

e. Operating Motor Vehicle While Having Probationary License

A violation of a probationary license under the habitual violator statute does not require that the state prove a nonbusiness purpose at the time of the offense. Proof of driving under the influence would be sufficient.

2. Admissibility of Prior Habitual Violator Convictions

Evidence of prior "habitual violator convictions" is admissible to show the defendant's bent of mind and course of conduct with regard to a habitual violator count in an indictment. However, the state must not merely submit into evidence certified copies of the defendant's prior "habitual violator convictions." The state must also present evidence showing the similarity of the prior convictions and the crimes charged.

3. Defenses

An habitual violator's driving a motor vehicle without a driver's license may be justified under circumstances "which stand upon the same footing of reason and justice" as those defenses enumerated in the criminal code.

The mere fact that a person may be ignorant of the continued existence of his habitual violator status and the resultant consequences does not, in and of itself, afford him any defense to a felony charge for violating the statute.

4. Double Jeopardy

In State v. Gilder, the court held that a defendant could not be convicted of the misdemeanor offense of driving with a revoked driver's license (§ 40-5-121) and then later prosecuted for the felony offense of habitual violator (§ 40-5-58(c)) for the same act of driving.

5. Lesser Included Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

Where an indictment charges a defendant with the offense of felony habitual violator and the proof at trial shows that the defendant only committed the offense of misdemeanor habitual violator, there is no fatal variance between the offense charged in the indictment and the offense actually proved at trial. In addition to defining the offense of felony habitual violator, § 40-5-58(c)(1) by its terms defines a misdemeanor lesser included offense of operating a motor vehicle after revocation of a driver's license and before issuance of a new license. This misdemeanor offense differs from the offense of felony habitual violator only in that it does not require the element of operating the motor vehicle within five years of notice of revocation. Since the misdemeanor offense does not contain this element, any allegation in an indictment regarding the time at which the defendant committed the offense of operating a motor vehicle after revocation of his license and before issuance of a new license is an unnecessary description of an unnecessary fact that need not be proved at trial.

Where under the facts in a case the offense of driving under the influence is a lesser included offense in the violation of a probationary license offense under the habitual violator statute, the offenses merge, and the defendant may not be convicted of the lesser included offense of driving under the influence.

Since the offense of felony fleeing or attempting to elude requires proof of additional material elements, it cannot merge with the offense of felony habitual violator. Moreover, by law a sentence for felony fleeing or attempting to elude cannot be merged with that of another offense.

6. Punishment

Under § 40-5-58(c)(1), a habitual violator whose driver's license has been revoked and who is later convicted of driving a vehicle before being issued a driver's license or before the expiration of five years from such revocation, whichever occurs first, may be fined for not less than $750 or may be sentenced to a term of not less than one nor more than five years' imprisonment, or both. If a habitual violator is convicted of driving a vehicle after the expiration of five years from such revocation but before being issued a driver's license, he is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Under § 40-5-58(c)(2), a person who has been declared a habitual violator as a result of three or more DUI convictions within a five-year period of time, as measured from the dates of previous arrests for which convictions were obtained to the date of the most recent arrest for which a conviction was obtained, and who is thereafter convicted of operating a motor vehicle during such period of revocation, prior to the issuance of a probationary license or before the expiration of five years, is guilty of the felony of habitual impaired driving and is punishable by a fine of not less than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years, or both.

Section 17-10-7(b) only authorizes recidivist sentencing for a repeat "serious violent felony" offender. The habitual violator offense does not fall within the definition of "serious violent felony." Thus, an habitual violator cannot be sentenced as a recidivist under § 17-10-7(b). Likewise, an habitual violator cannot be sentenced as a recidivist under § 17-10-7(c), which disallows parole, unless he has been convicted for a fourth offense. An habitual violator who has been convicted for a third offense can be sentenced as a recidivist only under § 17-10-7(a), which requires the trial judge to impose the longest sentence prescribed for a subsequent offense but allows the trial judge, in his discretion, to probate or suspend that sentence.

D. Suspension or Revocation of Driver's License for DUI Arrest or Conviction

Section 40-5-67.1(c) requires that the driver's license, permit, or nonresident operating privilege of any driver, who is under arrest for DUI or who was involved in a traffic accident resulting in serious injuries or fatalities, be administratively suspended if the state-administered chemical test results indicate that he is under the influence "per se" in violation of § 40-6-391. Section 40-5-67.2 sets forth the terms and conditions of the suspension upon the first, second, third, and subsequent suspensions. An administrative license suspension pursuant to § 40-5-67.1 is counted toward fulfillment of any period of suspension subsequently imposed as a result of a conviction for DUI which arises out of the same violation for which the administrative license suspension was imposed. An administrative license suspension pursuant to § 40-5-67.1 runs concurrently with any revocation of such driver's license pursuant to a subsequent determination that such person is a habitual violator. Section 40-5-67.1(c) also provides that the driver of a commercial motor vehicle is disqualified from operating a motor vehicle for a minimum period of one year if the state-administered chemical test results indicate an alcohol concentration of 0.04 grams or more.

Credit for an administrative license suspension will be given only against a subsequent suspension under the DUI statute, where both are imposed as a result of the same arrest. Since an habitual violator revocation does not result from the same arrest as does an administrative license suspension, but rather, results from the accumulation of three separate DUI convictions within a period of five years, an administrative license suspension cannot be credited against a subsequent habitual violator revocation. Moreover, credit cannot be given because § 40-5-67.2(b) provides that the suspension runs concurrently with any revocation of the driver's license. The term "concurrently" simply means that the suspension and the revocation time periods each begin on the date of its imposition and that each will end on its prescribed date, unaffected by the existence or termination of the other.

Section 40-5-67.1(d) requires that the driver's license, permit, or nonresident operating privilege of any driver, who is under arrest for DUI or who was involved in a traffic accident resulting in serious injuries or fatalities, be suspended for a period of one year if that driver refuses, upon the request of a law enforcement officer, to submit to a state-administered chemical test. If the driver of a commercial motor vehicle refuses to take the state-administered chemical test, this Code section requires that he be disqualified from operating a commercial motor vehicle and that his driver's license, permit, or nonresident operating privilege be suspended, subject to review as provided by law.

If the driver has refused to submit to the state-administered test, the law enforcement officer who requested the test must submit a sworn report to the Department of Public Safety that the officer had reasonable grounds to believe the arrested person had been driving under the influence of alcohol and that the person had refused to submit to the test upon his request. This sworn statement is customarily completed on a form known as DPS Form 1205. After the department receives this form, it is required to suspend the driver's license for one year. In an administrative hearing requested by the driver to challenge the suspension, where the arresting officer testifies in person as to the events of the driver's arrest, this form clearly is not necessary to the resolution of any of the issues at the hearing. Furthermore, since the department is not required to make an initial showing that the license was suspended, it need not tender this form into evidence. In reviewing the suspension of a driver's license for failure to submit to a state-administered alcohol test, the administrative law judge (ALJ) must determine "[w]hether at the time of the request for the test or tests the officer informed the person of the person's implied consent rights and the consequence of submitting or refusing to submit to such test." If there is evidence to support a finding that the driver was properly advised of his implied consent rights, the suspension will be upheld.

Under the double jeopardy clauses of the state and federal constitutions, an administrative license suspension does not constitute punishment foreclosing further punishment arising out of a prosecution for driving under the influence. An administrative license suspension for driving under the influence is reasonably related and not disproportional to the state's longstanding remedial purpose in removing dangerous and habitually negligent drivers from its roadways. The driver's license is suspended by a designated public officer in an administrative setting, rather than as punishment in consequence of a criminal prosecution. Despite carrying the sting of punishment, the primary purpose of the suspension is not to deter the driver or seek retribution.

Because the fee for the restoration of one's driving privilege is not a fine and is not required to be paid, but is rather a voluntary payment, it cannot be considered punitive or a sanction for purposes of double jeopardy.

An accidental license suspension for DUI does not constitute punishment for purposes of double jeopardy. Even though the defendant himself may choose to treat his license suspension as lawful in order to obtain relief from the suspension more expeditiously, his actions of attending DUI classes and paying a $210 reinstatement fee do not convert the license suspension into a punishment flowing from an erroneous DUI conviction. Although the defendant suffers harm, he does not suffer from the prosecutorial power of the state.

An administrative hearing is a determination as to the suspension of one's driving privilege within this state, outside the merits of the pending criminal DUI charge. The "winning" of such hearing does not result in the acquittal of the defendant on the pending DUI charge or the return of the defendant's plastic license, which by statute remains in the trial court's possession until disposition of the DUI charge. Accordingly, due process is not violated by the failure to return a defendant's plastic license simply because an administrative hearing was resolved in the defendant's favor, when the rationale for the confiscation of the license in the first place, a pending DUI charge, has not been so resolved.

Section 40-5-63(a) expressly requires that the driver's license of any person convicted of violating § 40-6-391 shall by operation of law be suspended, unless the driver's license has been previously suspended pursuant to §§ 40-5-67.1 and 40-5-67.2. The driver's license of any person convicted of a drug related offense pursuant to § 40-6-391 shall be suspended according to the requirements of § 40-5-75. Furthermore, each charge for which a conviction was obtained must be treated as a separate transaction for the purpose of imposing a license suspension, even if the convictions arise from a single incident. Section 40-5-63(a) sets forth the lengths and terms of suspensions upon the first, second and third convictions of DUI, and subsection (b) states that the period of suspension begins on the date of the DUI conviction. It thus appears that the General Assembly intended § 40-5-63 to effectuate suspension or revocation upon a conviction for DUI, the notice being the trial for violation of § 40-6-391, i.e., notice "by operation of law." Consequently, due process does not require that one be afforded a hearing before the decision suspending his license is made.

A premature and erroneous license reinstatement is not adequate to show as a matter of law that the defendant's driving privileges have been properly reinstated. Administrative lapses notwithstanding, the fact that a driver has his driver's license reinstated does not give him permission to drive in contravention of § 40-5-63(a)(1). Ignorance of the laws to this effect is no excuse.

Section 40-5-57.1(a) requires the suspension of the driver's license of any person under 21 years of age convicted of violating § 40-6-391.

VI. Offenses Involving Motor Vehicle Safety

The Motor Vehicle Safety Responsibility Act has a general misdemeanor provision which, barring another special penalty, makes the violation of any provision of the Act a misdemeanor. The Act also has two specific statutes punishing certain violations more precisely. They are § 40-9-7 (willfully failing to return a suspended driver's license to the Department of Driver Services) and § 40-9-8 (operating a motor vehicle during a driver's license suspension).

Section 40-8-7 makes it a misdemeanor for any person to drive or move, or for the owner to cause or knowingly permit to be driven or moved, on any street or highway any vehicle or combination of vehicles (1) which is in such unsafe condition as to endanger any person; (2) which does not contain those parts or is not at all times equipped with such lights and other equipment in proper condition and adjustment as required by law; or (3) which is not equipped in the manner provided by law.

Section 40-8-7 is a strict criminal liability statute. Although the state is required to prove that the accused intended to do the act or make the omissions prohibited, it is not required to prove a mental fault. The fact that there is no criminal scheme or undertaking or criminal negligence is not a defense to a violation of this statute.

PROPERTY DAMAGE CRIMES

See also ARSON; BOMBS, EXPLOSIVES, AND CHEMICAL AND BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS; DISORDERLY CONDUCT CRIMES.

I. Criminal Damage to Property

A. Generally

Criminal damage to property essentially codifies the common law of malicious mischief. Prior to 1968, the law of malicious mischief included many highly particularized offenses. Now, most acts of malicious mischief, at least those related to property, are consolidated into §§ 16-7-22 and 16-7-23.

At common law, malicious mischief was the malicious destruction of, or damage to, the property of another. Section 16-7-22 defines first degree criminal damage to property as (1) the knowing interference with any property so as to endanger human life or (2) the knowing interference by force or violence with any public utility service or any public transportation or communication system. Section 16-7-23 proscribes two types of activity as second degree criminal damage to property: (1) intentional damage of another's property without his consent in excess of $500; or (2) reckless or intentional damage of another's property by means of fire or explosive.

B. Elements

1. Actus Reus

The core of the actus reus for the violation of §§ 16-7-22 and 16-7-23 is an act which damages property. The possible acts which satisfy this description are obviously infinitely varied. Specific examples, however, include running over a mailbox with a car, throwing rocks at a building, smashing into a gate, destroying a gutter carrying water from a well, and destruction of a tombstone in a private burial ground. Under the present statutory formulation these acts would constitute second degree criminal damage to property because they do not constitute threats to human life or interference with a public utility service or public transportation or communication systems.

The actus reus of first degree criminal damage to property omits the traditional requirement of damage and punishes those who "interfere" with property in a certain extremely reckless manner or who "interfere" with certain public facilities. It is not clear which activities will be held to "interfere" which would not also damage, but it does seem clear that the present statutory language is broader than the law prior to 1968. Acts which would appear to satisfy the requirement are wrecking a street car through the use of dynamite, obstruction of a railroad track, digging ditches and stretching wire across a road and placing debris and nails on a road, and shooting a shotgun loaded with bird shot into a dwelling.

The phrase "in a manner so as to endanger human life" has been construed by the Georgia Supreme Court to mean reckless endangerment rather than actual endangerment. Under this construction, it need only be shown that the defendant's reckless behavior created a risk of danger to others. A showing of actual harm is not required. Thus, a person who fires gunshots into an inhabited dwelling where people are likely to be present endangers human life within the meaning of the statute. The fact that the occupants of the dwelling were not physically present does not lessen the risk of danger to others nor the recklessness of the defendant's behavior.

2. Mens Rea

The mens rea of malicious mischief was troublesome at common law and remains so under the Georgia statutory formulation. The majority rule has been that malice must be directed toward the owner or possessor of the damaged or destroyed property rather than merely against the property. Georgia has never followed this rule. Under the law prior to 1968, it was necessary to prove only that the act of mischief was done "wantonly and recklessly." This is apparently still the law since the statutes simply employ mens rea terms such as "knowingly," "intentionally," and "recklessly."

It has been held, however, that lack of ill-will in general or the presence of a good motive may negate the required mens rea. For example, in Carstorphen v. State, the complainant had placed a lock on an elevator which he and the defendant both had a legal right to use. The defendant broke the lock only to gain access to the elevator. The court held the defendant not guilty of malicious mischief because he did not act with a malicious intent or motive. It is uncertain whether this is still good law under the present statutory formulation, which no longer requires malice, but punishes merely intentional behavior.

3. Protected Property

Both real and personal property, as well as public property, are protected by §§ 16-7-22 and 16-7-23. While animals are protected by the cruelty to animals provision (§ 16-12-4), owners of livestock and other animals of quantifiable value are arguably also protected from damage to their animals by the criminal damage provisions.

Under the law prior to 1968, the property damaged did not need to have value. This apparently is still the general rule, although § 16-7-23(a)(1) requires the damaged property be worth over $500 for criminal liability to attach under that provision. While more than $500 worth of damage is an essential element of § 16-7-23(a)(1), rigid and exact methods of proof are not required. It should be noted that the expense to the owner of the damaged property for labor in dealing with the damage is not the element which must exceed $500 and cannot be used as a substitute for the value of the damage to the property.

4. Requirement of Damage

Generally, there is no question about whether there has been damage. Occasionally, however, that will be an issue. In Adams v. State, for example, the defendant was charged with willfully damaging a monument in a private burial ground. The monument was located on property owned by the defendant. It was knocked over by a bulldozer being operated under the defendant's instructions and was taken to a gully and buried. The monument remained intact, even while buried. Nevertheless, the court found the monument to have been damaged; its dismantling and removal separated it from the grave, of which it had become an integral part.

Mere inconvenience to the owner, however, does not satisfy the damage requirement. In Pollett v. State the defendant wilfully removed wood from a woodrack of another, but did not injure the wood. On appeal the court held the defendant was not guilty of malicious mischief, notwithstanding the inconvenience to the owner of the wood who was put to the expense and trouble of replacing the wood on the rack. This is consistent with Adams because there is not the same permanent relationship between wood and a rack as that which exists between a tombstone and a grave. Similarly, Howard v. State held that malicious mischief is not committed when one removes a post which has been placed in the ground preparatory to erecting a fence, so long as the post itself is not injured. A different result should obtain if the fence has been completed, even if the post is removed unscathed, because the posts and wire would then form an integral whole capable of being criminally damaged by the removal of a part.

5. Ownership of Property

The law prior to 1968 was unclear both as to the necessity of proving ownership and as to the quantum of proof sufficient to satisfy the requirement. It should be noted that while § 16-7-23 speaks in terms of property of another, § 16-7-22 protects all property.

Under the law prior to 1968, the victim must have had more than a use interest or easement in the property in question. In Grant v. State the indictment alleged the defendant destroyed a bridge which was the property of four named individuals. The proof showed the four individuals had, at most, an easement in the bridge. The court reversed the conviction, holding the evidence did not prove the allegations of the indictment. Perhaps had the indictment stated more generally that the bridge belonged to the community of persons who used it to get to church and to the mill, the defendant would have been properly convicted.

Also, under the law prior to 1968, an oral assertion of ownership of real property was inadmissible to prove ownership if properly objected to. If there was no objection, an oral assertion of ownership was sufficient if the indictment alleged ownership by that person. Where there was no evidence indicating ownership by a particular entity, it was error to charge the jury that if the entity was in possession of the property and used the property that ownership might be inferred.

Under the present law, lawful occupancy by one in charge constitutes ownership, and the question of legal title is not involved. In Rash v. State, the court held that since a divorce decree awarded the former wife title to and "use" of the house, even though the former husband had not yet complied with the court order to give his former wife a quitclaim deed, the wife's legal occupancy was shown and the contested element of ownership in the offense of criminal damage to property in the second degree was proved.

If both the state and the defendant introduce evidence of ownership, it becomes a question of fact for the jury.

Criminal damage to property in the first degree is not a crime against ownership. It is a crime against the state involving the unauthorized interference with property in a manner that endangers human life. Section 16-7-22(a) does not expressly or impliedly qualify or limit in any way the scope of the term "human life" as used therein. Thus, this offense is committed where the human life endangered is that of tenants, rather than the owners, of the property.

C. Admissibility of Evidence

The most frequently litigated admissibility problem in criminal damage to property cases involves the question of value under § 16-7-23(a)(1) which requires that damage exceed $500 (formerly $100). This element is generally proven by asking the owner to state the property's value. Unless the owner is an expert appraiser, however, this method of proof raises problems with the opinion rule. In Van Voltenburg v. State the official in charge of the vehicle maintenance compound testified that the gate into which the defendant had smashed had sustained $150 to $175 worth of damage. On cross-examination, the witness admitted that he had estimated the amount of damage himself; he had bought the gates new and knew their value. The court found the testimony admissible as a statement of fact rather than opinion because he was testifying from his own personal knowledge based on the purchase of the gates.

The Court of Appeals has expressed its willingness to allow into evidence similar statements or opinions without resorting to classifying them as statements of fact. In Hiatt v. State, the witness was the property manager for an apartment complex, a position he had held for about six months. He testified he had purchased approximately $2,000 worth of furniture during the month before trial. Although he had not replaced any of the furniture damaged in this particular incident, he had noted the replacement cost at wholesale plus 10% for items identical to those damaged. He testified on the extent of damage to each item and its replacement cost. The court held that testimony as to value is permissible if the witness adequately shows that he has had an opportunity to form a correct opinion.

Evidence of prior difficulties between the defendant and the owner of the property is admissible to show intent in criminal damage to property cases. In Mullen v. State, the court held that evidence of the defendant's prior attacks on a homeowner was admissible to show his state of mind and motive for firing two shots into the owner's home.

Properly identified photographs depicting the damaged property have been held admissible.

D. Sufficiency of Evidence

Sufficiency of the evidence in criminal damage to property cases is generally raised in the context of questioning whether an act admittedly committed constitutes criminal damage to property. Cases dealing with the sufficiency of the evidence introduced to show that the accused committed the alleged acts are rare.

The quantum of proof sufficient to satisfy the requirement of more than $100 (now $500) worth of damage under § 16-7-23(a)(1) was considered in Hayes v. State. At trial, the witness was never asked to state the value of a C.B. radio before and after the incident. He did state its purchase price, length of ownership, condition before, and that it was "broken to pieces" afterward. The court held that the evidence was sufficient for the jury to conclude that the damage exceeded $100 (now $500) since the jury is allowed to draw from its own experience in forming estimates of the market value of everyday objects. In Holbrook v. State, an equipment operator for a construction company testified that he was familiar with the approximate value of trucks used in the construction business and that the damaged truck was worth "around $17,000" before the damage, and less than $1,000 after the damage. The court held that given this testimony regarding the extent of the damage, as well as the photographs of the truck properly admitted into evidence, the jury had sufficient evidence to determine that the value of damage was in excess of $500. In Spann v. State, evidence of damage in excess of $500 was established by the opinion testimony of the investigating police officer testifying as a lay witness and the photographs he took at the scene. The photographs, depicting in graphic detail extensive damage to the victim's car, fully corroborated the officer's estimate of the value of the damage done to the victim's vehicle. The court held that this evidence was sufficient for the jury to find the defendant guilty of criminal damage to property in the second degree.

In Hildebrand v. State, however, the state offered no proof of any amounts paid for repair of the property damaged and presented no photographs depicting the property damaged, so there was no competent evidence from which the jury could determine that the value of the damage for which defendant was responsible was in excess of $500, an essential element of the indicted crime. Thus, the court held that the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal on this charge. In In the Interest of A. F., the only evidence of damage in excess of $500 was the victim's testimony that she obtained an estimate to repair her van in the amount of $605 from "the dealer." She acknowledged that the damage to her van was not repaired for this price. The victim's testimony about the repair estimate she obtained was inadmissible hearsay. Since this hearsay was the only evidence establishing the amount of damage to the victim's van, the juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for criminal damage to property in the second degree had to be vacated.

To sustain a § 16-7-22(a)(1) conviction, the evidence must be sufficient to show that the defendant's actions endangered human life. For example, in Simmons v. State the evidence showed the defendant fired a shotgun loaded with bird shot into a dwelling. The evidence further showed that the owner's mother was lying in a room directly in line with the point of entry of the gunshot although none of the shot entered her room. The court upheld the defendant's conviction under § 16-7-22(a)(1), holding the evidence was sufficient on the issue of endangering human life. In Robinson v. State, the evidence showed that the defendant fired a .357 magnum and hit the rear tire on the driver's side of the victim's car as the victim sat in the driver's seat. The court held the evidence established the commission of criminal damage to property in the first degree beyond a reasonable doubt.

E. Defenses Peculiar to Criminal Damage to Property

Because the crime is defined in terms of property "of another," the principal defense in a second degree criminal damage to property prosecution is the "claim of right" defense, a specific application of the mistake of fact defense. "Claim of right" requires the accused to establish that he had a good faith belief that he had an ownership interest in the property in question. A mere assertion of ownership, although made at the time the property was injured or destroyed and subsequently repeated, does not require a finding that the accused acted under an honest claim of right, especially in the absence of any evidence to support such a claim. It should be emphasized that since the property protected by § 16-7-22 is all property, not just that of another, the "claim of right" defense should not be recognized in a § 16-7-22 case. In other words, if interference with the defendant's own property endangers human life it violates § 16-7-22.

Abandonment is an available defense to a second degree criminal damage to property prosecution although it may be difficult to establish. In Adams v. State, the defense was not available despite the fact that the burial ground in question had fallen into a state of ruin and that there had been no burials for years. The court held that it would not be legally abandoned so long as there were markers on the graves sufficient to put one on notice that it was a burial ground. It may be, however, that a different result would be reached if the subject matter of the offense was something less hallowed than a cemetery plot.

The standard jury charges on provocation do not pertain to property offenses. The concept of provocation is inapplicable because it presupposes that the victim provoked the offense.

F. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

As defined in § 16-7-22(a)(1), criminal damage to property in the first degree is a felonious act which is inherently dangerous or life-threatening and that felony can, therefore, support a felony murder conviction.

The provision of § 16-7-23(a)(2) which punishes reckless or intentional damage of another's property by means of fire or explosives raises the obvious question of the relationship between this crime and the three arson crimes of §§ 16-7-60, 16-7-61, and 16-7-62. This will be an important question in two situations: the determination of whether § 16-1-7(a) will permit multiple punishments for both arson and criminal damage to property on the basis of the same act (the question of multiple convictions) and whether a criminal damage to property conviction is authorized as a lesser included offense in a trial on an arson indictment.

For purposes of the rule against multiple punishments, it has been held that § 16-7-23(a)(2) is included within first degree arson, which punishes damage by fire of a protected structure under circumstances which endanger human life, because the former's proscriptions punish the same conduct as § 16-7-60, requiring only a less culpable mental state. Thus, despite the fact that there were multiple victims, only one conviction could be had for the same act. In D.C.A. v. State, the court held § 16-7-23(a)(2) to be included necessarily within § 16-7-61 (second degree arson) so as to authorize a conviction of the former under an indictment charging the latter. (Actually, the proceeding was in juvenile court.)

It does seem clear that anybody who violates § 16-7-61 will necessarily have violated § 16-7-23(a)(2). This will also be true of those who violate §§ 16-7-60 and 16-7-62. In fact, given the breadth of the three arson statutes, it is hard to identify any behavior which is a violation of § 16-7-23(a)(2) which is not also a violation of one of the arson crimes.

Two Court of Appeals cases dealt with convictions of interference with government property as lesser included offenses where the indictment alleged criminal damage to property. In Hack v. State, the indictment charged the defendant with violating the criminal damage to property statute by intentionally damaging "a certain 1982 Ford automobile, the property of the Clayton County Board of Commissioners in excess of $100." The trial evidence demonstrated only $2 worth of damage, and therefore, the trial judge did not submit the criminal damage to property allegation to the jury, but instead instructed on interference with government property (see III., E. Criminal Interference with Government Property, infra). Under § 16-7-24(a), that crime punishes one who "destroys, damages, or defaces government property." The jury convicted the defendant of the offense of interference with government property. The appellate court, relying on Porter v. State, reversed the conviction, holding that interference with government property is not a lesser included offense of criminal damage to property.

It is contended that both of these cases are incorrect. The courts in both cases have overlooked the familiar rule in Georgia that an offense may be a lesser included offense of another, either as a matter of law or as a matter of the pleading in the indictment. That is, on an indictment charging crime X, a conviction of crime Y can be returned if either (1) Y is necessarily charged any time X is charged or (2) the elements of Y were charged in the indictment in the particular case. It is clear that the elements of interference with government property were alleged in the Hack indictment. That crime requires that the property be that of the government and that the defendant have damaged, destroyed, or defaced it. These allegations were made and evidence on these allegations was introduced at trial.

While the Porter court correctly identified the general rules about conviction of a lesser included offense as stated above, it made a crucial error in applying these rules to the issue before it. It overturned the interference with government property conviction because, in its words, "[c]onspicuously missing from the greater . . . offense of criminal damage to property is any necessity of proving the governmental nature of ownership . . .." What the court was confusing here was the type of allegation which is required to be made in an indictment and those which are actually made. While the state might not be forced to allege that the damaged property was that of the government in a criminal damage to property indictment, if it does so describe the property as governmental, it would appear that an interference with government property conviction would be appropriate. It is not clear whether the Porter case is correctly decided on its facts because the opinion does not indicate what was alleged in the indictment. It is clear, however, that the Hack court ignored the language of the indictment before it.

It has been held that criminal trespass is a lesser included offense of criminal damage to property in the second degree. Criminal trespass cannot be considered, as a matter of fact, a lesser included offense of criminal damage to property in the first degree where the only evidence of "interference" in the case is an intentional, life-endangering act and where there is no evidence of a mere knowing and malicious interference with the property of another without his consent. Also, criminal trespass as a lesser offense of burglary and criminal damage to property in the second degree do not constitute the same offense as a matter of fact or law, and it is not error for a trial court to impose consecutive sentences for these separate offenses.

Criminal damage to property in the first degree, which involves the deliberate and unauthorized interference with property, is not a lesser included offense of aggravated assault as a matter of law.

Where the evidence used to support a stalking charge is the same evidence used to support a criminal damage to property charge, the two offenses merge as a matter of law.

G. Punishment

Both first and second degree criminal damage to property are felonies. The former is punishable by imprisonment of one to ten years, while the latter is punishable by imprisonment for one to five years.

Where the defendant has pled guilty to criminal trespass as a lesser included offense of criminal damage to property in the second degree, in the absence of any agreement on the damage to the property, the $500 limit set forth in § 16-7-21(a) is the maximum amount that a trial court can order the defendant to pay as restitution for damage to the property.

II. Criminal Trespass

A. Generally

Section 16-7-21 replaces pre-1968 statutes which were extremely limited in scope, distinguishing, for example, enclosed from unenclosed land, and cultivated from uncultivated land. The present statute eliminates these out-dated distinctions and is drafted in more general terms. Under § 16-7-21, criminal trespass can now be committed in five different ways: (1) intentionally damaging property of another in an amount less than or equal to $500 or interfering with the use or possession of another's property; (2) entering the land, premises, or vehicle of another for an "unlawful purpose"; (3) entering the land or premises of another after receiving notice that such entry is forbidden; (4) remaining on the land or premises or within the vehicle of another after being told to leave; and (5) intentionally defacing, mutilating, or defiling any military grave marker, monument, memorial, or plaque that is privately owned or located on privately owned land.

B. Elements of Offense

1. Actus Reus

The actus reus of § 16-7-21(a) is the "interference" with the use or possession of property belonging to another without his consent. This is an addition to prior law. It has been held that under this provision where the defendant is interfering with access to the property of another, it is immaterial whether he is actually on the property. Section 16-7-21(a) also includes those acts which constitute criminal damage to property, but which cause $500 or less of damage. The state is not required to prove the actual ownership of the damaged property, only that it belonged to someone other than the defendant. Where the damaged property is an "everyday object," the jury may draw from its own experience in forming an estimate of its value. Where there is no evidence as to whether the amount of damage done is more or less than $500, no conviction can stand.

In a most unrevealing decision, the court in Benton v. State stated that evidence that the defendant was found crawling out of a fan duct from a laundry where clothes were found strewn about "did not appear to warrant an instruction on subsection (a) of our criminal trespass statute." The court volunteered no explanation of why the acts of the defendant did not constitute criminal trespass as defined by § 16-7-21(a), and a strong argument can be made that they did.

The actus reus of § 16-7-21(b) is generally satisfied if the defendant either enters or remains after receiving notice to leave a clearly defined area within the ownership of another.

The actus reus of § 16-7-21(e) is satisfied if the defendant defaces, mutilates, or defiles a privately owned military grave marker, monument, memorial, or plaque.

2. Mens Rea

Intent is expressly required by § 16-7-21. Case law prior to 1968 defined the mens rea in terms of commission of an act malevolently, with an evil purpose, without any ground for believing the act to be lawful, and without regard for the property rights of the owner of the property. Section 16-7-21(a) may very well require a similar state of mind since it requires one "knowingly and maliciously" to interfere with the property of another. The intent with which this act is done is peculiarly a question of fact for the jury to determine. The rest of the statute calls for either a knowing or an intentional mens rea. Thus, as was the case under the law prior to 1968, if the act alleged to be a trespass is committed in good faith under a claim of ownership, there can be no conviction. Furthermore, one charged with trespass cannot be convicted unless he is aware of his conduct and aware of the attendant circumstances.

In Black v. State, for example, Lockett, who had the right to cut wood anywhere on the lands of Clare, gave the defendant, a young boy, permission to cut wood. Clare apparently had misled Lockett as to the property boundaries and, as a result, the boy cut wood from the land of the complainant while in the presence of Lockett and the complainant's agent. Neither informed the defendant that he was trespassing. The court held that the element of wilfulness had not been proved, and, in fact, had been clearly disproved.

Although a defendant is not obligated to produce any evidence, in order to assert a good faith defense, there must be evidence to support it. In Haygood v. State, the defendant urged that no criminal intent was shown because she was acting on a good faith belief that she was trimming a neighbor's hedge on her property. However, there was no evidence of any survey showing that the boundary lay along the line where the defendant cut the hedge, and there was no evidence that the defendant ever contended or believed the property line lay where she cut the hedge. The only evidence of where the property line might have been was the prior marked survey, and the jury could have found that the defendant knowingly ignored it when she cut a foot-wide encroachment on her neighbor's property with her hedge clippers.

Criminal trespass is usually a "specific intent" crime, i.e., the defendant must intend to do something more than the mere act committed. Under § 16-7-21(b)(2) and (b)(3), the accused must enter or remain on the premises of another, knowing that he has been given notice forbidding his presence. Under § 16-7-21(b)(1) entry must be made with the intent to commit an unlawful act.

3. Protected Property

Compared to the law prior to 1968, § 16-7-21 substantially broadens the types of property upon or in which trespass can be committed. In a direct break with prior law, § 16-7-21(b) expressly includes within its coverage land, premises, and certain types of locomotive structures (vehicles, railroad cars, aircraft, and watercraft). The term "premises" has been interpreted to mean the land and the buildings located on it and to include property owned or used for public purposes. "Property" as used in § 16-7-21(a) should be defined to reach substantially the same types of property covered by § 16-7-23(a)(1). Section 16-7-21(e) expressly includes within in its coverage all privately owned military grave markers, monuments, memorials, or plaques.

4. Notice Element

Notice is the essential element of § 16-7-21(b)(2) and (b)(3) prosecutions. As under the law prior to 1968, the state must prove that the notice given was intended to apply to the particular property in question and was conveyed in understandable terms. In Murphey v. State the owner of a store told the defendant while he was inside the store to " . . . leave my premises and never set foot upon my place again." The defendant immediately left the store, walked down a road, climbed over a fence, and walked across a path over a pasture owned by the store owner. The owner had allowed neighbors to travel that path for seven years, and it was the most direct way for the defendant to go home. The defendant testified that he had never been forbidden to walk that way. The court overturned the trespass conviction on the ground that the notice was insufficient to inform the defendant of the owner's position regarding the pasture. According to the court, an order to leave the "premises" was not an explicit notice not to use a path.

However, an "explicit" reference to the property the defendant is forbidden to enter is not required, where there have been repeated and unequivocal notices to the defendant that he should stay away from any premises occupied by the complainant. In Stockwell v. State, the court held that although the complainant's admonition that the defendant was to stay away from her "everywhere" would not necessarily authorize his conviction for criminal trespass on land or premises other than those in which the complainant had a possessory interest, this fact did not otherwise demonstrate that the complainant's admonition would not authorize the defendant's conviction for criminal trespass upon those lands or premises in which the complainant did have a possessory interest.

The notice to leave certain premises usually applies to the entire premises, and not to just one location on the premises. In Kerr v. State, the court found no merit in the defendant's argument that he was not warned by an abortion clinic administrator to leave after he changed locations on the premises, because in her warning the administrator demanded that he leave the premises, not just the one location. In McCrosky v. State, the court rejected the defendant's argument that the evidence of notice was insufficient because the written notice did not specifically mention the medical research facility owned by the university. The defendant received one written and two verbal warnings to leave the university campus on the day of the demonstration. The written notice issued by the officer to the defendant on the parking deck clearly extended to all university property and not just the parking deck. The court found the notice was reasonable under the circumstances and sufficiently explicit to apprise the defendant of the property she was forbidden to enter.

A notice can bar entry completely or bar entry for a specific purpose, so long as the notice requirements are met.

In Scott v. State the court was faced with the differing notice requirements of § 16-7-21(b)(2) and (b)(3), which lie in the time of the giving of the notice. According to the court, while subsection (b)(3) is violated if the defendant enters lawfully, but remains after being told to leave, subsection (b)(2) is violated when the defendant enters after being told not to.

In Scott, the complainant had refused the defendant's request to come to her home and sit with her. At 3:00 a.m., the defendant quietly walked into the apartment and awakened the complainant. She immediately screamed, "Get out" and the defendant hurriedly left. In upholding a § 16-7-21(b)(2) conviction, the court found no error in the trial judge's refusal to instruct the jury that a trespasser is entitled to sufficient time to depart after being so ordered. Noting the aforementioned difference between subsections (b)(2) and (b)(3), the court concluded that the defendant's statement that he left immediately would create an issue if he were being prosecuted under § 16-7-21(b)(3), but that it was not an issue under § 16-7-21(b)(2) where the essence of the offense is entry after notice denying entry.

It is necessary that the person giving notice under § 16-7-21 have a legally sufficient relationship with the property. The statute itself states that the owner or a rightful occupant is qualified to give notice. Additionally, an agent of the owner is also qualified. In Perry v. State, the person giving notice to the accused that his entry into a motel was forbidden testified that he was a detective on the local police force. There was no evidence that he was the owner, occupant, or agent of the owner of the premises. This lack of evidence was held to be fatal to a § 16-7-21(b)(2) prosecution. Similarly, in Jackson v. State, the court held that the evidence failed to establish an essential element of the offense because there was no evidence that, when the officer gave the notice to the defendant, he was acting as the authorized representative of the owner or rightful occupant of the apartment.

If a police officer's conduct in arresting a criminal trespasser is in the discharge of his official functions, it is immaterial whether the police officer is an agent of the owner. In Rembert v. Arthur Schneider Sales, the court held that once a customer refused to leave a store after being asked to leave by the owner in the police officer's presence, the customer became a criminal trespasser. The police officer was authorized by law, not by his employment with the owner, to arrest the customer.

In Hope v. State, the defendant contended that there was no showing that the City of Atlanta, owner of the airport, had specifically authorized a police officer to prohibit him from going onto the airport property. The court held that a police officer, whether possessing power of arrest or not, is a representative of the city of which he is a sworn officer while protecting the property of that city, wherever located. Also, an officer holds, at a minimum, the same status with regard to criminal trespass as does a maintenance man or security guard for a private owner.

While hearsay evidence concerning notice may be presented to explain an officer's conduct and can be considered by the trier of fact when determining if the officer had probable cause to arrest a trespasser, such evidence cannot be used as original evidence to prove that the defendant had notice not to be present on the subject property. In Patterson v. State, the only evidence presented by the state that the defendant was given notice to depart from the address and refused to do so was the arresting officer's hearsay testimony that the occupant of that address told the defendant to leave his porch on another occasion. The court held that while this evidence could be considered to explain the arresting officer's conduct, it could not be used to prove that the defendant had notice not to be present on the porch. Thus, because the state failed to prove the essential element of notice beyond a reasonable doubt, the defendant's conviction for criminal trespass had to be reversed.

Prior to 1997, § 16-7-21 was totally silent concerning the authority to rescind a previous notice barring entry to property. However, there was some case law authority for the proposition that entry, although previously forbidden, may be granted by the permission of a person legally entitled to withhold the right. Based on this proposition, the Court of Appeals held in Hutson v. State that a minor of appropriate maturity was a "rightful occupant" of her parents' home for purposes of the criminal trespass statute and thus entitled to grant the right of entry. Because her invitation conveyed authority to the defendant, her boyfriend, to disregard the earlier notice of her parents that he was barred from the home, the court reversed his conviction for criminal trespass. In 1997, the General Assembly amended § 16-7-21, obviously in response to the Court of Appeals' decision in Hutson, to provide that "permission to enter or invitation to enter given by a minor who is or is not present on or in the property of the minor's parent or guardian is not sufficient to allow lawful entry of another person upon the [property] . . . if such parent or guardian has previously given notice that such entry is forbidden . . . " In light of this 1997 amendment, it thus appears that Hutson v. State is no longer controlling authority.

To be guilty of criminal trespass, a person who has been advised to leave must be given a reasonable amount of time to do so. What constitutes a reasonable amount of time under the circumstances is a question for the jury.

5. "Unlawful Purpose."

The "unlawful purpose" requirement of § 16-7-21(b)(1) has been a troublesome one. This element requires that the accused have the intent to commit an act in addition to the act of entering the premises. In many cases that unlawful purpose will be theft. Where the intent to steal is proved, the criminal trespass merges with or is included within burglary, § 16-7-1, so that double conviction would be barred. If there is no evidence to support a finding of a nonfelonious unlawful purpose, a trespass conviction is not authorized. On the other hand, if, in a burglary prosecution, the jury might have believed that the defendant entered for an unlawful purpose other than the commission of a felony or theft, the defendant is entitled, upon request, to a charge on trespass.

A defendant who has requested a charge on criminal trespass may not rely on a jury verdict acquitting him of greater offenses, such as burglary and kidnapping, as a determination that the state failed to prove that he entered a residence "for an unlawful purpose." A verdict of guilty as to criminal trespass would not be without evidentiary support where the evidence would have authorized a conviction for burglary or kidnapping.

C. Admissibility of Evidence

The Georgia courts have been liberal in the evidence they have permitted to be introduced to prove notice as required in subsection (b). Cases have admitted evidence which is highly prejudicial to the defendant and of questionable probative value on the issue of notice. For example, in Gasaway v. State when asked why the defendant had been forbidden to enter a skating rink, the owner of the rink testified that there had been "a lot of trouble out there," that the defendant "was always coming out there fighting," and that the defendant was drunk when he came to the rink. The court upheld the admissibility of the evidence as probative of the complainant's conduct in forbidding the defendant access to the premises despite claims of prejudice and irrelevance.

D. Sufficiency of Evidence

Few reported criminal trespass cases consider the question of the sufficiency of the evidence and those that do tend to lack extensive analysis. This is probably due to the simplicity of the offense—all that need be proven is an entry after notice of forbiddance or a remaining after a request to leave.

Section 16-7-21(b)(2) (entry after prior notice) cases generally involve an establishment's attempts to prevent the entry of "undesirables," and convictions in these cases are generally affirmed. In Walker v. State, the evidence showed that a prostitute was warned by hotel security guards that she would be arrested for criminal trespass if she came back to the hotel and that she returned. That was held to be sufficient. In McCrosky v. State, the court upheld the sufficiency of the evidence where the evidence showed that a university police officer announced over a megaphone that anyone crossing the barricade would be arrested. After the protestor crossed over the line of barricades, she was immediately arrested by other officers. The evidence also showed that another officer previously had given the protestor a criminal trespass warning informing her that she would be subject to arrest if she ever returned to university property at any time in the future. In Gasaway v. State, evidence that the defendant had entered the complainant's skating rink several times in a drunken condition, that he had created disturbances at the place, that the complainant previously had forbidden the defendant to come on the premises, and that the nature of the complainant's business was such that his customers were mostly children, was upheld as sufficient. In Ivey v. State, the court upheld the sufficiency of the evidence where it showed that the defendant was served with prior notice of banishment from the housing authority property. However, he was later discovered on the property engaging in a verbal dispute with his fiancee. In Hammond v. State, the defendant had been issued a notice barring his entry on university property for the purpose of sleeping. He was later found sleeping on university property late at night. The court held that the evidence was sufficient to authorize the defendant's conviction for criminal trespass.

Section 16-7-21(b)(3) (remaining after request to leave) cases often involve similar circumstances. In Rowles v. State, evidence that a season passholder at an amusement park was drunk, staggering and abusive, was repeatedly asked to leave, and finally arrested after assaulting a guard was sufficient to convict under § 16-7-21(b)(3). In Strozier v. State, it was held that though an apartment has common entrance ways and halls, evidence that an apartment dweller made repeated requests for one to leave her property was sufficient to find one guilty of criminal trespass. In Reid v. State, a hospital security guard testified that he told the defendant to leave the room in which he was on the telephone but he refused. The court held that this alone was sufficient evidence of criminal trespass. Whether the defendant, after being advised to leave, left within a reasonable time under the circumstances was a question for the factfinder to decide. Many § 16-7-21(b)(3) cases involve students making demands of or protesting to school officials. So long as the evidence establishes a refusal to leave after a clear and fair request to leave by the official in charge, the courts have upheld the convictions.

For § 16-7-21(b)(1) (entry with an unlawful purpose) cases, the evidence is very similar in nature to that required for a burglary conviction. The evidence must show that the defendant in fact entered the premises of the victim and must show that the alleged unlawful act occurred on the victim's property. The evidence must, however, indicate a purpose in entering other than to commit a theft or felony. This will sometimes be presented by the defendant's own testimony. In Wells v. State, the state's evidence in a burglary prosecution showed that the defendant entered through the window of a house in the early hours of the morning, struggled with the victim, and then fled through the window by which he entered. Because the fact finder could have believed the entry was for an unlawful purpose other than a theft or felony, this evidence was sufficient to sustain a verdict for the lesser offense of criminal trespass.

Finally, it should be noted that because criminal trespass is a misdemeanor, the rule requiring corroboration of an accomplice's testimony does not apply. Thus, a conviction can be upheld on the sole basis of an accomplice's testimony.

E. Defenses

The most prevalent defense to a criminal trespass charge is that the alleged trespass was committed under a claim of right. Older cases hold that no conviction can be had where the defendant entered the land or premises in question with a good faith claim of ownership or possessory rights in the property. If proven, such a defense negates the requisite mens rea. This defense should still exist under the current statute. The Supreme Court of Georgia has held that an agent who believes in good faith that his principal is the owner of and entitled to possession of the premises can not be found guilty of criminal trespass if he goes upon the premises in obedience to the directions of his principal. Because both joint tenants have a valid ownership interest, one joint tenant can not be criminally prosecuted by the other joint tenant for trespass to the property in which they share ownership.

The claim of right defense most often involves the rights of tenants and their guests. A tenant who in good faith claims possession of land, under one who has a bona fide claim of title, can not be convicted of trespass. Further, because a tenant is entitled to the undisturbed enjoyment of his possession, the landlord has no right to exercise any control over who may enter the premises or over the conduct of the tenant's guests, so long as they are there for a lawful purpose and do not infringe upon any right of the landlord.

A 1977 case considered the extent to which a contractual right to be on the premises constitutes a defense to a § 16-7-21 charge. In Rowles v. State, the accused asserted that the contractual right to be on the premises embodied in his season pass to an amusement park provided him with a defense to the charge of criminal trespass. The court concluded that the season pass was not unqualified permission from the owner for the passholder to be present in any condition.

In State v. Moore, the issue before the court was whether the defendant had a defense to a trespass charge where he removed a fence which interfered with his access to his property. In an unusual ordering of values, the court held that while § 16-3-24(a) permits the use of force against a person to terminate the tortious interference with the defendant's property, it does not permit force to be used against the property of another. Furthermore, the court held that it was no defense that the complainant had wrongfully obstructed the driveway and thus interfered with the defendant's ability to get to his property.

In Watson v. State, the defendant contended that title to the store products had passed to him when he identified them and placed them in his cart and consequently he was not refusing to leave the premises after being told to do so by the store manager, but was merely refusing to abandon property which was rightfully his. The court disagreed and held that even assuming that title to the store products had passed to the defendant, the fact that the defendant had "title" to the store products could not serve as a basis for allowing him to ignore the store manager's demand that he leave, thereby violating a criminal statute.

F. Constitutional Issues

Our criminal trespass statutes have been subjected to repeated constitutional attack. The statutes have been attacked as being unconstitutionally vague, as being violative of the First Amendment rights of freedom of assembly and speech, and as being applied in violation of the Equal Protection Clause. In a series of cases during the early 1960s, mostly involving black civil rights groups, the Georgia Supreme Court upheld the legitimacy of the then existing criminal trespass statute until decisions by the United States Supreme Court forced it to reverse its position.

Few cases have considered the constitutionality of the various provisions of the current statute. In Mixon v. State the words "unlawful purpose" contained in § 16-7-21(b)(1) were alleged to be unconstitutionally vague. The Georgia Supreme Court disagreed on the ground that the phrase "unlawful purpose" had to be construed in context as part of former GCA Chapter 26-15, "Criminal Damage to Property," and that the words required a purpose to violate a criminal law.

A 1973 case challenged the constitutionality of § 16-7-21(b)(3) (remaining on premises after notice to leave given). In Daniel v. State the court held that the defendant's conviction for remaining on public school premises after being directed to depart constituted no denial of freedom of speech and assembly because conduct employed in exercising those freedoms must not constitute a trespass upon property owned or occupied by others.

In the 1989 case of United States v. Gilbert, the federal district court determined that the defendant's use of a federal building as a residence constituted a trespass under Georgia law. The federal government sought to enjoin this activity. However, as a defense, the defendant argued that his activity was expressive and therefore protected by the First Amendment. The court, assuming that the activity was expressive and thus protected, held that an injunction aimed at enjoining the defendant's use of the federal building as a residence, was a reasonable time, place, and manner restriction under the First Amendment. First, such an injunction would be content-neutral. Second, such an injunction could be narrowly tailored to further the significant governmental interest in preserving the aesthetics of the building. Finally, such an injunction would leave open many alternate channels of communication to the defendant.

Where a person is on state property solely for expressive purposes and where there is no valid restriction forbidding such conduct, as a matter of law that person is on state property under the "authority" of the free speech guarantees of the First Amendment. In such a case, that person cannot be convicted of criminal trespass because the state would not be able to prove that he was present "without authority," an essential element of criminal trespass. In Langton v. State, the defendant was convicted of criminal trespass for remaining in the parking lot of a Georgia Department of Labor facility after being directed to leave by a security guard and by the supervisor of the facility. The defendant's defense was that her presence was authorized because she was engaged in expressive activity protected by the First Amendment. Specifically, she was distributing leaflets encouraging older workers to unite in order to gain political power to oppose age discrimination. The court found that a purported state restriction, which was the basis for the defendant being asked to leave, forbidding the distribution of all written communication on all state property without regard to the intended use of any particular sites would be unreasonable under the "public forum analysis." For that reason, the court held that the restriction was unconstitutional and did not validly restrict the defendant's right to be present for the purpose of expressive activity.

In a 1979 case, State v. Raybon, the Georgia Supreme Court upheld § 16-7-21(b)(3), this time against a Due Process and Equal Protection attack. The case was correctly decided, but its factual setting raises a rather interesting problem. The property owner in Raybon was the Greyhound bus station manager. He dealt with "derelicts" by reading them a printed notice which they were to sign, which tells them to leave the bus station and never return. In Raybon, the defendant returned five hours after being given notice to depart, and returned without a legitimate reason to do so. Under those facts, a criminal trespass conviction seems appropriate. The manager testified, however, that he intended his notice to include all returns, both for legitimate and illegitimate reasons. It is questionable whether the criminal law can or ought to be used to punish a person who enters a business establishment to conduct legitimate business, merely because of his prior misconduct. Of course, on the Raybon facts this issue was not presented.

G. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

The relationship between § 16-7-21(b)(1) (entry for an unlawful purpose) and § 16-7-1 (burglary) has been troublesome to the Georgia courts, resulting in conflicting opinions and confusing language. The confusion arises from the fact that the burglary statute requires an entry with an intent to commit a felony or a theft. Because an intent to commit a felony is necessarily an unlawful purpose, the Georgia courts have been left with the question of whether a criminal trespass conviction is authorized when the evidence shows an intent to commit a theft or felony.

The Court of Appeals, in a number of cases, has stated that if the intent to steal is proven, § 16-7-21(b)(1) merges with § 16-7-1. Thus, in Reese v. State, the court held that where the evidence discloses only an intent to commit a theft, a charge on criminal trespass is not proper. Where the evidence discloses that the accused might have entered for an unlawful purpose other than the commission of a felony or theft, a charge on criminal trespass is authorized.

These cases place a severe limitation on the "unlawful purpose" language of § 16-7-21(b)(1). The cases necessarily limit it to situations where the intent was to commit only a misdemeanor.

In Coney v. State, the court upheld a burglary conviction, holding the evidence sufficient to show an intent to commit a felony. The court found no error in the trial judge's charging on criminal trespass because the inclusion of the charge on criminal trespass favored the defendant. Coney may be seen as inconsistent with Reese because the appellate court affirmed a conviction where improper instructions were given, but the two cases together simply suggest that if the evidence shows an intent to commit a theft or felony, the judge will not be reversed for charging or not charging on criminal trespass. A defendant convicted of the lesser offense under such a charge hardly will be in any position to assert the error in instruction, since it ordinarily will have been at his request and in his favor.

In Brewer v. State, the court held that the trial court did not err in failing to give the defendant's written request to charge on criminal trespass as a lesser included offense of burglary. The defendant's evidence of alibi did not reasonably raise the inference that he unlawfully entered the home with a less culpable mental state than the felonious intent of a burglar as charged in the indictment.

In Munoz v. State, the court held it was not error for the trial court to refuse to give the defendant's requested charge on criminal trespass as a lesser included offense of burglary, where the uncontradicted evidence showed completion of the greater offense so that the charge on the lesser offense was not required.

In Bradshaw v. State, the court held that where the defendant denied entering the premises, there was no error in refusing to charge on criminal trespass as a lesser included offense of burglary.

In Dix v. State, the court held that it was not error for the trial court to refuse to give the defendant's requested charge on criminal trespass as a lesser included offense of entering an automobile with an intent to commit a theft, where there was sufficient evidence to support the jury's verdict that the defendant was guilty of the greater offense.

It should be noted that even where the defendant is entitled to a charge on § 16-7-21(b)(1) as a lesser included offense, he must comply with the rules laid down by the Georgia Supreme Court in State v. Stonaker. In Burton v. State the Court of Appeals applied Stonaker, finding no error in a failure to charge on criminal trespass where the accused neglected to make a written request for the charge.

In Waugh v. State, the Supreme Court held that the trial court's refusal to give the defendant's requested charge on criminal trespass as a lesser included offense of criminal damage to property in the first degree was not error. Criminal trespass could not be considered, as a matter of fact, a lesser included offense because the only evidence of "interference" in the case was the life-endangering act of intentionally dropping a rock into the path of on-coming traffic, which was used to establish the offense of criminal damage to property in the first degree. There was no evidence of a mere knowing and malicious "interference" with the property of another without his consent, which is required to establish the offense of criminal trespass.

In Merrell v. State, the Court of Appeals held that criminal trespass is a lesser included offense of criminal damage to property in the second degree and, thus, the trial court can instruct the jury with regard to the former offense in a trial based on an indictment for the latter.

In Williams v. State, the trial court charged § 16-7-21(b) of the criminal trespass statute as the lesser included offense of burglary. The jury thereafter found the defendant guilty of criminal trespass, but not of burglary. The Georgia Court of Appeals found that the crimes for which the defendant was convicted, i.e., criminal trespass as a lesser offense of burglary and criminal damage to property in the second degree, did not constitute the same offense as a matter of fact or law, and the trial court did not err in imposing consecutive sentences for these separate offenses.

In Kerr v. State, the court held that a violation of subsection (a) and a violation of subsection (b)(3) of § 16-7-21 did not merge as a matter of law because each required proof of different elements. The court also held that the two violations did not merge as a matter of fact where evidence showed that the defendants interfered with the use of the property by making ingress to and egress from the property difficult, thereby violating subsection (a), but other evidence also showed that defendants were on the property and that they refused to leave after being told to do so by the properly identified authorized representative of the owner of the property, thereby violating subsection (b)(3).

No conviction for unlawful assembly may be had where the accused (or, indeed, any member of the assembled group) is also convicted of a completed crime against the person or property of another, where that completed crime was the purpose of the assembly. Thus, in Kerr v. State, the court held that unlawful assembly for the purpose of committing criminal trespass was included in the crime of criminal trespass, because the defendants were properly convicted of criminal trespass.

The aggravated assault and criminal trespass statutes differ in the classification of the interests that each statute seeks to protect: the person placed in reasonable apprehension of receiving serious bodily injury in the case of aggravated assault and the property of another in the case of criminal trespass. Thus, criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of aggravated assault as a matter of law. Furthermore, inasmuch as an indictment alleges deadly weapon aggravated assault and therefore does not require the state to prove that the defendant interfered with the victim's property, criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense as a matter of fact.

H. Punishment

Criminal trespass is a misdemeanor punishable under the general misdemeanor statute.

The misdemeanor offense of criminal trespass does not involve moral turpitude. A conviction for this offense is not admissible to impeach a witness's testimony at trial.

Where the defendant has pled guilty to criminal trespass as a lesser included offense of criminal damage to property in the second degree, in the absence of any agreement on the damage to the property, the $500 limit set forth in § 16-7-21(a) is the maximum amount that a trial court can order the defendant to pay as restitution for damage to the property.

III. Related Offenses

A. Damaging, Destroying, or Secreting Property to Defraud Another

Section 16-9-53, which replaces three pre-1968 statutes, makes it a criminal offense for one to damage, destroy, or secret property to defraud another person. The act must be done knowingly and with the intent to defraud. It applies to any property of whatever class or character and the property in question may be owned by the defendant or another person. Section 16-9-53 is a felony, carrying a penalty of imprisonment from one to five years.

There have been few cases decided under this or predecessor statutes. In Jarrett v. State, the defendant was convicted under § 16-9-53 for secreting property in order to defraud another. The claim on appeal was that the property had not been hidden, and therefore there had been no secreting. The evidence showed that the property was visible from several vantage points and was in plain view to those who entered the defendant's property. The court, on appeal, rejected the assertion that to secret property it must be hidden in the literal sense. According to the court, the prosecution need only show that the property had been "placed where it is unlikely to be discovered." On the facts of the case, the court found that a jury could have found that the property had been so placed and the conviction was affirmed.

One old case sheds some light on the types of evidence that can be admitted. In McElhannon v. State, the defendant was charged with mutilating and destroying a corporation's books with the intent to defraud and injure the corporation. The court held that because one of the alleged motives for the perpetration of the offense was concealment of a misappropriation, it was proper for the state to show that shortly before the incident the accused had been seen gambling. Furthermore, evidence which tended to show that there had been no misappropriation of the funds of the corporation, but that its losses had been sustained in the due course of its business, was admissible, as was evidence that a third party was mismanaging the corporation.

Few cases have considered the sufficiency of evidence in a prosecution for defrauding another by damaging property. In Powell v. State, the court upheld a conviction based on the following facts. The furnishings of the house arsoned by the defendant owner were insured; they had been removed at night by the defendant two days before the fire and stored in a distant city in a location rented in the name of a friend. When the house was saved, the absence of furnishings was explained by the defendant to his insurance carrier by stating unknown parties had taken everything of value. At no time did the defendant inform the authorities or his insurance carrier that the items were in fact removed by him and were safely in storage. The court found this evidence sufficient for the jury to conclude that the insured furnishings were removed and secreted knowingly and with intent to defraud another.

One question that may arise is whether burning to defraud an insurer under § 16-9-53 constitutes a lesser included offense of arson, so as to preclude double conviction. This question should be answered in the negative because the offenses involve completely different intents and are designed to punish different types of deleterious behavior. Under the law prior to 1968, one case held that burning to defraud an insurer is not a lesser offense of third-degree arson, thus permitting a burning to defraud prosecution to proceed after an acquittal for arson. One case under the current law, in fact, upheld convictions for both arson and secreting property to defraud another on the basis of the same acts.

Endangering a security interest is not a lesser included offense of secreting property to defraud another as a matter of law. Nor is it a lesser included offense as a matter of fact where the indictment has narrowly charged the defendant with secreting a property interest to defraud another and the facts alleged in the indictment are insufficient to establish endangering a security interest. Based on the facts alleged in the indictment and the evidence presented at trial, the trial court may appropriately deny a defendant's request to charge the jury on endangering a security interest as a lesser included offense.

B. Criminal Use of an Article with an Altered Identification Mark

Section 16-9-70 prohibits the criminal use of an article with an altered identification mark. Although the statute's title speaks in terms of an altered identification mark, its language punishes only the use of an article with a removed identification mark. It is unclear whether a change of one or two numbers would be within the statute's proscription. The proscription applies only to a manufacturer's number or identification mark. It does not apply to a number or identification affixed by a user or owner. The statute broadly defines "use," as buying, selling, receiving, disposing of, concealing, or having in one's possession such an altered article. "Article" is defined with laborious specificity as a mechanical or electrical device, appliance, contrivance, material, vessel as defined in § 52-7-3, or other piece of apparatus or equipment, other than a motor vehicle. The statute explicitly requires that the accused know that the identification mark has been removed for the purpose of concealing or destroying the identity of the article. Subsection (c) excludes from the operation of the statute alterations made in the ordinary course of business. Criminal use of an article with an altered identification mark is a felony punishable by imprisonment for one to five years.

In Brooks v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of § 16-9-70 against a claim that it was too vague to be enforceable.

Perhaps the key element in a § 16-9-70 prosecution is the proof of knowledge on the part of the defendant that the identification number has been removed. In Rogers v. State, the defendant asserted that such knowledge had not been proven. The court, on appeal, held that knowledge can be proven by circumstantial evidence. While this is certainly true, the court went further and described such proof as "constructive knowledge," a potentially confusing term. While there can be no doubt that the mens rea of this offense can be proven by circumstantial evidence, there also ought to be no doubt what the mens rea is—knowledge.

If by "constructive knowledge" the court means knowledge of this defendant proven by circumstantial evidence, it is correct. If, on the other hand, it defines "constructive knowledge" to mean knowledge of facts from which the defendant ought to have known of the situation, it is revising the legislative definition of the mens rea of the statute. A jury must be told that it must find knowledge by the defendant, but that knowledge can be proven by something other than direct testimony by the defendant that he knew. To punish defendants for what they ought to have known under the circumstances is to punish them for negligence which is not the mens rea outlined by the statute.

No clear line can yet be discerned as to what evidence is sufficient to convict under this statute. A number of reported cases have considered the question. In Rogers v. State, the evidence showed that the police found a pistol with gouge marks on the butt which obliterated the serial number. The defendant testified, with corroboration by his wife and friend, that his friend gave him the pistol as collateral for a loan and that he (the defendant) did not own the pistol. The defendant admitted noticing the scratch marks but testified that he did not know that the serial number was not on the pistol. The court held that the evidence was sufficient for the jury to conclude that the serial number had been obliterated, that it had been done for the purpose of concealing the pistol's identity, and that the defendant knew this.

On the other hand, in Blair v. State, a stereo stolen from a pawnshop was subsequently located on display in defendant's store. The testimony established that a wooden strip bearing an identification number would normally have been glued to the unit at the time it was manufactured and that this strip was no longer affixed when the stereo was recovered. There was no direct evidence that a number was affixed to the stereo at the time it was stolen from the pawnshop, except that the owner's daughter testified that she thought a number was so affixed. Although the daughter also testified that the identification numbers of all items in the shop were routinely recorded, she did not produce a number for the stereo. The court concluded that in the absence of any clear indication that the identification number was affixed to the stereo prior to its theft, there was no basis for an inference that it had been removed purposefully and reversed the conviction.

In Power v. State, the defendant testified at trial that he had purchased a rifle with an altered identification mark eight years earlier when he was approximately 15 years old, and that he knew at the time that the serial mark had been obliterated. The defendant's uncle testified that he was present at the sale of the gun and that either he or the defendant inquired of the seller why there was no identification mark on the gun. The seller told them not to worry about it. The court concluded that the evidence showed only that the defendant was aware the serial number had been removed, and that there was no evidence, direct or circumstantial, to show that he knew the serial number had been removed for the purpose of concealing the identity of the rifle. Thus, the defendant's motion for directed verdict should have been granted.

In Fulton v. State, the court held that the jury's verdict of guilty as to possession of a firearm by a convicted felon was not mutually exclusive of its verdict of not guilty regarding criminal use of an article with an altered identification mark. Prior to taking the pistol from his girl friend, the defendant had never had the pistol in his possession. The jury was authorized to find that the defendant had no knowledge that the serial number under the hand grips on the gun had been altered. Thus, the jury was authorized to acquit, because the state had failed to prove the essential elements of knowledge and intent as to the criminal use of the pistol with an altered serial number, even though possession of the pistol, itself, was proven.

Evidence showing that the defendant was arrested in possession of a weapon with the serial number removed, immediately after confronting the victim, would be sufficient to authorize a charge concerning the criminal use of an article with an altered identification mark.

C. Removal of Collars or Identifying Items or Marks from Animals

Section 16-9-71 makes it unlawful for any person without the express permission of the owner or lessee of an animal to remove a collar, tag, tattoo, or any identification mark artificially attached to or imprinted on an animal for the purposes of identification which causes or is likely to cause the loss of the animal to the owner. This offense is punishable as a misdemeanor.

D. Vandalism to a Place of Worship

Section 16-7-26 makes it a criminal offense maliciously to deface or desecrate a church, synagogue, or other place of public religious worship. This felony carries a penalty of imprisonment from one to five years.

E. Criminal Interference with Government Property

Under § 16-7-24, it is a felony, punishable by one to five years in prison, to destroy, damage, or deface government property. Additionally, it is a misdemeanor to forcibly interfere with or to obstruct the passage into or from government property. "Government property" includes all property, whether real or personal, of the federal government, the state, any political subdivision thereof, or any government agency. Government ownership of the property is an essential element of the offense that may be established by direct or circumstantial evidence.

It is likely that anyone committing the acts prohibited by § 16-7-24 would also be guilty of committing other crimes, such as theft, criminal damage to property, or criminal trespass. Nevertheless, the drafters of the code thought it desirable to have a specific statute directed to the protection of government property which would supply a needed aid to law enforcement officers.

Because the elements of interference with government property are not included in the elements required for aggravated assault, the two offenses do not merge as a matter of law.

Damaging government property may be justified under circumstances "which stand upon the same footing of reason and justice" as those defenses enumerated in the criminal code.

F. Mutilating, Defacing, Defiling, or Abusing Contemptuously Any Publicly or Privately Owned Military Monument, Plaque, Marker, or Memorial

Section 50-3-1(b)(1) makes it a misdemeanor for any person to mutilate, deface, defile, or abuse contemptuously any publicly owned military monument, plaque, marker, or memorial dedicated to the military personnel of this state, the United States of America or the several states thereof, or the Confederate States of America or the several states thereof. Furthermore, under this provision, it is a misdemeanor for any officer, body, or representative of state or local government or any department, agency, authority, or instrumentality thereof to remove or conceal from display any such monument, plaque, marker, or memorial for the purpose of preventing the visible display of it.

Section 50-3-1(b)(4) makes it unlawful for any person acting without authority to mutilate, deface, defile, abuse contemptuously, relocate, remove, conceal, or obscure any privately owned monument, plaque, marker, or memorial which is dedicated to, honors, or recounts the military service of any past or present military personnel of this state, the United States of America or the several states thereof, or the Confederate States of America or the several states thereof. Any person or entity who suffers injury or damages as a result of a violation of this law may bring an action individually or in a representative capacity against the person committing the violation to seek injunctive relief and to recover general and exemplary damages sustained as a result of his unlawful actions.

G. Damaging, Injuring, or Interfering with Property of Public Utility Companies, Municipalities or Political Subdivisions

Section 16-7-25 prohibits any person from intentionally and without authority injuring or destroying any apparatus (including, but not limited to, meters, pipes, conduits, wires, lines, posts, or lamps) belonging to a company or political subdivision engaged in the manufacture or sale of electricity, water, gas, telephone, or other public services. The statute also prohibits anyone from intentionally preventing a meter from properly registering the quantity of service supplied; interfering with the proper action of such company or political subdivision; intentionally diverting any services of such company or political subdivision; or intentionally using or causing to be used any service manufactured, sold or distributed by such company or political subdivision without its consent.

The statute creates a presumption which will force defendants to produce evidence. Subsection (b) creates a rebuttable presumption of liability against the person who, with knowledge of the tampering or diversion, receives the benefit of the service without proper charge. This portion of the statute may be in conflict with § 16-2-6 which provides that a person will not be presumed to act with criminal intention and juries ought to be informed of permissible inferences which can be drawn instead of in terms of a presumption.

The Court of Appeals in Dougherty v. State cited both § 16-7-25 and § 16-2-6 but did not discuss the apparent conflict. Instead, the court merely announced that the evidence was sufficient to establish the requisite intent for a conviction under § 16-7-25. The evidence showed that the defendant's power service was disconnected and the meter sealed. Approximately five weeks later, police found the meter unsealed with a load on it and the lights and television turned on in defendant's house. The defendant denied playing the television set but admitted using electrical power on that date.

Violation of § 16-7-25 is a misdemeanor and, as such, is subject to the provisions of the general misdemeanor punishment section.

H. Injuring, Tearing Down or Destruction of Mailboxes; Injuring, Defacing or Destruction of Mail

Section 16-7-27 prohibits the willful destruction or injury of mail receptacles or mail. Since its enactment, no reported cases have considered it. On its face, however, it would appear to be a lesser included offense of criminal trespass as proscribed by § 16-7-21(a). Furthermore, it may be preempted by federal law governing the postal service.

Violation of § 16-7-27 is a misdemeanor, punishable under the general misdemeanor statute.

I. Litter Prevention and Abatement

1. Littering

Section 16-7-43(b) makes it a misdemeanor to litter on public or private property. In addition to imposing punishment under the general misdemeanor statute, the court may direct the violator to pick up and remove his and other litter from the public street, highway, or right of way upon which he has deposited litter or may direct him to pick up and remove any and all litter from any public beach, public park, or private right of way.

O.C.G.A. § 16-7-43(g) also makes it a misdemeanor to willfully obstruct, resist, impede, or interfere with any person appointed to enforce this state's litter prevention law or local littering ordinances or to retaliate or discriminate in any manner against this person as a reprisal for any act or omission.

Section 16-7-47(d) makes it a misdemeanor for any person to dump any refuse or other material into a container other than household garbage, if a local government has clearly marked that container for "household garbage only." It is also a misdemeanor for any person to set fire to the contents of, indiscriminately scatter or disperse the contents of, or otherwise vandalize any containers provided by a local government for the dumping of trash or garbage.

2. Egregious Littering

Section 16-7-52 makes it unlawful for any person to intentionally dump egregious litter, unless authorized to do so by law or by a duly issued permit, (1) in or on any public highway, road, street, alley, or thoroughfare, including any portion of the right of way thereof, or on any other public lands except in containers or areas lawfully provided for such dumping; (2) in or on any fresh-water lake, river, canal, or stream or tidal or coastal water of the state; or (3) in or on any private property, unless prior consent of the owner has been given and unless such dumping will not adversely affect the public health and is not in violation of any other state law, rule, or regulation.

Under § 16-7-53, egregious littering is punishable either as a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature or as a felony depending upon type of litter involved. Each day a continuing violation occurs constitutes a separate violation.

3. Placement of Posters, Signs, or Advertisements

Section 16-7-58 makes it a misdemeanor to place posters, signs, or advertisements (1) on any public property or building or on any private property unless the owner or the occupier as authorized by the owner has given permission to place the posters, signs, or advertisements on the property or (2) on any property zoned for commercial or industrial uses if the placement of such posters, signs, or advertisements conflicts with any zoning laws or ordinances.

Any poster, sign, or advertisement placed in violation of § 16-7-58 constitutes a public nuisance, and the officials having jurisdiction of the public property or building, including without limitation law enforcement officers, may remove or direct the removal of the same.

Each poster, sign, or advertisement placed in violation of § 16-7-58 constitutes a separate offense.

J. Criminal Trespass by Motor Vehicles

Acts 1990, p. 2048, eff. Jan. 1, 1991, repealed § 16-7-29 which prohibited criminal trespass by motor vehicles. However, this same Act enacted a similar Code section at § 40-6-252.

K. Tampering with Operation of Electronic Monitoring Devices

In 2004, the General Assembly found that because of prison and jail overcrowding and the high cost of incarceration electronic monitoring devices, under appropriate conditions and limitations, would provide cost effective alternatives to, or bridges to and from, incarceration. Moreover, it found that these devices would offer effective means to track offenders and might reduce criminal recidivism.

Section 16-7-29 is designed to encourage the use of electronic monitoring devices while at the same time discourage interference with these devices. This Code section provides that it is a felony punishable by not less than one nor more than five years for any person to knowingly and without authority remove, destroy, or circumvent the operation of an electronic monitoring device which is being used for the purpose of monitoring a person who is complying with a home arrest program as set forth in § 42-1-8 or who is wearing the device as a condition of bond or pretrial release, probation, or parole. It is likewise a felony for any person to knowingly and without authority request or solicit any other person to remove, destroy, or circumvent the operation of an electronic monitoring device which is being used for these purposes.

RAPE

I. Generally

Defined as the carnal knowledge of a woman, forcibly and against her will, rape is one of the few sex-specific offenses in the criminal code. For that reason it is unusual, but it is peculiar for other reasons as well. It is one of very few crimes in which nonconsent is an element of the offense. Moreover, until legislation in 1976 overturned prior law, the complainant's reputation for chastity was admissible on the issue of whether she consented to the intercourse on the occasion in question, and prior specific acts of sexual intercourse with men other than the defendant were held admissible for that purpose as well. The latter rule was based on a belief that a woman's consent to the sexual advances of one man implies her consent to those of another. The fear that a vindictive woman's lies would result in the conviction of an innocent man also accounted for the now repealed statutory proviso which required corroborating evidence to support a rape conviction.

Another result of the definition of rape as a crime which can be committed only by men against women is that the statute is subject to constitutional attack as gender-based discrimination violative of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Several such attacks, one of which was successful, have been brought against sex-specific rape and statutory rape statutes in past years. The Georgia Supreme Court, however, has upheld § 16-6-1 against an Equal Protection attack, finding that the statute serves important public interests in protecting women from "physical injury, psychological trauma and possible pregnancy." Even though the rape statute is designed to punish male offenders, it is clear that a woman can be convicted of rape if she aids or abets in the commission of the crime.

II. Elements

The prosecution must show three elements to prove a case of rape: (1) carnal knowledge, (2) force, and (3) lack of consent.

A. Carnal Knowledge or Penetration

Section 16-6-1 defines carnal knowledge as "any penetration of the female sex organ by the male sex organ." The cases make clear that the statute is to be read literally here; any penetration, however slight, is sufficient to constitute this element of the offense and may be proved by indirect or circumstantial evidence, as well as direct evidence. However, the evidence must show that the victim's vagina was penetrated by a male sex organ. Thus, evidence that shows that the victim had been sexually molested by the insertion of a wedge-shaped object into her vagina does not show such penetration. Although in most cases the state will introduce medical evidence of penetration, there is authority that the victim's testimony that the defendant "raped" her is sufficient to show that penetration did, in fact, occur. Other than the penetration of the female sex organ by the male sex organ, the infliction of physical injury is not an element of the offense of rape. Also, ejaculation is not an element of rape, and it is not necessary that the examining physician find semen in the victim's body.

A person who aids and abets in the commission of a rape is a party to the rape and may be charged and convicted of rape even though he did not actually have sexual intercourse with the victim.

B. Force

Although force and lack of consent are clearly two separate elements of the crime of rape and the older cases emphasized the distinction between the two, analysis of each is intertwined with the other. The older cases required the state to prove the use of such physical force as was necessary to overcome the victim's resistance to the defendant's attack. It is clear today, however, that the element of force will be proven if the defendant's words or acts were sufficient to instill in the victim a reasonable apprehension of bodily harm, violence, or other dangerous consequences to herself or others.

In 1977, the Georgia Supreme Court differentiated between the elements of force and lack of consent in forcible rape cases involving underage victims by holding that lack of consent, but not force, was established by proof of the victim's age. Thus, force was a necessary element of common-law or forcible rape against an underage victim. The state was required to prove this element by acts of force or mental coercion rather than by presuming force as a matter of law based on the victim's age. In 1998, the Georgia Supreme Court reaffirmed its holding but found that there was a troubling inconsistency in the way our law dealt with forcible rape and other sexual offenses when the victim was a young child. At common law, rape included consensual relations with a female under ten years of age. As the legal age of consent increased, however, it became necessary in rape cases to distinguish between different categories of underage females. Since a presumption of force supplied by the victim's age would apply to all categories of underage females, even sexually active teenagers, it was abandoned. Such a presumption would not only have ignored the wide variety of factual situations in rape cases but would have been contrary to the trend in criminal law to create meaningful grading distinctions among the different forms of the offense. Yet the abandonment of this presumption left young victims of rape without the same protection the presumption still afforded young victims of other sexual offenses. In order to resolve this inconsistency, the Georgia Supreme Court urged the General Assembly to enact an additional definition of forcible rape which would provide that a man is guilty of rape if "the female is less than 10 years old." In 1999, the General Assembly did as the court urged and changed the definition of rape to provide that a person commits the offense of rape when he has carnal knowledge of "[a] female who is less than ten years of age." The General Assembly intended this phrase to refer only to chronological age, not to overall cognitive age or overall age equivalence. Enacting this definition reestablishes the common-law rule and the common-sense principle that sexual intercourse with a female under ten years of age is a forcible act constituting rape as a matter of law. This enactment overrules the Georgia Supreme Court's holding to the extent that it applies to females who are less than ten years of age. Where the victim is ten years of age or older but under the age of consent, the state still cannot presume the element of force as a matter of law but must prove it as a factual matter. Actual force against the victim may be proved by circumstantial evidence.

In a rape case involving a victim rendered insensible by sleep or intoxication, only constructive force, i.e., the force that is necessary to effect the penetration, need be shown to satisfy the force requirement. Where there is evidence of the victim's excessive alcohol consumption at the time of the rape, a jury instruction on constructive force would be authorized.

C. Lack of Consent

The former requirement of proof that the victim's nonconsent be evidenced by physical resistance with all her strength until completion of the act by the defendant has given way to the more realistic requirement that the victim must not have freely consented to the intercourse. In fact, the victim need not have physically resisted at all, if fear or intimidation was the reason for failure to do so.

The victim's testimony that the sexual acts were committed against her will would be sufficient to support the defendant's conviction of rape, the issue of her credibility being for the jury to decide. In order to determine whether the alleged victim freely consented to the intercourse, the question is not whether the victim's testimony as to her lack of consent is reasonable; nor is it whether the victim's apprehension was reasonable. The question is whether the state has proved, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the acts of the accused were not freely consented to by the alleged victim. This is a question of fact for the jury to decide. The jury is entitled to reject the defendant's claim of a consensual sexual encounter and accept the victim's testimony depicting nonconsensual, forcible intercourse.

In a rape case involving an underage victim, the victim's lack of consent is established by proof that she was under the age of consent.

If the victim is rendered insensible at the time of the attack by sleep, intoxication, or mental incompetence, she is incapable of consent and its absence need not be shown. Indeed, there is nothing in § 16-6-1 which precludes a finding of rape if the victim is not alive at the moment of penetration.

When the victim is a mentally incapacitated adult incapable of giving valid consent to a sexual act, the principle mandating that force be proved is simply not applicable. The issue for the jury to decide in such a case is whether the victim was capable of knowingly and intelligently consenting to sexual intercourse. Thus, notwithstanding the lack of evidence of force, evidence of the victim's inability to give proper consent to sexual intercourse would be sufficient to authorize the jury to convict the defendant of rape.

Evidence of the victim's physical or mental condition before or at the time of the commission of the offense is admissible insofar as it bears on the question of consent.

III. Evidence

A. Corroboration

The traditional rules of evidence in rape cases reflect a lack of confidence in the victim's credibility and great concern that innocent defendants will be convicted. The corroboration requirement repealed in 1978 was one of the devices used to guard against the possibility that a jury would be unfairly swayed by the complaint of a vengeful woman. Until July 1, 1978, § 16-6-1 provided that "no conviction shall be had on the unsupported testimony of the female." Prior to the requirement's deletion from the statute, the Georgia Supreme Court had consistently held, however, that a complaint of rape was sufficiently corroborated if some evidence, other than the victim's testimony, tended to prove that the crime had been committed. It was not necessary that the supportive evidence either connect the defendant to the crime or show beyond a reasonable doubt that the crime was committed.

The deletion of the corroboration requirement was attacked as an unconstitutional shift of the burden of proof in Tucker v. State. In Tucker, the defendant argued that the amended statute permits a mere allegation by the victim to place the burden of proof on the defendant in violation of the Due Process Clause. The court rejected the argument, pointing out that the state still had the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt all the elements of the crime. The statute merely defines what would be sufficient; it does not require a conviction or place any ultimate burden on the defendant. It should be noted that the corroboration requirement remains in the statutory rape statute. There is not and has never been any requirement that the testimony of the victim of an attempted forcible rape be corroborated.

Apparently, the corroboration of a rape victim's testimony still may be necessary where the victim testifies that the acts were committed forcibly and against her will and the defendant testifies that the acts were all with the victim's consent.

Evidence of a purported rape victim's state of mind following the attack may corroborate her claim that she was raped.

B. Victim's Prior Sexual Behavior

1. Exclusionary Rule Prior to Rape Shield Statute

A second evidentiary device traditionally used to protect against the conviction of innocent defendants was the admission of evidence of the victim's prior sexual misconduct both to prove the victim's consent as well as to impeach her testimony generally. This was formerly permitted as an exception to the Code provision that the general character of the parties and their conduct in other transactions are irrelevant. The use of the victim's prior sexual misconduct to impeach her testimony was premised on the belief that an unchaste woman lacks the general traits of truth and veracity. Its use to show consent was based on the belief that consent to one man's advances implies consent to another's. In 1974, the Georgia Supreme Court rejected both of these traditional rationales in Lynn v. State, holding that evidence of specific acts of prior sexual intercourse with men other than the defendant was inadmissible either for impeachment or for the purpose of showing consent.

2. Rape Shield Statute

In 1976, the Georgia General Assembly enacted what is commonly described as the Rape Shield Statute (§ 24-2-3), thereby modifying the scope of Lynn's exclusionary rule. Defining the complaining witness's "past sexual behavior" as including, but not being limited to, evidence of her (1) marital history, (2) mode of dress, and (3) general reputation for promiscuity, nonchastity, or sexual mores contrary to the community standards, the General Assembly generally forbade the introduction of such evidence in rape prosecutions.

The 1976 Rape Shield Statute contained two exceptions to its exclusionary rule. The past sexual behavior of the complaining witness was not admissible unless the trial court (1) found that the past sexual behavior directly involved the participation of the accused or (2) found that the evidence expected to be introduced supported an inference that the defendant could have reasonably believed that the complaining witness consented to the conduct complained of in the prosecution.

In 1989, the General Assembly amended subsection (b) of the statute by substituting the word "and" for the word "or." This amendment, which reduced the two exceptions to one, strengthened the Rape Shield Statute's exclusionary rule by narrowing the range of admissible evidence of a complaining witness's alleged past sexual behavior. The current exception in subsection (b) has been construed to relate only to past sexual behavior involving the complaining witness and the accused. Now, in order for evidence of a complaining witness's past sexual behavior to be introduced under subsection (b), it must directly involve the accused and support an inference that the accused reasonably believed the complaining witness consented.

In addition to the amendment to subsection (b), the General Assembly in 1989 created another very limited exception in paragraph (2) of subsection (c). Under this exception, evidence is admissible if it "is so highly material that it will substantially support a conclusion that the accused reasonably believed that the complaining witness consented to the conduct complained of and that justice mandates the admission of such evidence." Evidence introduced under this exception need not relate to prior behavior between the complaining witness and the accused. However, before evidence of the complaining witness's prior behavior may be introduced, the accused must show some connection between the prior behavior and himself. This connection may be shown by evidence of any behavior or verbal exchange that concerned the accused, by evidence of behavior that related to the incident at issue, or by evidence of behavior that could legitimately be claimed to have prompted a belief in consent on the occasion at issue.

The exceptions within the statute may seem to threaten to swallow up the general rule of inadmissibility. Prior to Lynn and the statute, the defendant was traditionally seeking to introduce the sexual history of the complaining witness for the purpose of showing consent, and the exceptions appear to permit the introduction of this same evidence for the same purpose. Thus, it might seem that the exceptions return the law to its pre-Lynn status. This is not true, however, for two reasons.

First, while the evidence is admissible to show consent (or at least to show a mistake of fact which is a defense under § 16-3-5), the statute, in requiring the defense to notify the judge of its intent to introduce such evidence and in requiring an in camera hearing before the jury hears the evidence, eliminates the possibility that a jury will hear prejudicial evidence concerning the complaining witness's past sexual history and then later be told to ignore it because an insufficient amount of evidence has been introduced. Second, and more importantly, the evidence of past sexual misconduct must be such as to support a belief on the part of the defendant that the complaining witness was consenting. Thus, no longer will the jury be able simply to rely on an inference that those who have consented before have consented again. For example, if the complaining witness has a reputation for unchastity in the community, it would seem that the defendant would at least have to demonstrate that he knew of such a reputation before such evidence possibly could be admitted under either exception. Indeed, cases under the statute indicate such evidence may not be admitted even with such a demonstration. Without such a linkage to the defendant, it is hard to conceive of how this evidence could show a belief on the defendant's part that the complaining witness was consenting.

Because of the danger of a jury inferring from any evidence of past sexual misconduct by the complaining witness that she consented to the sexual intercourse at issue, the statute does not permit the introduction of the evidence directly to the jury. Before such introduction is permitted, the defense must notify the judge of its intent to introduce such evidence, and the judge in an in camera proceeding must be convinced that the evidence is sufficient to show the complaining witness's past sexual involvement with the defendant and to support an inference of the complaining witness's consent. Only after the judge finds that any of the evidence introduced at the hearing is admissible under the statute, or is so highly material that it will substantially support a conclusion that the accused reasonably believed that the complaining witness consented to the conduct complained of and that justice mandates the admission of such evidence, will the jury hear the evidence. This statute provides the exclusive means for admitting evidence relating to the past sexual behavior of the complaining witness in prosecutions for rape.

The introduction of evidence prohibited by the Rape Shield Statute gives the trial court grounds to find manifest necessity for a mistrial. Thus, a single unanswered question by defense counsel about the victim's sexual history may alone give rise to the manifest necessity for a mistrial.

3. Case Law Under Rape Shield Statute

While the 1989 amendment to the Rape Shield Statute changes the standard for admitting evidence of the victim's past sexual behavior, the procedure to be followed and the types of cases covered by the statute remain unchanged. For this reason, most of the prior case law still applies. However, the discussion of the case law that follows should be read in light of the 1989 amendment.

In its initial application of the 1976 Rape Shield Statute, the Court of Appeals indicated that it would be construed very strictly against a defendant who sought to use one of the statutory exceptions. In Johnson v. State, the defendant sought to introduce testimony from two men that they had previously had sexual intercourse with the victim. Defense counsel claimed that this was proper impeachment testimony to counter the victim's statement, in response to questioning on direct and cross-examination, that she was a virgin at the time of the incident and had told the defendant so. Upholding the trial court's refusal even to hold a hearing on the admissibility of such evidence, the court held that this evidence could not fit within the consent exception. While the court's ruling could be explained by the fact that there was no evidence linking the past sexual behavior with the defendant's knowledge so that it could support an inference of consent in his mind, the court's language was much more broad. Its reasoning was that the evidence was inadmissible because the purpose of the Rape Shield Statute was to eliminate the reasoning that "if she did it once, she did it again." The court did not admit the possibility that if the defendant was aware of such prior behavior he reasonably might have inferred consent on the victim's part.

In its second treatment of the 1976 Rape Shield Statute, the Court of Appeals again upheld the refusal of a trial court to admit evidence of past sexual behavior by the victim. In Parks v. State, the defendant offered testimony by the defendant's and the victim's co-worker that the co-worker had had sexual relations with the victim on the one date he had had with her after knowing her for eight months. The court held that this was not admissible under the consent exception because "[n]othing remotely suggests that the defendant could, except as the result of an attack of megalomania, have inferred from these facts that the victim would consent to his sexual demands." Again, no specific mention was made as to whether the evidence might show that the defendant was aware of the prior sexual behavior.

Evidence of the defendant's knowledge or awareness of the victim's prior sexual behavior, which could have supported a reasonable belief that the victim consented to the conduct complained of, was admissible under the consent exception of the 1976 Rape Shield Statute. Lack of such knowledge rendered evidence of the victim's prior sexual behavior inadmissible. For example, in Lamar v. State, the defendant sought to introduce evidence of the victim's sexual experience. The court affirmed the trial court's refusal to admit the evidence. The trial testimony showed that the two had met only an hour before the rape. The court said that the prior behavior could not have involved the defendant, thereby excluding the first statutory exception. As for the consent exception, the court said that "in that short time, it is unlikely that the appellant would discover any past sexual activity on the part of his youthful victim that could justify his claim that she consented to intercourse." Likewise, in Burley v. State, the defendant testified that the complainant told him that she was having some unspecified "marital problems." The court affirmed the trial court's refusal to admit evidence of the complainant's prior marital problems and held that the defendant's "lack of knowledge that the victim's marital problem related to infidelity could have had no reasonable bearing on whether the victim would consent to the conduct complained of." Also, in Jones v. State, the court affirmed the trial court's refusal to introduce evidence offered by the defendant to show that the victim had engaged in sexual intercourse with three young men, because the defendant had no knowledge of the alleged conduct between the victim and three young men.

This type of evidence now comes within the exception carved out in paragraph (2) of subsection (c) of the present Rape Shield Statute. However, the evidence is more circumscribed than it was formerly, as it now must be "so highly material that it will substantially support" a finding that the defendant reasonably believed that the victim consented to the conduct complained of and it must be such that "justice mandates the admission of such evidence."

There must be sufficient evidence of the victim's past sexual behavior and of the defendant's awareness of the details of that behavior in order to qualify for the exceptions set out in the present Rape Shield Statute. In Postell v. State, the court affirmed the trial court's conclusion that the evidence was insufficient to qualify for those exceptions. The only evidence proffered by the defendant at the hearing was that, prior to the incident at issue, the victim told the defendant she had been previously raped, and that she may have contracted an infection as a result. There was no evidence that the defendant was made aware of the details of the previous rape.

The exception in subsection (b) of the present Rape Shield Statute relates only to past sexual behavior involving the defendant and the victim. In Smith v. State, the court held that the trial court did not err in refusing to allow evidence regarding the victim's alleged past sexual behavior. The witness' testimony that the victim had offered him sexual favors in exchange for drugs or money could not support any inference that the defendant reasonably believed that the victim consented to sexual intercourse because it did not refer to any past sexual behavior involving the victim and the defendant, and because the defendant did not even know about the alleged incident until after he had been charged with the rape. Also, the defendant testified during the in camera hearing that he was unaware of the victim's reputation for offering sex in exchange for drugs. In Hicks v. State, the court held that the trial court did not err by excluding portions of a conversation between the defendant and the victim immediately prior to and during the course of the alleged criminal acts. The conversation involved the victim's past sexual abuse by others and her emotional problems as a result of the abuse. The past sexual abuse did not involve the defendant, and he admitted that he had not met the victim prior to the date of the assault.

The exception in subsection (b) is applicable only if both of its requirements are satisfied. The victim's past sexual behavior must not only directly involve the defendant; it must also support an inference that the defendant reasonably believed the victim consented. In Larocque v. State, the court held that the trial court properly excluded evidence of the victim's past sexual relationship with the defendant, including their mutual participation in "rough sex." Although the victim's past sexual behavior did directly involve the defendant, the trial court concluded that the defendant's offer of proof did not support an inference that the defendant could have reasonably believed that the victim consented to the conduct complained of in the case. Thus, the exception in subsection (b) was not applicable. In Davis v. State, the trial court concluded that the defendant had no reason to believe the victim had consented to sex, even if she had done so previously as the defendant alleged, inasmuch as she was beaten and had to run naked through the woods for help. In light of this evidence, the defendant's claim of prior consensual sex with the victim did not support an inference that he could have reasonably believed she consented on the night of the offense. Accordingly, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by excluding evidence of prior sexual activity between the defendant and the victim.

While the defense is allowed under the Rape Shield Statute to present evidence of the past sexual relationship between the parties, it is not allowed to present evidence about the relationship which injects an improper element of emotionalism into the case. In Cook v. State, the defense was allowed to present evidence of the past sexual relationship between the defendant and the victim and evidence of the argument which preceded the rape but was not allowed to present evidence of the substance of that argument, i.e., the victim's decision to have an abortion. The court held that the defendant was not denied an opportunity to present evidence of his sole defense. The trial court did not prohibit him from explaining his presence in the victim's home or his subsequent act to console her. However, since evidence of the abortion only injected an improper element of emotionalism into the case, the trial court properly ruled that this evidence was irrelevant to the issue of consent.

In Singleton v. State, the court held that the Rape Shield Statute applies by its terms to "any prosecution for rape" and, therefore, excludes such evidence from all parts of the trial. The defendants had asserted that the victim's prior sexual behavior was admissible as relevant in mitigation of punishment. The court responded that "the philosophy behind the appellants' argument is precisely that which the statute seeks to eliminate, i.e., that women of promiscuous sexual reputation are entitled to less protection under the rape laws than women of chaste reputation."

A defendant desiring to introduce evidence of the victim's past sexual behavior must comply with the procedure outlined in the Rape Shield Statute for that evidence to be admissible. In Tenant v. State, the defendant complained that certain evidence concerning the victim's past sexual behavior was admissible and that the trial judge wrongfully excluded it. The court rejected the claim because the defendant had not followed the statutory procedure for the introduction of such evidence. The Rape Shield Statute requires the defendant to give prior notice to the trial judge of his intention to use the evidence, whereupon the trial judge shall conduct an in camera hearing to focus on the defendant's offer of proof. The defendant had not given such notice to the trial judge and did not request an in camera hearing to determine if such evidence was admissible. In Tremble v. State, the defendant asked the victim on cross-examination to explain the fact that dark brown caucasian pubic hairs were found on her which were inconsistent with her own. The defendant in the case was black and the victim caucasian. The court found that the trial court properly excluded this evidence because the defendant sought to introduce testimony concerning the past sexual behavior of the victim and the statutory procedure for such introduction had not been complied with. In Banks v. State, while the defendant did give the trial court prior notice of his intent to introduce evidence of prior sexual relations with the victim, he failed to include certain evidence in his proffer. At no time did he proffer that the treating nurse would testify that the victim admitted to a prior act of voluntary intercourse. The defendant completely bypassed the procedural safeguards by failing to give any notice of an intent to ask the nurse about the sexual history contained in the admissions report. The court held that this failure rendered any reference to the statement inadmissible.

The state is not allowed under the Rape Shield Statute to argue or introduce evidence that the victim was a virgin at the time of the attack. In Herndon v. State, the court held that evidence that the victim was a virgin, that is, that she had not had prior sexual relations, was inadmissible. Thus, it was erroneous for the trial court to allow statements about the victim's virginity during the prosecutor's opening statement and during the examining physician's testimony. Although any evidence of physical injuries the victim received during the commission of the rape, including the condition of the hymen, would be admissible, for the prosecutor and the examining physician to call the victim a "virgin" would be to comment on her prior sexual history needlessly. Nonetheless, the court found the trial court's error to be harmless because the evidence against the defendant was overwhelming. In Veal v. State, the court held it was harmless error for the trial court to deny the defendant's motion in limine to preclude the rape victim from testifying that during the attack she told the defendant she was a virgin. Since the Rape Shield Statute provides the exclusive means for admitting this type of evidence in rape cases, the court held that it was error for the trial court to admit this testimony as part of the res gestae. However, the defendant was not harmed by this error, since the Rape Shield Statute protects the rape victim, not the accused, from admission of this type of evidence. Moreover, the defendant's defense was based upon a claim of mistaken identity, not alleged consent by the victim.

Evidence of the victim's motherhood is inadmissible under the Rape Shield Statute. The only possible desired inference arising from the victim's motherhood is that, because she had had prior sexual experience with someone other than the defendant, she consented to his indecent liberties on this occasion. Such inference is clearly prohibited under the statute and does not come within any exception under subsection (b).

In an important case, the Georgia Supreme Court held that certain testimony was not covered by the Rape Shield Statute, and thus, its exclusion by the trial court was reversible error. In Villafranco v. State, the defendants sought to introduce evidence that shortly before they met the complaining witness on the night of the alleged crime, she had told her friend that she wanted to go to a party to see if she could "get some nookey." They claimed that this evidence was relevant to her state of mind at the time of the admitted sexual intercourse with the defendants, which they claimed was consensual. The state argued to the trial court that this was evidence of prior sexual behavior which was not admissible under either exception of subsection (b) of the 1976 Rape Shield Statute.

The Georgia Supreme Court held that the exclusion of the evidence was erroneous. The court pointed out that the statement was made very close to the time of the sexual intercourse. Equally important, according to the court, was the fact that the victim was constant in her desire to go to a party. The court held that it was relevant to the question of the victim's state of mind and was not evidence of prior sexual behavior.

Like the holding in Villafranco v. State, the Court of Appeals in Raines v. State, held that certain evidence was relevant to the question of the victim's state of mind and was not evidence of prior sexual behavior. In Raines, the court held that the victim's testimony regarding her prior rape was relevant to explain her contemporaneous state of mind and conduct in failing to physically resist the defendant. The court also held that the victim's testimony was not barred under the Rape Shield Statute, because that provision precludes the introduction of evidence of the victim's past sexual behavior, and a prior rape committed against the victim has nothing whatsoever to do with her past sexual behavior. Although evidence regarding a victim's prior rape is admissible for the purpose approved in Raines, such evidence is not admissible to support a defendant's argument that the prior rape was not rape, but consensual sexual behavior, and that therefore it would be reasonable to infer that the victim consented to the present conduct.

In Taylor v. State, the defendant sought to introduce evidence of the victim's subsequent rape in order to show that the lack of injury to the victim's hymen following the alleged incidents with the defendant would have made it less likely that those incidents occurred. The court held that the trial court properly excluded the evidence based on its finding that no evidence showed that the later rape of the victim by her father was similar in force or penetration to the acts perpetrated by the defendant and, therefore, that the injury to the hymen from the later rape was not probative of showing whether the defendant had earlier engaged in sexual intercourse with the victim. Moreover, since no exception to the Rape Shield Statute applied, the court held that inquiry into the victim's sexual history was properly foreclosed.

Evidence of the victim's religious beliefs pertaining to sexual intercourse outside of marriage may be relevant to the question of the victim's state of mind. In Postell v. State, the Court of Appeals indicated that evidence that the victim told the defendant she could not have sexual intercourse with him because her church taught that it was wrong would be admissible to show the victim's state of mind on the issue of consent. However, additional evidence that had no purpose other than to create the inference that the victim had conducted herself in a chaste manner in accordance with those religious beliefs would not be admissible under the Rape Shield Statute.

The Georgia Supreme Court, in Villafranco v. State, held that the trial court erroneously excluded evidence of statements made by the victim to a co-worker before the incident that she never wore underpants. The victim had testified at trial that she was wearing underpants on the night of the incident. The testimony of the victim's co-worker was offered to impeach the victim's testimony and corroborate the testimony of one of the defendants that the victim was not wearing underpants on the night in question. The court held that the "rape shield law is not applicable to evidence offered to impeach the prosecution's principal witness as to her mode of dress at the time in question."

In reaching its conclusion that the evidence was admissible, the Georgia Supreme Court referred favorably to a concurring opinion in an earlier Court of Appeals case, Parks v. State, which argued that the right of impeachment "is inviolable and should never be abridged." The court noted only that it was applying the principle espoused by the earlier concurrence "under the facts of this case." It is submitted that a broad application of such an exception to the Rape Shield Statute would threaten the statute's very existence and efficacy.

Cross-examination about a victim's motive for lying, after the defendant has made a proffer which directly contradicts the victim's prior testimony, has been held to be reasonable cross-examination, but the defendant must first satisfy the requirements of the Rape Shield Statute. In Gibbs v. State, the only proffer made by the defendant concerning the victim's possible pregnancy as a motive for lying was his defense counsel's mere statement, and this statement was found to be unavailing for purposes of meeting the requirements of the Rape Shield Statute. In Green v. State, the evidence the defendant sought to introduce was precisely the type of irrelevant, prejudicial evidence the Rape Shield Statute was intended to exclude. Evidence that the 13-year-old victim had engaged in sexual activity with other males might have inflamed or impassioned the jury and would have done little, if anything, to support the defendant's theory that the victim falsely accused him of rape in order to explain a pregnancy. Moreover, the evidence showed that the victim could not have been pregnant at the time she reported the rape. In Griffin v. State, the defendant sought to cross-examine the victim regarding her relationship with the chief assistant district attorney because that relationship might have affected her motives, biases, and interests in testifying. The court held that evidence of such behavior was inadmissible under the Rape Shield Statute. Evidence concerning a romantic relationship between the victim and the recused prosecuting attorney would not have contributed materially to the guilt or innocence of the defendant as to the incident at issue but rather would have injected irrelevant and prejudicial matter. In McIntosh v. State, the defendant sought during cross-examination to impeach the victim on her statement that she was taking medication during the time of the rape because someone close to her had died. The court disagreed with the defendant's assertion that the Rape Shield Statute did not protect the victim in this instance because her explanation was "specious" and, therefore, subject to challenge. The court found that the trial court did not abuse its discretion by determining that an inquiry into the facts regarding this issue was not relevant to the case. Indeed, it was apparent that the true purpose of eliciting such testimony was to show the jury that the victim had been involved with three men within a seven-month period, which was clearly prohibited under the Rape Shield Statute.

Insofar as the permissible scope of cross-examination in a rape prosecution is concerned, § 24-2-3(a) only bars evidence regarding the sexual aspects of a prior relationship. Evidence merely that the victim has or had a romantic relationship with another man would not reflect on her character for sexual behavior. Therefore, so long as the defense confines its questioning to the non-sexual nature of the victim's former relationships, the Rape Shield Statute would not be a basis for curtailing its cross-examination of the victim. Applying this construction of the statute in Richardson v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court held that because the defense's proposed inquiry was confined to the existence of a relationship with an ex-boyfriend and whether the desire to reestablish that relationship was a motive to make a false claim of rape, the trial court erred in relying upon the statute to preclude the defense from cross-examining the victim in this regard.

Several Court of Appeals cases make clear that the Rape Shield Statute will exclude not only direct questioning concerning the victim's prior sexual behavior, but also indirect questioning. In Myers v. State, the defendant sought to introduce testimony by a defense witness that the victim had a reputation for "partying." The trial court excluded this evidence and the Court of Appeals affirmed, concluding that the "only possible relevance of such evidence would rest upon the innuendo that 'partying' equates to prior sexual behavior." Likewise, in Grant v. State, the defendant asked the victim on cross-examination whether she had gonorrhea at the time of the alleged rape. The trial court sustained an objection to the question on the basis of the Rape Shield Statute and was affirmed on appeal. The court rejected the defendant's theory of defense which asserted that this question was designed to impeach the victim's claim that the rapist gave her gonorrhea. Despite that theory, the court pointed out that there were only two exceptions to the 1976 Rape Shield Statute (prior sex with the defendant and evidence of consent) and neither was met in this case. However, in White v. State, the Court of Appeals agreed with the defendant's argument that the excluded medical testimony regarding an infectious discharge discovered in the victim's body within hours after the alleged rape was not evidence of the victim's past sexual behavior in violation of the Rape Shield Statute but was relevant to the defendant's claim that he did not penetrate the victim because of the victim's gross physical condition. The testimony was also admissible to impeach the victim's claim that she was not diagnosed with vaginal infections after the alleged rape and to challenge the victim's claim that the defendant was the cause of her vaginal infections. Similarly, in Reece v. State, the defendant objected to the evidence introduced by the state in that it implied and suggested that the defendant had given the victim a venereal or vaginal disease and that he therefore committed the crimes charged. The court held that the defendant should have been allowed, in a proper fashion, to show by his wife's medical records, or otherwise, that his wife was then undergoing medical treatment and tests for pregnancy and showed no sign of this disease, and therefore, by logical extension, that the defendant did not have the disease. The court held that allowing this vital defense to be put forward did not offend the Rape Shield Statute, even if it might suggest by deduction that if the defendant did not have the disease, and did not transmit it to the victim, then someone else might have done so.

In Gibbs v. State, the defendant sought to impeach the victim through her cross-examination, plus that of the doctor to the effect that she said the defendant raped her on additional occasions. His sole intention was to "attack the credibility of the victim," to cause a reasonable doubt that the incidents in the indictment even happened. The Court of Appeals held that the trial court properly disallowed this evidence since the defendant did not seek to invoke either one of the statutory exceptions of the 1976 Rape Shield Statute and since evidence of rape, not being consensual sexual behavior, was not admissible under the statute.

In Martin v. State, the defendant sought to introduce evidence concerning photographs and intimate letters written by the victim to her husband while he was incarcerated at a correctional institution, as a way "to attack the victim's credibility." This evidence would have illustrated the purported similarities between the vivid sexual descriptions the victim had depicted in her letters and the victim's details of the lewd words and sexual activities of the defendant, and it would have allowed the defendant to show that the victim was not a "sweet, innocent thing." The court held that because the defendant failed to show a valid purpose for this evidence, it was properly excluded under the present Rape Shield Statute.

In Sweeney v. State, the defendant sought to introduce evidence that the victim had recorded a phone-sex-tape. The court held that evidence of a prior sex tape made by the victim did not support an inference that the defendant could have reasonably believed the victim consented to the attempted sexual intercourse. In fact, the defendant's defense was not that of consent but that the attempted rape never happened and the victim fabricated the entire incident in response to his alleged threat to reveal her sexual activities, including the phone-sex-tape, to other people. Because there was no claim of the victim's consent, the trial court correctly ruled that the Rape Shield Statute barred evidence of the sex tape.

In Johnson v. State, the defendant sought to introduce that portion of his statement to police which referred to the victim as a "well known whore." The court held that even assuming the statement to be true, it was no defense to rape. Thus, there was no error in the trial court's granting of the state's motion in limine, premised on the Rape Shield Statute, to exclude this portion of the defendant's statement.

Finally, in George v. State, the court held that where the questions posed by defense counsel did not directly reflect on the complainant's past sexual behavior, the possibility that they might have been construed as implicating past sexual conduct could have been eliminated with a corrective instruction to the jury.

Prior to 2005, the courts applied the proscriptions set forth in the Rape Shield Statute in nonrape prosecutions. In Roberts v. State, for instance, the defendant was charged with kidnapping with bodily injury. The alleged bodily injury involved rape and aggravated sodomy. The court held that because the alleged rape and aggravated sodomy constituted evidence of bodily injury, the reasons why evidence of prior sexual experience were inadmissible under the Rape Shield Statute were equally applicable in this case. Thus, the trial court properly precluded the defendant's right to cross examine the victim about her prior sexual conduct with other men. In other decisions, the Court of Appeals found the Rape Shield Statute applicable in prosecutions for aggravated assault with intent to rape, statutory rape, child molestation, and incest.In Abdulkadir v. State, however, the Georgia Supreme Court disapproved of these decisions because it found that the statute, by its plain terms, applied only to prosecutions for rape. While there might be compelling policy reasons to apply the Rape Shield Statute in prosecutions for crimes other than rape, the General Assembly's express limitation of the statute's applicability to prosecutions for rape excluded its application in prosecutions for all other crimes. Since the courts are not authorized to expand a statute's application beyond its plain terms, the Supreme Court stated that any expansion of the Rape Shield Statute's applicability had to come from the General Assembly, as it alone is entrusted with the authority to amend existing laws.

In response to this decision, the General Assembly, apparently recognizing that there were compelling policy reasons for the expansion of the Rape Shield Statute's applicability, amended the statute in 2005 so that it is now expressly applicable not only in prosecutions for rape but also in prosecutions for aggravated sodomy, aggravated child molestation, and aggravated sexual battery. This amendment applies to all trials that commence on or after July 1, 2005.

Although the applicability of the Rape Shield Statute was not at issue in Hardy v. State, the court there pointed out that even this reform statute has not moved juries entirely out of the area of speculating about past sexual experiences and their correlation with the likelihood of a present consent to sexual intercourse. In this case, the defendant successfully sought, through the statutory procedure, to introduce evidence of the victim's prior sexual activity. This tactic was, in fact, successful in that although the indictment was for rape, the conviction was for simple battery. The court pointed out, however, that "[p]roof of present consent in a rape trial, then, is different from proof of consent to any other crime. In other crimes the proffered evidence and the inference it supports must logically relate within a particular factual context . . . . In rape cases, however, proof of prior consent without regard to identity of persons or similarity of circumstances may be admitted to allow the jury to weigh . . . the probability of consent with respect to an entire class of 'unchaste' women . . . "

The court here, of course, was referring to the exception which, as was previously suggested, might threaten to swallow up the general exclusionary rule in the Rape Shield Statute: evidence of prior sexual behavior which might lead to a present belief by the defendant that the victim was consenting. The court noted that once the judge admits such evidence after the statutory in camera hearing, there is no effective review of the decision and the court does not consider any prejudice to the victim which the admission might present. The court concluded that even under this statute "a jury may still acquit or convict a [rape] defendant . . . upon spurious assessments of the complainant's character which are simply not relevant to present day consent." The court seems to be suggesting that evidence of prior sexual behavior is not relevant to present day consent.

The Court of Appeals has held that in appropriate cases the fact that the victim of a rape was pregnant would be relevant and admissible. In Thomas v. State, the victim was 9 months pregnant at the time of the incident and testified to that fact. The defendant claimed that the evidence was inadmissible, relying on an early Georgia case which held that evidence of the victim's pregnancy was inadmissible as irrelevant. The court, however, distinguished the earlier case on its facts, pointing out that in the earlier case there was no evidence concerning the stage of pregnancy at the time of the rape. The court said that "[w]hile the mere fact of pregnancy of an alleged rape victim may not be relevant to the issue of consent of a victim, when the alleged victim is in her fortieth week of pregnancy, it can be argued by both sides that her physical condition has relevance to the issue of consent." The court also pointed out that the advanced pregnancy could help to explain the victim's delay in reporting the crime to police. She had testified that she delayed her report of the crime to the police because she was worried about her unborn child and wanted to get to the hospital.

In Smith v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court held that the Rape Shield Statute does not bar admission of testimony regarding the victim's alleged past false accusations against persons other than the defendant. Such evidence does not involve the victim's past sexual conduct but rather the victim's propensity to make false statements regarding sexual misconduct. Before such evidence can be admitted, however, the trial court must make a threshold determination outside the presence of the jury that a reasonable probability of falsity exists. This rule, authorizing evidence of prior false accusations of rape in a rape trial, does not apply where there is no evidence that the victim accused any individual in connection with her prior claim that she was raped.

C. Victim's Drug Use

Whether the victim used drugs in the past or was generally knowledgeable about illegal drugs is irrelevant to the issue of whether a defendant committed the offense of rape. Rape is no more lawful when committed against a woman who uses drugs than it is against one who does not use drugs.

While the victim may not be discredited because of a discrepancy as to a wholly immaterial matter, the victim's consumption of drugs shortly before the incident is not immaterial, inasmuch as it may have affected her recollection of events. Under these circumstances, the exclusion of evidence of the victim's drug use would be erroneous.

Evidence of the victim's decision to submit to the AZT drug regimen, despite its negative side effects and unproven effectiveness, would be admissible insofar as it tends to show that the victim would not have voluntarily consented to unprotected sex with the defendant knowing that he was HIV positive.

D. Victim's Filing of Civil Suit Against Defendant

The cross-examination of the victim about filing a civil suit against the defendant without any factual basis for such cross-examination is impermissible.

D.1. Victim's Involuntary Psychiatric Examination

Since there is no statutory authority nor case law in this state that mandates the involuntary psychiatric examination of a rape victim, there would be no abuse of discretion for the trial court to deny a defendant's motion for such an examination of the victim.

E. Defendant's Prior Activity

While the Rape Shield Statute allows the victim's prior sexual activity to be admitted in certain situations as an exception to the general rule of nonadmissibility of character and prior acts, another exception to this general rule permits certain evidence concerning the rape defendant to be introduced. Where evidence is proffered showing similar offenses committed by the defendant in the same locality, at about the same time, the evidence is admissible for the purpose of demonstrating motive, plan, scheme, bent of mind, or course of conduct. For example, in McNeal v. State, evidence was introduced that on two other occasions the defendant approached the witness while she was standing at a bus stop early in the morning in the same general vicinity as the occurrence complained of, grabbed her by the throat, forced her into the woods, and raped her. The court held that this evidence was admissible to show the defendant's motive, scheme, and course of conduct.

Evidence that the defendant had on other occasions pursued a similar course of conduct showing a similar state of mind has also been held relevant to the plausibility of the victim's testimony, including her identification of the defendant as the rapist. In Payne v. State, the court admitted the testimony of two other women that at about the same hour within three weeks' time and in the same geographical area as the scene of the incident, each was followed home from work by the same car and attacked by the defendant, who carried a jacket over his shoulder, as she left her car to enter her home. The court held that the testimony was admissible to corroborate the victim's testimony, including her identification of the defendant as the rapist.

This exception to the rule against admission of evidence of other crimes is applied liberally in prosecutions for rape and for sex crimes generally, so that such evidence has been held relevant not only to the question of the identity of the assailant, but also to whether the victim in the instant case consented.

To obtain admission of evidence of the defendant's prior rape as a similar transaction, the state must show that (1) the evidence is admitted for a proper purpose; (2) there is sufficient evidence that the defendant committed the prior rape; and (3) there is a logical connection or similarity between the prior rape and the charged rape so that proof of the former tends to prove the latter. The state must satisfy these three requirements by a preponderance of the evidence. The trial court's finding that the state's evidence met the standard of proof necessary for the admission of similar transaction evidence will not be disturbed on appeal unless clearly erroneous.

If the issue of intent to rape involved in a case was in dispute in a previous trial and that issue was resolved in the defendant's favor by his acquittal, the state is precluded under the collateral estoppel doctrine from relitigating that issue. However, where the issue of intent to rape in a previous trial had not been resolved in the defendant's favor, the state would not be estopped from presenting in its case evidence of the prior incident. Likewise, though the issue of consent in a previous rape trial had been resolved in the defendant's favor by his acquittal, evidence of this prior incident would be admissible in a subsequent rape trial, where the issue involved in the subsequent trial is the identity of the defendant rather than the consent of the victim. Also, the fact that a grand jury had no-billed a rape charge against the defendant resulting from a prior incident does not preclude the admission of the evidence, since the no-bill left unresolved the issue of whether the defendant was in fact the perpetrator of the prior offense.

Evidence of a prior conviction of simple battery is admissible as a similar transaction to a rape charge, where the simple battery conviction involved a previous rape charge dismissed because of a venue problem.

By pleading guilty to a prior sexual assault, the defendant waives his right to challenge the victim's statements regarding the incident. Therefore, when the victim is unavailable to testify in a subsequent rape trial, the admission of her statements as evidence of a similar transaction committed by the defendant does not violate the defendant's right under the Confrontation Clause.

If there was a lengthy interval between a prior sexual assault involving the defendant and the victim's interview at the police station, the victim's narrative statement given to a police officer at the station would not qualify as res gestae. Thus, allowing the state to prove the similar transaction by introducing the victim's statement as part of the res gestae would be clearly erroneous.

Since force is an essential element of rape, the victim's testimony as to the defendant's violence and the victim's fear of him is relevant and admissible. Lack of resistance, induced by fear, is force, and may be shown by the prosecutrix' state of mind from her prior experience with the defendant and subjective apprehension of danger from him. That this evidence may incidentally place the defendant's character in issue does not make it inadmissible.

Evidence of the defendant's prior violent encounter with the victim is admissible in a rape trial. However, the state must show that (1) the evidence is introduced to show the ongoing physical violence problem between the defendant and the victim; (2) there is sufficient evidence about the prior violent encounter; and (3) there is a marked similarity between the prior violent encounter and the rape charged at trial.

Evidence that the defendant threatened the victim prior to raping her is admissible as part of the res gestae even if such evidence incidentally places his character in evidence.

Evidence of prior difficulties between the defendant and the victim is admissible to show the state of feeling between the two and the defendant's bent of mind and course of conduct toward the victim. For this evidence to be admissible, the state must establish a logical, probative connection between the difficulties and the crimes charged.

A counselor's pamphlets, which concerned "date rape" and various misconceptions concerning rape, were held not to be inadmissible hearsay. The pamphlets were not entered to prove their truth but were used to explain the defendant's statement about the pamphlets and to explain his prior conduct.

In a prosecution for a sexual offense, evidence of sexual paraphernalia found in the defendant's possession is inadmissible unless it shows the defendant's lustful disposition toward the sexual activity with which he is charged or his bent of mind to engage in that activity. Under this rule, sexually explicit material cannot be introduced merely to show a defendant's interest in sexual activity. It can only be admitted if it can be linked to the crime charged.

Evidence regarding the defendant's drug use is admissible if it serves to explain his motive for raping the victim.

F. Hearsay

It has been consistently held that testimony that the victim made a complaint to those to whom complaint would naturally be made, shortly after the commission of the offense, is admissible in evidence as exception to the hearsay rule. The rule has been extended to allow the witness to relate the details of the victim's complaint as well. On the other hand, the victim's delay in reporting the rape can be considered by the jury in determining her credibility. However, the jury may determine from the evidence that the victim's delay in reporting the rape was the result of her fear of the defendant and did not indicate subsequent fabrication.

Evidence of the victim's outcry statements regarding the defendant's sexual acts against her would be sufficient to establish the essential elements of rape. The fact that at trial the victim has disavowed her prior statements would go to the weight and credibility that the jury wishes to assign to the state's otherwise sufficient evidence.

Under the "patient history" exception to the hearsay rule, a victim's statements to an emergency room physician that she had been assaulted and raped by the defendant are admissible.

A prior consistent statement of the victim is not admissible unless (1) the veracity of the victim's testimony has been placed in issue at trial, (2) the victim is present at trial, and (3) the victim is available for cross-examination. The victim's veracity is placed in issue so as to permit the introduction of a prior consistent statement only if affirmative charges of recent fabrication, improper influence, or improper motive are raised during cross-examination. Otherwise, the victim's prior consistent statement is pure hearsay evidence which cannot be admitted merely to corroborate the victim or to bolster the victim's credibility in the eyes of the jury. If there is no charge of recent fabrication or of improper influence or motive, the trial court's failure to sustain an objection to admission of the victim's prior consistent statement as improper bolstering would constitute harmful error unless, before the statement is admitted, the victim has testified without objection that she had given a pretrial statement to the police and that it was consistent with her trial testimony. Under the circumstances, the reading of the statement would not have contributed to the verdict.

Where the victim's veracity is at issue, a sexual assault nurse examiner may testify as to what the victim told her regarding the incident. The victim's statement, if consistent with her trial testimony, would be admissible as substantive evidence of the matter asserted.

As a general rule, allowing the written statement of the alleged victim to go out with the jury violates the continuing witness rule. However, this error is harmless if the evidence contained in the statement has also been brought out during the trial and the evidence of guilt is overwhelming.

G. DNA Identification of Defendant

It has been held that DNA identification techniques can produce reliable results. An evidentiary hearing to determine the admissibility of the state's DNA test results must he held by the trial court prior to its decision to allow the results into evidence. There must be sufficient evidence elicited at this hearing to support the trial court's determination that DNA testing procedures used by the state's serologist were performed in an acceptable manner and were capable of producing reliable results. The state's serologist may testify as to the DNA testing and results in the case where there is sufficient evidence to support his qualifications as an expert. These results must establish the defendant's guilt only beyond a reasonable doubt. Mathematical certainty is not required. The fact that DNA testing has a margin of error goes only to the weight and credibility that the jury wishes to assign to this evidence.

Expert testimony explaining that the term "with a reasonable scientific certainty" is used in a DNA report only when the frequency shows a rare occurrence, which the expert defines as an occurrence of once in above ten billion, has been held to be necessary to explain the results of the defendant's testing and is neither improper nor bolstering.

If the state wishes to use a scientific report containing the DNA test results of the defendant at trial, it must provide a copy of the report to the defense "no later than ten days prior to trial, or as otherwise ordered by the court." While there are a number of remedies for the state's failure to comply with this requirement, because of the complexity of DNA analysis and testing, merely permitting defense counsel a few days prior to trial to inspect the report would not afford him adequate time for trial preparation. Under these circumstances, the appropriate remedy would be to grant a continuance.

Although a defendant has the right to receive a copy of the results of any State Crime Lab DNA test, if such a test has been conducted at the State's request, he has no right to seek, and the trial court has no authority to order, that the State Crime Lab conduct tests for the defendant's benefit. Thus, a defendant in a criminal case is not entitled to a continuance pending receipt of the results of State Crime Lab DNA test which has not been requested by the State.

In order to obtain funds to hire an expert witness to test the state's DNA evidence independently, an indigent defendant is required to show (1) why the evidence is critical; (2) what type of scientific testimony is needed; (3) what the expert proposes to do regarding the evidence; and (4) the anticipated costs for the services.

If there is other evidence positively identifying the defendant as the person who raped the victim, DNA identification evidence is not "critical" evidence concerning the defendant's guilt or innocence. In such a case, the defendant is not entitled at his expense on motion timely made to have an expert of his choosing examine the DNA identification evidence.

The testimony of a defense expert, who has only reviewed the lab notes and results of the state-directed DNA tests, is properly excluded where he has no personal knowledge of the testing procedures or results and where no DNA evidence has been introduced which would have allowed him to be examined by the use of a hypothetical question.

DNA test results are like fingerprints which are maintained on file by law enforcement officials for use in further investigations. Thus, the sharing of DNA evidence between law enforcement officials in different counties does not require an independent warrant.

Where a search warrant affidavit contains sufficient facts to establish probable cause that the defendant committed the rape and specifies the material evidence to be collected, DNA identification evidence would not be subject to a motion to suppress. Furthermore, since the presence of defense counsel is not required for the execution of the warrant, the absence of counsel when the blood is drawn would not subject the evidence to suppression.

Where there is evidence that a detective informed a suspect that his DNA sample would be used for comparison with other such samples and that no limits were placed on the scope of the suspect's consent, a trial court in a hearing on a motion to suppress would be authorized to conclude that the detective did not deceive the suspect in violation of his Fourth Amendment rights.

H. Medical Examination of Victim

When evidence relating to an allegation of rape is collected in the course of a medical examination of the victim, the law enforcement agency investigating the alleged rape is responsible for the cost of the medical examination to the extent that expense is incurred for the limited purpose of collecting evidence.

The state's failure to preserve a rape kit purportedly containing evidence from the physical examination of the victim does not deprive the defendant of due process where the rape kit evidence is immaterial to the case and the state did not act in bad faith in failing to preserve the evidence.

Where the state seeks to introduce evidence of a rape kit and blood vials, it need only show with reasonable certainty that the evidence is the same as that obtained from the victim and that there has been no tampering or substitution. The fact the state crime lab personnel who received the evidence are not identified and, therefore, do not testify at trial is not fatal to the chain of custody.

A medical diagram depicting the location of injuries to the victim's genitalia can be used as a tool to explain an expert's testimony and is not subject to a continuing witness objection.

I. Expert Testimony

A doctor's expert opinion testimony on issues to be decided by the jury, even the ultimate issue, i.e., consent, is admissible where the conclusion of the expert is one which jurors would not ordinarily be able to draw for themselves, i.e., the conclusion is beyond the ken of the average layman. Thus, medical opinion testimony by the doctor who examined the victim after the rape that he observed lacerations or tears in the victim's perineum which were consistent with an act of nonconsensual sexual intercourse but not consistent with an act of consensual sexual intercourse would be admissible, since the significance of tears in the perineum would be beyond the ken of the average layman.

Where defense counsel elicits expert testimony unfavorable to his client, even when that testimony constitutes an opinion of ultimate fact which invades the province of the jury, defense counsel will not be heard to object to it, no matter how prejudicial it may be, if it is a direct and pertinent response to the question propounded.

A psychologist for the state is permitted to give her expert opinion that a mentally retarded victim is incapable of consenting to sexual intercourse. Expert opinion testimony dealing with the victim's level of mental retardation and its effect on her capacity to consent, which involves no improper legal conclusion, may be admitted to assist the jury in reaching its verdict.

A registered nurse, who has acted as a rape counselor, may testify as to the existence of certain typical patterns of behavior exhibited by victims of rape, and she may testify as to behavior she has observed in the victim in a rape case. The nurse's testimony does not amount to an expert opinion as to whether the victim had been raped.

A registered nurse, who has received specialized professional training in the examination of victims of sexual assaults and in the collection of evidence from such crimes and who has worked as a sexual assault nurse examiner at a rape crisis center, would be qualified to testify as an expert in the field of examination of sexual assault victims.

Even though a trial court has discretion to qualify a witness as an expert, the witness's testimony must relate to the scientific or technical knowledge within his area of expertise. In Prickett v. State, the court held that there was insufficient evidence that the witness had special knowledge about post traumatic stress disorder and rape trauma syndrome. While the witness's testimony may have shown him to be an expert in counseling, the state failed to present any evidence that this special knowledge of counseling included an expertise in the psychological theories of post traumatic stress disorder and rape trauma syndrome. The trial court abused its discretion in allowing the counselor's testimony to go far beyond the proved area of his expertise. In Thomas v. State, on the other hand, the court found no abuse of discretion in the trial court's qualification of the witness as an expert on victims of sexual abuse, including rape. Further, the witness's testimony regarding the number of women who delay in reporting a rape or who fail to report it all was clearly related to knowledge within the witness's area of expertise. Thus, there was no error in the admission of her testimony.

Where the defendant is seeking to undermine the victim's credibility through illustrating her failure to initiate an outcry for help, expert opinion testimony regarding the "learned helplessness" of women in abusive relationships is relevant to explain the victim's behavior. The possibility that this testimony may touch on the victim's credibility does not render it inadmissible. Since testimony regarding the typical characteristics of an abuser would improperly place the defendant's character in issue, however, the trial court must limit the testimony to what is necessary to rebut any defense or issue raised by the defendant.

In Harris v. State, the Court of Appeals found that expert testimony that it was a common misconception that people make up rape allegations for the purpose of revenge implicitly went to the ultimate issue to be decided by the jury, namely, whether the victim had fabricated the rape allegation against the defendant. It was not beyond the ken of the average juror to determine whether and under what circumstances a rape allegation had been fabricated. Accordingly, the court held that the expert's testimony should not have been allowed. The admission of the improper testimony did not mandate a new trial, however, because based on the strength of the evidence against the defendant it was highly improbable that the expert's testimony contributed to the judgment.

An expert witness may testify as to the existence of certain typical patterns of behavior exhibited by victims of rape, as long as the jury is permitted to draw for itself the final conclusion as to whether the victim in the case at hand was raped.

IV. Marital Rape

At English common law, a man could not be convicted of raping his wife. The genesis of this rule was apparently an analysis by a seventeenth century treatise writer who stated that "the husband cannot be guilty of a rape committed . . . upon his lawful wife, for by their mutual matrimonial consent and contract the wife hath given up herself in this kind unto her husband, which she cannot retract." While this defense of the marital rape exemption may seem out of place in our current era of sexual equality, the exemption has had significant staying power in American jurisdictions. As recent as 1983, 34 American jurisdictions had codified the rule. The Model Penal Code, in fact, suggests that the marital rape exemption be adopted at least in situations where there has not been a judicial decree of separation. The Commentaries to the Code argue that "the law of rape, if applied to spouses, would thrust the prospect of criminal sanctions into the ongoing process of adjustment in the marital relationship." The Commentaries further argue that the "gravity of the crime of forcible rape derives not merely from its violent character but also from its achievement of a particularly degrading kind of unwanted intimacy. Where the attacker stands in an ongoing relation of sexual intimacy, that evil, as distinct from the force used to compel submission, may well be thought qualitatively different."

The marital rape exemption, however, has been under heavy fire and several state courts have construed their rape statutes to punish husbands who rape their wives. In Warren v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court joined the trend toward rejecting the exemption. The defendant was indicted for raping his wife at a time when the couple was living together. He appealed the denial of his pretrial motion to dismiss the indictment. Phrasing the issue as "When a woman says I do, does she give up her right to say I won't?," Justice Smith for a unanimous court affirmed the lower court's action. Pointing out that Hale's statement was made at a time when marriages were indissoluble and when "[w]ives were subservient to their husbands, her identity was merged into his, her property became his property, and she took his name for her own," Justice Smith concluded that none of the justifications offered for the rule were satisfactory. He found Hale's implied consent theory to be "without logical meaning" and that it "obviously conflicts with our Constitutional and statutory laws and our regard for all citizens of this State." (Emphasis in original.) The court, responding to the modern justification for the rule stating that wives would fabricate rape charges in the midst of marital strife, held that "[t]here is no other crime we can think of in which all of the victims are denied protection simply because someone might fabricate a charge . . .." (Emphasis in original.) The court also pointed out that in states which have rejected the exemption there has not been a flood of rape complaints by wives.

The court concluded its analysis by pointing out that there has never been any explicit statutory marital rape exemption in the Georgia statute and the words of the current statute are broader than the traditional common law definition of rape which was the language of the former rape statute. The court also pointed out that the 1968 redraft of the Georgia criminal code was patterned largely after the Model Penal Code which, as pointed out above, includes an explicit marital rape exemption. The court, therefore, concluded that the choice of language made by the 1968 drafters was considered. The Warren court went on to hold that the aggravated sodomy statute also does not contain an exemption for husbands charged with committing the crime on their wives. The court also rejected a claim that the application of the rape statute to the defendant in this case constituted a violation of the Due Process Clause's notice requirements. The court held that its ruling was "a first application of these statutes to this particular set of facts, this is not an unforeseeable judicial enlargement of criminal statutes that are narrowly drawn."

In 1996, the General Assembly amended the rape statute to expressly provide that "[t]he fact that the person allegedly raped is the wife of the defendant shall not be a defense to a charge of rape."

In marital rape cases, evidence of recent prior marital difficulties between husband and wife is admissible. The state of feelings between the then husband and wife is clearly relevant because the issue is whether the subject sex acts were forced or consensual.

V. Attempted Rape

The prosecution must show three elements to prove a case of attempted rape. It must prove that the defendant (1) intended to have forcible and nonconsensual carnal knowledge of the victim; and (2) took a substantial step toward committing rape; but (3) failed to consummate the rape.

On the trial of a rape case, where there is some evidence, however slight, of attempted rape, it is not error for the trial court to charge the law in relation to that issue.

In pleading guilty to criminal attempt to commit rape, a defendant admits he intended to commit the specific crime of rape and took a substantial step toward that end. Because the crime attempted is related to a sexually violent offense (i.e., rape), the defendant is required to comply with the sexual offender registration requirements of § 42-1-12.

VI. Statute of Limitations

Prior to 1996, the statute of limitations for a prosecution for rape was seven years. In 1996, the General Assembly extended the limitations period for forcible rape to 15 years. The limitations period for attempted rape is four years.

The 1996 amendment, which extends the period of limitation for forcible rape to 15 years, applies to offenses not barred at the time of the effective date of the amendment, so that a prosecution may be commenced at any time within the newly established period. This amendment, however, cannot operate to revive a rape offense that was barred at the time of the effective date, since that would make the amendment ex post facto.

In 1992, the General Assembly with the enactment of § 24-4-60 authorized the creation of a state deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) data bank of samples obtained from convicted sex offenders in order to determine and retain the identification characteristics specific to these offenders. In 2000, the General Assembly broadened the scope of this statute by requiring the obtaining of DNA samples from all convicted felons and the storing of these samples in the data bank. An examination of these samples revealed that many matched the DNA evidence of old, unsolved rape cases. Despite this evidence, the state could not prosecute the convicted felons because the limitation periods for their crimes had expired. Remedial legislation was necessary to enable the state to use identification evidence derived from the state's DNA data bank to prosecute convicted felons for certain crimes even though the limitation periods previously established by law had expired.

Accordingly, the General Assembly eliminated the statute of limitations for any rape occurring on or after July 1, 2002, when DNA evidence is used to establish the identity of the accused. A sufficient portion of the physical evidence tested for DNA, however, must be preserved and available for testing by the accused. Furthermore, if the DNA evidence does not establish the identity of the accused, the limitation on the prosecution reverts to the 15-year period specified in § 17-3-1(b).

VII. Selective Prosecution

To support a claim of selective prosecution for rape, the defendant must show that others generally are not prosecuted for the same misconduct and that a discriminatory motive for the prosecution exists. Without such a showing, the defendant's claim will fail.

VIII. Punishment

The rape statute provides that one convicted of rape must be punished by death, by life imprisonment without parole, by life imprisonment, or by a split sentence that is a term of imprisonment for not less than 25 years and not exceeding life imprisonment, followed by probation for life. Any person convicted of rape is also subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of §§ 17-10-6.1 and 17-10-7, which provide for mandatory minimum sentences and sentences for life without possibility of parole in certain cases and provide restrictions on the authority of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant paroles.

A plurality of the United States Supreme Court held in Coker v. Georgia that the imposition of the death penalty for the rape of an adult woman who has not been killed is cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth Amendment. By referring only to an adult woman throughout its opinion, however, the plurality limited its findings to the rape of an adult, leaving open the question whether death would be a disproportionate penalty for the rape of a child. The Supreme Court of Louisiana, construing that state's rape statute, has held that given the appalling nature of the crime, the severity of the harm inflicted upon the victim, and the harm imposed on society, death would not be a disproportionate penalty for the rape of a child. The court also found that the class of defendants eligible for the death penalty would be sufficiently narrow so as not to lead to arbitrary and capricious application. Since our rape statute, as amended in 1999, now expressly affords protection to females who are "less than ten years of age" and still includes a death penalty provision, it would appear that the death penalty may be applied in cases involving the rape of a child. However, whether death is a disproportionate penalty for such a crime is question that must be answered by the Georgia Supreme Court.

In Collins v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court, construing the definition of "capital felony" together with the decision in Coker v. Georgia, concluded that convictions of rape are no longer convictions of capital felonies for appellate jurisdictional purposes. However, rape is still considered a capital felony for purposes of determining statutory aggravating circumstances under the death penalty statute.

The death penalty for rape is not unconstitutional where the victim is killed.

Rape, whose seriousness has not changed, was a capital offense at the time the speedy trial statutes were enacted. Since the removal of the sentencing option of imposing the death penalty does not reflect on the General Assembly's original determination that the state should be allowed more time to prepare a rape case, rape is still considered a capital offense for purposes of the speedy trial statutes.

IX. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

The law of Georgia is clear that a defendant under indictment for a particular crime can be convicted of other offenses. To warrant conviction of a lesser offense on an indictment charging a greater offense, it is essential (1) that the allegations describing the greater offense contain all essential averments relating to the lesser offense or (2) that the greater offense necessarily include all the essential ingredients of the lesser. In either situation, however, before a verdict of the lesser offense can be authorized there must be evidence in the record supporting a finding of that crime.

While aggravated assault with intent to commit rape may be a lesser included offense of rape in some cases, it is not so in every case because in many instances the offense of rape may undoubtedly be completed without the commission of an independent aggravated assault. The crime of aggravated assault with intent to rape is complete when there is a "substantial step" toward a battery of the victim, i.e., an assault, coupled with intent to rape. If there is a substantial step toward the rape itself, the crime would then become attempted rape. The acquittal of aggravated assault with intent to rape does not "necessarily include" a finding against rape. Aggravated assault and rape are separate offenses and do not merge, where the evidence used to prove the aggravated assault is not used to prove the force element of the rape.

In order for a crime to be included in another crime it must be established by proof of the same or less than all the facts. Because the additional fact of marriage must be shown in order to prove adultery, adultery is not included in the offense of rape.

As a matter of law, fornication cannot be forcible and against the woman's will. Thus, fornication is not a lesser included offense of rape.

Depending on what the indictment alleges, statutory rape could be an authorized verdict on a rape indictment. Because the crimes of rape and statutory rape are separate offenses which require proof of different elements, they are not included within each other as a matter of law. Furthermore, even where the evidence at trial shows that there was only one act of sexual intercourse, the crime of statutory rape is not included, as a matter of fact, in the crime of rape. The fact that the act of sexual intercourse supports an element in each crime does not warrant merging of the sentences where other mutually exclusive elements of the crimes remain.

The offense of child molestation may be included as a matter of fact in an indictment charging the offense of rape, where the victim is under the age of consent. In such a case it is reversible error to refuse to give a requested charge on child molestation as a lesser included offense of the rape charge. However, a defendant is not entitled to a jury instruction on child molestation as a lesser included offense of rape where the jury is only authorized by the evidence to find the defendant either guilty or not guilty of rape.

Although child molestation becomes included within rape as a matter of fact if the victim is under the age of consent, child molestation is not included within rape as a matter of law because, unlike rape, child molestation requires proof that the victim was under the age of consent. If a rape indictment does not allege that the victim was under the age of consent, the defendant has not been placed on notice that he should be prepared to defend himself against the charges of both rape and child molestation. Without such notice, the trial court is not authorized, sua sponte, to instruct the jury on child molestation as a lesser included offense of rape. If the trial court so instructs jury and the jury convicts the defendant of the lesser included offense of child molestation, due process will not allow the conviction to stand.

The offense of child molestation does not merge into the offense of rape where the evidence shows that the defendant fondled the victim and, in an entirely separate incident later that evening, raped her.

Where the child molestation count of an indictment alleges actions that are factually contained in the attempted rape count, the child molestation offense merges into the attempted rape offense as a matter of fact. While the defendant can be prosecuted for both offenses, if he is convicted of both, the trial court must merge the child molestation conviction into the attempted rape conviction for sentencing purposes.

The offense of aggravated child molestation merges as a matter of fact into the offense of rape, where the evidence shows that the injuries the victim sustained as a result of the rape are the same injuries that serve as the basis for the offense of aggravated child molestation. However, an aggravated child molestation conviction would not merge as a matter of fact into a rape conviction for sentencing purposes, where the evidence shows that the defendant sexually assaulted the victim twice.

Incest and rape have at least one element each not necessary to prove the other. Neither incest nor rape can be proved by only the same facts proving the other. Thus, neither incest nor rape is included in the other as a matter of law. Also, incest and rape do not merge as a matter of fact where more than one instance of sexual intercourse occurred, permitting conviction for each offense based on separate occasions. Furthermore, the crime of incest is not included within the crime of rape as a matter of fact even where only one instance of sexual intercourse occurred. The fact that the act of sexual intercourse supports an element in each crime does not warrant merging of the sentences where other mutually exclusive elements of the crimes remain.

The offense of cruelty to children is separate and distinct from the offense of rape as a matter of fact, where the evidence used to establish cruelty to children is not used to establish the rape.

The offense of simple battery merges into the offense of rape where the same impermissible touching—the hitting and slapping which constitutes simple battery—also supplies the element of force necessary for conviction of rape. If a jury finds a defendant guilty of the lesser included offense of simple battery at his rape trial, this finding amounts to an implicit acquittal of the defendant on the rape charge. Where the evidence shows that there was either a rape or that there was consensual sexual intercourse which was interrupted when the couple changed their minds, such evidence would not authorize charges on battery and simple battery as lesser included offenses. Where the evidence shows either the commission of a rape or no crime at all, such evidence would not authorize charges on battery, simple battery, and sexual battery as lesser included offenses.

Where the evidence in a case establishes that the offenses of sexual battery and rape were two separate and distinct offenses, sexual battery would not be a lesser included offense of rape and a verdict of guilty on the sexual battery charge would not operate as an exoneration and acquittal on the rape charge.

Since each of the offenses of aggravated anal sodomy, aggravated oral sodomy, and rape contains at least one element not contained in the others, the aggravated sodomy offenses cannot merge as a matter of law into the rape offense.

The offense of burglary does not merge with the offenses of rape and aggravated sodomy. To establish the offense of burglary, the state needs to prove only that the defendant entered the victim's home without authority and with the intent to commit the rape and aggravated sodomy. It does not have to prove that the defendant actually committed these offenses to establish the burglary offense.

Acquittal on an aggravated sodomy charge does not preclude the findings of fact necessary for a conviction for rape. The elements of the crimes are different, and the jury can choose to convict on the rape charge and acquit on the aggravated sodomy charge without any inconsistency.

In Cardoza v. State, the defendant committed four rapes against the same victim within a certain time period. Although occurring sequentially, one after the other, each of the rapes constituted a separate offense since each was established by proof of different facts, i.e., each offense was a completed crime when the next was perpetrated upon the victim. Under such circumstances, the same conduct is not being punished twice nor is one act included in the other so as to proscribe the separate conviction and punishment for each act.

One act of rape is not legally included in another, separate act of rape so as to require reversal under a conflict theory.

Where a terroristic threat conviction is supported by separate and distinct facts from those necessary for an attempted rape conviction, the convictions do not merge.

For a discussion about rape as a lesser included offense of kidnapping with bodily injury, see KIDNAPPING.

X. Civil Liability

The rapist is subject not only to the sanctions of the criminal law, but can be held liable civilly as well. Furthermore, there is authority for the proposition that if the rape is committed by the defendant while he is acting within the scope of his employment, his employer may also be held liable. In an action for damages, the rape need be established only by the preponderance of the evidence, the civil standard of proof. No special damages need be shown. On proof of the assault the law will presume that the plaintiff was damaged. Further, the victim may also be granted punitive or exemplary damages, the measure of which is left to the "enlightened conscience of impartial jurors."

XI. Rape Victim Confidentiality Statute

One other provision of the criminal code is pertinent to rape. Section 16-6-23 provides that publication of the name or identity of any woman who may have been either raped or assaulted with an intent to rape is a misdemeanor. Although the case was later overruled, in Cox Broadcasting Corp. v. Cohn, the Georgia Supreme Court, after rejecting an argument that the criminal statute created a civil right of action for damages, granted a right of privacy action under Georgia tort law. On appeal, the United States Supreme Court reversed, holding that civil liability could not be based on the publication of a rape victim's name, but failed to address the validity of the criminal statute. The broad language used by the Court in its decision, however, indicates that the statute is unconstitutional in imposing a criminal sanction on the exercise of freedom of the press.

In The Florida Star v. B. J. F., the United States Supreme Court held that imposing damages on a newspaper for publishing a rape victim's name obtained from a police report violated the First Amendment. Adopting a test enunciated in this United States Supreme Court decision as the basis for evaluating an action for common law invasion of privacy, the Georgia Supreme Court in Macon Telegraph Publishing Co. v. Tatum held that a victim cannot recover damages from a newspaper for an invasion of privacy based on its publication of the victim's name in connection with a sexual assault. Once a person becomes the victim of a crime, she loses her right to keep her name private and becomes the object of a legitimate public interest. A newspaper has the right under the federal and state constitutions to accurately report the facts regarding the incident, including the victim's name. In Dye v. Wallace, the Georgia Supreme Court, finding the rationale in the Florida Star case to be fully applicable to § 16-6-23, held that the statute contravenes the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the federal constitution. Under the circumstances of the case, the court found that the imposition of civil liability was too precipitous a means of advancing the state's interest in guarding against the dissemination of the victim's identity.

In Doe v. Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia, the Georgia Court of Appeals held that a police incident report that involves a false claim of rape is a public record obtainable under the Open Records Act. The report of a crime, whether the report is true or false, is a matter of public interest and is a subject of legitimate public inquiry. However, the rape victim confidentiality statute creates a specific and discrete exemption from the Open Records Act. Under this statute, the identity of a victim as revealed in a police incident report is protected from disclosure. The statute does not require that the matter be established as true in order for the identity of the victim to be protected. The statute covers the identity of one who "may have been" a victim. Thus, under the Open Records Act, a newspaper is entitled to such a police incident report, but under the rape victim confidentiality statute, the victim's name and identifying information must be redacted.

ROBBERY

See also ASSAULT; THEFT CRIMES.

I. Generally

Common law robbery was, in effect, compound larceny, because it was a combination of larceny and assault. More particularly, it was defined as the felonious and forcible taking of the property of another from his person, or in his presence, against his will, by putting him in fear. As compared to the common law definition, Georgia law prior to 1968 defined robbery as the wrongful, fraudulent, and violent taking of money, goods, or chattels from the person of another with intent to steal.

The 1968 revision of the criminal code recodified the offense of robbery, but left the law substantially unaltered. In the current code, § 16-8-40 provides that a person commits robbery when, with intent to commit theft, he takes property of another from the person or the immediate presence of another by use of force, intimidation, or sudden snatching. Armed robbery is defined in § 16-8-41, as the taking of another's property with intent to commit theft from the person or immediate presence of another by use of an offensive weapon.

II. Elements

A. Generally

Analytically, the offenses of robbery and armed robbery have four separate elements. In both offenses there must be an intent to commit a theft, a taking of property of another, and the taking must be from the person or from the immediate presence of another. The fourth element requires that the taking be accompanied by "force." In the case of robbery, that "force" may be either actual force, intimidation, or a sudden snatching, while in the case of armed robbery the "force" must be the use of an offensive weapon. Included within the notion of force is the requirement that the taking be against the victim's will.

Since the particular location of an armed robbery is not an element of the offense, it is not necessary that the indictment specify the exact location in which the offense occurred, so long as it is alleged that the offense occurred within the county.

B. Intent to Commit Theft

The intent to commit a theft is essential to the completed offenses of robbery and armed robbery and failure to so inform the jury is, if harmful, reversible error.

In an armed robbery case, the state is not required to prove that the defendant had the intent to commit armed robbery, but merely that he had the intent to commit theft and did so with an offensive weapon or any device having the appearance of a weapon.

One case expressly found that a jury could find the requisite intent to commit theft where the defendant entered a liquor store, reached into his pocket for a pistol, and said " . . . I came after the . . . money." It will be rare that such direct evidence will be available and circumstantial evidence will normally be utilized.

Evidence of an armed robbery previously committed by a defendant is admissible as relevant to his motive, plan, scheme, bent of mind, and course of conduct as to a later committed armed robbery. However, before this evidence can be admitted, the trial court must conduct a hearing at which specified affirmative showings are made. The State must show: (1) that the evidence is not being introduced for some improper purpose but rather for an appropriate purpose which is an exception to the general rule of inadmissibility; (2) sufficient evidence to show the accused committed the other offense; and (3) sufficient connection or similarity between the other offense and the crime charged such that proof of the former tends to prove the latter. The trial court must determine in the record that these showings have been made satisfactorily. Also, the trial court, upon request, must give a limiting instruction to the jury about the specific purposes for which this evidence can be considered. Furthermore, the trial court, upon request, must fully instruct the jury that the defendant is not on trial for the prior robbery and that before the jury can consider the prior robbery, it must first determine whether the defendant actually committed that crime, and if so, whether it is similar enough to the robbery with which the defendant is presently charged, that proof of the prior robbery, in light of the limited purposes for which it is introduced, tends to prove the latter robbery.

Other evidence held to be admissible to establish the defendant's motive, intent, bent of mind, or course of conduct include: (1) the defendants' joint and separate bad financial condition for a year prior to the robbery, including evidence of bad checks and overdrawn accounts up to two months before the robbery; (2) dispossessory warrants filed against the defendant less than a month prior to the robbery; (3) the defendant's having money to pay his parole fees the day after the robbery, after being months in arrears on those fees; (4) the defendant's observation of the place he is charged with robbing; and (5) the defendant's statements made before or after the robbery.

Evidence of the defendant's motive in perpetrating the robbery is clearly admissible and is not rendered inadmissible by the fact that it incidentally puts his character in issue. Furthermore, the state is not required to give notice of its intent to present such evidence.

Regardless of whether a defendant intended to take another's property and withhold it permanently, his intent to take it for his own temporary use without the owner's authorization evinces an intent to commit a theft.

With respect to the crime of armed robbery, there must be intent to commit theft, but it is not necessary that such intent exist for any particular period of time before the armed robbery, rather, the intent simply must exist concurrent in time with the act. Furthermore, it does not matter that the defendant did not have the intent to commit a theft at the time he used force against the victim. Once he takes property belonging to the victim, he has committed the offense of robbery regardless of when his intent to take the property arose.

The violent taking of money or property from the person of another by force or intimidation, without the consent of the owner, with the intent of converting the same to the use of the taker for the payment of a demand claimed to be due him by one from whom the money or property is so taken, constitutes the offense of robbery. The taker cannot under such circumstances justify the taking and be excused of the offense of robbery on the ground that the person from whom the money or property was so taken was indebted to him, and that the taking was to pay the debt.

C. Takes Another's Property

The Georgia Supreme Court has held that the slightest movement of property is a taking. Consequently, the taking element would be satisfied by evidence that the defendant temporarily took control of the property just before being apprehended for the robbery. Return of the property, of course, does not negate the taking element. It should also be noted that the taking element can be proven by circumstantial evidence.

The taking in an armed robbery is complete once control over the property is transferred from the victim to the armed robber. When the armed robber uses his weapon to force the victim to drop the property, he exercises complete control over that property. That his exercise of control is brief and ultimately unsuccessful is immaterial.

Thus, the armed robber need not physically touch the property to complete the taking.

The property aspect of this element is satisfied where another's "property" is taken regardless of the exact value of that property. It is not necessary, therefore, to prove the exact value of the items taken, but only to show that the items had some value.

An over-inclusive list of items alleged to have been taken in an indictment for armed robbery is not fatal to the validity of a conviction.

Although evidence of recent unexplained (or unsatisfactorily explained) possession of stolen property may be sufficient to give rise to an inference that the defendant took the property, the sufficiency of the evidence to support a robbery conviction must still be adjudged by the totality of the evidence under the reasonable doubt standard.

Finally, "another" is defined by statute as a person or persons other than the accused. Therefore, it is clear that a robbery indictment is not fatally flawed by the fact that it alleges ownership of the property in the victim, who turns out to have been only a custodian of the property for the real owner. Similarly, an armed robbery indictment that alleges ownership of the property in a bailee having possession of the property when it was stolen is sufficient as a matter of law, and the defense should not be allowed to highlight for the jury any variance between the allegations of the indictment and the proof at trial concerning the title of the stolen property.

The identity of the person alleged to have been robbed is not an essential element of the crime so as to create a fatal variance. Moreover, it is not incumbent upon the state to prove the identity of the victim in order to convict the defendant of armed robbery.

It is not clear whether the fact that the defendant had an interest in the subject property would be important. For example, he might be taking partnership property from a partner.

D. From the Person or Immediate Presence of Another

Robbery is a crime against possession and is not affected by concepts of ownership. Thus, one may be charged with robbery even when the object of the intended theft is contraband, in which the victim could have no legitimate property rights. Furthermore, one may rob only a person and not a corporate entity or an object such as a cash drawer.

A defendant, who is temporarily given some property by the possessor who retains possession, is guilty of a trespass to possession and larceny if he then absconds with the goods.

When, in a single transaction, an individual robs one individual of more than one item or of property belonging to two individuals, only one crime of robbery is committed. However, when, in a single transaction, an individual robs two individuals of property in their possession, that individual may be convicted of two counts of armed robbery even though the property may have been jointly owned by the two individuals.

The requirement that the taking be from "the person" of the victim is self-evident. Thus, where the victim testified that the defendant took his billfold which contained $2.00, the conviction for robbery was upheld. The Georgia Supreme Court has commented, however, that there "is a surprising absence of cases" defining the scope of the concept of "immediate presence." In Welch v. State, however, the court approvingly cited dicta in an earlier case which extended the definition of "immediate presence" so far that it is hardly recognizable. In Welch, the court affirmed a conviction for robbery when the evidence showed the victim was approximately three-tenths of a mile away from the actual taking of the money. In Morgan v. State, the Court of Appeals held that since the victim fled the scene after he was threatened with a knife and the property was stolen before he could even drive away, that was sufficient to constitute a theft from his immediate presence. In Wilson v. State, the Court of Appeals held that evidence that the victim was in charge of the cash drawer from which money was taken while she stepped away briefly to alert her manager was sufficient to show a taking from her immediate presence. In Gido v. State, after the defendant used force to push the victim down an embankment and throw her between two bushes, he picked up money dropped by the victim. The Court of Appeals held that although the defendant did not take the money directly from the victim, it was in her immediate possession at the time of the robbery. In Culver v. State, the Court of Appeals held that there was sufficient evidence from which the jury could have inferred that the defendant stole the $600 from the victim's purse after the aggravated assault and rape. The defendant told the victim to stay on the bed or he would kill her, and he remained in her home a few minutes before leaving. Although the victim could not see what the defendant was doing because she had something over her face, the jury could have found that the victim was aware that her life and personal property were at risk while the defendant terrorized her and remained in her home. In Booker v. State, the Court of Appeals held that the evidence authorized the jury to find that the money retrieved by the defendant from the victim's personal possessions in the apartment from which the victim had leaped was within his immediate presence. In Meyers v. State, the Court of Appeals held that, considering that the victim was held at gunpoint in his living room while property was taken from his bedroom, the theft was not too far afield to be outside the victim's immediate presence.

Although the victim's "person" and his "immediate presence" are separated by the word "or" in the statutory definition of robbery, the word "or" is employed in such a way that it specifically incorporates into the definition the principle that the victim's "person" includes the entire area within his "immediate presence." Because they are mutually inclusive, rather than exclusive, concepts, there is no fatal variance between an indictment which charges that property was taken from the victim's person and proof which shows that the taking was from the victim's immediate presence.

The mere fact that the property was taken directly from someone other than the person alleged in the indictment does not create a fatal variance, if the evidence shows that the person alleged in the indictment was sufficiently close to the taking so that it occurred within his immediate presence or within the sphere of his protective influence.

The requirement that the property be taken "from the person or the immediate presence" of the victim is satisfied by the slightest change of location whereby the dominion of the property is (even temporarily) transferred from the victim to the perpetrator. Thus, in Dillard v. State, the Court of Appeals held that even though the victim remained in or near the vehicle at all times following her abduction, the victim's vehicle was clearly taken from her person or immediate presence when she was abducted and forced into the back seat of her vehicle.

In an indictment for armed robbery, the allegation of a use of an offensive weapon to accomplish the taking necessarily gives rise to the inference that the property was taken "from the person or the immediate presence of another." Where an indictment gives rise to such an inference, it need not explicitly state this essential element in order to sufficiently inform the defendant of the charges against him.

Where an indictment for armed robbery properly charges conjunctively that the defendant took property "from the person and immediate presence" of the victim and the state offers proof to show commission of the offense by either method, a jury charge in the disjunctive pursuant to the language of the statute is not error.

E. "Force" Requirement

1. By "Force"

This theory of the modus operandi of robbery focuses on the force or violence displayed by the robber, rather than on any resistance or violence on the victim's part. Under this conception of the force requirement, the Georgia Court of Appeals has upheld robbery convictions when it was shown that (1) the robber removed a wrist watch with sufficient "force" to stop the victim from walking and to spin the victim around; (2) the robber took money out of a cash register while grabbing the victim's arm; (3) the robber grabbed the victim around the neck and then grabbed his wallet and left; (4) the robber picked up money dropped by the victim after he used force to push her down an embankment and throw her between two bushes; (5) the robber took the victim's purse after he slapped her and threw her down three times; and (6) the robber drove off in the victim's car as the victim was running away after he was grabbed and hit by another. Because of this focus on the robber and not the victim, it is not necessary that the victim be conscious or even alive at the time of the taking.

"Force" implies actual personal violence, a struggle, and a personal outrage committed upon the person of the victim which precedes the defendant's nonconsensual taking of the property.

The force essential to a robbery can either precede the taking or occur contemporaneously with it. Thus, where there is proof that the defendant's use of force preceded the theft of an automobile, the fact that his victim was dead at the time of the actual taking would not prevent a conviction for robbery by force.

Although the assailant has custody of an item pursuant to the victim's consent, possession of the item does not change to the assailant until the victim, by means of violence, has been dissuaded from seeking its return. That being so, it is the force which effects the taking.

2. By Intimidation

Robbery by intimidation is not a lesser included offense of robbery by force, but rather a different method of committing robbery. Robbery by intimidation is the same as putting in fear at common law, and focuses on constructive force, as is present when a person is induced through fear to part with his property. The intimidation must take the form of a threat, coercion, or placing the victim in fear of immediate bodily injury to himself or to another. One court found this element to be satisfied when a gas station attendant placed gasoline in a car and was later informed while looking into the end of a shotgun barrel that he should forego any thought of collecting the money due. In another case, this element was found to be satisfied when the defendant had his hand in his jacket pocket and pointed at the victim as though he had a weapon concealed in the pocket, and told the victim to give him all the money in the register drawer.

There is no requirement that a reasonable man standard be applied in order to authorize a conviction for robbery by intimidation. A conviction is authorized by the actual apprehension of danger on the part of the victim. The relevance of a reasonable man standard occurs only where the law presumes actual apprehension of danger from evidence that there was just ground for it. Thus, a jury charge omitting a reference to a reasonable man standard for determining apprehension of danger would be more advantageous to the defendant than required and would not be erroneous.

3. By Sudden Snatching

This theory of "force" is satisfied where the victim is relieved of some possession so quickly that he does not have time to react, even though he is aware of the taking.

If the victim is aware of the taking of property from his immediate presence before the taking is complete, the offense committed is robbery by sudden snatching. If the victim is not aware of the taking until it is complete, the offense committed is not robbery by sudden snatching but rather theft by taking.

It is not necessary to show that the defendant employed violence and that the victim resisted in order to prove robbery by sudden snatching. However, if such evidence is adduced at trial, it would not amount to a fatal variance between the allegations and proof that would preclude the defendant's conviction for robbery by sudden snatching.

4. Armed Robbery Modus Operandi

Armed robbery is distinguished from robbery by the requirement that the force element be satisfied by use of an offensive weapon. The offensive weapon must be used prior to or contemporaneously with the taking. Thus, where the taking is completed after the victim has been shot and killed, a conviction for armed robbery is authorized. Where the taking is completed while the victim is asleep before she is awakened and sexually assaulted at gunpoint, no armed robbery has occurred. In this situation, § 16-8-41 "clearly contemplates that the offensive weapon be used as a concomitant to a taking which involves the use of actual force or intimidation (constructive force) against another person." If there is ample evidence of the use of actual force, evidence of constructive force or intimidation is unnecessary.

Although the victim may not have actually seen the taking of his property during the armed robbery, if the victim was clearly aware that his life and property were at risk, there would be sufficient evidence of force to support an armed robbery conviction.

The jury is entitled to reject the defendant's claim that he did not produce the offensive weapon until after the taking and accept the victim's testimony depicting an armed robbery.

Armed robbery does not occur unless the robber's use of an offensive weapon directly or indirectly induces the possessor of property to relinquish possession to the robber. If the possessor acts in concert with the robber and relinquishes control over the property pursuant to their pre-arranged agreement, an essential element of robbery, i. e., force or intimidation, is missing. In such a case, since the possessor can admit the charge that she aided and abetted the robber by relinquishing possession of the property voluntarily and still be innocent of armed robbery, an indictment charging the possessor with felony murder, with the armed robbery as the underlying felony, is fatally defective.

All participants in a plan to commit armed robbery are responsible for the criminal acts that are a probable consequence of the plan and are committed while executing it. Moreover, a participant may be convicted despite not being the actual perpetrator of the armed robbery. Where the evidence is sufficient to find the defendant guilty of armed robbery as a party to the offense, it need not be shown that the defendant personally wielded a gun during the commission of the robbery. Furthermore, a defendant can be convicted of armed robbery even though he might not have had knowledge that his accomplice was going to use a weapon to perpetrate it, so long as it can be found that the defendant was a party to the offense and that the use of the weapon by the accomplice was naturally or necessarily done in furtherance of the conspiracy to commit the robbery even though not part of the original agreement.

In several gasoline theft cases the Court of Appeals has held that the required taking occurs when the attendant asks for payment and is refused, rather than when the gasoline is pumped into the vehicle. Accordingly, the inquiry into the validity of an armed robbery conviction focuses on whether the refusal of payment was accomplished by use of an offensive weapon.

Although the statute does not specifically define "offensive weapon," this element has been held to be satisfied even though the defendant asserted that the gun was only a cap pistol. The court did not, however, articulate the reason for finding an offensive weapon in this case. A possible inference from the case, however, is that the character of the weapon will be determined by the victim's reasonable apprehension rather than the actual offensive nature of the weapon. Thus, if the article or device appears to the victim to be an offensive weapon, it is no defense that the defendant did not actually have a gun or other offensive weapon in his possession when he committed the robbery.

An armed robber need not use an offensive weapon in a menacing or threatening manner to accomplish the robbery. Rather, the victim need only be aware of the defendant's use of a weapon which has the desired forceful effect of assisting to accomplish the robbery.

Since the purpose of using "any replica, article, or device having the appearance of [an offensive] weapon" is to create a reasonable apprehension on the part of the victim that an offensive weapon is being used, it is immaterial whether such apprehension is created by use of the sense of vision or by any other sense, provided that the apprehension is reasonable under the circumstances. Thus, the weapon does not have to be visible as far as being in the hand of or shown to the victim by the accused in order to convict him of armed robbery. The legislature intended § 16-8-41 to encompass armed robbers who have concealed offensive weapons in their pockets or under wraps or other devices. However, while the presence of a weapon during the commission of a robbery may be established without proof that the weapon was actually seen, some physical manifestation of a weapon is required or some evidence from which the presence of a weapon may be inferred. If an indictment alleges that an armed robbery was committed with the "use of a knife," the proof must show it. Evidence that the victim saw "something shiny" in the defendant's hand would be insufficient. However, evidence that the defendant used a weapon of a similar nature capable of inflicting the same character of injury upon the victim as the knife alleged in the indictment would not constitute a fatal variance.

Where an indictment specifically charges the defendant with committing an armed robbery by use of an offensive weapon, a trial court's jury instruction, which recites the entire armed robbery statute, is unlikely to mislead the jury into convicting the defendant of armed robbery by any other means than as charged in the indictment if the evidence shows that an offensive weapon was used in the commission of the robbery and if the trial court reads directly from the indictment in the course of instructing the jury.

An armed robbery indictment, which alleges that the defendant intended to commit theft by taking the victims' money "by use of an offensive weapon, to wit: a firearm," would not be void merely because it fails to specify the type or caliber of the weapon. The law does not require such specificity in describing the weapon used to perpetrate an armed robbery.

In a case dealing with the federal bank robbery statute, the U.S. Supreme Court concluded that an unloaded gun is a "dangerous weapon." First, a gun is an article that is typically and characteristically dangerous; the use for which it is manufactured and sold is a dangerous one, and the law reasonably may presume that such an article is always dangerous even though it may not be armed at a particular time or place. In addition, the display of a gun instills fear in the average citizen; as a consequence, it creates an immediate danger that a violent response will ensue. Finally, a gun can cause harm when used as a bludgeon.

Although the state must prove the defendant was in possession of an offensive weapon during the armed robbery, it is not required to prove the victim's awareness of the defendant's possession. Nor is the state required to prove the use of a gun containing ammunition. In fact, it does not have to prove that the gun was loaded.

The victim's testimony about the defendant's use of a weapon is sufficient to establish the element of use of an offensive weapon. However, the victim's testimony is not required if there is testimony from other witnesses which establishes this element of the offense. Also, it has been held that a doctor's testimony concerning the nature and extent of a victim's injuries and photographs depicting a victim's injuries are clearly relevant to show that a robbery was committed by use of an offensive weapon.

III. Miscellaneous

A. Punishment

Robbery is punishable by one to twenty years' imprisonment. Robbery of a person who is 65 years of age or older is punishable by five to twenty years' imprisonment.

Armed robbery is punishable by death, life imprisonment, or imprisonment from ten to twenty years. This offense is also punishable according to the sentencing and punishment provisions of §§ 17-10-6.1 and 17-10-7, which provide for mandatory minimum sentences and sentences for life without possibility of parole in certain cases and provide restrictions on the authority of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant paroles. Armed robbery is not a reducible felony under § 17-10-5.

Taking what is perceived as a mandate from the United States Supreme Court, the Georgia Supreme Court has held that the death sentence cannot constitutionally be imposed in an armed robbery case where the victim does not die. However, armed robbery, as an alleged contemporaneous capital felony, would support a death sentence for murder.

Prior to 1995, a defendant who had been convicted of a second or subsequent armed robbery had to be sentenced by the trial court to imprisonment for not less than ten years. Under current law, a defendant who has been convicted once of an armed robbery or another "serious violent felony" and who after such first conviction subsequently commits and is convicted of an armed robbery for which he is not sentenced to death must be sentenced by the trial court to imprisonment for life without parole.

The armed robbery statute allows for the imposition of a life sentence or a determinate sentence, whether or not the offender was sentenced as a recidivist. If a defendant charged with armed robbery is indicted as a recidivist, the trial court is authorized to sentence the defendant under the general recidivist statute to the longest period of time prescribed for the punishment of armed robbery, i.e., life imprisonment. Where a defendant charged with armed robbery is not indicted as a recidivist, the trial court is likewise authorized to sentence the defendant to life imprisonment based on an exercise of its judicial discretion as applied to the facts of the case and the aggravating factor of the defendant's prior felony conviction for armed robbery. If a defendant charged with armed robbery is indicted as a "serious violent felony" recidivist, the trial court is authorized to sentence the defendant to imprisonment for life without parole.

There is a special punishment provision for those who intentionally inflict bodily injury in the course of an armed robbery in which a controlled substance is taken from a pharmacy or wholesale druggist. A minimum of fifteen years' imprisonment is mandated for those who commit such a crime.

Because the current statutory language prohibits modification of a sentence for armed robbery, the act of a judge in probating a sentence for armed robbery is void.

The crimes of armed robbery and theft by receiving are mutually exclusive of each other, and a defendant cannot be convicted of both crimes where the crimes involved the same property.

B. Forfeiture of Property Used in Armed Robbery

All motor vehicles, tools, and weapons which are used or intended for use in any manner in the commission of or to facilitate the commission of an armed robbery are subject to forfeiture.

C. Relationship of Robbery and Armed Robbery to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

A number of cases in the area of robbery and armed robbery have considered the problem of determining what are lesser included offenses because of the language found in § 16-8-41(a) that: "The offense of robbery by intimidation shall be a lesser included offense in the offense of armed robbery." Most decisions in this area involve a defendant who was convicted of armed robbery and is seeking a new trial with instructions on robbery by intimidation. If the evidence clearly supports only an armed robbery conviction, then no new trial is required.

Soon after the 1968 revision of the criminal code it was held that if the evidence authorized a conviction for armed robbery it could not authorize a conviction for the lesser offense of robbery by intimidation. In these cases, therefore, the failure of the judge to charge the jury on robbery by intimidation was held not to be error. Then, in Holcomb v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court was confronted by this certified question from the Court of Appeals: "Where the evidence establishes that an accused committed a robbery by the use of an offensive weapon may he or his co-conspirator be convicted of the 'lesser included offense' of robbery by intimidation?" The Holcomb court answered that the "could not authorize" terminology in prior cases was incorrect and stated that "we should have held that the failure to charge on robbery by intimidation was not error because the evidence did not demand a charge on that offense." In other words, if on the record, the jury has evidence from which it can conclude that only robbery by intimidation was committed, it should be so instructed. Since this decision, failure to charge robbery by intimidation is still not reversible error if all the credible "evidence showed completion of the greater offense of armed robbery, so that the charge on the lesser offense was not required."

Likewise, it is not necessary to charge on the lesser included offenses of robbery and theft by taking, where the evidence demonstrates completion of the greater offense of armed robbery and there is no evidence raising the lesser offenses. Nor is it necessary to charge on the lesser included offense of theft by taking, where the evidence demonstrates that the offense, if any, is robbery by sudden snatching and there is no evidence of the lesser offense or where the evidence demonstrates that the defendant committed the robbery either by use of a replica of a handgun or by intimidation. Nor is it necessary to charge on the lesser included offense of robbery by force or criminal attempt where the evidence demonstrates either the completion of the greater offense of armed robbery or no offense at all. A new trial, however, has been ordered where the trial judge failed to instruct on the lesser offenses and the evidence was such that the jury could have found the defendant guilty of only robbery by intimidation or theft by taking.

It is not error for a trial court to instruct a jury that before it can consider the lesser offense of theft by taking, it has to reject the other charges of armed robbery and robbery by intimidation. The jury's prior consideration of armed robbery or robbery by intimidation would not eliminate evidence from the jury's consideration which might authorize instead a verdict for theft by taking.

Where there is evidence to warrant the charge, the trial court may charge the jury that it can consider theft by deception as a lesser included offense of robbery.

For purposes of the § 16-1-7(a) rule against multiple convictions, armed robbery has been held to be a lesser included offense of felony murder, but not malice murder. Thus, an individual normally may stand convicted both of armed robbery and malice murder on the same set of facts.

Robbery by force and malice murder are separate crimes which do not merge as a matter of law. Moreover, they do not merge as a matter of fact where each crime is proved by distinct elements absent from the proof of the other.

Since the "assault" element of aggravated assault with intent to rob is contained within the "use of an offensive weapon" element of armed robbery and both crimes share the "intent to rob" element, there is no element of aggravated assault with intent to rob that is not contained in armed robbery. Therefore, an aggravated assault with intent to rob conviction would merge into an armed robbery conviction.

Aggravated assault is not a lesser included offense of armed robbery as a matter of law, although it may be included as a matter of fact. Deadly weapon aggravated assault may be as a matter of fact a lesser offense included in armed robbery. Aggravated assault is not included in attempted armed robbery as a matter of law, although these two offenses may merge as a matter of fact. However, where the underlying facts show that one crime was completed prior to the second crime, so that the crimes are separate as a matter of law, there is no merger. The crime of conspiracy to commit armed robbery does not merge with the crime of aggravated assault where the facts necessary to prove the conspiracy to commit armed robbery are not the same facts necessary to prove the aggravated assault. Robbery by intimidation does not merge with aggravated assault with intent to rob as a matter of fact where the acts described by the victim constituted separate offenses. Because the offenses of robbery by force and aggravated assault on a person over the age of 65 years have different elements and prohibit different conduct, neither is included in the other as a matter of law. Nor are they included as a matter of fact where the state proves each offense by different facts.

The offense of possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony does not merge into the offense of armed robbery upon convictions for both.

Since the rule against inconsistent verdicts has been abolished, a defendant's acquittal on a possession of a firearm charge does not require an acquittal on an armed robbery charge. The acquittal on the one charge and a conviction on the other may reflect a compromise or lenity by the jury rather than inconsistent factual conclusions.

Robbery and armed robbery do not merge as a matter of law where separate incidents involved different actions, different specific objectives or intents, and different victims. Robbery is not a lesser included offense of armed robbery where the evidence clearly establishes that the robbery was committed through the use of a weapon, and there is no evidence from which a jury can find that the robbery was committed without the use of such a weapon.

Robbery by force and armed robbery do not merge where the evidence shows that the acts constituting the offenses, although committed sequentially, were committed in different ways and where proof of the elements of the offenses were not satisfied by the introduction of the same evidence.

Simple battery is not as a matter of law an offense included in robbery by force. Aggravated battery may as a matter of fact merge with the greater offense of armed robbery or robbery by force. However, where the evidence shows that the robbery was complete before the aggravated battery occurred and where the evidence of neither offense was necessary to prove the other, there is no merger.

Neither theft by receiving nor theft by deception is a lesser included offense of armed robbery. Motor vehicle theft is not a lesser included offense of armed robbery as a matter of fact, where the evidence used to establish the motor vehicle theft is not the same evidence used to establish the armed robbery.

It has been held that the offenses of armed robbery and kidnapping can merge under certain factual situations. There is, however, not an automatic merger simply because two offenses may arise from the same series of events. It has been held that the offenses of armed robbery and kidnapping with bodily injury do not merge as a matter of fact or law, where the evidence of either offense is not necessary to prove the other. Thus, there was no merger, where the evidence showed that simple kidnapping was complete before the defendant armed with a pistol took money from the victim. It was not until after the victim handed the defendant the money that the defendant shot him in the leg. This additional, gratuitous violence followed, and was not an element of, the already completed act of armed robbery. The shooting was the bodily injury which aggravated the already completed simple kidnapping. Also, there was no merger where the evidence showed that the kidnapping was complete upon the defendant's pointing the gun at the victim's head and forcing him to drive the truck away; armed robbery occurred upon the defendant's tying the victim up and assuming control of the truck, using the gun to acquire and maintain superiority. The offenses of kidnapping with bodily injury and robbery by force do not merge as a matter of fact where the evidence shows that the kidnapping was complete before the robbery was effectuated.

Under Georgia's statutory double jeopardy provisions, there is no prohibition against a defendant's being convicted of both burglary and a completed criminal offense, such as armed robbery, after gaining entry into the dwelling, as each offense has distinct elements.

Using what could be described as a time sequence analysis in order to determine whether there was inclusion on the facts, the Court of Appeals in Barnett v. State held that the charge of terroristic threats did not merge with the charge of armed robbery. The evidence was sufficient to show the robbery was complete, in that the money from the cash register was in the defendant's possession before he made the alleged threat to the victim that he would kill her if she moved. Thus, the threat was not part of the armed robbery, but the evidence was sufficient to show that it was made with the purpose of terrorizing the victim to effect his escape from the scene of the robbery.

In State v. Smith, the Court of Appeals held that the trial court improperly merged eight of twelve armed robbery counts into four counts under an "incident location" theory. The record showed that each of the counts merged by the court for sentencing purposes involved separate individuals. Thus, the defendant's action against each individual was a separate crime and could not merge in fact or law.

While in some cases robbery by intimidation may be a lesser included offense of armed robbery, where the two offenses involve two separate incidents with two separate victims, the defendant would be properly convicted of both offenses because under these circumstances the offenses do not merge as a matter of law.

D. Venue

Venue for the offenses of robbery and armed robbery is the county where the taking occurred. Venue has been held to be proven where the victim testifies that the robbery occurred at her home and testifies later that her home is in a certain county.

E. Defenses

A claim of right is a defense to the crime of theft, not robbery by sudden snatching or armed robbery. To allow a claim of right defense to these offenses, within which the use of force is implicit, would sanction the use of force to claim the property.

Whether the defendant participated in an attempted robbery or abandoned the enterprise is for the jury to determine.

F. Statute of Limitations

In 1992, the General Assembly with the enactment of § 24-4-60 authorized the creation of a state deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) data bank of samples obtained from convicted sex offenders in order to determine and retain the identification characteristics specific to these offenders. In 2000, the General Assembly broadened the scope of this statute by requiring the obtaining of DNA samples from all convicted felons and the storing of these samples in the data bank. An examination of these samples revealed that many matched the DNA evidence of old, unsolved rape cases. Despite this evidence, the state could not prosecute the convicted felons because the limitation periods for their crimes had expired. Remedial legislation was necessary to enable the state to use identification evidence derived from the state's DNA data bank to prosecute convicted felons for certain crimes even though the limitation periods previously established by law had expired.

Accordingly, the General Assembly eliminated the statute of limitations for any armed robbery occurring on or after July 1, 2002, when DNA evidence is used to establish the identity of the accused. A sufficient portion of the physical evidence tested for DNA, however, must be preserved and available for testing by the accused. Furthermore, if the DNA evidence does not establish the identity of the accused, the limitation on the prosecution reverts to the seven-year period specified in § 17-3-1(b).

SEXUAL OFFENSES AGAINST CHILDREN

I. Statutory Rape

A. Elements

Statutory rape, § 16-6-3, is one of four sexual offenses in the criminal code primarily designed to protect children from deviant sexual conduct. Defined as sexual intercourse with a person under the age of 16 years, statutory rape is the only one of the four sexual offenses against children which requires nothing more than a general mens rea. The reason for this may be that statutory rape often causes extensive physical harm to its victim, while sexual offenses, such as child molestation and enticing a child for indecent purposes, are less likely to cause such harm.

In any event, it is clear that a conviction for statutory rape will be had upon proof of two elements: that the defendant engaged in sexual intercourse with the victim and that the victim was less than 16 years of age. Neither force nor lack of consent need be shown. The statute can be used, therefore, to punish a person who engages in consensual sexual intercourse, as the statute creates a conclusive presumption that a person under the age of 16 years is legally incapable of consenting to sexual relations. Furthermore, apparently one may be convicted of statutory rape even though he or she had an actual and reasonable belief that the victim was above the age of 16 years because knowledge of the victim's age is not part of the statute's mens rea.

In 1999, the General Assembly changed the definition of forcible rape to provide that a person commits the offense when he has carnal knowledge of "[a] female who is less than ten years of age." The enactment of this definition reestablished the common-law rule that rape includes consensual relations with a female under ten years of age and the common-sense principle that sexual intercourse with a female under ten years of age is a forcible act constituting rape as a matter of law. By extending the application of the forcible rape statute to sexual intercourse with females under ten years of age, the General Assembly has implicitly limited the application of the statutory rape statute. Before the enactment of this definition, all sexual intercourse with females under the age of consent was subject to the application of the statutory rape statute. Under the current statutory scheme, sexual intercourse with a female under ten years of age is no longer subject to the application of the statutory rape statute but is instead subject to the application of the forcible rape statute. Sexual intercourse with a female under ten years of age, which had to be prosecuted in many cases in the past as statutory rape because of the extreme difficulty of proving force, must now be prosecuted and punished under the forcible rape statute. This statutory scheme, however, may be subject to constitutional attack as a violation of equal protection guarantees by reason of its underinclusion of male victims and female perpetrators.

B. Attempt

An indictment charging a defendant with attempted statutory rape is not subject to a general demurrer merely because it fails to allege an essential element of the completed crime. An element that is essential in proving the completed crime does not mean that it is indispensable in proving criminal attempt. The relevant question is whether the acts alleged in the indictment constitute a substantial step toward the commission of the crime. What constitutes a substantial step is a question of degree, and depends upon the circumstances of each case. Where it cannot be said as a matter of law that the alleged acts do not constitute a substantial step, the indictment is not fatally defective for failure to allege the commission of a crime.

C. Evidence

1. Corroboration Requirement

Although the requirement that a victim's testimony be corroborated has been deleted from the forcible rape statute, corroboration is still required in statutory rape. The standard for corroborating the victim's testimony in statutory rape cases is the same as that which was applied to forcible rape cases. Traditionally, both the commission of the crime and the identity of the defendant had to be verified by independent testimony. Today, however, only the fact of the commission of the crime need be corroborated by other evidence; independent identification evidence no longer need be introduced. The requirement is satisfied so long as there is some independent evidence which tends to prove that the incident occurred as alleged.

In any case, the sufficiency of the evidence is a question for the jury's determination, which will not be disturbed by the appellate courts if any corroborating evidence was introduced. For example, the victim's testimony has been held sufficiently corroborated by her outcry or report of the incident to the police or some other person, by her description of the clothing that the defendant was wearing at the time of the attack, by her actions and demeanor following the attack, and even by her letter to a relative describing the attack. It has also been held that the victim's testimony may be corroborated by the defendant's inculpatory statements, by the victim's prior consistent statements as recounted by others, by a psychotherapist's testimony that the victim showed signs of child sexual abuse syndrome, and by medical evidence. The Georgia Supreme Court has held, furthermore, that a lie detector test can be used to corroborate the testimony of the victim of statutory rape, at least where there had been a pretest stipulation between the state and the defendant.

2. Victim's Behavior

In statutory rape cases, since the illegal sexual or carnal intercourse is with a victim under the age of consent, the issues of consent and chastity are not material, and it would serve no useful purpose to allow a thorough and sifting examination as to the victim's credibility in regard to such issues. The defendant, therefore, is precluded from cross-examining the victim on these issues.

Notwithstanding this exclusionary rule, the Court of Appeals found in a number of its decisions that the Rape Shield Statute applied in statutory rape cases even though the statute's exceptions relating to consent and the accused's prior participation were inapplicable. Thus, without exception, inquiring into the victim's past sexual behavior was not permitted. The Georgia Supreme Court, however, implicitly disapproved of these decisions in Abdulkadir v. State because it found that the Rape Shield Statute, by its plain terms, applied only in prosecutions for rape. While there might be compelling policy reasons to apply the Rape Shield Statute in prosecutions for sexual crimes other than rape, the General Assembly's express limitation of the statute's applicability to prosecutions for rape excluded its application in prosecutions for all other sexual crimes. Since the courts are not authorized to expand a statute's application beyond its plain terms, the Supreme Court stated that any expansion of the Rape Shield Statute's applicability had to come from the General Assembly, as it alone is entrusted with the authority to amend existing laws.

In response to this decision, the General Assembly, apparently recognizing that there were compelling policy reasons for the expansion of the Rape Shield Statute's applicability, amended the statute in 2005 so that it is now expressly applicable not only in prosecutions for rape but also in prosecutions for aggravated sodomy, aggravated child molestation, and aggravated sexual battery. This amendment applies to all trials that commence on or after July 1, 2005. It should be noted, however, that this 2005 amendment does not abrogate the exclusionary rule previously applied in statutory rape cases. Any consideration as to the Rape Shield Statute's present inapplicability in statutory rape cases is pretermitted because evidence of the victim's past sexual behavior would be inadmissible and properly excluded based on the established precedent of the Georgia Supreme Court.

Testimony regarding the victim's alleged past false accusations against persons other than the defendant is admissible in statutory rape cases. Before ruling on the admissibility of such evidence, the trial court must make a threshold determination outside the presence of the jury that a reasonable probability of falsity existed.

3. Similar Offenses

As is true in prosecutions for many of the sexual offenses in the criminal code, the courts are fairly lenient in permitting the introduction of evidence of similar offenses in which the defendant was involved for the purpose of establishing the defendant's identity, motive, intent, plan or scheme, or bent of mind. Thus, testimony that the defendant had been involved in a prior, forcible rape is admissible as similar transaction evidence in a statutory rape case. However, there must exist a sufficient similarity or connection between the prior independent crime and the statutory rape charged in the case in order for the evidence to be admissible at trial. It should be noted that such evidence is not necessarily limited to the defendant's previous illegal conduct.

4. Other Acts of Intercourse with the Defendant

Statements by the victim of previous acts of sexual intercourse with the defendant is admissible as evidence of prior difficulties between the defendant and the victim. The prosecution's failure to provide notice of this evidence to the defense prior to trial does not render the evidence inadmissible.

Evidence of an unindicted act of intercourse occurring a few days after the indicted act of intercourse was committed may be properly admitted as res gestae.

D. Constitutional Issues

A constitutionally based attack was made on Georgia's statutory rape statute based on a claim that the statute violated the Equal Protection Clause in that it protected females exclusively and penalized males exclusively. This claim of unconstitutionality was rejected by the Georgia Supreme Court in Barnes v. State. In Barnes, the court held that the gender-based classification in the statutory rape statute was substantially related to the legislative objectives of protecting young girls from the unique physical and psychological damage resulting from sexual intercourse with males. Additionally, and more importantly, the child molestation statute provided penalties identical to those for statutory rape. Thus, a woman engaging in sexual intercourse with a male child less than 14 years of age, while violating a different statute, was subject to the same penalties as a man who committed statutory rape. These statutes, according to the court, provided a general statutory scheme giving protection to both male and female children under the age of 14, regardless of the offender's gender.

Another constitutionally based attack was made on Georgia's statutory rape statute based on a claim that it was a violation of equal protection under the law to adjudge a male juvenile to be delinquent for the statutory rape of an underage female without holding the female to any sort of responsibility. This claim of unconstitutionality was also rejected by the Georgia Supreme Court in In the Interest of B. L. S. The Georgia Supreme Court, basing its decision on its holding in Barnes, held that because the child molestation statute provided penalties identical to those for statutory rape, a female "child" under the age of 17 who engaged in sexual intercourse with a male who was under the age of 14 was subject to the same delinquency adjudication as a male "child" who was adjudged to be delinquent by reason of his commission of statutory rape. Thus, the statutory rape statute was not invalid as depriving the male juvenile of equal protection of the law.

In dissent, Justice Sears argued that while young boys were in as much need of protection from premature sexual intercourse with adults as were young girls, they did not get the same protection under the child molestation statute as young girls did under the statutory rape statute. Justice Sears argued that the lenient sentencing options provided in the child molestation statute, which were not available in the statutory rape statute, lessened the penalties that could be imposed on female perpetrators and lessened the protection available to young boys. Also, application of the two statutes could easily result in a harsher penalty being assessed against a male criminal defendant than the penalty imposed against a similarly situated female defendant. Thus, Georgia's statutory rape law, as written, violated constitutional equal protection guarantees by reason of the underinclusion of male victims and female perpetrators.

It appears that the General Assembly, recognizing the validity of Justice Sears' argument, decided to gender neutralize the statutory rape statute in 1995 in order to extend that statute's coverage to those formerly excluded, i.e., to male victims and female perpetrators. In light of this 1995 amendment, it thus appears that the holdings of the Georgia Supreme Court in Barnes v. State and In the Interest of B. L. S. are no longer controlling.

In Phagan v. State, the defendant contended that the 1995 amendment to the statutory rape statute, which expanded the coverage of the statute to minors under the age of 16, was unconstitutional when applied to him since he had lawfully engaged in consensual sexual activity with the minor before the effective date of the amendment, and was thereby entitled, under the auspices of the constitutional right of privacy, to continue the activity. The Georgia Supreme Court disagreed with this contention. Whatever privacy interest the defendant invoked to protect his consensual sexual activity with a 15-year-old female not his spouse did not offer a safehaven from the 1995 amendment's criminalization of the conduct. In raising the age at which a minor may consent to sexual intercourse, the General Assembly acted to further the state's compelling interests in safeguarding young people. In light of these compelling interests, the trial court properly upheld the age amendment against the defendant's constitutional challenge.

E. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

Although no other sexual offense has been held to be a necessarily included offense of statutory rape, on the facts of particular cases incest, child molestation, and fornication could be lesser included offenses of statutory rape.

The statutory rape and child molestation statutes are part of a legislative framework aimed at protecting children from sexual exploitation and abuse. As part of a coordinated scheme relating to the same subject matter, the Georgia Supreme Court found in Dixon v. State that these statutes had to be construed together to determine how the General Assembly intended to treat conduct involving a victim who was 14 or 15 years of age and a defendant who was no more than three years older than the victim. Construing these statutes together as they appeared in the Code in 2004 showed a clear legislative intent to prosecute such conduct as misdemeanor statutory rape rather than felony child molestation. First, in 1996 the General Assembly amended the statutory rape statute specifically to eliminate any discretion over whether to punish conduct meeting the misdemeanor statutory rape criteria as either felony or misdemeanor statutory rape. When the General Assembly eliminated this discretion, it intended the misdemeanor provision to have exclusive application to conduct falling within its parameters. Allowing the state to retain the discretion to prosecute the same conduct as either misdemeanor statutory rape or felony child molestation would have defeated this legislative intent. Second, since the misdemeanor statutory rape provision was far more specific concerning such conduct than the child molestation statute, this more specific provision should have prevailed over the general statute and any prosecution should have proceeded under this provision. Third, the misdemeanor statutory rape provision reflected the most recent legislative judgment regarding the appropriate punishment for such conduct. Since the General Assembly most recently declared that sex between teenagers less than three years apart should have been punished as misdemeanor statutory rape, and not felony child molestation, that judgment would have to prevail. Finally, given the conflict between the two statutes concerning their prescribed punishments, the rule of lenity would require that a defendant receive only the lesser of the two possible punishments.

Notwithstanding this construction in Dixon, the Georgia Supreme Court encouraged the General Assembly to examine this case and make a more recognizable distinction between statutory rape, child molestation, and the other sexual crimes, and to clarify the sort of conduct that would qualify for the minimum sentence accompanying a conviction for aggravated child molestation. The court stated that the conflicting nature of the statutory scheme relating to sexual conduct, especially with respect to teenagers, might lead to inconsistent results. Under the statutes as they appeared in 2004, it was entirely possible that teenagers could have been convicted of aggravated child molestation and received the concomitant ten-year minimum sentence, if they willingly engaged in sexual activity, but stopped short of the actual act of sexual intercourse, so long as one experienced slight pain or received even minor injuries incidental to the act.

In 2006, the General Assembly responded to the court's concern about the conflict and lack of clarity in this statutory scheme. It prescribed, in accord with the statutory rape statute, misdemeanor punishment for teenagers within a certain age range who willingly engage in sexual activity that constitutes child molestation or aggravated child molestation. Moreover, the General Assembly explicitly provided that an act of sodomy is the sort of conduct that would qualify for misdemeanor punishment accompanying a teenager's conviction for aggravated child molestation. By limiting the sexual activity that can serve as the basis of a charge of misdemeanor aggravated child molestation to an act of sodomy, the General Assembly is expressing a clear legislative intent that an act of sexual intercourse between teenagers within a certain age range does not qualify as aggravated child molestation. Rather, the misdemeanor statutory rape provision would apply exclusively to such sexual activity.

It is error to convict a person of child molestation and statutory rape for the same conduct. He may be prosecuted for both offenses, but he may not be convicted of both. However, the offense of child molestation does not merge into the offense of statutory rape where the evidence shows that the defendant fondled the victim and, in an entirely separate incident later that evening, raped her. Likewise, the offenses do not merge where the evidence shows that the offense of child molestation was complete when the defendant without regard to his subsequent acts removed the clothing of the victim with the requisite intent, and where the evidence shows that the offense of statutory rape was not initiated until the defendant without regard to his previous acts began to engage in sexual intercourse with the underage victim.

Because the crimes of rape and statutory rape are separate offenses which require proof of different elements, they are not included within each other as a matter of law. Furthermore, even where the evidence at trial shows that there was only one act of sexual intercourse, the crime of statutory rape is not included, as a matter of fact, in the crime of rape. The fact that the act of sexual intercourse supports an element in each crime does not warrant merging of the sentences where other mutually exclusive elements of the crimes remain.

The fact that an underage child is incapable of consenting to an act of sexual intercourse under the statutory rape statute would not preclude a finding that an unmarried child who voluntarily has sexual intercourse with another person commits the delinquent act of fornication and therefore is in need of treatment and rehabilitation.

F. Punishment

Except as provided in § 16-6-3(c), statutory rape is a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years. However, if the person convicted of statutory rape was 21 years of age or older, the offense would be punishable by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years. In addition to these punishments, an offender would be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of § 17-10-6.2, which requires the offender to receive a mandatory split sentence including a minimum sentence of imprisonment.

Section 16-6-3(c) provides a lesser punishment for a statutory rape involving teenagers. If the victim was at least 14 but less than 16 years of age and the person convicted of statutory rape was 18 years of age or younger and was no more than four years older than the victim, the statutory rape would be punishable only as a misdemeanor.

In Phagan v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court held that this sentencing scheme, which provides harsher punishment for older persons found guilty of statutory rape, does not violate the Equal Protection Clause. The General Assembly could have reasonably decided that persons beyond a certain age should have sufficient maturity and judgment to be held responsible for conduct which might be excusable in a younger person. Thus, the General Assembly had a rational basis for enacting the amendment calling for disparate sentences based on the age of the perpetrator.

The rule of lenity applies when two statutory provisions governing the same conduct are conflicting with respect to their prescribed punishments, i.e., where one provision punishes the same conduct to a lesser degree than the other provision. In such a situation, a defendant would be entitled to have the lesser of two penalties administered. In Orr v. State, the Court of Appeals found that because the indictment made no mention of the defendant's age, its allegations only set forth a charge of felony statutory rape. The jury was only charged as to this species of rape and, thus, its verdict had to be reasonably construed as finding the defendant guilty of statutory rape as charged. Accordingly, the trial court was not compelled under the rule of lenity to impose misdemeanor punishment, and its imposition of felony punishment did not constitute error.

Where two or more charges of statutory rape differ from one another only with respect to the averment of date and where the date is not made an essential element in any of the charges, if all the dates alleged fall within the period of the statute of limitation, only one sentence can be imposed. This rule applies in prosecutions for multiple sexual assaults against child victims where the state finds it impractical to treat the dates specified in the charges as material averments.

II. Child Molestation and Aggravated Child Molestation

A. Elements

1. Mens Rea

While statutory rape is a general intent offense, the other three sexual offenses against children found in the criminal code, child molestation, aggravated child molestation, and enticing a child for indecent purposes, are specific intent offenses.

Whether the defendant had the requisite intent when he committed the act of molestation is a matter for jury resolution. Case law provides some assistance as to what showing of intent is necessary to satisfy the statute. A showing of a "general plan" of the defendant to use the child to gratify the defendant's lust or passions or sexual desires is not required by the statute. Furthermore, the defendant need not have intended to actually use the child's body in some physical capacity in order to commit an act of molestation. It is sufficient if the defendant utilizes or capitalizes on the child's mere presence as a witness to his intentional immoral or indecent act, provided the act is accomplished "with the intent to arouse or satisfy the sexual desires" of either the child or the defendant. The courts have held that the jury can infer the requisite intent of "arousing or satisfying sexual desires" from the commission of the proscribed act. However, proof of the defendant's actual arousal is not required. In a juvenile proceeding, a showing that the juvenile had the intent or knowledge of an adult is not required; all that needs to be shown is that the juvenile committed the proscribed act with the intent to satisfy his own sexual desires.

Implicit in an indictment charging a defendant with child molestation is that the act of molestation was committed with an intent to arouse or satisfy the defendant's or the child's sexual desires. Thus, the indictment need not expressly allege the defendant's specific intent with regard to that act.

2. Actus Reus

a. Child Molestation: Immoral or Indecent Acts Involving Child

The child molestation statute prohibits the commission of "any immoral or indecent act to or in the presence of or with any child under the age of 16 years," when such act is accompanied by an intent "to arouse or satisfy the sexual desires" of either the child or the actor.

The statute does not define "immoral or indecent act." However, the lack of a precise definition most likely does not render the statute vulnerable to a Fourteenth Amendment attack on vagueness grounds. As the commentary to the 1968 revision of the criminal code points out, the child molestation statute "substantially restates the law embodied" in the statute's predecessor, which was upheld by the Georgia Supreme Court in the face of such an attack. Whether the defendant committed an indecent or immoral act in the presence of the victim is a question for the jury to decide.

Society as reflected in the jury's verdict determines whether the indicted sexual act is immoral or indecent. The child's view of the sexual act is irrelevant. Thus, evidence that a 14-year-old victim consented to the act of sexual intercourse with the defendant and that he later bragged about it to others would not be relevant to show that the act of sexual intercourse was not immoral or indecent to the child.

Case law provides some assistance in defining the prohibited act. Clearly, no penetration is required for child molestation to occur. Merely fondling the child's body, accompanied by the requisite intent, will constitute the offense. Whether the child was clothed or unclothed is not a factor in determining whether the act is "immoral or indecent." While the statutory language makes clear that an indecent act short of touching will suffice, there must be sufficient contact between the defendant and the victim to constitute the crime of child molestation. In other words, they must be together in order for the crime to be committed. For instance, showing a sexually explicit videotape to a child in one's home or soliciting a child to engage in sexual activities while in the child's bedroom would satisfy the "presence" requirement of the statute because there would be sufficient contact with the child, but engaging in a sexually explicit telephone conversation with a child would not, because the only contact with the victim would be through the telephone. Although the statute requires that the defendant perform the indecent act in the child's presence, it does not require the child to observe the entire act. As long as the child can see the person and the person is aware of the presence of the child, there is no specific limit to how far away that person can be before he can no longer be considered to be in the presence of the child.

Obviously, commission of any of the acts constituting the crime of public indecency would be sufficient to constitute the actus reus of child molestation, as the two statutes are in pari materia and should, therefore, be construed together. For instance, consenting sexual intercourse between husband and wife would be transformed from acceptable and protected marital conduct into an immoral and indecent act, where the act is committed openly and intentionally in the presence of children. By such conduct, the husband and wife have converted their residence from a constitutionally protected zone of privacy into a public place, thereby subjecting their conduct to criminal prosecution.

Because injury is not a necessary element of the crime of child molestation, the state has no duty to establish that the victim was hurt.

The offense of child molestation is a crime against the person, and every child involved in an incident is a victim of this crime. Thus, where the defendant allegedly exposed his penis during two separate incidents to a number of children as they were getting off their school bus, the defendant was properly indicted on eight counts of child molestation, one count for each victim, rather than on two counts, one count for each instance of exposure.

An indictment need not allege the details of the offense but may charge the defendant with child molestation in the general language of the statute. Where a count in an indictment charges a defendant with committing child molestation in more than one way, it is sufficient for the state to show that it was committed in at least one of the ways alleged in that count, even if the count used the conjunctive rather than disjunctive form. Accordingly, the trial court may instruct the jury that it can convict the defendant of child molestation if it finds that the defendant committed the offense in either of the ways specified in the indictment.

A jury charge reciting the entire statutory definition of child molestation is not in violation of a defendant's due process rights where it does not suggest that the jury can convict the defendant of child molestation in any way other than by the method specified in the indictment and where it instructs the jury that the state bears the burden of proving every material allegation in the indictment. Moreover, such a charge does not constitute error where the evidence does not raise a reasonable probability that the jury convicted the defendant of committing the offense by a method not specified in the indictment or where the trial court has properly limited the elements of the offense to those acts charged in the indictment. It should be noted, however, that in the absence of any request for a limiting instruction, there is no error in failing to give one.

b. Child Molestation: Electronically Transmitting Images of Immoral or Indecent Acts to Child

The child molestation statute also prohibits the electronic transmission of images of a person engaging in, inducing, or otherwise participating in any immoral or indecent act to a child under the age of 16 years with the intent to arouse or satisfy the sexual desires of either the child or the person.

A person is subject to prosecution in this state pursuant to § 17-2-1 for engaging in this prohibited conduct while (1) either within or outside of this state if such conduct involves a child who resides in this state, or (2) within this state if such conduct involves a child who resides within or outside this state.

c. Aggravated Child Molestation: Physical Injury or Sodomy Involving Child

The aggravated child molestation statute defines the offense as the commission of an act of child molestation which physically injures the child or involves an act of sodomy. If there is evidence of physical injury in the case, it is not necessary for the state to prove sodomy.

Where an indictment charges the defendant with committing the offense in only one of these ways, a jury charge reciting the entire statutory definition of aggravated child molestation is reversible error, when it raises a reasonable possibility that the jury, relying upon the evidence presented at trial, may convict the defendant of committing the offense in a way not alleged in the indictment. However, the jury charge as a whole does not constitute error if the trial court has sufficiently limited the jury's consideration to the elements of the offense as charged in the indictment and if the indictment is before the jury to aid them in their deliberations.

Since child molestation is an element of aggravated child molestation, it is proper for the trial court to define child molestation for the jury. Although it would be better practice for the trial court in an aggravated child molestation case involving sodomy to define "sodomy" in its charge to the jury, in the absence of a request, the failure to do so is not reversible error.

3. Victim's Age

In order to convict a defendant of the offense of child molestation, the state must prove that the victim was under the age of 16 at the time of the acts alleged in the indictment. The Georgia Supreme Court has upheld the 1995 amendment, which expanded the coverage of the child molestation statute to include minors under the age of 16, against a constitutional challenge.

4. Victim's Consent and Knowledge of Victim's Age

The language of the statute does not indicate whether consent of the child or lack of knowledge of the child's age constitutes a valid defense to a prosecution for child molestation. However, the statutory history implies that they do not. Pre-1968 GCA § 26-1301a and two other provisions were codified together, constituting Chapter 26-13A of the criminal code prior to 1968. Pre-1968 GCA § 26-1301a prohibited child molestation, while pre-1968 GCA § 26-1302a prohibited enticement of a child with immoral intent. The third provision, pre-1968 GCA § 26-1303a, provided that neither the child's consent to the immoral conduct nor lack of knowledge of the child's age would constitute a defense to prosecution for the two substantive offenses. The statutes no longer contain this language. However, in its introductory note and accompanying table illustrating the relationship between pre-1968 and 1968 criminal code provisions, the drafters indicated that the substance of pre-1968 GCA § 26-1303a was transferred to the enticing a child for indecent purposes statute, § 16-6-5, in the 1968 revision. Therefore, although its survival is not at all clear, the drafters apparently intended to retain the pre-1968 rule that neither consent nor lack of knowledge of age constitutes a defense to a prosecution for either child molestation or enticing a child for indecent purposes.

Moreover, in Coker v. State, the Court of Appeals held that considerations of "consent" and "force" and "against the will" of the child are irrelevant in child molestation cases. Also, it has been held that sexual acts directed to children are, in law, forcible and against the will. Furthermore, in Veasey v. State, the Court of Appeals held that since knowledge of the child's age is not an element of the offense, a mistaken belief as to the child's age would not justify the act. Finally, in Schultz v. State, the Court of Appeals held that an instruction to the jury that knowledge is not an element of the offenses of child molestation or aggravated child molestation would be a correct statement of law.

5. Knowledge of Victim's Identity

A conflict between the defendant's and the victim's testimony concerning whether the defendant fondled the victim under the mistaken belief that she was his wife is a matter of credibility for the jury to resolve.

Because the practice of identifying a minor victim by initials in an indictment does not put a defendant on notice of the particular person against whom he allegedly committed the crime, the victim's initials are insufficient in an indictment challenged pretrial.

6. Gender of Defendant and Victim

Most of the child molestation cases involve the commission of the offense by a male upon a female. The statute makes clear, however, that the offender and the victim can be persons of either sex. Therefore, as the drafting committee noted, a woman can be convicted of child molestation if she engages in sexual intercourse with a male child of the requisite age.

7. Relationship of Defendant and Victim

The General Assembly, by enacting § 16-6-4, intended to protect children in this state under the age of 16 from sexual predators and offenders. From this perspective, it is obvious that the most reasonable interpretation of the statute, and the only one that does not result in unreasonable or absurd consequences, is that this statute criminalizes the act of child molestation when perpetrated on any child under the age of 16, not just the legitimate descendants of the offender. To construe otherwise would lead to the absurd result of de-criminalizing the molestation of a step-child, an illegitimate child, or any other child who is not the legitimate descendant of a defendant. Such a construction was not the intention of the General Assembly. Accordingly, an indictment would not be void for failing to assert the child's relationship with the defendant as an essential element of child molestation.

B. Attempt

A person who performs any act which constitutes a substantial step toward the commission of the crime of child molestation would be guilty of criminal attempt. For example, although driving a van, rolling down a window, and holding up money before children is each a lawful act, when these individual, seemingly innocuous, acts are taken together and combined with the uttered words "Let me stick my hand down your pants," there is evidence of an act inexplicable as a lawful act. Thus, evidence of these combined acts would be sufficient for a conviction of criminal attempt to commit child molestation. A conviction for criminal attempt would likewise be supported by evidence that the defendant entered the victim's house with the intent to engage in sexual activity and thereupon sat nude on the victim's bed while she was in it or by evidence that the defendant left the victim only when she pushed him away, having taken a substantial step toward the molestation of the victim by kissing her, by attempting to place his tongue in her mouth (although not actually doing so), and by fondling her buttocks.

An indictment charging a defendant with criminal attempt is not subject to a general demurrer merely because it fails to allege that the attempt was committed in the physical presence of the intended victim. The mere fact that physical presence is an essential element of the completed crime of child molestation does not mean that it is indispensable in proving criminal attempt. The relevant question is whether the acts alleged in the indictment constitute a substantial step toward the commission of the crime. What constitutes a substantial step is a question of degree, and depends upon the circumstances of each case. Where it cannot be said as a matter of law that the alleged acts do not constitute a substantial step, the indictment is not fatally defective for failure to allege the commission of a crime.

C. Party to Crime

One can be convicted as a party to the crime of aggravated child molestation if the evidence shows that he intentionally aided and abetted another in anally sodomizing the victim.

D. Admissibility of Evidence

1. Victim's Testimony

It should be remembered that although the courts allow the jury to infer intent in child molestation cases even where no specific evidence is presented on that issue, the jury will, indeed, be required to find beyond a reasonable doubt an intent on the defendant's part. On the same set of facts, child molestation may be easier to prove than statutory rape, as one can be convicted of child molestation on the uncorroborated testimony of the victim. Even if the victim has made no immediate outcry and has recanted her story, these circumstances do not render her testimony against the defendant insufficient. It is for the jury to resolve such conflicts in the evidence and to assess the victim's credibility.

Prior consistent and inconsistent statements of the victim constitute substantive evidence which the jury can credit or not as it sees fit. However, unless the victim's veracity has affirmatively been placed in issue, the victim's prior consistent statement is pure hearsay evidence which cannot be admitted merely to bolster the victim's credibility in the eyes of the jury. The victim's veracity is placed in issue so as to permit the introduction of a prior consistent statement only if affirmative charges of recent fabrication, improper influence, or improper motive are raised during cross-examination. Even then, the prior consistent statement may not be admitted unless it has been determined that it was made before the improper motive or influence came into existence or before the time of the alleged recent fabrication.

If the victim's testimony shows that he had a motive to falsify his testimony, it demands a charge on the credibility of witnesses. However, since the mere possibility of a motive to testify falsely does not evidence a manifest purpose to do so, nor establish that the victim's testimony was willfully or knowingly false, the trial court is not required to instruct the jury that the victim's testimony, if it is willfully and knowingly false, must be disregarded entirely unless corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence.

Whether the defendant should be allowed to interview the child victim before she testifies at trial is a question properly addressed to the child's custodian. The Department of Family & Children Services (DFACS), when acting as the child's legal custodian, may make this decision. However, it cannot be compelled to submit the child to a pretrial interview. A defendant who has sought to compel DFACS to make this decision cannot later complain that the decision should have been made by the child's guardian ad litem.

Prior to 1989, before a child was allowed to testify in a child molestation case, he had to demonstrate at a competency hearing that he understood the nature of an oath, and the issue of a child's competency to testify was left to the discretion of the trial judge. In 1989, the General Assembly amended the competency statute to remedy the evil of having all children subject to a competency challenge on the ground that they did not understand the nature of an oath. Now, the statute provides that in criminal cases involving child molestation a child is deemed legally competent to testify. A child is allowed to testify regardless of his understanding of the nature of an oath and is allowed to have his credibility judged by the jury. The trial judge is not required to make an express determination that the child is competent based on the child's understanding of the nature of an oath before allowing him to testify. To the degree that a child understands that he is to tell the truth, the child is in effect under oath. Since the General Assembly has carved out this exception, the prerequisite administration of the oath otherwise called for by § 24-9-60 has been obviated when the child does not comprehend its nature. The child simply becomes an unsworn witness, made so because incapable of taking an oath. It should be noted that although a child is no longer subject to a competency challenge on the ground that he does not understand the nature of an oath, a child, like an adult, is still subject to a competency challenge on the ground that he does not have the use of reason because of mental retardation. In the absence of a specific challenge as to a victim's ability to reason, the trial judge is not required to conduct a competency hearing.

The credibility of a child victim is exclusively within the province of the jury and may not be impermissibly bolstered by the judgment of another witness that the child victim is credible. However, a statement that clearly is not an opinion as to the child's credibility but is simply an observation by the witness that he found the child to be articulate is not bolstering.

Testimony about a child victim's truthfulness may not be presented to the jury to prove the child's reliability under the child hearsay statute. The state cannot use the child hearsay statute to eviscerate the rule against improper bolstering.

The victim may testify about acts of molestation that the defendant has not been charged with committing if those acts are a part of the res gestae of the defendant's continued sexual exploitation of the victim.

Permitting drawings made by the victim to go out with the jury, after a social worker has identified the drawings as made during the victim's outcry testimony to her, does not violate the continuing witness rule where the drawings served only as tools used during the social worker's interview with the victim and they do not substantively impact on the issue of the defendant's guilt.

Under the plain terms of the Reciprocal Discovery Act, a defendant is not entitled to the victim's oral, unrecorded statement. There can be no "possession, custody, or control" of a witness' statement which has neither been recorded nor committed to writing. Accordingly, if, but only if, the victim's statement had been recorded or committed to writing other than in "notes or summaries made by counsel," would it be discoverable.

2. Expert Testimony

In child molestation cases, expert testimony of a child sexual abuse syndrome is competent evidence that the jury may accept or reject for consideration in its determination of whether the child in fact was abused and, if so, whether the defendant did it. However, an expert may not testify as to his opinion as to whether the child had been abused sexually unless the inference to be drawn from facts in evidence is beyond the ken of the jurors, that is, unless the jurors, for want of specialized knowledge, skill, or experience, are incapable of drawing from facts in evidence such an inference for themselves.

A physician, based on his physical examination of the victim as well as on the history related to him by the victim, may no longer opine directly that an act of abuse actually occurred. Rather, the physician may testify only that his findings are consistent with the occurrence of abuse. Where an expert does testify that an act of sexual abuse actually occurred, the trial court's cautionary instructions to the jury to disregard that portion of the expert's testimony would prevent any error from occurring.

Although the distinction may seem fine, there is a legal difference between an expert opinion that the victim's examination and behavior was consistent with sexual abuse and an opinion that the victim was sexually abused. In the first situation, the testimony is a permissible expression of the expert's opinion based on factors beyond the ken of the average juror. The jury is permitted to draw for itself the final conclusion as to whether the victim had, in fact, been sexually abused. In the second situation, however, the weight of the expert is put behind a factual conclusion which invades the province of the jury by providing a direct answer to the ultimate issue: was the victim sexually abused?

In most cases of sexual abuse, there will be no physical evidence of the abuse. Rather, the evidence of abuse will be comprised of the medical history provided by the victim. This medical history is made up of a list of discrete medical and/or psychological symptoms. The average juror, lacking training as a physician, psychiatrist, or psychologist, would not be able to draw an inference on his own whether these symptoms are indicative of abuse. Therefore, it is permissible for an expert to testify that the symptoms and history described by the victim are consistent with the occurrence of abuse. While this evidence might indirectly reflect on the victim's credibility, it would nonetheless be admissible as evidence linking the defendant to the crime.

While an expert may testify generally about the ability of children of a certain age group to distinguish between the truth and a lie, an expert may not testify that he believes the victim is capable of distinguishing truth from fantasy. Such testimony essentially amounts to improper bolstering of the victim's credibility, which is a matter solely within the province of the jury. Where the trial court takes corrective measures immediately upon the introduction of expert testimony going to the victim's credibility and during its main charge to the jury at a later time in the trial, the trial court's refusal to grant a mistrial would not be an abuse of discretion.

Furthermore, an expert may not give an opinion on the victim's credibility or express an opinion on the ultimate issue of the defendant's guilt for the purpose of rehabilitating the credibility of the victim whose veracity has been attacked.

While expert opinion testimony that directly addresses the credibility of the victim is prohibited, testimony that bolsters the credibility of the indicted allegations of sexual abuse is not. The state can establish the credibility of the indicted acts of sexual abuse through expert testimony. The fact that the testimony may also indirectly, though necessarily, involve the child's credibility does not render it inadmissible. For instance, although an expert's foundation testimony that the victim was initially referred to him for the treatment of alleged sexual abuse may indicate his belief in the victim's credibility, this testimony does not constitute an improper bolstering. Such testimony has an impact only on the credibility of the allegations of abuse. It does not directly address the credibility of the victim or express a direct opinion that the victim was sexually abused.

The testimony of experts that certain medical or scientific tests resulted in findings consistent with molestation would not constitute improper bolstering of the victim's credibility. Such testimony would be admissible and proper.

A detective, who has been properly qualified as an expert witness, may testify about the capacity of child victims to specifically recall the dates when offenses against them took place.

Without a basis upon an investigating detective's professional knowledge, skill, or observations, his opinion that the defendant was the perpetrator of the offense would be improper, and its admission would be erroneous. Furthermore, questions by the state eliciting such an opinion would likewise be improper and therefore erroneous.

An expert, who has been properly qualified in the area of forensic evaluation of child sexual abuse victims, may testify that it is not unusual for a child to endure sexual abuse, yet keep it a secret, even where the child may have a safe outlet to report the abuse.

A pediatric nurse practitioner, who has been properly qualified in the examination of abused children, may provide an assessment of a child's psychological state as it relates to her physical examination of the child. Based on her experience and training, the nurse would be in a position to draw inferences that could not be drawn by the average layperson.

Since expert opinion testimony is not required to assist a jury in determining whether or not the victims were truthful in their reports of abuse, particularly when the opinion is based upon inadmissible hearsay regarding alleged prior abuse of the victims by unidentified third parties, a defense expert's conclusion that the victims had fabricated their reports as result of projection or pay back is properly excluded.

Expert testimony concerning the creation of false memories in children may be permissible, provided that the party seeking to present the testimony shows that the expert's opinion is based on facts within his personal knowledge or other facts admitted into evidence.

Expert testimony regarding a victim's gender identity disorder and its correlation with sexual abuse is both relevant and admissible.

The recurrence of compulsive behaviors and the likelihood of a person with compulsive behavior rehabilitating himself without treatment are subject matters not within the scope of the ordinary laymen's knowledge and experience, and thus expert evidence regarding these matters is properly admissible in a case where the defendant denies having molested the victim and testifies that his self-rehabilitation ended his compulsive incestuous behavior prior to the alleged child molestation. Expert testimony that the defendant does not fit the psychological profile of a child or adolescent sex abuser is not admissible, where the jury, without the help of expert opinion, can determine the credibility and truthfulness of all the various witnesses at trial and can form independent opinions as to the defendant's capability of performing the acts he was accused of. Likewise, "profile testimony" that, in the opinion of an expert, a defendant who is on trial for sex crimes against a child is or is not a pedophile does not constitute admissible expert testimony. Expert opinion testimony concerning what the defendant's intent was at the time of a prior conviction for child molestation is speculative in nature and should be excluded.

A jury is free to reject expert opinion testimony about the defendant's lack of intent to arouse or satisfy sexual desires and substitute their own knowledge and experience.

The fact that the witness does not hold a license to practice psychology in this state is not determinative of his qualifications as an expert. The trial court may qualify the witness based on testimony regarding his education and experience. Moreover, questions concerning the witness's qualifications, experience, and close working relationship with the state go to the credibility of his testimony, not its admissibility.

The specifics of the expert's work on other child molestation cases for the particular district attorney's office prosecuting the defendant's case are irrelevant to the expert's qualifications and are inadmissible.

A conflicting expert opinion on results of a test used by the psychologist who interviewed the victims goes to the weight rather than the admissibility of the testimony.

3. Scientific Evidence

Given the rejection by other states of penile plethysmograph evidence as reliable evidence of a defendant's sexual deviancy, and particularly the uncertainty within the scientific community of its reliability, it is inadmissible in Georgia.

4. Hearsay

Under the "patient history" exception to the hearsay rule, a child's statements about what sexual acts were committed are admissible, but her statements about who committed the acts are not admissible. Under the res gestae exception to the hearsay rule, a doctor is allowed to testify about statements made by the victim concerning acts of molestation by the defendant even though the acts are not charged in the indictment.

5. Defendant's Behavior

As in rape and statutory rape cases, evidence of other offenses of a similar nature, the occurrence of which is not too remote in time, is admissible in child molestation cases to show the defendant's intent, bent of mind, or general plan to use children to gratify his sexual desires, especially where those offenses show a proclivity for a particular kind of abnormal sexual activity. Furthermore, proof of the defendant's predilection for pederasty is relevant and admissible to show his state of mind toward young victims and to establish his pattern of sexual predation. In fact, one case indicates that an act which in itself is not unlawful, committed by the defendant some time after he molested the child, is admissible to show the defendant's state of mind at the time of the offense. Prior inappropriate or questionable noncriminal behavior of the defendant is also admissible and relevant as tending to show his lustful disposition. However, before evidence of a similar offense can be admitted, the trial court must conduct a hearing at which specified affirmative showings are made. The state must show: (1) that the evidence is not being introduced for some improper purpose but rather for an appropriate purpose which is an exception to the general rule of inadmissibility; (2) sufficient evidence that the accused committed the other offense; and (3) a sufficient connection or similarity between the other offense and the crime charged such that proof of the former tends to prove the latter. Also, the trial court must give a limiting instruction to the jury, but only upon request, about the specific purposes for which this evidence can be considered. It should also be noted that it is impermissible for the state to introduce evidence of a large number of these similar offenses before it offers any evidence concerning the charges contained in the indictment on trial.

Since there is no apparent material difference between prior and subsequent difficulties evidence, evidence of subsequent difficulties, like evidence of prior difficulties, would not be subject to the similar transaction evidence requirements of Uniform Superior Court Rule 31.3. The mere fact that a sexual incident involving the defendant and the victim allegedly occurred a few months after, as opposed to some time before, the indicted offense would not alter the more important fact that the incident arose from the relationship between the two. Moreover, just like evidence of a prior difficulty, evidence of a defendant's subsequent act toward the same victim is admissible as evidence of the relationship between the victim and the defendant, as it may show the defendant's motive, intent, and bent of mind in committing the act against the victim which resulted in the charge for which the defendant is being prosecuted.

As with evidence of prior difficulties, when evidence of subsequent difficulties is admitted, the trial court is not required to give a limiting charge in the absence of a request for such a charge.

In a prosecution for a sexual offense, evidence of sexual paraphernalia found in the defendant's possession is inadmissible unless it shows the defendant's lustful disposition toward the sexual activity with which he is charged or his bent of mind to engage in that activity. Under this rule, sexually explicit material cannot be introduced merely to show a defendant's interest in sexual activity. It can only be admitted if it can be linked to the crime charged and if the state can lay a proper foundation showing a connection between the defendant and the material. This new rule of evidence may be applied retroactively. Since evidence of the defendant's lustful disposition in general can have a prejudicial effect on the jury's determination as to his credibility and guilt, its admission can constitute harmful error, requiring a new trial for the defendant. Its admission can constitute harmless error, however, where there is overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt or where the evidence is not patently salacious and its sexual nature is ambiguous.

It matters not that the sexually explicit material may not show the exact act or a similar act between persons of age, sex, or relationship equivalent to that of the victim and the defendant. Any inconsistency in the identification of the material goes to the weight rather than the admissibility of the evidence.

If the pornographic images possessed by the defendant do not depict him engaging in sexual activity with a minor but merely portray illegal acts similar to those for which he is being tried, the admission of the images is not subject to Uniform Superior Court Rule 31.3, governing the admission of similar transaction evidence.

In a child molestation case, the unindicted acts of vaginal and anal intercourse against the victim would be admissible, not as similar transaction evidence involving independent offenses, but as evidence of the defendant's prior acts toward the victim. The prior acts are evidence of the relationship between the victim and the defendant and may show the defendant's motive, intent, and bent of mind in committing the child molestation.

Even though a defendant is not charged with certain conduct committed during the child molestation, evidence of such conduct may be presented at trial as long as it is relevant to the crime charged. In Ortiz v. State, the court held that the defendant failed to show that the trial court abused its discretion in admitting evidence that tended to prove that the defendant placed his penis on the child's vagina simply because that evidence also indicated that some penetration may have occurred at that time or that the defendant also may have touched the child's vagina with his hand, even though the state did not charge the defendant with such conduct. The determination of the weight to be accorded such evidence was for the jury.

In an aggravated child molestation case, evidence of the defendant's prior activities that can be construed as indicative of his homosexual tendencies is of some relevancy to the issue of the defendant's sexual orientation. Evidence of homosexuality (and indications of such sexual preferences) are admissible to show a defendant's bent of mind toward the sexual activity with which he is charged. Also, evidence of the defendant's bisexual nature is admissible to prove intent, motive, plan, scheme, and bent of mind.

Evidence that the defendant was abused as a child is irrelevant to the question of whether he committed the crime of child molestation and is inadmissible.

Evidence of a suicide attempt by a defendant accused of child molestation is relevant as possibly indicating a consciousness of guilt and is admissible for whatever weight the jury chooses to assign. Also, evidence of the defendant's suicide attempts after being accused of another, similar act of child molestation is relevant to show identity in the similar transaction.

Where evidence of the defendant's acts of family violence is relevant to show the child victim's reasons for not reporting the acts of molestation sooner, it is not rendered inadmissible because it incidentally puts the defendant's character in issue.

Character witnesses for the defense cannot testify about specific instances of the defendant's caring for young girls. Such evidence is not admissible because it amounts to self-serving declarations of nonculpability to prove a character trait. Furthermore, character witnesses cannot testify about the defendant's reputation in the community for treating children appropriately. Since the import of such testimony would be that the defendant did not have a reputation for molesting children, it is inadmissible.

The defendant's admission which is otherwise competent and admissible is not to be excluded simply because the admission was made before or after the taking of a lie detector test.

6. Victim's Behavior

The Court of Appeals has held that an exclusionary rule applicable in rape cases is also applicable in child molestation cases, i.e., the victim's past sexual behavior is irrelevant in the determination of whether he was molested by the defendant. The defendant, therefore, is precluded from cross-examining the victim on this point. Under this rule, the state is likewise precluded from asking the victim questions concerning his past sexual behavior. Nor may evidence be admitted to discredit the victim by showing his preoccupation with sex.

Notwithstanding this exclusionary rule, the Court of Appeals found in a number of its decisions that the Rape Shield Statute was applicable in child molestation cases and could serve as the basis for excluding evidence of the victim's past sexual behavior. The Georgia Supreme Court, however, disapproved of these decisions in Abdulkadir v. State because it found that the Rape Shield Statute, by its plain terms, applied only in prosecutions for rape. While there might be compelling policy reasons to apply the Rape Shield Statute in prosecutions for sexual crimes other than rape, the General Assembly's express limitation of the statute's applicability to prosecutions for rape excluded its application in prosecutions for all other sexual crimes. Since the courts are not authorized to expand a statute's application beyond its plain terms, the Supreme Court stated that any expansion of the Rape Shield Statute's applicability had to come from the General Assembly, as it alone is entrusted with the authority to amend existing laws.

In response to this decision, the General Assembly, apparently recognizing that there were compelling policy reasons for the expansion of the Rape Shield Statute's applicability, amended the statute in 2005 so that it is now expressly applicable not only in prosecutions for rape but also in prosecutions for aggravated sodomy, aggravated child molestation, and aggravated sexual battery. This amendment applies to all trials that commence on or after July 1, 2005. It should be noted, however, that this 2005 amendment does not abrogate the exclusionary rule previously applied in child molestation cases. Any consideration as to the limitation of the Rape Shield Statute's applicability in child molestation cases is pretermitted because evidence of the victim's past sexual behavior would be inadmissible and properly excluded based on the established precedent of the appellate courts of this state.

While evidence of a victim's past sexual history is not usually admissible, such evidence may be admissible if shown to be relevant. The fact that evidence may be inadmissible for one purpose does not warrant its exclusion when it is relevant for another purpose. Thus, if evidence of the victims' naivete and lack of sexual experience or education would explain why the defendant was able to abuse them the way he did, the trial court's admission of this evidence for the limited purpose of showing the defendant's superiority of knowledge and the victims' naivete and lack of familiarity with sexual things would not constitute an abuse of discretion.

Where the state has elicited medical testimony suggesting that the victim may have contracted a sexually transmitted disease from the defendant, the defendant may introduce additional medical evidence showing that while the victim had tested positive for the disease, he had not. As long as this evidence is introduced for the purpose of corroborating a defense that the defendant did not molest the victim, and not for the purpose of exploring the victim's past or other sexual behavior, it does not offend any exclusionary rule.

Generally, evidence of a prior unrelated molestation of the victim is not admissible to explain the victim's knowledge of sexual acts. However, evidence of a prior molestation of the victim would be admissible to show that someone other than the defendant caused the injuries to the victim. Also, when evidence of the child abuse accommodation syndrome is introduced at trial, evidence that the victim had been molested by someone other than the defendant may be admissible to establish other possible causes for the behavioral symptoms exhibited by the victim.

A third party conviction for child molestation is not direct evidence of an alternative explanation for the victim's claims of child molestation. Such evidence does not lessen the defendant's culpability with regard to the victim's assertions against him. It does not follow that if, tragically, a child has been abused by multiple offenders, the child's claim of abuse against a specific offender is abrogated by the fact of prior abuse, alone.

Questioning a child other than the victim about sexual abuse by a nondefendant in order to demonstrate that the victim may have learned about sex by witnessing the other child's abuse is violative of the other child's privacy interests, unduly speculative, and irrelevant to the issue of whether the defendant molested the victim. This is particularly true when the molestation of the other child occurred when the victim was a mere infant.

Testimony regarding the victim's alleged past false accusations against persons other than the defendant is admissible in child molestation cases. Before ruling on the admissibility of such evidence, the trial court must make a threshold determination outside the presence of the jury that a reasonable probability of falsity exists. The fact that an accusation is not prosecuted is insufficient to establish its falsity. If the trial court, after considering the context and circumstances of the past false accusation, determines that it was the result of coercion and duress from victim's alleged abuser, it would not be an abuse of the trial court's discretion to exclude testimony about the accusation. If the victim, when confronted with evidence of a prior false accusation, testifies that she does not remember the prior incident, the victim's testimony concerning her molestation should not be disregarded entirely if it is plausible that the victim's failure of memory is due to the lapse of time since the occurrence of the prior incident and if the victim's testimony concerning her molestation is corroborated by the testimony of others and by other evidence. A caseworker is not allowed to give his opinion that the victim has made prior false accusations of molestation, because such evidence addresses the credibility of the witness.

The defendant is entitled to cross-examine an outcry witness about his prior false allegations of molestation in order to attack his credibility.

Evidence about the victim's sexual dreams are not admissible unless the defendant is able to show a connection between the victim's dreams and the alleged acts committed by the defendant.

Where there is a complete absence of any evidence from the defense that it would be necessary to violate the victim's psychologist-patient privilege, the trial court may limit the defense's cross-examination of the victim's therapist and thereby prevent the defense from engaging in a fishing expedition to dredge up evidence of domestic problems totally unrelated to the act of molestation.

Without proof that the victim knew that her mother had been sexually abused or other proof that the mother improperly influenced the victim's testimony, the prior sexual abuse of the victim's mother is irrelevant and should be excluded. Furthermore, if there is no proof that the victim may have been confusing the defendant with another person when he accused the defendant of molestation, evidence concerning improper acts committed by that person toward the victim's mother is not sufficiently probative to warrant its admission.

7. Videotapes Depicting Defendant and Victim Engaging in Sexual Conduct

The admission of videotapes depicting the defendant and the victim engaging in sexual conduct is error if the proper foundation has not been laid. In those circumstances not covered by the "silent witness" law, a videotape is admissible where the operator of the machine which produced it or one who personally witnessed the recorded events testifies that the videotape accurately portrayed what the witness saw take place at the time the events occurred. Applying this standard to the facts in Phagan v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court was constrained to conclude that the videotapes played for the jury were not authenticated. The jury watched two videotapes which appeared to depict the defendant and the minor without anyone testifying that what the jury was seeing was an accurate portrayal of what actually occurred. In light of this evidentiary deficiency, the court had to reverse the defendant's conviction for aggravated child molestation because the erroneously admitted videotape contained the only evidence supporting the charge.

8. Civil Actions Arising out of Incidents Underlying Criminal Prosecution

Evidence of the victim's threatened civil action against the state as a result of the incident that underlies the criminal case against the defendant is a proper subject for cross-examination. The victim's financial interest in the threatened civil action is relevant because it goes to the victim's bias or interest in the criminal case. The victim's financial interest is not diminished by the fact that the defendant in the civil action is someone other than the criminal defendant. Where the criminal case against the defendant hinges on the victim's credibility, the defendant should be permitted to argue that the threatened civil action provides a motive for the victim to fabricate the incident underlying the criminal case. Under these circumstances, the exclusion of the evidence would constitute harmful error.

E. Statute of Limitations

Evidence of child molestation is not restricted to the day mentioned in the indictment, but may extend to any appropriate date previous to the finding in the indictment and within the statute of limitation for the prosecution of the offense charged. However, if the indictment charges the defendant with child molestation committed in a specific manner, evidence of any unindicted prior acts committed in an entirely different manner is inadmissible as direct evidence of the offense charged. An indictment that charges the defendant with committing the offense on and between certain dates, the exact date being to the grand jurors unknown, sufficiently specifies a date. Circumstantial evidence is sufficient to authorize a finding that the offense charged occurred within the period of limitations.

Where the date alleged in the indictment is not an essential averment, evidence of similar acts occurring within the statute of limitation is evidence of the crime charged and does not fall within the ambit of the rule relating to notice of the state's intention to present evidence of similar transactions. However, it has been held that the "continuous transaction" or res gestae exception that is provided in the rule is not so broad as to cover acts committed months prior or subsequent to the offense charged, nor to acts committed almost a year after the offense charged.

In 1987, the Georgia Court of Appeals decided in Sears v. State that the statute of limitation for the offense of child molestation was not tolled because the offense was unknown due to the victim's infancy, his lack of awareness of the criminality of the defendant's alleged conduct, and/or his purported fear of the defendant. The applicable statute of limitation, § 17-3-1(c), contained no exception or condition that would toll its operation. Since there was no statutory basis for the exceptions espoused by the state, the court was compelled to give effect to the clear expression of legislative will that the prosecution had to be commenced within the period specified by the statute regardless of the victim's infancy.

Apparently recognizing the need for an exception that would toll the limitation period for certain offenses against minors, the General Assembly enacted in 1992 § 17-3-2.1, which provides that if a victim of the offense of cruelty to children or of certain sexual offenses is under 16 years of age on the date of the violation, the statute of limitation is tolled until the victim has reached the age of 16 or the violation is reported to a law enforcement agency, prosecuting attorney, or other governmental agency, whichever occurs earlier. This code section only applies to offenses occurring on or after July 1, 1992.

This enactment evinces the General Assembly's intent that the statute of limitation for certain offenses against minors should be tolled by the infancy of the victim until such time as the victim is 16 years of age. However, this legislative intent cannot be construed to establish an exception to the limitation period specified in § 17-3-1(c) for those felonies committed against minors under the age of fourteen, which predate July 1, 1992. In these cases, the victims' infancy does not toll the statute's operation, and the prosecutions must be brought within seven years. Had the General Assembly intended a different result, it could have amended § 17-3-1 to provide for tolling or omitted the date limitation from § 17-3-2.1(b).

In 1987, the General Assembly amended § 17-3-1(c) by extending the limitations period for felonies against victims under 14 years of age from four to seven years. This amendment only applied to offenses committed after July 1, 1987. Thus, for victims under 14 years of age, there could have been two applicable limitation periods: a seven-year limitation period for offenses committed after July 1, 1987, and a four-year limitation period for such offenses committed before that date.

The 1987 General Assembly drafted § 17-3-1(c) so that the age limitation specified in this provision was the same as the statutory age of consent at that time, which was 14 years of age. Thus, all molestations were subject to the same seven-year limitations period. When the age of consent specified in § 16-6-4 was increased to 16 years of age in 1995, however, the General Assembly neglected to increase the age limitation in § 17-3-1(c). Thus, the age limitation specified in § 17-3-1(c) was inconsistent with the age of consent specified in § 16-6-4. This inconsistency created disparate classes of identically-situated criminal defendants in violation of the Equal Protection Clauses of the state and federal constitutions. It created a disparity in the limitation periods applicable to identical felonies based on nothing more than the age of the victim. For instance, if a molestation victim were under the age of 14, the limitations period for the prosecution against the defendant would have been seven years, rather than four years had the victim been over that age. Although identically-situated, a defendant committing the offense against a victim under the age of 14 would have had the disadvantage of a longer limitations period for his crime than a defendant committing the same offense against an older victim. There was no apparent rational basis for this disparate treatment of identically-situated defendants.

In order to cure § 17-3-1(c)'s constitutional infirmity and to eliminate this disparate treatment, the 2002 General Assembly increased the age limitation for the seven-year limitation period from 14 to 18 years of age. The increased age limitation in this provision is now consistent with the age of consent specified in § 16-6-4. Now, all molestations are again subject to the same seven-year limitations period for acts occurring on or after July 1, 2002. The four-year limitation period is no longer applicable to such acts occurring on or after that date.

In 1992, the General Assembly with the enactment of § 24-4-60 authorized the creation of a state deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) data bank of samples obtained from convicted sex offenders in order to determine and retain the identification characteristics specific to these offenders. In 2000, the General Assembly broadened the scope of this statute by requiring the obtaining of DNA samples from all convicted felons and the storing of these samples in the data bank. An examination of these samples revealed that many matched the DNA evidence of old, unsolved rape cases. Despite this evidence, the state could not prosecute the convicted felons because the limitation periods for their crimes had expired. Remedial legislation was necessary to enable the state to use identification evidence derived from the state's DNA data bank to prosecute convicted felons for certain crimes even though the limitation periods previously established by law had expired.

Accordingly, the General Assembly eliminated the statute of limitations for any aggravated child molestation occurring on or after July 1, 2002, when DNA evidence is used to establish the identity of the accused. A sufficient portion of the physical evidence tested for DNA, however, must be preserved and available for testing by the accused. Furthermore, if the DNA evidence does not establish the identity of the accused, the limitation on the prosecution reverts to the seven-year period specified in § 17-3-1(c).

E.1. Selective Prosecution

To support a claim of selective prosecution for aggravated child molestation, the defendant must show that others generally are not prosecuted for the same misconduct and that a discriminatory motive for the prosecution exists. Without such a showing, the defendant's claim will fail.

F. Punishment

1. Child Molestation

Except as provided in § 16-6-4(b)(2), a first offense of child molestation is a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years. In addition, the first offender is subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of § 17-10-6.2, which requires the first offender to receive a mandatory split sentence including a minimum sentence of imprisonment, and § 17-10-7. Upon the first offender's incarceration, the Department of Corrections must provide counseling to him.

Except as provided in § 16-6-4(b)(2), a second or subsequent offense of child molestation is a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years or by life imprisonment. In addition, the repeat offender is subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of §§ 17-10-6.2 and 17-10-7. If the state intends to seek a punishment of life imprisonment, it must provide written notice to the repeat offender prior to trial.

Section 16-6-4(b)(2) provides a lesser punishment for a child molestation involving teenagers. If the victim was at least 14 but less than 16 years of age and the person convicted of child molestation was 18 years of age or younger and was no more than four years older than the victim, the child molestation would be punishable only as a misdemeanor and would not be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of § 17-10-6.2.

A conviction for child molestation is not inconsistent with a defendant's acquittals on charges of statutory rape and enticing a child for indecent purposes. In addition, the acquittals do not preclude the findings of fact necessary to support a conviction for child molestation as a trier of fact can believe a part of a witness' testimony and discredit other parts.

2. Aggravated Child Molestation

Except as provided in § 16-6-4(d)(2), the offense of aggravated child molestation is a felony punishable by life imprisonment or by a split sentence that is a term of imprisonment for not less than 25 years and not exceeding life imprisonment, followed by probation for life. In addition, the offender is subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of §§ 17-10-6.1 and 17-10-7, which provide for mandatory minimum sentences and sentences for life without possibility of parole in certain cases and provide restrictions on the authority of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant paroles.

Section 16-6-4(d)(2) provides a lesser punishment for an aggravated child molestation involving teenagers. In such a case, the offense of aggravated child molestation would be punishable as a misdemeanor and would not be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of § 17-10-6.1 only when (1) the victim was at least 13 but less than 16 years of age, (2) the offender was 18 years of age or younger and was no more than four years older than the victim, and (3) the basis of the aggravated child molestation charge involved an act of sodomy.

Where two charges of aggravated child molestation are indistinguishable in that all of the averments are identical, this lack of particularization permits the imposition of only one sentence. However, where the averments of each count of an indictment refer to a different date, the date is made an essential averment of the transaction, and each count of the indictment is distinguishable. Thus, where the defendant is charged in two counts with having committed separate acts of child molestation upon the same victim on different dates in different years, sentence may be imposed on both counts. Moreover, sequential but separate acts of child molestation against the same victim will support separate convictions.

3. Constitutional Issues

In Odett v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court held that there was a rational basis for treating child molestation based on an act of sodomy differently from child molestation based on an act of intercourse. Contrary to the defendant's contention, the court found no legal or factual support for the argument that oral sodomy was less intrusive to the victim than intercourse and, therefore, deserving of similar treatment in child molestation cases. The General Assembly could have reasonably concluded that the psychological well-being of a minor was more damaged by an act of sodomy than by an act of intercourse and that child molestation based on an act of sodomy warranted a greater punishment. Thus, the different treatment did not violate the defendant's equal protection and due process rights under the federal and state constitutions.

In Widner v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court held that the defendant's mandatory minimum sentence for aggravated child molestation did not violate his constitutional right of privacy. The defendant's act of sodomy with the minor was not protected by any privacy right.

The Due Process Clause is not violated where a trial court declines to permit the jury to be made aware during the guilt phase of the trial that, if found guilty of aggravated child molestation, the defendant would be required by law to be imprisoned for a minimum number of years without any possibility of early release.

Since the societal consensus in Georgia or the United States does not oppose sentencing youthful offenders convicted of violent offenses to long terms of incarceration, the Georgia Supreme Court has concluded that application of the mandatory minimum sentencing scheme to a youthful sexual offender, even in the face of an excellent prognosis for rehabilitation, does not violate the constitutional prohibition against the imposition of cruel and unusual punishment.

In Humphrey v. Wilson, the Georgia Supreme Court concluded that the habeas court properly ruled that the teenage offender's sentence of ten years in prison for having consensual oral sex with a fifteen-year-old girl when he was only seventeen years old constituted cruel and unusual punishment. The court found that recent legislative amendments, substituting misdemeanor punishment for the teenage offender's conduct in place of felony punishment and relieving such teenage offenders from registering as sex offenders, represented a seismic shift in the General Assembly's view of the gravity of oral sex between two willing teenage participants. Acknowledging that no one had a better sense of the evolving standards of decency in this state than our elected representatives, the court concluded that the amendments to §§ 16-6-4 and 42-1-12 reflected a decision by the people of this state that the severe felony punishment and sex offender registration imposed on the teenage offender made no measurable contribution to acceptable goals of punishment. Notwithstanding society's significant interest in protecting children from premature sexual activity, the court further acknowledged that the teenage offender's crime did not rise to the level of culpability of adults who prey on children and that, for the law to punish the teenage offender as it would an adult, with the extraordinarily harsh punishment of ten years in prison without the possibility of probation or parole, appeared to be grossly disproportionate to his crime. Accordingly, the Georgia Supreme Court, considering the nature of the teenager offender's offense, concluded that his ten-year sentence did not further a legitimate penological goal and thus, since the sentence was grossly disproportionate to his crime, constituted cruel and unusual punishment under both the state and federal constitutions. Because the minimum punishment for the crime for which the teenage offender was convicted constituted cruel and unusual punishment, the court remanded the case to the habeas court for it to enter an order reversing his conviction and sentence and discharging him from custody.

4. Similar Transaction Evidence

The trial court may consider the similar transaction evidence presented at trial in determining the defendant's sentence.

The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. As such, there is no requirement that the offender be given notice that he will have to register as a sexual offender.

The sexual offender registration requirement is not a punishment. Consequently, a lifetime registration requirement does not extend the maximum sentence allowed under § 16-6-4. Additionally, the registration requirements must be met regardless of whether they are included as a term of probation. Thus, the trial judge is not required to confine the sexual offender registration requirements to the sentencing parameters of the offense for which the defendant is convicted nor is the trial judge authorized to do so as the registration requirements are statutory, not subject to the trial judge's discretion.

G. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

On the facts of a particular case, child molestation may be an lesser included offense of sodomy. Similarly, public indecency and simple battery may be lesser included offenses of child molestation, depending upon allegations of the indictment and the facts established by the prosecution.

Although the evidence shows that several acts of child molestation were committed at the same time and place, the offenses do not merge where none of the evidence supporting each count of child molestation is used up in proving a different count.

The statutory rape and child molestation statutes are part of a legislative framework aimed at protecting children from sexual exploitation and abuse. As part of a coordinated scheme relating to the same subject matter, the Georgia Supreme Court found in Dixon v. State that these statutes had to be construed together to determine how the General Assembly intended to treat conduct involving a victim who was 14 or 15 years of age and a defendant who was no more than three years older than the victim. Construing these statutes together as they appeared in the Code in 2004 showed a clear legislative intent to prosecute such conduct as misdemeanor statutory rape rather than felony child molestation. First, in 1996 the General Assembly amended the statutory rape statute specifically to eliminate any discretion over whether to punish conduct meeting the misdemeanor statutory rape criteria as either felony or misdemeanor statutory rape. When the General Assembly eliminated this discretion, it intended the misdemeanor provision to have exclusive application to conduct falling within its parameters. Allowing the state to retain the discretion to prosecute the same conduct as either misdemeanor statutory rape or felony child molestation would have defeated this legislative intent. Second, since the misdemeanor statutory rape provision was far more specific concerning such conduct than the child molestation statute, this more specific provision should have prevailed over the general statute and any prosecution should have proceeded under this provision. Third, the misdemeanor statutory rape provision reflected the most recent legislative judgment regarding the appropriate punishment for such conduct. Since the General Assembly most recently declared that sex between teenagers less than three years apart should have been punished as misdemeanor statutory rape, and not felony child molestation, that judgment would have to prevail. Finally, given the conflict between the two statutes concerning their prescribed punishments, the rule of lenity would require that a defendant receive only the lesser of the two possible punishments.

Notwithstanding this construction in Dixon, the Georgia Supreme Court encouraged the General Assembly to examine this case and make a more recognizable distinction between statutory rape, child molestation, and the other sexual crimes, and to clarify the sort of conduct that would qualify for the minimum sentence accompanying a conviction for aggravated child molestation. The court stated that the conflicting nature of the statutory scheme relating to sexual conduct, especially with respect to teenagers, might lead to inconsistent results. Under the statutes as they appeared in 2004, it was entirely possible that teenagers could have been convicted of aggravated child molestation and received the concomitant ten-year minimum sentence, if they willingly engaged in sexual activity, but stopped short of the actual act of sexual intercourse, so long as one experienced slight pain or received even minor injuries incidental to the act.

In 2006, the General Assembly responded to the court's concern about the conflict and lack of clarity in this statutory scheme. It prescribed, in accord with the statutory rape statute, misdemeanor punishment for teenagers within a certain age range who willingly engage in sexual activity that constitutes child molestation or aggravated child molestation. Moreover, the General Assembly explicitly provided that an act of sodomy is the sort of conduct that would qualify for misdemeanor punishment accompanying a teenager's conviction for aggravated child molestation. By limiting the sexual activity that can serve as the basis of a charge of misdemeanor aggravated child molestation to an act of sodomy, the General Assembly is expressing a clear legislative intent that an act of sexual intercourse between teenagers within a certain age range does not qualify as aggravated child molestation. Rather, the misdemeanor statutory rape provision would apply exclusively to such sexual activity.

Child molestation may be a lesser included offense of statutory rape. However, the offense of child molestation does not merge into the offense of statutory rape where the evidence shows that the defendant fondled the victim and, in an entirely separate incident later that evening, raped her. Likewise, the offenses do not merge where the evidence shows that the child molestation was complete when the defendant without regard to his subsequent acts removed the clothing of the victim with the requisite intent, and where the evidence shows that the statutory rape was not initiated until the defendant without regard to his previous acts began to engage in sexual intercourse with the underage victim.

The offense of child molestation may be included as a matter of fact in an indictment charging the offense of rape, where the victim is under the age of consent. In such a case it is reversible error to refuse to give a requested charge on child molestation as a lesser included offense of the rape charge. However, a defendant is not entitled to a jury instruction on child molestation as a lesser included offense of rape where the jury is only authorized by the evidence to find the defendant either guilty or not guilty of rape.

Although child molestation becomes included within rape as a matter of fact if the victim is under the age of consent, child molestation is not included within rape as a matter of law because, unlike rape, child molestation requires proof that the victim was under the age of consent. If a rape indictment does not allege that the victim was under the age of consent, the defendant has not been placed on notice that he should be prepared to defend himself against the charges of both rape and child molestation. Without such notice, the trial court is not authorized, sua sponte, to instruct the jury on child molestation as a lesser included offense of rape. If the trial court so instructs jury and the jury convicts the defendant of the lesser included offense of child molestation, due process will not allow the conviction to stand.

The offense of child molestation does not merge with the offense of aggravated assault with intent to rape where the evidence shows that after the defendant pulled the victim's panties down and exposed his penis, he attempted to penetrate the victim's vagina with his penis.

Where the child molestation count of an indictment alleges actions that are factually contained in the attempted rape count, the child molestation offense merges into the attempted rape offense as a matter of fact. While the defendant can be prosecuted for both offenses, if he is convicted of both, the trial court must merge the child molestation conviction into the attempted rape conviction for sentencing purposes.

Statutory rape may be a lesser included offense of aggravated child molestation where both offenses are in fact based upon the same, single act of sexual intercourse.

The offense of aggravated child molestation merges as a matter of fact into the offense of rape, where the evidence shows that the injuries the victim sustained as a result of the rape are the same injuries that serve as the basis for the offense of aggravated child molestation. However, an aggravated child molestation conviction would not merge as a matter of fact into a rape conviction for sentencing purposes, where the evidence shows that the defendant sexually assaulted the victim twice.

Child molestation and incest do not merge as a matter of fact where the evidence shows that the defendant committed the indecent and immoral acts of lifting his minor daughter's nightgown and lying on top of her immediately before committing the incestuous act of intercourse.

The offense of child molestation does not merge into the offense of aggravated sodomy where the offenses are based on separate acts. Where the evidence establishes only one act of sodomy, the proof of which is necessary to prove the child molestation count as alleged in an indictment, the offense of sodomy is included as a matter of fact in the offense of child molestation. Where a victim testifies to several consecutive acts of sodomy and to yet another entirely separate act of sodomy, all of which occurred one morning, this evidence would authorize a jury to find that more than one instance of sodomy occurred, permitting conviction for both aggravated child molestation and aggravated sodomy based on separate occasions. Where the evidence establishes two incidents, each involving only one act of sodomy, and where the same act of sodomy is the basis of an aggravated child molestation charge and an aggravated sodomy charge in each of two indictments, it is proper to prosecute the defendant in both indictments for both aggravated child molestation and aggravated sodomy, but he should be convicted and sentenced under each indictment for only one of the two rather than for both.

Where the defendant's conduct satisfies the elements of aggravated child molestation, the state is not required to prosecute only the lesser crime of simple sodomy. It may prosecute the defendant under any or all statutes that fit his conduct.

Child molestation and aggravated child molestation do not merge as a matter of fact or law where each transaction constitutes a separate offense since each is established by proof of different facts, i.e., each offense is a completed crime when the next is perpetrated upon the victim. Likewise, two counts of child molestation that are supported by different facts constitute separate offenses, so that the two counts do not merge as a matter of fact or law.

A trial court is authorized to charge the jury on child molestation as a lesser included offense of aggravated child molestation so long as the charge is supported by the evidence and the indictment sufficiently places the defendant on notice of the conduct which he must defend at trial.

Since a jury verdict finding the defendant guilty of the lesser included offense of attempted aggravated child molestation would not constitute an implicit acquittal on the greater offense of aggravated child molestation, subsequent prosecution on the greater offense would not be barred by double jeopardy. A jury verdict returned on a greater offense instruction sufficiently erroneous so as to demand retrial could not be deemed an unambiguous verdict that would bar retrial. Furthermore, the failure to file a written plea in bar before the second trial would operate as a waiver of a subsequent challenge on procedural double jeopardy grounds.

In Taylor v. State, the court held that the offense of kidnapping with bodily harm was proved by showing asportation of the victim and the blow to his head, and was completed prior to the sodomy. Thus, there was no merger as a matter of fact because the facts used to prove the crime of aggravated child molestation were different from those used to show the essential elements of kidnapping.

Where the offense of false imprisonment can be proved by facts different from the offense of child molestation, the two offenses do not merge.

The offense of cruelty to children is separate and distinct from the offense of aggravated child molestation as matter of fact, where the evidence used to establish cruelty to children is not used to establish the aggravated child molestation.

Where the offense constituting cruelty to children is based upon and committed in a way different from the offenses of child molestation and assault with intent to rape and is not satisfied by the introduction of the same evidence, there is no merger and the trial court may enter a separate conviction on cruelty to children.

Where the evidence shows either the commission of the completed offense of child molestation or the commission of no offense, there is no error in the trial court's failure to charge the jury on the lesser offenses of battery and simple battery.

The offenses of child molestation and sexual battery have different elements and protect different classifications of victims. Accordingly, the offense of sexual battery is not included in the offense of child molestation as a matter of law. Where the indictment in a case is narrowly tailored to the offense of child molestation and where the evidence presented at trial supports that offense, sexual battery is not included in child molestation as a matter of fact. However, in a case where the facts alleged in the indictment for child molestation also include all of the elements of sexual battery, sexual battery can be a lesser included offense of child molestation as a matter of fact. A charge on sexual battery as a lesser included offense of child molestation is required when the indictment puts the defendant on notice that he could be convicted of the lesser included offense and the evidence presented at trial is sufficient to establish the lesser included offense consistent with these averments.

Where the evidence is sufficient to convict the defendant of either child molestation or sexual battery, the trial court would be authorized to merge the lesser offense of sexual battery into the greater offense of child molestation.

The rule of lenity applies when two statutes governing the same conduct are conflicting with respect to their prescribed punishments, i.e., where one statute punishes the conduct as a misdemeanor while the other statute punishes the same conduct as a felony. In such a situation, a defendant would be entitled to have the lesser of two penalties administered. This rule would be inapplicable, however, in a case where the defendant was found guilty of both child molestation and sexual battery arising out of the same conduct involving the victim. Since both crimes are felonies, different grades of punishment would not be involved. Furthermore, there would be no uncertainty concerning the applicable penal statute to be used in sentencing the defendant. Thus, the trial court's merging of a sexual battery conviction into a child molestation conviction for sentencing purposes would not be error.

The offense of sexual battery is committed when the defendant intentionally makes nonconsensual, physical contact with the intimate body parts of another, not when another makes physical contact with the defendant's intimate body parts. Thus, letting a child touch one's penis would not constitute sexual battery, and evidence of such conduct would not warrant a charge on sexual battery as a lesser included offense of child molestation. Furthermore, where the evidence shows sexual activity rather than mere touching, a charge on sexual battery would not be warranted.

The offenses of child molestation and aggravated sexual battery do not merge where the two offenses are alleged in separate counts of an indictment and each count alleges actions that are not factually or legally contained in the other count and where the evidence presented at trial supports each of the separate actions. Where there is no evidence of such separate actions, however, the offenses merge as a matter of fact.

Enticing a child for indecent purposes has an asportation element not found in either criminal attempt or child molestation. Child molestation and enticement are separate offenses, and the combination of attempt with child molestation does not bring it within the purview of enticement. However, if the enticement count of an indictment specifically alleges that the defendant enticed the child for the purpose of child molestation, in order to prove the enticement count, the prosecution must prove all the facts used to prove the child molestation count. Therefore, the offenses merge as a matter of fact and the defendant cannot be convicted and sentenced for both. If both counts do not contain the same factual allegations, there is no merger. Thus, where the defendant obtains a directed verdict on the enticement count, neither collateral estoppel nor res judicata nor double jeopardy will preclude his conviction on the child molestation count.

If requested by the defendant, a charge on public indecency as a lesser included offense of child molestation is required where the indictment put the defendant on notice that he could be convicted of the lesser included offense and the evidence presented at trial was sufficient to establish the lesser included offense consistent with averments in the indictment. The failure to give such a charge, however, would constitute harmless error where there is overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt of child molestation.

Contributing to the delinquency of a minor is not included in the offense of child molestation as a matter of law or fact since the two offenses share no essential elements and are directed to different acts. Consequently, proof of one offense would not serve to prevent conviction on the other. Accordingly, there would be no error in refusing to charge the jury on the separate offense of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

III. Enticing Child for Indecent Purposes

A. Elements

Section 16-6-5, enticing a child for indecent purposes, punishes certain activity directed toward committing the crime of child molestation. One commits the offense when he or she "solicits, entices, or takes" a child under the age of 16 years to any place for the purpose of molesting the child or committing indecent acts. As the language of the statute suggests, the gist of the offense is the taking, enticing, alluring, or persuading of the child; the act of molesting the child is not an element of § 16-6-5.

The crime of enticing a child for indecent purposes requires the showing of a joint operation of the act of enticing a child and the intention to commit acts of indecency or child molestation. Although the jury can infer the prohibited intent from the subsequent molestation of the child, acts occurring after the enticement do not establish the crime. There must be evidence that the defendant did, in fact, entice or take the child if the defendant is to be convicted of enticing a child for indecent purposes.

Any unlawful asportation, however slight, is sufficient to show the "taking" element of the offense of enticing a child for indecent purposes. This element is satisfied whether the "taking" involves physical force, enticement, or persuasion. The concept of asportation relates to movement. Thus, there must be evidence that the defendant caused the child to move towards a place for indecent purposes. Where there is evidence of luring and/or enticing there need be no evidence of actual molestation.

The statute does not define the term "indecent act." However, because the statute refers to both indecent acts and child molestation, it would be reasonable to assume that "indecent acts" are different from those acts punished by the child molestation statute. Even though the meaning of "indecent acts" is not clear, the predecessor to the statute, which stated the prohibited purpose as that of taking "immoral, improper, or indecent liberties" with the child, was upheld against a claim that the statute was unconstitutionally vague.

The drafting committee apparently intended to retain the rule that neither consent nor lack of knowledge of the child's age constitutes a defense to prosecution under the statute.

The General Assembly, by enacting § 16-6-5, intended to protect children in this state under the age of 16 from sexual predators and offenders. From this perspective, it is obvious that the most reasonable interpretation of the statute, and the only one that does not result in unreasonable or absurd consequences, is that this statute criminalizes the act of enticement of a child for indecent purposes when perpetrated on any child under the age of 16, not just the legitimate descendants of the offender. To construe otherwise would lead to the absurd result of de-criminalizing the enticement of a step-child, an illegitimate child, or any other child who is not the legitimate descendant of a defendant. Such a construction was not the intention of the General Assembly. Accordingly, an indictment would not be void for failing to assert the child's relationship with the defendant as an essential element of enticement of a child for indecent purposes.

B. Attempt

An indictment charging a defendant with attempting to entice a child for indecent purposes is not subject to a general demurrer merely because it fails to allege that the attempt involved the asportation of the victim. The mere fact that asportation is an essential element of the completed crime of enticing a child for indecent purposes does not mean that it is indispensable in proving criminal attempt. The relevant question is whether the acts alleged in the indictment constitute a substantial step toward the commission of the crime. What constitutes a substantial step is a question of degree, and depends upon the circumstances of each case. Where it cannot be said as a matter of law that the alleged acts do not constitute a substantial step, the indictment is not fatally defective for failure to allege the commission of a crime.

C. Venue

The crime of enticing a child for indecent purposes is complete when the child is enticed with the requisite intent, regardless of the ultimate site whereat the enticer contemplates that the act of indecency or child molestation is to be perpetrated. Thus, in order to prove venue, the prosecution must show that the child was "enticed" with the requisite intent in the county wherein the defendant is being prosecuted. It is immaterial that the evidence also shows that the defendant actually took the child into a county other than that wherein he is being prosecuted.

C.1. Admissibility of Evidence

Even if a child has had sexual conversations with others, such evidence would not support an inference that the defendant therefore could have reasonably believed that she consented to his crime of enticing her for indecent purposes. Thus, refusing to allow the defendant to question the victim about such purported conversations would not be error.

D. Punishment

Except as provided in § 16-6-5(c), the offense of enticing a child for indecent purposes is a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years. In addition, the offender is subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of § 17-10-6.2, which requires the offender to receive a mandatory split sentence including a minimum sentence of imprisonment.

Section 16-6-5(c) provides a lesser punishment where the enticement for indecent purposes involves teenagers. If the victim was at least 14 but less than 16 years of age and the person convicted of enticing a child for indecent purposes was 18 years of age or younger and was no more than four years older than the victim, the enticement of a child for indecent purposes would be punishable only as a misdemeanor and would not be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of § 17-10-6.2.

E. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

On the facts of a particular case, enticing a child for indecent purposes may be a lesser included offense of kidnapping.

Enticing a child for indecent purposes has an asportation element not found in either criminal attempt or child molestation. Child molestation and enticement are separate offenses, and the combination of attempt with child molestation does not bring it within the purview of enticement. However, if the enticement count of an indictment specifically alleges that the defendant enticed the child for the purpose of child molestation, in order to prove the enticement count, the prosecution must prove all the facts used to prove the child molestation count.

Therefore, the offenses merge as a matter of fact and the defendant cannot be convicted and sentenced for both. If both counts do not contain the same factual allegations, there is no merger. Thus, where the defendant obtains a directed verdict on the enticement count, neither collateral estoppel nor res judicata nor double jeopardy will preclude his conviction on the child molestation count.

IV. Child Hearsay Statute

The Child Hearsay Statute provides that a statement made by a child under the age of 14 years describing any act of sexual contact or physical abuse performed with or on the child by another or performed with or on another in the presence of the child is admissible in evidence by the testimony of the person or persons to whom made if the child is available to testify in the proceedings and the trial court finds that the circumstances of the statement provide sufficient indicia of reliability. Thus, the statute's only limitations on the admissibility of the evidence are the child's availability to testify and the sufficiency of the indicia of reliability surrounding the statement. The child's veracity need not be at issue nor does the child need to be unresponsive for the evidence to be admitted at trial.

The fact that the child was not under the age of 14 at the time her statement was made does not affect the admissibility of the witness's testimony as a prior consistent statement, if the child's veracity has been placed in issue, and the child is present at trial and thoroughly cross-examined about the truthfulness of her statement.

There is no requirement in the Child Hearsay Statute that the state provide the defense with pretrial notice of its intention to introduce child hearsay statements in evidence.

The trial court is not required to make a finding of necessity before admitting a child hearsay statement into evidence. Although the trial court can conduct a hearing outside the presence of the jury to determine whether the circumstances of the statement provide sufficient indicia of reliability before receiving testimony concerning that statement, the trial court is not required to make that determination prior to receiving the testimony. However, when the state seeks to support its argument for reliability with inadmissible testimony, the trial court is required to conduct a separate hearing outside the presence of the jury to avoid the presentation of this inadmissible testimony.

The statutory requirement of "sufficient indicia of reliability" can otherwise be met if, after both parties have rested at trial, the record contains competent evidence which would support a finding of reliability. The factors which the trial court may consider in determining reliability, when applicable, include but are not limited to the following: (1) the atmosphere and circumstances under which the statement was made (including the time, the place, and the people present thereat); (2) the spontaneity of the child's statement to the persons present; (3) the child's age; (4) the child's general demeanor; (5) the child's condition (physical or emotional); (6) the presence or absence of threats or promise of benefits; (7) the presence or absence of drugs or alcohol; (8) the child's general credibility; (9) the presence or absence of any coaching by parents or other third parties before or at the time of the child's statement, and the type of coaching and circumstances surrounding the same; and, the nature of the child's statement and type of language used therein; and (10) the consistency between repeated out-of-court statements by the child. Any alleged inconsistencies in the victim's statements, however, would be a matter for the jury's consideration in weighing the evidence, not a matter of admissibility.

Where the defendant has a sufficient opportunity to contest the indicia of reliability as to the out-of-court statements of the child through extensive cross-examination of the witness, there is no requirement for expert testimony to establish the reliability of the child's out-of-court statements. Further, the question of a particular child's credibility is not properly the subject of expert testimony as it is reserved for the jury.

A trial court's expression of opinion in an unrequested, gratuitous recitation of the Child Hearsay Statute that the child's statement had sufficient indicia of reliability could influence the jurors conclusions about the truth of the victim's statements. This expression of opinion, at least impliedly, as to the veracity of the victim would be improper under § 17-8-57 and would require reversal.

The trial court is not required to determine the competency of a child witness during an investigative interview before the substance of that interview can be admitted into evidence.

By its terms, the Child Hearsay Statute allows the prosecution to satisfy its burden of proof under certain circumstances by introducing the alleged victim's hearsay declarations without putting the victim on the stand. If the prosecution invokes the Child Hearsay Statute to introduce out-of-court declarations by the alleged victim, before the state rests, the trial court must, at the request of either party, cause the alleged victim to take the stand. The trial court must then inform the jury that it is the court who has called the child as a witness, and that both parties have the opportunity to examine the child. The trial court must then allow both parties to examine and cross-examine the child as though the Child Hearsay Statute has not been invoked. If the child testifies before the jury and is subject to cross-examination, there is no violation of the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confront witnesses. That the defendant chooses not to cross-examine the victim does not alter the result; it is the opportunity, not the follow-through, that is the determinative factor. Even if the child is unresponsive to a number of questions as put by the defendant, there is still no violation of the defendant's constitutional confrontation right so as to require that the child's out-of-court statements be stricken. If the child actually testifies in the case, the witness's testimony concerning the child's out-of-court statements is otherwise admissible. There is no requirement that the child's testimony corroborate the witness's testimony concerning the out-of-court statements. If after this examination and cross-examination of the child the trial court finds the victim "qualified" to testify, the court is not required to conduct a competency hearing itself.

With this procedure, the defendant would not be placed in the position of calling the alleged victim to the stand in order to exercise his rights under the Sixth Amendment, and thereby possibly causing the jurors to resent the defendant for forcing the child to take the stand and undergo cross-examination.

Conflicts between the statement and the testimony of the child at trial would not necessarily render the former inadmissible, but would rather present a question of credibility of the witness to be resolved by the trier of fact.

The Child Hearsay Statute also applies to the out-of-court statements made by a child under the age of 14 concerning the sexual abuse that he or she may have suffered, regardless of whether or not the child is the actual victim in the case. However, if the child is not available to testify, his statements do not fall within the hearsay exception and are not admissible.

In 1993, the Georgia Court of Appeals held that statements made by the victim to the witness about sexual contact between the defendant and another child was not admissible evidence under the Child Hearsay Statute. That statute provided an exception to the hearsay rule only for statements concerning acts of sexual conduct or physical abuse performed on the child making the statement. In 1995, the General Assembly amended the Child Hearsay Statute apparently in response to this holding to provide that statements made by a child concerning sexual contact between the defendant and another child, which was performed in the child's presence, are admissible as an exception to the hearsay rule. In 1998, however, the Georgia Supreme Court struck down this amendment because it found that it created disparate classes of identically-situated criminal defendants in violation of the Equal Protection Clauses of the state and federal constitutions. The 1995 amendment created a disparity in the substantive evidence admissible against criminal defendants charged with identical acts of molestation, based on nothing more than the age of the hearsay declarant. If the declarant were under the age of 14, more evidence would have been admissible against the defendant than if the declarant were over that age. The court found no rational basis for the disparity created by the amended statute. Since the court has struck down this amendment as unconstitutional, it cannot be used as a basis for admitting a child's statements as a witness to sexual conduct committed in his presence.

Statements made by a victim to a witness about sexual contact between the defendant and another child are not admissible under the Child Hearsay Statute, where the victim did not witness the sexual contact. The admission of the statements, however, would constitute harmless error where they are cumulative of other properly admitted testimony concerning the sexual contact.

Furthermore, portions of a handwritten note and a videotaped interview in which the declarant stated that the victim told the declarant that the defendant had sexual contact with the victim constitutes double hearsay inadmissible under the Child Hearsay Statute, since the declarant did not witness the sexual contact involving the victim. However, in light of other properly admitted cumulative evidence of the sexual contact, the erroneous admission of the handwritten note and videotaped interview would not necessitate reversal.

A prior act of molestation committed against the child of a witness, who has been permitted to relate statements made by the child about sexual acts committed against the victims, is relevant to show any possible bias against the accused child molester that the witness may entertain, unconsciously or deliberately.

Child hearsay statements obtained through an interpreter, rather than directly from the victim, are admissible. Answers communicated through an interpreter are made to the person asking the question, despite the existence of an interpreter.

If a defendant's directions to a victim about what he wanted the victim to do were an integral part of his offenses, they are admissible as part of the res gestae. In such a case, a witness's testimony regarding what the victim said the defendant told her to do is admissible.

Under the Child Hearsay Statute, a tape recording of an interview between the victim and a social worker is not susceptible to a hearsay objection. A videotape of an interview between the victim and a police officer is admissible where the videotape provides sufficient indicia of reliability. Any inconsistency in the child's statements during the interview does not invalidate the interview but is simply one of the many factors the trial court is required to consider in determining threshold reliability. Also, any conflict between the statements and trial testimony does not render the statements inadmissible but rather presents a question of credibility to be resolved by the jury.

Testimony concerning the techniques used in a videotaped interview of the victim involves an area of expertise beyond the ken of the average layman and, therefore, the defendant in a child molestation case is entitled to introduce expert testimony for the limited purpose of providing the jury with information about proper techniques for interviewing children and whether the interviewing techniques actually utilized were proper. The fact that this testimony indirectly involves the child's credibility does not render it inadmissible.

There is no requirement that a child be placed under oath prior to the videotaping of an out-of-court interview in order for this documentary evidence, which contains a contemporaneous record of the child's statements, to be admissible. The playing of the videotape at trial does not constitute an impermissible bolstering of the victim's testimony. Audio and videotape interviews with the victim are not depositions, and therefore, the state is not required to notify the defendant before the interviews are conducted.

Allowing the jury to replay the victim's videotaped interview in the jury room during its deliberations, over the objection of defense counsel, violates the continuing witness rule. This error is harmful if the trial court has failed to caution the jurors against placing undue emphasis on the videotape or to place any limits on the number of times or manner in which they should view it and if the other evidence against the defendant is not overwhelming.

There is nothing in the language of the Child Hearsay Statute to suggest that the General Assembly's intent was that only adults could present testimony under the statute; instead, any competent person may present such testimony. Nothing in the statute restricts the statement to use solely in connection with the specific allegation for which the defendant is on trial. The statement may be admitted as similar transaction evidence. Nothing in the statute limits the number of statements that may be introduced. Thus, the state may introduce any number of the victim's prior consistent statements.

The Child Hearsay Statute applies not only in cases where the defendant is indicted for offenses requiring proof of sexual contact or physical abuse. It is also applies in cases where the sexual contact between the victim and the perpetrator is merely verbal. Accordingly, the descriptions by child victims of their sexual enticement or solicitation by the defendant would involve sexual contact for purposes of the hearsay statute. The admission of videotaped interviews of such victims would, therefore, be appropriate under the statute.

In White v. Illinois, the defendant was convicted by a jury of aggravated criminal sexual assault of a four-year-old child. The child never testified at the defendant's trial. Others were permitted to testify regarding the child's out-of-court statements describing the assault. The defendant objected to admission of their testimony on hearsay grounds. The United States Supreme Court held that permitting the challenged testimony did not violate the defendant's Sixth Amendment Confrontation Clause right. The Confrontation Clause does not require that, before a trial court admits such testimony under the "spontaneous declaration" and "medical examination" exceptions to the hearsay rule, the prosecution must either produce the declarant at trial or the trial court must find that the declarant is unavailable. Where proffered hearsay has sufficient guarantees of reliability to come within a firmly rooted exception to the hearsay rule, the Confrontation Clause is satisfied.

V. Testimony of Youthful Witnesses

Legislation has been enacted to protect youthful witnesses in trials of sex offenses. In any criminal trial where a person under 16 is testifying concerning any sex offense, the trial court must clear the courtroom of all persons except parties to the action and their immediate families, attorneys and their secretaries, court officers, jurors, court reporters, and the media. A familiar person may be allowed to sit or stand near a youthful witness during his testimony.

Additionally, in trials where a child who is 10 years of age or younger is alleged to have been the victim of cruelty to children, rape, statutory rape, child molestation, aggravated child molestation, or sexual assault while in the custody of another, a statute provides that the trial court may order that the child's testimony be taken outside the courtroom and shown in the courtroom by means of a two-way closed circuit television. An order may be granted only if (1) the testimony is taken during the criminal trial proceeding, and (2) the judge determines that testimony by the child victim in the courtroom will result in the child's suffering serious emotional distress such that the child cannot reasonably communicate. The statute also provides who may question the child and who may be in the room with the child during his testimony. During the child's testimony, the defendant will be in the courtroom and will be allowed to communicate with the persons in the room where the child is testifying by any appropriate electronic method.

In Kentucky v. Stincer, the United States Supreme Court held that because the defendant had the opportunity for full and effective cross-examination of the two child witnesses during trial, and because of the nature of the competency hearing, the defendant's rights under the Confrontation Clause and under the Due Process Clause were not violated by his exclusion from the competency hearing of the two children.

In Coy v. Iowa, the United States Supreme Court held that a one-way screen which is specifically designed to enable the complaining witnesses to avoid viewing the defendant as they give their testimony violated the defendant's right to a face to face encounter. However, in Ortiz v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court held that the mere fact that the trial court used its discretion in allowing the victims to sit at an angle where they would not have to directly face the defendant in no way violated the defendant's constitutional right to confrontation. The defendant had the full opportunity to confront each victim with a thorough and sifting cross-examination and to expose each victim to the court and jury.

In Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, the case involved a parent's sexual abuse of his minor child. The United States Supreme Court held that the compulsory process clause of the United States Constitution does not give a defendant the right to discover the names of potential witnesses or favorable evidence. The rights under the compulsory process provision are better analyzed under the due process clause of the Constitution. In this case the court held that the state's confidential child abuse information may be kept from the defendant subject only to an in-camera inspection by the trial judge.

In the unusual circumstance in which a spouse is also the minor victim, the victim/spouse's testimony can be compelled concerning the crime of statutory rape for which the defendant/spouse is charged.

VI. Civil Liability

Any civil action for recovery of damages suffered as a result of childhood sexual abuse must be commenced within five years of the date the plaintiff attains the age of majority.

A charge to the jury on the inability of a child under 14 years of age to consent to sexual intercourse may be relevant in criminal cases involving a child's ability to consent to criminal acts, but it is not relevant in civil negligence cases involving a 13-year-old child's ability to appreciate dangers of his environment and to avoid consequences associated with exposure to such dangers. Under such circumstances, the matter of a child's ability to appreciate dangers of the environment is ordinarily left as a question of fact for the jury rather than as a matter of law for the trial court.

A failure by a county agency handling the cases of sexually abused and exploited children to follow its sexual abuse and exploitation protocol does not constitute an affirmative or other defense to prosecution of a sexual abuse or exploitation offense, nor does a failure by the agency to follow the protocol give rise to a civil cause of action.

VII. Registration of Convicted Child Sexual Offenders

In 1996, the United States Congress enacted a provision which provides for the release of information to the public about convicted sexual offenders. This enactment is commonly referred to as Megan's Law, named after Megan Kanka, a seven-year-old child who was sexually assaulted and murdered by a convicted sexual offender who lived in her neighborhood. Georgia's Megan's Law provides that the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or any sheriff maintaining records required by the state sexual offender registry statute must, in addition to the requirement to inform the public of the presence of sexual offenders in each community, release such other relevant information collected pursuant to this statute that is necessary to protect the public from these sexual offenders. Each sheriff has the authority to determine what that information will be and in what manner it will be released. The United States Supreme Court has found such a notification system to be a civil, nonpunitive regulatory measure. Therefore, its retroactive application would not violate the Ex Post Facto Clause of the federal constitution.

When a person, who has been convicted of a crime for which he is required to register as a sexual offender under § 42-1-12, makes his first report to a sheriff after his release from confinement, placement on probation, or upon establishing residency in the county, the sheriff must cause a notice of that person's conviction and release from confinement to be published. The notice must contain the convicted person's photograph taken at the time of his arrest; his name and address; the date, time, and place of arrest, if available; and the disposition of the case. The notice must be published at or near the time the person registers with the sheriff at least once, and, at the sheriff's option, may be published more than once, in the legal organ of the appropriate county. The notice must also include the address of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation website for additional information regarding the state sexual offender registry.

The state sexual offender registry statute would apply to a defendant convicted of criminal attempt to commit child molestation and criminal attempt to entice a child for indecent purposes, even though no actual minor was involved in the attempt. Interpreting the statute to require an actual minor in a criminal attempt is not supported by either the plain language of § 42-1-12(a)(4)(B) [now (a)(9)(B)] or the underlying legislative intent. Furthermore, an actual minor is not a required element in an attempt to commit these offenses. The defendant's intent and his substantial steps toward the commission of these offenses establish the criminal attempt even if it is impossible to complete the intended offenses because the targeted victim is an adult male police officer posing in an Internet sting operation as a 14-year-old girl looking for pen pals, rather than an actual minor.

VIII. Residency, Employment, and Loitering Restrictions of Registered Sexual Offenders

No registered sexual offender may reside within 1,000 feet of any child care facility, church, school, or area where minors congregate. In addition, no registered sexual offender may be employed by or volunteer at any child care facility, school, or church or by or at any business or entity that is located within 1,000 feet of a child care facility, a school, or a church. Finally, no sexually dangerous predator may be employed by or volunteer at any business or entity that is located within 1,000 feet of an area where minors congregate.

Notwithstanding any county or municipal ordinance or resolution adopted pursuant to state law, no registered sexual offender may loiter, as prohibited by § 16-11-36, at any child care facility, school, or area where minors congregate.

Any registered sexual offender who knowingly violates these prohibitions is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years.

IX. Disqualification of First Offender Probationers for Employment with Schools, Child Welfare Agencies, and Child Day-Care Centers

The discharge of a first offender probationer without adjudication of guilt may be used to disqualify him for employment with a public or private school, child welfare agency, or child day-care center if he was discharged after prosecution for the offense of child molestation, sexual battery, enticing a child for indecent purposes, sexual exploitation of a child, pimping, pandering, or incest.

I. Generally

The 1968 criminal code revision had a great impact on Georgia's theft provisions. Faced with a morass of statutes which included forty-two code sections on larceny alone, the drafters eliminated such offenses as larceny of dog, larceny of oysters or shells, and theft of baled cotton and, instead, established several broad crimes. The common law of England recognized three separate theft crimes: larceny, embezzlement, and false pretenses. These common law crimes were arrested in their expansion by the courts; thus, legislative gap-filling was required to cover all of the anti-social behavior which merited punishment. This resulted in a number of statutes in Georgia, for example, designed to overcome the common law's restrictive definition of property subject to larceny and another group of statutes expanding the types of offenders who were covered by the embezzlement or fraudulent conversion provisions.

The approach taken by the revisers was twofold: first, a general theft by taking statute, § 16-8-2, was enacted to punish all those who "unlawfully take" or "being in lawful possession thereof, unlawfully appropriates any property of another with the intention of depriving him of the property, regardless of the manner in which the property is taken or appropriated." This consolidation statute had an evident purpose of abolishing the major distinction drawn by the common law between offenders who trespassed on possession (larceny) and offenders who lawfully obtained property and then converted it (embezzlement). In response to the rigid common law limitation on the property which is subject to the theft crimes, the drafters defined property in § 16-1-3(13) of the criminal code to include anything of value.

The consolidation statute itself is not without ambiguity. The drafters, while defining the crime as encompassing both unlawful taking and unlawful appropriation, do not define either phrase. The drafters apparently recognized this by stating that "[i]n some instances, conduct which will amount to an unlawful taking is obvious." Presumably, these instances include all trespasses against possession, the common law definition of larceny.

"In other instances," the drafters added, "a devious course of conduct will be so designed as to take on the appearance of legality, resulting in what should be theft." Here, the drafters were obviously referring to those who obtain title to property by deceitful means. This, under the statute, is an unlawful taking even though the victim's consent means there is no trespass to possession. This type of acquisition was formerly covered by the crime of false pretenses. The language of § 16-8-2 punishing, on the other hand, unlawful appropriation refers to the situation formerly covered by embezzlement or fraudulent conversion statutes where the offender lawfully gained possession, but not title, to property and then converted. Thus, the means of acquisition traditionally covered by larceny and false pretenses is unlawful taking, and embezzlement is unlawful appropriation. All are punished by § 16-8-2.

The second part of the drafter's scheme seems the product of caution. In its short series of specific theft crimes, the code assures that these specific means of unlawful taking or appropriation are punished by the criminal law. The drafters themselves recognized that there would be a "certain amount" of overlap between § 16-8-2 and the following sections punishing theft by deception (§ 16-8-3), theft by extortion (§ 16-8-16), theft of lost or mislaid property (§ 16-8-6), theft by receiving stolen property (§ 16-8-7), theft of services (§ 16-8-5), theft by conversion (§ 16-8-4), and theft of a trade secret (§ 16-8-13). The drafters laid this to the fact that unlawful taking was not defined in § 16-8-2. In this sense, these specific theft crimes could just as easily have been included as illustrative subsections of § 16-8-2.

Given the overlap between § 16-8-2 and the other statutes, the question naturally arises as to which statute ought to be used in a specific indictment. In Stull v. State, the defendant had obtained property by writing to the victims on false letterheads representing himself to be a business concern. The state prosecuted the defendant under § 16-8-2. The defendant appealed, claiming that any such prosecution ought to be brought under § 16-8-3, the theft by deception statute, claiming that this provision more particularly prohibited such behavior. The Georgia Supreme Court rejected this argument, stating that "[w]hile the indictment in this case . . . might more appropriately have been brought under § 26-1803 [O.C.G.A. § 16-8-3], the language of § 26-1802 [O.C.G.A. § 16-8-2] is broad enough to encompass the facts proved in this case, [and since the punishment is identical and double jeopardy would protect the defendant from multiple prosecutions or convictions] no harm was done to the accused by reason of the fact that he was not charged under § 26-1803 [O.C.G.A. § 16-8-3]."

Stull makes clear that § 16-8-3 prohibits one of the types of theft proscribed in § 16-8-2. In addition, embezzlement, punished in § 16-8-4, has also been held to be included within the broad language of § 16-8-2. It should be apparent, however, that not all of the other specific theft crimes are covered in the general statute. For example, no case has been found where receipt of stolen property has been prosecuted under § 16-8-2. The language of the latter section does not seem to embrace that kind of behavior.

It has been held that the phrase "regardless of the manner in which the property is taken or appropriated," found in the theft by taking statute, renders the statute sufficiently broad to encompass thefts or larcenies perpetrated by deception and theft by conversion. Thus, the state may indict an individual for theft by taking, yet prove the elements of theft by deception.

Although § 16-8-2 consolidates the offenses of larceny, embezzlement, and false pretenses, the elements of at least one of these traditional theft offenses must be proven for conviction under § 16-8-2. The court has also held that a defendant has the right to an indictment which informs him of the charges against him and he cannot be convicted of acts not charged. In Walker v. State, the indictment charged the defendant with unlawfully taking certain tools from the victim's car. The proof showed that the defendant was actually in lawful possession of the tools under a security agreement. Thus, when the defendant violated the security agreement by refusing to return the tools he was unlawfully appropriating them, but not unlawfully taking them. Because the proof was fatally variant from the charge, the court reversed the theft by taking conviction over a four-judge dissent. The court advised prosecutors that whenever exigencies of proof exist as to whether an offense was committed in one of two methods proscribed by a statute, the prosecution may charge the accused in separate counts of a single indictment and let the jury select which method the evidence supports.

It has been held error for a trial court to give the entire § 16-8-2 in a charge, emphasizing and explaining words in a method of commission of the offense which was not charged, and in failing to give a limiting instruction concerning which method could be considered by the jury.

II. Individual Theft Crimes

A. Theft by Taking

In addition to its role as a consolidation statute, § 16-8-2 also has its own independent significance. Most of the cases which have been prosecuted under § 16-8-2 have been what formerly would have been larceny cases. Unlike embezzlement and false pretenses cases which can be brought under either § 16-8-2 or one of the other statutes, there is no alternative section under which a larceny may be charged, except for larceny of a particular kind of property. The only other cases which appear to be brought under § 16-8-2 are those in which the state is not certain which of the other two traditional crimes, embezzlement or false pretenses, has been committed. In that case, the wisest course is to bring a prosecution under § 16-8-2 and charge the entire statutory language in the indictment.

If a defendant has (1) unlawfully taken or misappropriated and (2) carried away (3) property of another (4) with the requisite intent, he has violated § 16-8-2. Each element of the offense must be proven, just as though the defendant had been charged with common law larceny.

Unless it is alleged in an indictment charging a defendant with theft by taking that the exact date or dates of the offense are unknown to the grand jurors, the indictment must specifically identify the date of the alleged offense (if it arises out of a single occurrence) or the dates (if it arises out of a series of thefts).

The definitions contained in the Uniform Commercial Code, including the definitions of "holder in due course" and "negotiable instrument," are inapplicable to a prosecution for criminal attempt to commit theft by taking. A defendant cannot require the state to prove as additional elements of a crime requirements engrafted from another, unrelated body of law.

1. Unlawful Taking or Misappropriation

For a taking to be unlawful, it must be without the permission of the owner or other person in lawful possession. Because theft by taking is a crime against possession, a property owner may be guilty if he takes the property out of the lawful possession of another who has a lien or security interest in the property. In Henry v. State, the owner of a bicycle and suit of clothes was guilty of larceny when he stole the items from a pledgee who held them as security for the room and board she had supplied the owner. Similarly, in Ayers v. State, an owner was guilty of stealing his property from the possession of the sheriff who had lawfully seized the property under levy.

The manner in which the theft occurred is not necessarily determinative of whether the theft was an unlawful taking or an unlawful appropriation. Instead, the question is whether the defendant had the requisite intent to deprive the owner of the property at the time he received the items. In Spray v. State, the court found no variance between the allegations contained in the indictment and the proof adduced at trial. Simply because the defendant went through appropriate channels and obtained the property under color of his position as chief of police, did not mean that he could not be indicted for and found guilty of an unlawful taking. It was clear from the evidence that the defendant intended to deprive the state of its property at the time of his receipt of the items and was, thus, guilty of an unlawful taking as alleged in the indictment.

An appropriation is unlawful when a person in lawful possession of another's property appropriates that property to his own use without the permission of the owner. When a theft by taking involves the misappropriation of property, the state must prove that the property initially came into the defendant's hands lawfully. In Wilson v. State, a local government employee was indicted for the misappropriation of cash bonds and fines that he had collected for a local government. The employee argued that his motion for a directed verdict should have been granted because the state presented no evidence that he had the legal authority to collect the cash bonds and fines. Therefore, the state failed to prove that the employee came into "lawful possession" of the cash bonds and fines. The court held that the cash bonds and fines collected by the local government employee did come into his possession lawfully. Because local government officials are presumed to do their duty, the state was entitled to the unrebutted presumption that the officials had authorized the employee to collect bonds and fines in accordance with the requirements of the local government's charter.

In Stevens v. State, a GBI agent gave the defendant $600 with which he was to purchase one-half ounce of cocaine. Instead of purchasing the cocaine, the defendant fled with the money. The defendant contended that he legally possessed the money as a result of an illegal contract for the sale of drugs. However, the court stated that it was incorrect to characterize the case as an action to enforce a contract. The court held that the defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict because there was undisputed evidence that the defendant, being in lawful possession of $600, did unlawfully appropriate the money with the intention of depriving the agent of it.

In Thomas v. State, although the owner of the vehicle gave the defendant permission to drive her car during the day, she did not give him permission to keep it for several days. The owner's son testified that the last time he saw the car before it was stolen, the defendant was driving it. The court held that this evidence was sufficient to authorize the jury's finding the defendant guilty of theft by taking.

In Parker v. State, the defendant, a truck driver, was provided with a company credit card to be used only for the purchase of gasoline. A cashier befriended by the defendant testified that, with his agreement, she used the credit card to obtain cash and cigarettes from the store, while falsely indicating on the credit receipts that gas had been purchased. Both shared the misappropriated money and merchandise. In corroboration of this testimony, another driver testified that the defendant showed him how to misappropriate money with the cashier's help. The court held that the evidence amply supported the defendant's conviction for theft by taking.

2. Asportation

A second element is "asportation" or "carrying away." This element is usually easily met as it has been held that a "[l]arceny is completed when there is an asportation, however slight, and although the goods are not removed from the land of the owner." Also, the concealing of property is sufficient asportation to satisfy this requirement. In cases where a thief does not literally take and asport the subject property but causes some innocent third person to do so, the third person is deemed to act as the agent of the thief and asportation is imputed to the thief.

3. Property of Another

A third element requires that the property taken be that of another. Although an owner is guilty of theft of his own property if it is lawfully in another's possession, at common law property which was owned jointly or by partnership could not be stolen by one joint owner or partner. Similarly, spouses could not be convicted of stealing property from one another. Under present Georgia law, it is clear from § 16-8-1(3) that spousal property remains exempt from theft by taking by either spouse; however, as to jointly held or partnership property, § 16-8-1(3) provides that "property of another" includes all property in which anyone other than the accused has an interest. Thus a partner could be convicted of theft of partnership property.

Lawful possession of property is sufficient, for the purposes of the theft by taking statute, to make the property in question the property of the victim. Thus, ownership of stolen property can be alleged in the person having actual lawful possession, even though that person is only a bailee or a consignee, or even though that person has transferred title to the stolen property to another.

In another case addressing the definition of "property of another," the Court of Appeals held that where a defendant took property from a merchant upon the promise to pay the purchase price later, the failure to return the property or to pay the price was not theft by taking. The fact that the merchant had the right to future payment was not the kind of interest contemplated by § 16-8-1(3). The transaction vested title in the defendant and the property was no longer that "of another."

If, with fraudulent intent, the defendant gets leave to take possession of the property only and then appropriates it to himself, he is guilty of theft by taking. While the defendant's intent is thus to appropriate the property, the consent which he fraudulently obtains from the victim covers no more than possession. Title to the property, rather than passing to the defendant, remains with the victim. Likewise, where the victim does not convey to the defendant his entire interest in the property, but delivers no more than possession until certain other specific conditions are met, the victim retains a security interest in the property.

In a case dealing with theft by taking by a bank teller, the court held that during the depositing and collecting stage of a check, there is a dual proprietary interest in the item—one by the depositor, and another by the depositary bank. Each would be entitled to assert his interest in the property to the exclusion of all others except the true owner. However, when there may be confusion as to title, one charged with theft by taking will not be heard to raise nice and delicate questions as to the title of the article stolen.

Where an employee kept and installed in his house the doors and windows of his employer in order to settle a salary dispute, a jury could find this type of possession unlawful, amounting and adding up to theft by taking.

In a case involving the theft of property seized while the defendant was performing his duties as a county law enforcement officer, the defendant argued that the stolen money was not the property of the county or any other state or political subdivision at the time of misappropriation because it had not then been forfeited under state law. The Georgia Court of Appeals, however, found that the evidence showed that the misappropriated money was seized by county deputies pursuant to lawful police investigations and was therefore subject to forfeiture under state law. Consequently, the county had a vested interest in the stolen money the moment the money was used during the commission of any underlying criminal acts. This evidence along with testimony that the deputies were required to turn in all money found or seized to the county was held sufficient to authorize the jury's finding that the defendant stole money belonging to the county and that he conspired with another law enforcement officer to defraud a state or political subdivision by taking government property.

In a case involving the misappropriation of cash bonds and fines collected by a local government employee, the employee argued that his motion for a directed verdict should have been granted because the state failed to prove that the cash that he misappropriated was the property of the local government. The evidence showed that the local government had the authority to accept cash bonds. Thus, the local government had a property right in the cash that it accepted. The court held that the evidence was legally sufficient to show that the cash was the property of the local government.

At common law, only personalty could be a subject of larceny. This requirement led to some undesirable results. For example, if a thief severed property from realty and took the removed property, a larceny was not committed; but if the owner severed the property and then the thief stole it, a larceny was committed. The criminal code prior to 1968 changed this by providing that property detached from realty automatically became personalty. Also, the criminal code prior to 1968 ended the common law rule that intangibles, documents, and instruments could not be subjects of larceny. Although the current criminal code does not specifically reject the common law definition of property subject to theft, § 16-1-3(13) of the criminal code defines the concept very broadly to include "anything of value," which includes "real estate, tangible and intangible personal property, contract rights," etc. It seems clear that the common law definitions of property subject to theft are no longer applicable.

When the property taken is currency, it is not necessary for the indictment charging the defendant with theft by taking to specifically identify the form of the currency taken. The identification of the property taken as lawful U. S. currency is sufficient.

It should be noted that it is not essential to the proof of the corpus delicti of the crime of theft by taking that the stolen property be recovered and displayed at trial.

4. Mens Rea

The mens rea of common law larceny was an "intent to steal" or "animus furandi." The requisite intent was an intent to deprive the victim of the possession and enjoyment of property permanently. Thus, if one intended at the time of taking to return the property, he had not committed common law larceny. Although it is not free from ambiguity, it appears that the mens rea requirement of § 16-8-2 is different from the traditional larceny mens rea. The language of the statute punishes the defendant who "unlawfully takes or, being in lawful possession thereof, unlawfully appropriates any property of another with the intention of depriving him of the property . . .."

Arguably, because of the construction of the sentence the "intention of depriving" mens rea refers only to unlawful appropriation and not unlawful taking. Under this interpretation, the mens rea for the unlawful taker would be the traditional larceny mens rea, with all of the case law surrounding that concept. This, however, certainly is not compelled by the statutory language or warranted by the general purpose in consolidating and assimilating the former common law crimes. It seems unlikely that in a consolidation statute which punishes wrongful behavior "regardless of the manner" in which the wrong was committed, that the General Assembly intended to retain two distinctive mens rea for the two different branches of § 16-8-2. Thus, it seems that the statutory mens rea applies to both the unlawful taker and the unlawful appropriator.

The question remains as to what is an "intention to deprive." The current criminal code answers that question in § 16-8-1(1) by stating that to deprive is to withhold either "permanently or temporarily" or to dispose of property "so as to make it unlikely that the owner will recover it." Thus, while at common law an intent to return the property would negate the requisite mens rea of an intent permanently to deprive the victim, this no longer is the law in Georgia. An intent to withhold even temporarily will satisfy the mens rea of § 16-8-2. As the Court of Appeals wrote in Martin v. State, "[o]nce criminal intent . . . was proved, it became irrelevant whether the deprivation . . . was permanent or temporary." Thus, an intent to merely use the property of another without the owner's authorization would evince an intent to commit a theft.

One's impression that he has a right to hold property hostage for the payment of a debt does not excuse what would otherwise be a theft by taking. Thus, evidence of such an impression would not establish a mens rea defense.

As an element of the offense, the presence of the requisite mens rea must be proven by the prosecution beyond a reasonable doubt. As with all crimes, in theft prosecutions intent will normally be proven through the use of circumstantial evidence and will be a question for the jury to decide. To the extent that the defendant can raise a reasonable doubt about this element of the crime being present, he will have a mens rea "defense."

When the alleged taking occurs when a defendant fails to perform under a contract with the victim, the real issue is whether the defendant accepted or retained the victim's money with no intention to satisfy his obligations under the contract. Whether the defendant intended to fulfill his contractual obligations when he took the victim's money is a question for the jury.

The Court of Appeals has questioned whether good faith constitutes a proper legal defense to a charge of theft by taking. Nevertheless, by asserting that he has acted in good faith, a defendant essentially asserts that he lacked criminal intent. Thus, if the jury is properly instructed on criminal intent, the trial court does not err in failing to charge the jury on good faith.

It has been held that evidence of prior similar crimes is admissible to show the defendant's state of mind or scheme in committing a theft offense. However, there must be sufficient similarity or connection between the prior independent crimes and the offense charged, that proof of the former tends to prove the latter.

In Hawkins v. State, the defendant was charged with theft by taking of a piece of heavy machinery. He entered the machinery, started it and moved it 2,000 feet before it became mired in the mud. While affirming the conviction, the court stated that if the jury had believed the defense testimony that he had intended merely to damage the machinery there would have to be an acquittal for lack of intent. The court found, however, that there was evidence to support the jury's rejection of the defendant's testimony.

In Cook v. State, the defendant's theft of money was not included in his theft of a motor vehicle. Although the money was in the motor vehicle at the time the motor vehicle was stolen, the defendant was not aware of its presence and thus lacked the requisite intent to steal the money. However, the defendant's act of physically taking the money from its hiding place, coupled with the then present intent to steal it, was thus a second criminal act against the property of the victim, which was separate and distinct from the earlier theft of the motor vehicle.

5. Claim of Right

Another mens rea defense to theft by taking, as well as to most of the other theft offenses, is the traditional "claim of right" defense in which the defendant takes property under a belief that it is his or that he has an entitlement to it. This defense (as well as some related defenses) is codified at § 16-8-10. Paragraph (2) is the traditional claim of right defense which is an assertion by the defendant that he "[a]cted under an honest claim of right to the property or service involved or under a right to acquire or dispose of it as he did." The two other § 16-8-10 defenses are a claim that the defendant "[w]as unaware that the property or service was that of another" and a claim that the defendant took property which was offered for sale with the intent to pay for it promptly or believing that the owner would have consented to the taking.

The relationship between § 16-8-10 and a defense of lack of intent is uncertain. On the one hand, the statute can be seen to be merely an assurance that lack of intent can be shown by the defendant charged under § 16-8-2 or any of the theft crimes to which it is applicable. In fact, the drafters of the criminal code themselves enigmatically describe the statute as setting out "defenses [which] are intended to make sure that a defendant on trial for theft shall have the opportunity to show the absence of the necessary mental element for the crime of theft." On the other hand, the statute itself is labelled an affirmative defense, which normally connotes a defense which becomes relevant only after the elements of the crime are proven. Also, if the § 16-8-10 defenses are solely negation of the mens rea, one wonders as to the purpose in adding the statute to the criminal code at all. Surely any criminal defendant has the right to disprove the presence of one of the elements of the crime or, more precisely, to raise the requisite reasonable doubt which is all that is necessary to prevent a finding of one of the elements of a crime.

Regardless of what the intention of the drafters was with regard to the relationship between § 16-8-10 and the negation of the mens rea, the Georgia Court of Appeals has held that the § 16-8-10 defenses are not the same as that of lack of intent.

In Breland v. State, the defendant was implicated in a scheme whereby two other individuals stole gasoline trucks and filled them with gasoline stolen from a wholesaler which was then delivered to gas station owners. The defendant's claim was that he did not know the gasoline was stolen and that he thought he was assisting the rightful owner in disposing of it. The trial court's refusal to charge on the claim of right defense of § 16-8-10 was upheld by the Court of Appeals.

The court said that the defense being raised by the testimony was a lack of intent, not a claim of right, and the failure to give the claim of right jury instruction was not error. It is submitted that while there is a distinction between a claim of right and a lack of intent defense, the distinction was wrongly applied in Breland. The intent to violate § 16-8-2 was present, even under the defendant's testimony. The intent was to take away the gasoline from the victim. The mitigation claimed by the defendant was that the wholesaler had given permission. This is part of the affirmative defense outlined by § 16-8-10(2). He was acting under a belief that he had a right to dispose of the gasoline as he did.

Two other cases illustrate true lack of intent defenses. In Mathis v. State, the defendant was charged under § 16-8-2 after being found in possession of cameras, speakers, and tapes. He testified that he had been looking for the rightful owner. This truly is not a claim of right defense. He knew it was somebody's property, and he was not claiming that he had permission to have it. Thus, § 16-8-10(1) and (2) were not implicated. The claim clearly was that he had no intention to withhold the goods from the actual owner. This is a claim that he lacked the intention to deprive and is a claim which seeks to negate the mens rea of § 16-8-2.

Likewise, in Bremer v. State, a theft by receiving defendant claimed that he did not know that stereo equipment he bought at a very low price was stolen. He unsuccessfully sought a charge on § 16-8-10, but the appellate court affirmed the denial of his request. His claim was not a claim of right but a negation of the mens rea of theft by receiving, which is knowledge or reason to believe that the goods are stolen. Bremer's correct conclusion should be contrasted with Breland's incorrect conclusion. Here, the lack of knowledge of the stolen character of the goods did negate an element of § 16-8-7, whereas the Breland defendant's claim was not one which negated the mens rea of depriving the possessor of the goods which is the mental element of § 16-8-2.

However, in one case the defendant's acting on what he thought was an honest claim of right was found to negate his criminal intent to deprive the victims of the property. In Edens v. State, the court reversed the defendant's conviction based on the trial court's findings that the defendant did not possess the criminal intent necessary for theft by taking, in that his intent was to repossess an item under an honest claim of right after the purchasers defaulted on their payments.

In Grant v. State, the court held that had the defendant been on trial either for stealing the vehicle from a third party or for receiving stolen property, then a charge to the effect that he could not be found guilty if he had acted under an honest claim of right would certainly have been appropriate and necessary. However, inasmuch as he was indicted and tried for stealing the vehicle directly from the dealer, such a charge was not required.

Where claim of right is a defendant's only real defense, a trial court's failure to charge on claim of right is reversible error. However, raising the hue and cry of "sole defense" does not mandate that a charge on claim of right be given without some evidence to support it.

Another important case involving § 16-8-10 concerns an interpretation of § 16-8-10(3) which provides a defense for those who take property offered for sale with an intent to pay promptly or reasonably believing that the owner of the property would consent to the taking. In Cox v. State, the defendant was a clerk in a convenience store who gave his friends a great deal of merchandise which was being offered for sale. His trial testimony was that he intended to repay the owner at the time of his next payday which was the following week.

The trial court failed to give a § 16-8-10(3) instruction, presumably because the contemplated repayment was not prompt. The Court of Appeals reversed, finding that the facts raised a question of fact and that the jury should have been instructed as to § 16-8-10(3). It is apparent that the court was interpreting the paying "promptly" language of § 16-8-10(3) and, it might be added, was permitting the jury to give a rather broad interpretation to "promptly."

6. Actus Reus

It should be noted that a theft of several items from the same owner or possessor at the same time is all one crime. In Breland v. State, the defendant was convicted of stealing two trucks from Gulf Oil and then taking the trucks to a gasoline storage facility where gasoline was stolen from a bailee of Gulf Oil. The court held that the theft of the trucks constituted one theft. The court cited an old Georgia case, for the proposition that the taking of several items from one owner in one transaction was a single theft. The court also upheld, however, the conviction for a separate count of theft for the taking of the gasoline because it happened at a different time and place. It should be apparent that the line at which a continuing historical happening becomes a series of separate "transactions" is ephemeral, at best.

Likewise ephemeral is the dividing line between sufficient and insufficient evidence of the taking to support a conviction. Therefore, no attempt is made here to catalogue all cases raising this issue. Several cases provide an insight into the sufficiency question. In Wadley v. State, the defendant sold four maple chairs worth $57 each at retail for $5 each to a pawnshop. Shortly thereafter, police recovered two shipping cartons outside the shop. Each apparently had contained two chairs identical to the ones sold by the defendant. The warehouse of the furniture company which made the chairs was nearby and four chairs like those sold by the defendant had been reported missing. The court affirmed the conviction despite the defendant's assertion that the failure to identify these precise chairs as the stolen ones rendered the state's case insufficient.

In McClean v. State, the defendant was found in possession of goods identified as being stolen from the victim's mobile camper a month before. Despite the defendant's assertion that he had owned the goods at all times and testimony indicating a fleeing third party on the night of the theft, the court upheld the conviction. The court's action authorized theft by taking convictions on the sole basis of possession of recently stolen goods. This was a rather startling holding, particularly when contrasted with the well established rule that such evidence standing alone is insufficient to support a conviction for theft by receiving stolen goods.

In Bankston v. State the court held that recent possession of stolen goods will not automatically support a guilty verdict for theft. Instead, recent possession is to be viewed as probative evidence of the crime, and reviewed along with the other evidence in the case to determine whether any rational juror could find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. In the trial of a theft by taking case, the jury should be instructed on the principle of recent unexplained possession in terms of a permissible inference.

Evidence of recent unexplained possession of stolen property will authorize but not require the trier of fact to infer guilt and an appellate court may find it sufficient in itself to support a conviction for the crime of theft by taking. Such evidence is sufficient in itself to support a conviction only if the jury has found "that the presumed fact (the defendant committed the crime) follows from the proved facts (proof of a theft and recent, unexplained possession of stolen goods by the defendant) beyond a reasonable doubt." The jury is not compelled to accept a defendant's explanation for his possession of stolen goods.

In Reed v. State, after buying a large quantity of yarn from a creditor, the defendant was unable to pay for this yarn under the terms of a purchase agreement. The creditor suggested an arrangement whereby she could gradually pay off the indebtedness by buying and selling yarn on the creditor's behalf. The defendant subsequently violated the agreement by selling a large quantity of yarn and retaining the proceeds herself rather than remitting them to the creditor. The court held that there was sufficient competent evidence to support a conviction for theft by taking.

Whether the defendant was in a fiduciary relationship with the victim is a jury question. In Hanson v. State, the evidence showed that on eleven separate dates the defendant cleared to zero the running daily totals on the computerized cash register, pocketed the money received from the sales up to that point, and reported only those sales that were made from the time the register was cleared until the close of business. The court found that evidence of the defendant's position as an assistant manager, with responsibility for closing out the cash register and accounting for the money made, was sufficient for a jury to find that a fiduciary relationship existed. In Eads v. State, the evidence showed that an elderly victim executed a power of attorney to the defendant, authorizing him to "sign, endorse, receive, deposit or issue checks" on her behalf and that the defendant placed the victim's endorsement on the back of her checks, cashed them, and appropriated the funds. The court held that in appropriating the funds, the defendant was clearly guilty of theft of the victim's property "in breach of his fiduciary obligation" to her. In Manous v. State, the court held that the evidence was sufficient to convict the defendant of theft by taking $1,123,900 in money belonging to an elderly victim. The defendant gained the victim's complete devotion and dependence and acquired complete control of her affairs. The victim's mental state had deteriorated seriously. The victim had signed checks made out to the defendant in various amounts, and the defendant had signed checks on the victim's account. Eventually the victim had only $3.90 in her bank account. Although the victim had expressed her desire to give the defendant what he needed, she testified that she did not intend to give the defendant all of her money.

A theft by taking conviction may be obtained on a confession although corroborated only by proof of the corpus delicti. In McCant v. State, the testimony of an analyst for a restaurant chain that one of its stores lost over $3,000 due to fraudulent refunds established the corpus delicti. Witness testimony and documentary evidence that the defendant was shift manager during each of the times the store experienced excessive refunds and negative sales and that the shift manager had to approve all refunds provided sufficient corroboration of the defendant's admission to the chain's employees that he took approximately $5,000 from the store by processing fraudulent refunds and that he used the money to pay his bills.

In Jordan v. State, the court held that proof that an office manager cashed or deposited into her own account more than $500 worth of unauthorized business checks was sufficient to support the jury's verdict that she committed theft by taking.

In motor vehicle theft cases, there is no requirement that the engine of the vehicle be running or that the thief successfully navigate the vehicle onto a street before the crime is complete. In Travis v. State, a witness noticed a vehicle rolling backwards across a parking lot. The vehicle, with its plastic back window cut, had no lights on, the engine was not running, and the doors were closed. After the vehicle hit the back of the witness's vehicle, the defendant got out and tried to leave the scene. Given these facts, the court concluded that a rational trier of fact could have found proof of the defendant's guilt of theft by taking.

In Dukes v. State, the evidence showed that at the request of the lienholder the defendant and his former employee picked up a repossessed motor vehicle from the lienholder's parking lot. The defendant later sold the motor, transmission, and door of the vehicle to a salvage business. The defendant then informed a representative of the lienholder that he forgot to pick up the vehicle. The vehicle was subsequently reported stolen. The court held that there was ample evidence to authorize the defendant's conviction for theft by taking of the motor vehicle.

In Matthews v. State, the evidence showed that while misrepresenting his employment with a corporation, the defendant negotiated the rental of a van for that corporation from a rental car agency. Further misrepresenting his employment with that corporation, the defendant signed the lease for the van. The defendant was never an employee of the corporation. The van originally leased was replaced with a second van under a second lease. The leases for both vans had been extended a number of times. After the final extension of the second lease had expired, the second van was not returned, no rental fee was ever paid, and the defendant did not contact the agency. The agency reported the van as possibly stolen, and the police in a neighboring state found the van burned at a housing project with the defendant present at the scene. The defendant presented the police with the expired lease for the van. The court held that there was sufficient evidence to support the defendant's conviction for theft by taking. The jury was authorized to determine that the defendant did not intend to pay any rental fee and that in retaining possession of the vans beyond the terms of the leases the defendant intended to appropriate the vans with the intention of at least temporarily depriving the rental car agency of the vans.

In Grant v. State, there was no direct evidence that the defendant was an accessory before the fact to the driver's theft by taking the truck. The circumstantial evidence could have supported the defendant's version of events that he did not participate in the theft of the truck and did not learn that the truck was stolen until after he began riding around with the driver, at which time, he tried to help the driver sell the truck. The court held that because the evidence did not exclude the reasonable hypothesis that the driver had stolen the truck without the defendant's knowledge or participation, the defendant's conviction for theft by taking the truck was insupportable as a matter of law.

In Locklear v. State, the undisputed evidence showed that other people had access to the body shop's bank deposit bag at the time it disappeared and there was no evidence of the defendants' possession of it. In order to convict the defendants of theft, the state had to present more that the coincidence of two thefts occurring around the time the defendants visited two different establishments. The court found that the state failed to demonstrate the defendants' participation in the thefts and to exclude other reasonable hypotheses for the disappearance of the money. The state showed nothing more that the defendants' presence in the wrong place at the wrong time.Thus, the circumstantial evidence was insufficient as a matter of law to support their convictions for felony theft by taking.

In Bradford v. State, the court held that there was sufficient evidence from which the jury was authorized to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendants committed the charged thefts by intentionally deceiving the victim lenders. The defendants ostensibly arranged for investors to buy residential rental property. Unbeknownst to the investors, the defendants created false and fraudulent loan application documents in order to qualify the investors for the mortgages. Based on the false loan documents, lenders agreed to loan money to the investors. The defendants then bought each house in question at fair market value and, on the same day, "flipped" the house by selling it to their investor at a greatly inflated price. The defendants used the proceeds from the "flip" sale to the investor to pay off their own earlier purchase of the house, and they kept the difference between the low price they had paid for the house and the higher price paid by the investor who eventually defaulted on the loan.

Overcharging for services or goods furnished in and of itself does not constitute a violation of the theft by taking statute, but charging for services or goods not performed or delivered could constitute such a violation.

In certain cases in order to prove theft by taking beyond a reasonable doubt, the state must present evidence which would eliminate the possibility that some other person had access to the stolen property during the critical period before the property was discovered missing.

It is within the province of the jury to accept the state's evidence that the defendant stole the property and reject the defendant's evidence that he had the permission and consent of the owner to take the property on the occasion upon which the theft charge was predicated.

7. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

Theft by taking may be, but is not always, a lesser included offense of burglary. Where theft by taking and burglary counts are based on the theft of different property, the theft by taking offense is not a lesser included offense of burglary.

The offense of conspiracy to defraud a state or political subdivision does not merge with the underlying offense of theft by taking.

Motor vehicle theft is not a lesser included offense of armed robbery as a matter of fact, where the evidence used to establish the motor vehicle theft is not the same evidence used to establish the armed robbery.

Where there is no evidence that the motor vehicle was taken from the victim by means other than hijacking with a firearm, a charge on the lesser included offense of motor vehicle theft is not authorized.

If the victim is aware of the taking of property from his immediate presence before the taking is complete, the offense committed is robbery by sudden snatching. If the victim is not aware of the taking until it is complete, the offense committed is not robbery by sudden snatching but rather theft by taking.

Theft by receiving is not a crime included in the crime of theft by taking. The crimes of theft by taking and theft by receiving are mutually exclusive. Accordingly, a conviction of theft by receiving would bar a subsequent prosecution for theft by taking.

Because different elements must be demonstrated to find a defendant guilty of both theft by taking and entering an automobile, as a matter of both law and fact, these offenses do not merge.

Where the evidence shows either that the defendant intended to take a car and was caught while taking it or that he was trying to stop a runaway car and committed no crime at all, there would be no evidence that he entered the car with the intent to commit a theft or felony therein. Thus, a charge on entering an automobile would not be warranted.

B. Theft by Shoplifting

Theft by shoplifting is treated specially in the criminal code in § 16-8-14. Formerly subsection (b) of § 16-8-2, the General Assembly severed this portion of the statute in 1978 when it added penalty provisions peculiar to shoplifting. Shoplifting could certainly have been prosecuted under the former larceny or false pretenses statutes and also under current § 16-8-2. Yet there have always been special statutes aimed at this type of theft because of recurrent problems in proving intent and asportation. For example, because one is usually impliedly authorized to pick up and examine goods in a retail establishment, it is difficult at times to determine when an unauthorized asportation occurs. Also, it is difficult to prove lack of intent to pay for goods at any time before leaving a store. The statute remedies these problems by identifying particular types of behavior as the actus reus of shoplifting in contrast with the general language defining the actus reus of § 16-8-2.

1. Actus Reus

When done with the requisite mens rea, the following acts violate the shoplifting statute: (1) concealment or taking possession of goods or merchandise, (2) altering the price tag or mark of goods or merchandise, (3) transferring goods or merchandise from one container to another, (4) switching labels or price tags on merchandise, and (5) wrongfully causing the amount paid to be less than the merchant's stated price. It should be noted that goods or merchandise are covered by the first three provisions, but only merchandise is explicitly covered by the fourth. It also should be noted that the first three provisions specifically apply only to stores or retail establishments while the fourth is not, by its terms, so limited. Another inconsistency occurs between the description of the mens rea and the actus reus language. Apparently inadvertently, the mens rea is framed in terms of merchandise only, while the first three types of actus reus specifically mention "goods or merchandise."

Reasonable certainty of ownership is all that is required to establish this element of the offense. In Lanier v. State, the court held that it could have been inferred from the loss prevention employee's testimony that the stolen coats were owned by the department store. This evidence of ownership was sufficient.

Any variance between the allegation in the indictment and the proof at trial concerning the precise identity of the victim of the theft would not be fatal, so long as the defendant has been fully informed of the charges against him and there is no danger of a second prosecution for the same shoplifting offense.

Where the defendant is charged with "taking possession" under § 16-8-14(a)(1) and the evidence shows that he did in fact take possession of the goods, the fact that the state might also have charged him with interchanging price tags under § 16-8-14(a)(4) would not create a fatal variance in the proof.

2. Mens Rea

As for the mens rea, this statute, unlike § 16-8-2, provides three alternative mens reas. Instead of merely punishing the individual who intends to deprive the owner of property, as in § 16-8-2, the shoplifting statute punishes those who commit one of the actus reus provisions with the intent either (1) to appropriate the property to his own use without paying for it, (2) to deprive the owner of the possession of it, or (3) to deprive the owner of the value of it. It would appear that these mens rea provisions are broader than that of § 16-8-2.

For example, it would seem that under mens rea (1) the individual who removes a toy from the shelf of the store and plays with it without intending to purchase it has committed shoplifting. Likewise, the individual who browses through a magazine or newspaper will have violated the statute. In both of these situations, the defendant will have committed actus reus (1) (taking possession of the property) along with mens rea (1) (intending to use the property without an intention of paying for it).

Mens rea (2) has given rise to some discussion of when there is actually an intent to deprive the owner of the possession of the goods. The appellate courts have been faced with the problem of determining whether the owner who permits people to take goods off the shelves is or is not being deprived of possession. In K-Mart Corp. v. Coker, the Georgia Supreme Court has resolved this problem by holding that the intent to deprive the owner of the possession and value of the goods can be inferred from the defendant's conduct, and that the defendant's failure to remove the goods from the store does not negate the criminal intent that the statute requires.

Mens rea (3) (intending to deprive the owner of the value of the goods) would appear to be satisfied where the evidence shows that the defendant took possession of the goods and then solicited a refund for those goods without those goods having been previously purchased.

Where an accusation charges the defendant with committing theft by shoplifting with only one of the three intents specified in the statute, instructing the jury on all three intents would not constitute reversible error where the evidence does not create a reasonable possibility that the jury could have convicted the defendant of committing the offense with either one of the other intents only. For example, where the evidence shows that the offense was committed with all three intents, the jury would not be able to find the defendant guilty of having either or both of the other intents without also finding him guilty of having the intent charged in the accusation. Thus, instructing the jury on all three intents would be harmless.

Secrist v. State dealt with the mens rea provisions of § 16-8-14. In this case, the defendant was charged with shoplifting and the state introduced an out-of-court statement by the defendant that stated "I did take a pair of leather earrings and a wallet from the shop. I was going to let Irvin take their cost from my earnings." The defendant was apparently an employee of the shop that was victimized. The trial judge instructed the jury with regard to this statement as a confession.

The defendant appealed, claiming that this was not a confession because it contained a negation of the mens rea by announcing an intention to have the employer deduct the value of the goods from future earnings. The majority rejected the defendant's argument, concluding that while this statement may have negated an intent to deprive the owner of the value of the goods, it certainly did not negate an intention to deprive the owner of possession or to appropriate the merchandise to his own use. Thus, this was a complete admission of the crime alleged in the accusation and an instruction on confessions was held proper. The dissenting judge urged that the statement asserted a claim of right defense under § 16-8-10 and, thus, was not a complete confession.

The dissenting judge's point seems to be well taken. The claim of right defense does serve as an affirmative defense which concedes the presence of the requisite mens rea. It should be noted, however, that the General Assembly, when it removed the shoplifting offense from § 16-8-2 in 1978 to a separate section, did not change the coverage of the claim of right defense of § 16-8-10. Thus, at the time of Secrist § 16-8-10, which by its terms applies to prosecutions under § 16-8-2, applied to shoplifting which was a § 16-8-2 offense at that time. Now, however, it is a § 16-8-14 offense and the coverage of § 16-8-10 does not explicitly extend to that kind of prosecution, which may be a legislative oversight.

Evidence of prior similar shoplifting incidents are admissible to show the defendant's motive, plan, scheme, and bent of mind in committing a subsequent shoplifting offense. That the other incidents involved other stores and other kinds of merchandise does not render them dissimilar to the subsequent offense.

3. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

Although theft by deception may be a lesser included offense of shoplifting as a matter of fact, where the undisputed evidence shows the completion of the offense of shoplifting or no offense at all, the trial court is not required to charge the jury on the lesser included offense of theft by deception.

A trial court's denial of a defense request for a charge on misdemeanor theft by shoplifting does not constitute error where the evidence shows either the commission of felony shoplifting or no offense at all.

In the absence of a request, the trial court is not required to instruct sua sponte on misdemeanor theft by taking as a lesser included offense of felony theft by shoplifting.

4. Punishment

There are two grades of shoplifting: misdemeanor and felony. Shoplifting goods worth $300 or less in value is punishable as a misdemeanor. However, there is enhanced punishment for subsequent offenses. Prior felony or misdemeanor convictions for shoplifting serve as the basis for imposing this enhanced punishment. A conviction of a second offense requires, in addition to or in lieu of any imprisonment which might be imposed, a fine of at least $250 which may not be suspended or probated. A conviction of a third offense requires, in addition to or in lieu of any fine which might be imposed, imprisonment for not less than 30 days or confinement in a community correctional facility for a period of 120 days or a monitored house arrest for a period of 120 days. In addition to this confinement, the defendant may be required to undergo psychological evaluation and treatment at his expense. The imprisonment or confinement may not be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld. A conviction of a fourth or subsequent offense is punishable as a felony by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years. The first year of the sentence may not be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld. Shoplifting goods worth more than $300 is a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years. Also, shoplifting from three separate stores or retail establishments within one county, within a seven-day period, and with the goods from each theft worth more than $100 is a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years. This provision was enacted in 2000 to provide enhanced punishment for shoplifters belonging to organized crime groups who steal large quantities of a particular item from the same retail chain within a county during a short period of time.

The statute defines "value" as the actual retail price of the goods at the time and place of the offense and provides that the unaltered price tag shall be prima facie evidence of value and ownership. Value is not an essential element of the crime of theft by shoplifting. It is only if there is a factual issue as to whether the value is greater than $300 that the jury must determine value in order to assist the trial court in determining the appropriate sentence. If the evidence does not raise a factual issue relating to value, a charge to the jury on valuation is not necessary.

The General Assembly amended O.C.G.A. § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C) in 1997 so that the fourth or subsequent conviction for shoplifting shall be a felony. This amendment was enacted to remedy a deficiency in the prior statute whereby the courts could consider only prior misdemeanor shoplifting convictions. Thus, the General Assembly intended that as to convictions of shoplifting occurring after the effective date of the 1997 amendment, any prior shoplifting conviction shall be considered in determining if the defendant has committed felony shoplifting. Under this construction of the statute, a foreign shoplifting conviction—whether misdemeanor or felony—may be considered when determining whether a current Georgia shoplifting charge is a fourth offense felony.

Section 16-8-14(b)(1)(C) provides a specific sentencing scheme for defendants convicted four or more times for shoplifting and gives the trial court discretion to sentence the defendants to a term of not less than one nor more than ten years. By contrast, the applicable general recidivist sentencing scheme set forth in § 17-10-7(a) provides that any defendant with a prior felony conviction who thereafter is convicted of another felony must be given the maximum sentence, which in a shoplifting case would require imposition of the maximum ten-year sentence set out in § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C). Because nothing in the specific sentencing scheme in § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C) permits application of conflicting provisions in the general recidivist sentencing scheme in § 17-10-7(a), the specific scheme controls. Thus, despite a shoplifting defendant's prior felony convictions, the trial court has discretion under § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C) to sentence him to a term of not less than one nor more than ten years.

Section 16-8-14, which provides for sentence enhancement based on the number of prior shoplifting convictions, does not apply where none of the defendant's prior felony convictions involved shoplifting. In such a case, the trial court must sentence the defendant under the general recidivist statute, § 17-10-7(c), rather than under the specific shoplifting statute, § 16-8-14.

A person may be convicted of felony shoplifting where the subject of the felony is less than $300 in value, if the person has been previously convicted three or more times for such an offense. The prior convictions must be alleged in the indictment. However, it has been held that so long as the defendant is indicted as a fourth offender, there is no requirement for the indictment to list a previous conviction provided the state's intent to present such evidence at the sentencing phase is made known to the defendant prior to his trial.

Although the state may list the defendant's prior convictions supporting recidivist treatment in the indictment, it is not required to present evidence of the defendant's recidivism to the jury during the guilt/innocence phase of the trial where there is no other legal basis for the consideration thereof. Therefore, it would be error for the trial court to read the indictment to the jury without redacting the references to the defendant's recidivism and prior convictions.

C. Theft by Fraudulent Use of Retail Sales Receipts and Universal Product Code Labels

Recent technological developments have enabled shoplifters to use more sophisticated methods to commit their crimes. For instance, new technology has been used to produce large quantities of fraudulent Universal Product Code (UPC) labels, which are then sold to shoplifters to ply their trade. After purchasing an item, the shoplifter will substitute the item's "valid UPC label with a fraudulent one programmed for a much higher value." The shoplifter will then use a fraudulent sales receipt and the fraudulent UPC label to obtain a refund at the higher value. Section 16-8-17 was enacted in 2000 specifically to proscribe this method of shoplifting and the manufacture of fraudulent retail sales receipts and UPC labels.

A person who, with intent to cheat or defraud a retailer, possesses, uses, utters, transfers, makes, alters, counterfeits, or reproduces a retail sales receipt or a Universal Product Code label which results in a theft of property worth more than $300 in value commits a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than three years or by a fine or both. However, if the property is taken from three separate stores or retail establishments within one county, within a seven-day period, and with the property from each theft worth more than $100 in value, the person commits a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

A person who, with intent to cheat or defraud a retailer, possesses 15 or more fraudulent retail sales receipts or Universal Product Code labels or possesses a device the purpose of which is to manufacture fraudulent receipts or labels commits a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more ten years.

D. Theft by Deception

Section 16-8-3 codifies the crime of theft by deception, punishing those who obtain "property by any deceitful means or artful practice with the intention of depriving the owner of the property." The drafters were apparently influenced greatly by the formulation of theft by deception in Model Penal Code § 223.3. The theft by deception statute appears to combine the common law crimes of false pretenses (obtaining title from the victim by deceit) and larceny by trick (obtaining mere possession by deceit and later converting). The broad language of this statute has been held to encompass fraudulent bid-rigging schemes.

1. Mens Rea

The statute's mens rea is twofold. First, there must be an intent to deprive. An intent to deprive is the intent to withhold the property of another either permanently or temporarily or to dispose of the property so as to make it unlikely that the owner will recover it. Second, there must be an intent to act deceptively. Thus, the actor who mistakenly believes something himself cannot be guilty if he persuades the "victim" to act on that mistaken belief. Whether an intent to deceive has been established is a jury question. The jury's inference of intent can be supported by circumstantial evidence.

2. Actus Reus

a. Generally

The more difficult issue in this area has been in defining the actus reus. Theft by deception and its predecessors (false pretenses and larceny by trick) are not crimes of stealth, but rather crimes that are committed face to face, often in a business context. Therefore, courts and legislatures traditionally have not defined the actus reus of this crime too broadly for fear that this would allow the use of the criminal sanction to punish mere failures to live up to contracts. Thus, the majority view rejects false pretenses convictions where the defendant has made a false promise, that is, he has promised to do something in the future without any intention actually to perform the promise. While perhaps conceding that such an act is a fraudulent one worthy of punishment, most courts refuse to punish such behavior because of a feared difficulty in distinguishing a false promise from a broken one, in which the defendant intends to perform at the time of the making of the promise but then fails to do so. These courts fear that juries will leap from evidence that the promise was not performed to the conclusion that the defendant never intended to perform it. This would render it a crime to fail to pay a debt. Thus, even though a false promise can be seen to be a misrepresentation of a present fact (the fact being the state of mind of the defendant), most courts reject false pretense prosecutions based on this set of facts.

In defining theft by deception's actus reus, § 16-8-3 reflects a wariness of defining deception too broadly. Five specific methods of deception are identified and only one authorizes a conviction for a false promise and, even then, not all false promises are punished. A person deceives if he intentionally (1) "creates or confirms" a victim's false impression about an "existing fact or past event" which the defendant knew or believed was false; (2) "fails to correct" a previously created false impression; (3) prevents "another" from obtaining relevant information about the transfer of property; (4) fails to disclose any legal impediment to the enjoyment of property, such as a lien or adverse claim, regardless of whether the impediments are matters of public record; or (5) makes a false promise of performance of services. In this last method of deception, the statute explicitly forbids conviction solely on the evidence of a failure to perform a promised service. The statute does not indicate that these methods of deception are the exclusive means of violating the statute. Even if the catalogue of deceptive acts is meant to be exhaustive, however, the statute additionally punishes artful practices, which are not defined at all.

It is clear that the actus reus is not specifically limited to spoken words but includes nonverbal behavior which creates or confirms the false impression. In fact, in at least two situations ("failure to correct" and "failure to disclose"), the statute creates an affirmative obligation to act, thus breaching the traditional distinction in the criminal law between misfeasance and nonfeasance.

b. Creating False Impression of Existing Fact or Past Event

The careful description in paragraphs (b)(1) and (2) of the act of the defendant in creating a "false impression" of a fact or event should also be noted. This makes it clear that statements of literal truth (half-truths) can subject the actor to liability if they are intentionally made in order to create a false impression. The actor must know or believe that the created impression (which itself must have been intentionally created or confirmed) is false. Without knowledge, or at least belief, that an impression is false, there can be no intent to deceive. Finally, it should be noted that the statute skirts the question of whether an intentional misstatement of the law can be the basis of a conviction. Although many courts refuse to convict in this situation on the ground that everyone, including the victim, is presumed to know the law, the Georgia law prior to 1968 was to the contrary. Although the current statute does not explicitly cover misstatements of law, such statements can certainly be described as creating a false impression of an existing fact,i.e., the state of the law. Particularly in light of pre-1968 case law, it is assumed that misstatements of law are covered by the statute.

Most of the case law decided under § 16-8-3 deals with paragraph (b)(1) and whether the defendant had created a "false impression" about an existing fact or past event. One troublesome area has been the use of worthless checks as a means of obtaining property. In Dunphy v. State, a theft by deception conviction was upheld where the defendant obtained a real estate option by writing a worthless check and "covering" it with another worthless check. In one sentence, the court concluded that the evidence supported the verdict, without specifically addressing the question of whether the presentation of a worthless check is a misrepresentation of the current status of the drawer's bank account. Dunphy is further complicated by the fact that the seller of the real estate option who received the check actually was paid by the drawee bank so that it is not clear whether the seller or the bank was the victim.

The Court of Appeals, in the same year, reversed a theft by deception conviction based on a somewhat similar set of facts. In Croy v. State, the defendant uttered two worthless checks to a used car dealer for a total of twenty cars. The parties had been dealing for several years with each other and the "victim" testified that in this case the defendant had "asked for one week" on the draft. The understanding between the parties, therefore, was that the check would not be presented to the drawee for a week. The check was worthless when given to the "victim" and the defendant never deposited covering funds. The court held this was not sufficient for a § 16-8-3 conviction.

Under these circumstances, the court found that the only representation made by the defendant was that in a week there would be sufficient funds. This was a representation about future events and not covered by paragraph (b)(1). The court analogized this situation to that of delivery of a postdated check and said that, under these circumstances, the victim's "loss results from his absolute confidence in the party making the promise" not from any deceit or artful practice.

It is apparent that what distinguishes Croy from Dunphy is the extrinsic agreement not to present the check immediately. The court did not explicitly face the question of a check delivered without any extraneous understandings or agreements. It should be noted that the writing of a bad check itself is a crime under other code provisions.

In another case, the defendant told the victim that he would send a check for the purchase of the new car in a few days while "creating the impression" that he had money in the bank to cover any such check. Because of the creating of the false impression, this would be sufficient to warrant a § 16-8-3 conviction, but the court reversed the conviction for other reasons. Likewise, in Harris v. State, where the defendant obtained titles to two cars after creating the false impression that he owned valuable stock and would be selling it and sending the proceeds to the seller, the court found that this would be sufficient to support a conviction. Again, however, the failure of the trial court to instruct the jury that a false promise of future performance cannot form the basis of theft by deception resulted in a reversal of the conviction and a new trial. Harris is also notable because the defendant's behavior was largely nonverbal in that he stood by while the seller checked out the value of the stock which he owned in a particular company, but failed to inform the seller that his stock was actually that of another company of the same name and was worthless.

In Arnold v. State, the defendant was convicted of theft by deception in obtaining $250,000 by intentionally and falsely representing to investors that he owned certain real property to secure an investment and that he had conveyed the property to the investors, when in fact he never owned the property and thus could not convey it. The court rejected the defendant's assertion that the investors relied on only a promise to do something in the future. The court held that the state proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the representation forming the basis of the theft by deception referred to a presently existing fact. Both prior to and at the closing, the defendant, orally and by documents, falsely represented to the investors that he presently owned the offered collateral. Moreover, the check was not handed over to the defendant's agent until the fraudulently signed security deed was delivered.

In Adams v. State, the court held that proof of the victim's reliance upon a false impression as to an existing fact authorized the defendant's conviction for theft by deception even though there was evidence of other contributing inducements, such as his representations as to future events. The fact that the defendant also made representations as to future events, which are not prohibited by paragraph (b)(1), did not affect the evidence supporting his conviction.

It has been held that evidence of the defendant's express promise or representation is required in order to establish his creation of a false impression in another. In Wilburn v. State, the defendant was charged with obtaining wages from two employers through the creation of a false impression of fact by working for both of them during the same period of time under employment agreements requiring him to work for each of them exclusively. The court held that the evidence was insufficient to support his convictions. The evidence did not establish that the defendant's employment with either of the two companies in question had been conditioned on any express promise or representation by him to the effect that he would work exclusively for those companies. Also, both employers denied that the defendant had received any compensation to which he was not entitled.

A 1978 case illustrates the requirement of paragraph (b)(1) that there actually be a deception of the victim. In Perdue v. State, the defendant was an administrator of a CETA program who was obtaining payoffs from employees and their families. The court reversed the conviction with regard to one victim who testified that she was paying the defendant $15 weekly to keep her daughter on the CETA payroll. The victim testified that she knew she was being "ripped off" and the court apparently held that in such a case there is no creation of a false impression about a fact. The victim knew that there should be no payment made.

On the other hand, when the defendant told other victims that they had to pay anywhere from $1 to $1.50 weekly for things such as "supplies" and "work permits" the court upheld the convictions on the grounds that the defendant had created the false impression in the minds of the victims that such payments were legitimate and that she was authorized to collect them. Perdue indicates that the "victim's" gullibility and actual knowledge will have an effect on the defendant's liability for theft by deception. It should be noted that in many situations in which the victim is aware of what is going on, a theft by extortion prosecution under § 16-8-16 will be warranted.

As a matter of law, a valid contractual merger clause executed by two or more parties in an arm's length business transaction precludes any subsequent claim of theft by deception based upon pre-contractual, oral representations. Any impressions based upon these representations would be superseded by a merger clause that expressly puts the parties on notice that the agreement's terms supersede any and all prior representations not contained therein. Under the express terms of such an agreement, a party cannot reasonably rely upon and thus cannot be deceived by these representations. Therefore, any pre-contractual misrepresentations cannot form the basis of a post-contractual claim of theft by deception.

c. Preventing Victim from Acquiring Pertinent Information about Property

Section 16-8-3(b)(3) provides that theft by deception can be committed if the defendant prevents the victim from acquiring information pertinent to the disposition of his property. In Adams v. State, the court found that evidence that the defendant threatened the victim when she asked about her money was sufficient to support his conviction under this paragraph of the statute.

d. Obtaining Property

It has been held that a defendant in a § 16-8-3 prosecution must actually have obtained the property. Thus, in Stewart v. State, the court held that a defendant who obtained money for the corporation of which he was president and part owner could not be guilty of theft by deception because there was no proof that defendant received any benefit, with all of the funds paid by the victims going directly into the corporate account. Although this holding may be viewed as being compelled by the statutory language describing a defendant who "obtains" property, it seems an overly restrictive interpretation. Even assuming that no money was directly received by the Stewart defendant, it seems obvious that, at the least, the value of his partial ownership in the corporation was increased by his behavior. He thus "obtained" property, in the form of increased value for his assets. Even without any increase in value in defendant's holdings, it seems that an actor who "altruistically" deceives X to benefit Y ought to be guilty of theft by deception. In Interagency, Inc. v. Danco Financial Corp., the court held that the plaintiff proffered sufficient evidence to show that the defendants did personally obtain the funds. Even though the $8,500 check was initially to be placed in a corporate trust account, there was substantial evidence that because of the defendants' close identity of interests, they each, jointly and severally, directly profited from the funds.

Although it must be shown in a theft by deception prosecution that the defendant actually obtained the property, there is no requirement of proof of pecuniary loss by the victim. Thus, in Harrell v. State, evidence that showed that the defendant obtained a vehicle of the dealership, albeit for less than one day, was sufficient under the statute.

In Markowitz v. Wieland, the plaintiffs argued that they were given a warranty agreement which provided that structural defects in their home would be covered for ten years and that the contractor failed to repair the defects as warranted, causing a decrease in the market value of their home. The court held, however, that to sustain an action for theft by deception the plaintiffs had to show that the contractor obtained their property. An unrealized diminution in the value of the property did not equate to the contractor obtaining the property as the plaintiffs were still the owners. Therefore, the theft by deception claim failed.

e. Exceptions

Section 16-8-3(c) excludes from characterization as "deceitful means" or "artful practices" false matters which have no "pecuniary significance" and exaggerated statements unlikely to deceive ordinary people. Thus, the statute continues the traditional requirement of materiality by requiring that the defendant obtain the property "by" the prohibited acts and by specifically excluding from the actus reus those matters having "no pecuniary significance." The statute also continues the traditional refusal to punish puffery or opinions.

The Court of Appeals has construed "pecuniary significance" to mean that the misrepresentation or false impression upon which a prosecution is based must somehow relate to the theft of the property at issue. In other words, a charge of theft by deception cannot be sustained where the only falsity proven is completely unconnected to the theft of the property. In Adams v. State, the court found that the jury could have interpreted the defendant's misrepresentation regarding his position at the company to have "pecuniary significance" because it was used to induce the victim to part with her money. The jury could have found that by inflating his employment status, the defendant hoped to persuade the victim that he was better qualified to invest her retirement funds. The evidence sustained a finding, therefore, that the defendant created a false impression of his qualifications to handle the victim's money. Furthermore, although the better practice would have been to present specific testimony that the victim relied upon this impression, the court found that the evidence was sufficient for the jury to infer reliance based upon the victim's decision to hand over her funds to the defendant for investment in a music business. Thus, there was sufficient evidence for the jury to find the defendant guilty of theft by deception.

3. Defenses

Any lack of diligence by a victim to prevent a theft by deception affords no defense to the accused.

4. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

Although theft by deception may be a lesser included offense of shoplifting as a matter of fact, where the undisputed evidence shows the completion of the offense of shoplifting or no offense at all, the trial court is not required to charge the jury on the lesser included offense of theft by deception.

Where there is evidence to warrant the charge, the trial court may charge the jury that it can consider theft by deception as a lesser included offense of robbery.

Where the same evidence is used to prove the defendant's guilt on three counts each alleging in identical terms theft by deception of one of the three pieces of equipment, the three charged offenses merge as a matter of fact into one theft by deception offense for purposes of conviction and sentencing.

E. Theft by Extortion

Section 16-8-16 expands the common-law misdemeanor of extortion which punished public officials who demanded fees to which they were not entitled to protect against a broader range of coerced transfers of property. Anyone who obtains property by threatening to do one of six things is guilty of the felony of theft by extortion. Modeled closely after Model Penal Code § 223.4, the statute punishes those who threaten to (1) inflict bodily injury on either the victim or anyone else; (2) accuse anyone of a criminal offense; (3) disseminate material subjecting someone to hatred, contempt, or ridicule or impairing someone's credit or business reputation; (4) take or withhold action as a public official or cause a public official to take or withhold action; (5) bring about or continue a collective unofficial action "if the property is not demanded or received for the benefit of the group;" and (6) cooperate or not cooperate with respect to another's legal claim or defense.

While most states punish the threat itself, Georgia is in the minority of states which require there be an actual obtaining of the property for conviction of extortion. The drafters explained this by pointing out that the theft statutes were designed to protect property, not individuals. Of course, under the appropriate circumstances, the threatener who does not succeed in obtaining the property will be guilty of attempted theft by extortion and prosecuted under the general criminal attempt statute, § 16-4-1.

Although the statute does not specifically articulate a mens rea requirement, it seems clear that the use of the verb "threaten" as part of the actus reus connotes purposeful activity. Thus, a defendant's behavior presumably must have as its purpose the threatening of one of the prohibited acts. It is unclear what the drafters intended by the use of "unlawfully" in defining the prohibited act of obtaining property. The use of the word by the drafters is apparently intentional, however, because the Model Penal Code section upon which the Georgia statute is based does not include the term.

As for the actus reus, it is clear that, unlike some statutes which require that the threats be in writing, the Georgia statute imposes no such requirement. Some of the prohibited kinds of threats raise questions about the relationship between extortion and other crimes. For example, threatening bodily injury unless property is transferred (as specified in paragraph (a)(1)) appears similar to robbery. The armed robbery defendant in Sanders v. State, asserted that extortion ought to have been charged as a lesser included offense. The court, in rejecting this argument, pointed out that the robbery statute (§ 16-8-40) punishes only those who threaten to inflict immediate serious bodily harm to the victim, while § 16-8-16 punishes threats to inflict any bodily injury. Thus, extortion may be committed by threatening future and/or nonserious bodily injury.

Paragraph (a)(4) dealing with public officials refusing to take or taking official action in return for property raises questions about the intersection between bribery (§ 16-10-2) and extortion. It would seem that the distinction is based on the initiator of the transfer of property. If the initiator is the private individual, the offense is bribery, while if the public official initiates the transfer and coerces the private individual, the offense is extortion. The distinction may be very important in that bribery carries a much heavier possible punishment than extortion. It should also be noted that the bribery statute punishes the acceptor as well as the offeror of bribes. This may make it crucial to separate the coercing public official from the merely accepting public official. It may seem anomalous, but given the punishment schemes for the two statutes, it will be in the public official's interest to have been an extortionist rather than merely the acceptor of a bribe. It should be noted, however, that there are two wrongdoers in bribery and only one in extortion.

It is interesting to note that, in contrast to Georgia law, under federal law an affirmative act of inducement by a public official, such as a demand, is not an element of the offense of extortion "under color of official right" prohibited by the Hobbs Act. Even though the public official has not initiated the transaction, his acceptance of a bribe constitutes an implicit promise to use his official position to serve the interests of the bribe-giver. The federal government need only show that a public official has obtained a payment to which he was not entitled, knowing that the payment was made in return for official acts.

It is also interesting to note that under federal law an explicit promise or undertaking to perform or not to perform an action as a public official would constitute the crime of extortion. In McCormick v. United States, the United States Supreme Court held that the receipt of political contributions by an elected official under color of official right constitutes the crime of extortion under the federal Hobbs Act, but only if the payments are made in return for an explicit promise or undertaking by the official to perform or not to perform an official act. In such situations the official asserts that his official conduct will be controlled by the terms of the promise or undertaking.

A pre-1968 Georgia case explored the relationship between theft by extortion and false pretenses (theft by deception). In Jackson v. State, the defendant falsely represented himself to be a law enforcement officer and threatened his victim with a false criminal accusation unless money was paid. The Georgia Supreme Court reversed a false pretenses conviction, holding that although there was a deception, the victim's payment of the money was actuated by the coercion. Thus, this was, therefore, extortion and not false pretenses. Thus, the difference between extortion and false pretenses is the difference between coercion and deception.

It should be stressed that paragraph (a)(2) forbids gaining property by threatening a criminal accusation. It appears, therefore, that it is generally no defense that the extortion victim actually committed the crime which the extortionist threatened to expose. The defendant may, indeed, have a privilege or duty to expose such activity, but paragraph (a)(2) makes clear that he should not use this as a means of obtaining property. When a private individual takes money to keep a crime quiet, he is violating the same type of duty that a public official has to perform his statutory responsibilities.

Likewise, it should be noted that paragraph (a)(3) is not limited to explicit threats to disseminate derogatory information. In Williams v. State, the Court of Appeals held that the threat need not be explicit. The co-defendant called the victim and offered to sell him incriminating photographs taken of the victim and a woman not his wife. The court held that given the circumstances a failure to prove an explicit threat was not fatal to the state's case.

Although the six paragraphs of § 16-8-16(a) cover most of the threats which might be made by an extortionist, the drafters rejected an omnibus Model Penal Code provision, § 223.4(g), which would have punished threats to "inflict any other harm which would not benefit the actor." This broad provision would punish, for example, the employer who demanded a kickback from his employees or the school teacher who demanded money from students in return for good grades. These actions do not appear to be illegal under § 16-8-16.

A statutory affirmative defense is provided by § 16-8-16(c). A defendant is privileged to threaten criminal accusation, dissemination of derogatory information, official action, or the giving or withholding of testimony, to the extent that the defendant was honestly claiming restitution or indemnification for "harm done in the circumstance to which such accusation, exposure, legal action, or other official action relates." Thus, the person who believes himself to be the victim of an embezzlement can threaten to make criminal charges unless the alleged embezzler makes restitution of the amount the defendant believes to have been embezzled.

Likewise, the defendant can threaten to expose derogatory information about the "victim" to the extent and only to the extent that he believes these derogatory facts have caused the defendant injury. Of course, even if without criminal liability, both of the above individuals run the risk of civil liability for defamation if their charges prove to be false. This statutory affirmative defense can be seen as the analogue to the § 16-8-10 claim of right defense which does not apply to theft by extortion.

A special venue provision, § 16-8-16(b), provides venue in the county where the threat was either made or received or the county in which the property was obtained.

The punishment provision for extortion is not § 16-8-12, which punishes most of the theft crimes and is based on a monetary dividing line between misdemeanor and felony theft. All extortion, regardless of the amount extorted, is a felony under § 16-8-16(d), punishable by one to ten years' imprisonment.

F. Theft of Lost or Mislaid Property

Section § 16-8-6 is a special provision dealing with thefts of lost or mislaid property. It punishes the individual who "comes into control of property that he knows or learns to have been lost or mislaid and appropriates the property to his own use without first taking reasonable measures to restore the property to the owner." The statute's actus reus is comprised of two elements: the action of appropriating the property to the defendant's own use and the omission of reasonable efforts to return the property to the rightful owner.

It should be noted that the mens rea requirement is that the party act with knowledge that the property is lost or mislaid. It is irrelevant when this knowledge is obtained because the statute punishes those who come into control of property, knowing or later learning of its lost or mislaid nature. Although direct evidence of such knowledge will be rare, the circumstances surrounding acquisition ought to be probative on this question. Thus, the nature of the property, the location of its "finding," and the presence or absence of identifying marks ought to be relevant in the determination of the defendant's knowledge.

There have been a number of decisions concerning § 16-8-6. In Royal v. State, the court reversed the defendant's conviction because the state failed to prove that the property was lost or mislaid. Instead, the state proved by its own witness that the property was neither lost or mislaid but was actually stolen.

In two decisions, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to support the defendant's conviction for theft of lost or mislaid property. In English v. State, the defendant split $4,000 with another county deputy knowing that the money was found on the roadside near a vehicle that had been stopped pursuant to a police investigation. However, the defendant made no attempt to restore the money to its rightful owner and he made no attempt to determine whether the money was used for illegal activities. He simply took the money and did not report it to the county sheriff. There was also testimony that the deputies were required to turn in all money found or seized to the county sheriff. In Davenport v. State, the defendant deposited $95 in his checking account, but the bank erroneously credited his account with a deposit of $9,500. After confirming the erroneous amount in his account, the defendant promptly withdrew the money and closed his account. After the bank discovered the error, the defendant admitted that the money was not his. He offered but failed to repay the bank.

The claim of right affirmative defense of § 16-8-10 is applicable to § 16-8-6 prosecutions but it appears that proof of unawareness that the property was that of another, which is an affirmative defense under § 16-8-10(1), is actually an element of the offense, on which the state will bear the burden of proof. If the defendant is unaware that it belongs to someone else, he cannot know of its lost or mislaid character.

G. Theft of Services

Section 16-8-5 punishes those who "knowingly" and "with the intent to avoid payment" obtain commercially available "services, accommodations, entertainment, or the use of personal property" by deception. This broad provision displaces prior law which protected only some services, like hotel accommodations, from theft.

The same broad coverage can be and, in fact, is obtained by the expansive definition of the property protected by the general theft by taking statute. Section 16-1-3(13), both in its explicit inclusion of services as part of "property" and in its general definition of property as "anything of value," appears to be the type of statute which would protect commercially offered services, accommodations, etc. under the general theft by taking statute, § 16-8-2. Thus, it seems clear that §§ 16-8-2 and 16-8-5 overlap.

The mens rea of theft of services clearly requires a showing of "knowingly" obtaining commercial services. Thus, it would seem that the defendant who could generate a reasonable doubt that he knew there was a price for the services would be entitled to an acquittal. The mens rea also explicitly requires an intent to avoid payment, which has been described by the Court of Appeals as the "essential ingredient of the offense." The intent to avoid payment can be proven by circumstantial evidence. The statutory language requiring action by deception also imports an additional mens rea requirement. Because deception by its nature requires intentional activity, not only must the defendant know he is obtaining commercial services and intends not to pay for them, but he must intend to fool the vendor into giving him the services. The defendant who announces an intention not to pay the vendor has not violated § 16-8-5. This last mens rea element is hidden because of the extreme unlikelihood that a defendant would act this way or that the victim would part with the services upon hearing such an announcement.

A number of § 16-8-5 cases that reached the appellate courts resulted in reversals for failure to prove the mens rea. In Adams v. State, the defendant rented a pump for a day. Because it did not work properly he exchanged it the next day. Nothing was said about extra charges. On the third day, when he returned the second pump and paid for only one day's rental he was charged under § 16-8-5. The court reversed, holding that the state had failed to prove an intent to avoid payment and deception. There was no evidence that the defendant was aware that the vendor expected a charge for the second day, so he could hardly be shown to have intended to avoid the payment. In Roberson v. State, the defendant stopped payment on a check when dissatisfied with the quality of work. The court held that the evidence of stopping payment and refusing to discuss the matter with the prosecuting witness would "tend to show an intent to avoid payment." But the defendant's evidence of a reason why he stopped payment left the circumstantial evidence in equipoise and caused a reversal.

However, in Nichols v. State, the appellate court affirmed the defendant's conviction and held that the state did prove the mens rea elements of deception and an intent to avoid payment. There was direct evidence that the defendant obtained services, that is, the lodging, by deception. In obtaining the apartment, he used the name of another and stolen identification. There was also circumstantial evidence of an intent to avoid payment. The defendant changed locks on the apartment at least twice and became delinquent in his rent. The landlord obtained a writ of possession against the defendant who filed an answer in another's name.

The actus reus of obtaining the services by deception is straightforward. It should be noted that the deception is not enough for a § 16-8-5 conviction. There must be an actual obtaining. It has been held that the surreptitious and unauthorized entrance and use of a vacant apartment is one of the forms of obtaining "accommodations" clearly encompassed within the meaning of the statute. Also, the surreptitious and unauthorized use of electricity or electrical energy within the apartment is one of the forms of obtaining "services" within the meaning of the statute.

The claim of right defense of § 16-8-10 is applicable to a § 16-8-5 prosecution.

H. Theft by Conversion

Two separate statutes deal with theft by conversion which supplants the pre-1968 law of embezzlement. Under § 16-8-4, theft by conversion is committed when an individual has lawfully obtained another's property, including but not limited to leased or rented personal property, under an obligation (either contractual or otherwise) to apply or dispose of the property in a particular fashion, but that individual violates the obligation and knowingly converts the property to his own use. The statute is applicable regardless of whether the original obligation required use of the actual property or the use of an equivalent amount of the defendant's property. The other conversion statute, § 16-8-15, deals with the conversion of payments for property improvements.

1. "Lawfully Obtained."

At common law, the essential distinction between embezzlement and larceny was in the means of acquisition. In larceny, the obtaining of the goods by the defendant was unlawful in that it was a trespass against the possession of the owner. On the other hand, the embezzler's means of acquisition were lawful. Section 16-8-4 continues this distinction by punishing only those who convert after lawfully obtaining the property but rejects the sometimes arcane distinction in theft law between custody and possession. Many courts hold that while the custodian who converts is guilty of larceny, the possessor who converts is guilty of embezzlement. The Georgia statute speaks only of obtaining the property, thus covering both custodians and possessors.

Having been presented with a statute which abolishes the custody/possession distinction, the Court of Appeals, in Partain v. State, may have inadvertently reinserted the possession requirement. A municipal building inspector was charged under § 16-8-4 with receiving money under an arrangement with a contractor whereby the contractor paid one-half the normal inspection fee to the defendant and did not have to pay the rest. Apparently, the defendant kept the funds for himself. The defendant's § 16-8-4 conviction was reversed because, in the court's words, "the defendant was never in lawful possession of [the] funds." While the conviction was properly reversed, the court ought to have spoken in terms of unlawfully obtaining rather than unlawful possession.

2. Property of Another

The property protected by § 16-8-4 includes anything of value and, while it must be property of another, partnership property is protected by this statute under § 16-8-1(3) which defines "property of another" as any property in which another person has an interest. This rule merely continues the preexisting Georgia law on the subject. It should be noted that spousal property, under § 16-8-1(3), is not the property of another and, thus, not protected by § 16-8-4. In 1988, the General Assembly amended § 16-8-4 to include "leased or rented personal property" as the property protected by the statute.

One cannot be convicted of theft by conversion for selling his equitable interest in property, since an essential element of the offense, possession of the property of another, would be missing. In King v. State, the court stated that a grantor of a deed to secure debt retains an equitable interest in property. Thus, the grantor had an interest in the property which he was free to sell to a business creditor, subject to the deed to secure debt. The business creditor purchased the grantor's equitable interest in the property. The security deed remained as a lien on the property, and the grantor remained liable to holder of the deed. However, it was clear that the money the grantor received was not the holder's, but his own, for the sale of his equitable interest in the property. Thus, an essential element of theft by conversion, possession by the accused of the funds of another person, was missing.

3. Obligation to Apply or Dispose of Property in Certain Way

Not only must the § 16-8-4 defendant have obtained property of another in a lawful way, there must be either a legal or contractual obligation to apply or dispose of the funds or property in a particular fashion. It is the violation of this agreement by conversion that is the essence of the crime. It would appear that the disposition or application contemplated by the drafters would be one for the property owner's benefit. Thus, the employee who absconds with money he was supposed to use to pay his employer's debts clearly satisfies this element of the crime. Likewise, the bank teller who makes off with funds he was supposed to deposit in the bank's cash box has satisfied this element. (Under the Georgia definition, this would be theft by conversion with either depositor or bank as victim.)

The more difficult question would be the defendant who borrows property and then converts. Does this behavior violate an obligation? Yes, clearly there is an obligation to return the goods. But whether this is the kind of obligation contemplated by the statute is uncertain. In at least most of the situations contemplated by the statute the application or disposition is to be made to a third person. Here, of course, the disposition would be back to the owner. It should be noted that the pre-1968 law of larceny after trust, which was the equivalent of embezzlement, did not cover conversion by borrowers.

The Court of Appeals has indicated that it will examine the terms of any alleged agreement very carefully before finding a violation of it. This approach is consistent with the traditional strict construction of penal statutes. In Baker v. State, the defendant agreed to construct a steeple for $325. He was prosecuted when it was discovered that the materials cost only $100. The court reversed because there was nothing in the agreement limiting the amount he was to retain for his labor and services in constructing the steeple.

In Hill v. State, the victim freely gave $2,500 to the defendant in return for the defendant's promise personally to provide certain future services. After the defendant attempted but failed to provide the services, the victim requested the return of his $2,500 and the defendant presented him with a check in that amount. However, the check was not honored because of insufficient funds. The court reversed the defendant's conviction. The evidence showed that the victim gave no specific directions as to how the $2,500 was to be applied by the defendant. The victim's only interest after freely parting with the cash was in receiving the future services that the defendant had agreed to perform on his behalf or in receiving a refund if those future services did not produce the desired result. The court concluded that this evidence would not authorize a finding that the defendant obtained the $2,500 from the victim "under an agreement or other known legal obligation to make a specified application" thereof.

In Lovell v. State, the victim agreed to engage the defendant to do cabinetry work. The court held that neither the defendant's written agreement with the victim nor the victim's testimony showed that the defendant was obligated to apply any portion of the contract price to specific cabinet materials of identifiable quality. There simply was no evidence of the defendant's failure to apply funds in a manner specified in any agreement. Consequently, the evidence was insufficient to authorize the jury's verdict that the defendant committed theft by conversion, as it merely showed that the defendant failed to perform his contract to deliver cabinets.

4. Conversion

To be convicted under § 16-8-4, the defendant must not only violate the agreement or obligation but must also convert the property to his own use. The clearest example of satisfaction of this element would be a defendant who took some personal property which he was supposed to transfer to X for the owner's benefit but instead sold it, leased it, or otherwise disposed of it to Y. Nowhere does the code define "convert," but in the civil context it has been held to consist of "any distinct act of dominion wrongfully asserted over one's property in denial of his right or inconsistent with it." The problems in proving a conversion under § 16-8-4, however, are that the evidence is usually circumstantial; the converted property can be, and usually is, money; and the statute applies where the agreement contemplates the defendant's using his own property of equivalent value to satisfy the terms of the agreement, rather than the actual property of another which the defendant has obtained.

A defendant can satisfy the terms of an agreement, but still violate the statute by converting the victim's funds from their intended and agreed-upon application to the defendant's own use. In Cochran v. State, the victims acknowledged that they did, indeed, receive their share of the property for the funds that they tendered, and the evidence showed that all of the funds were used to purchase the property. However, the court held that the jury was authorized to find that the defendants converted the victims' money by using those funds to purchase most of the defendants' share in the property because the evidence showed that the victims' money, which provided approximately 83 percent of the purchase price, paid not only for the victims' 50 percent share of the property but also for 33 percent of the defendants' 37.5 percent share of the property.

Section 16-8-4(a) does not require the converted funds to be titled in the accused's name; it merely sets forth that the funds or property be knowingly converted to the accused's "own use." Thus, in Cochran v. State, the court held that although the evidence reflected that the property purchased with the converted funds was titled in the name of the defendant's wife, given the fact that the defendant routinely purchased property under his wife's name, the jury was authorized to conclude that the conversion which the defendant was instrumental in performing was for his use.

Proof of conversion vel non lies in the explanation or failure to explain proved discrepancies between amounts received and disbursements going toward the fulfillment of the contract. In Cox v. State, it appeared without contradiction from the state's evidence that the defendant did not use the money to pay the victim's automobile insurance premium. The evidence showed that, instead, the defendant abandoned his insurance office without notifying the victim. Although the defendant purportedly established an office in another town, he failed to return the victim's telephone calls, and the victim was unable to find him in that town. This evidence was sufficient to authorize the jury to infer that the defendant fraudulently converted the money to his own use.

The courts have emphasized that conversion is a separate requirement for violation of the agreement. If the only proof is that the contract was breached, then no conviction shall lie. In Baker v. State, the defendant contractor was paid money to build a house and, despite payments being made by the prospective homeowners, unpaid bills still existed. Stressing that the "gravamen of the offense . . . is fraudulent conversion, not failure to comply with a contractual obligation," the court said that the mere unpaid bills did not necessarily prove a conversion to the contractor's own use.

First, the materials may have simply cost more than the contractor expected. Second, the agreement may have permitted payment of labor costs before payment of material costs and the materials might be covered by the last, unpaid installment of the contract price. At any rate, mere existence of unpaid bills did not prove that the contractor had converted the money to his own use. The court hinted that the continued existence of unpaid bills after payment delivered to defendant for the explicit purpose of paying the bills might suffice for proof of conversion. The court, in a later opinion in the same case, reversed the conviction for lack of evidence of conversion. While Baker indicates that breach of the contract is not sufficient proof of conversion it would seem to be necessary. One can hardly be held to be a convertor if one is complying with the agreement.

Baker was distinguished in Jackson v. State where the Court of Appeals held the evidence sufficient in another § 16-8-4 prosecution involving a construction contract. Here, unlike in Baker, the defendant himself testified that he had received the money from his clients, had an obligation to pay for materials, and had, instead, spent the money for other purposes.

Since Baker and Jackson, the General Assembly has enacted § 16-8-15 which punishes all those who, having received payment for improvements to property, use the proceeds "for any other purpose than to pay for labor or service performed on or materials furnished by his order for this specific improvement while any amount for which he may be or become liable for such labor, services, or materials remains unpaid commits a felony." This would seem to make precise the obligation of a contractor and impose these obligations as a matter of law, regardless of the actual contractual arrangements. Thus, payments made for improving real property are frozen, by law, in the hands of the improver until all debts to suppliers are satisfied.

To convict a defendant under § 16-8-15, it is necessary to prove the creation of a trust described in the indictment and a fraudulent breach of it in the manner alleged. In Teston v. State, although the indictment charged the defendant with misappropriation of "proceeds of payments made to him on account of improving certain real property, to wit: a house being built for Debbie Harrell in Coffee County," the court found that the evidence did not establish that the defendant was entrusted with funds for the specific purpose (the Harrell house construction) set forth in the indictment. Harrell made no payments to the defendant for construction of a house, nor had she entered into a contract to purchase the house from the defendant. The funds drawn by the defendant pursuant to his construction loan with the bank were shown by the loan documents to be for "business—construction," and not only for "a house being built for Debbie Harrell." Further, the loan was secured by the defendant's assets, not by Harrell.

The constructive trust fund doctrine imposes a constructive trust in favor of subcontractors and material suppliers on funds paid by the owner to a contractor. A subcontractor or material supplier, in order to invoke the constructive trust fund doctrine, must file a valid lien pursuant to the Georgia lien statutes. In Doyle Dickerson Co. v. Durden, the Court of Appeals noted that there is nothing in § 16-8-15 which makes explicit provision for the creation of a constructive trust in favor of subcontractors and material suppliers. Also, the violation of this statute does not automatically give rise to a civil cause of action on the part of one who claims to have been injured thereby since reference must be made to the applicable provisions of tort law.

A general problem with identifying a conversion under § 16-8-4 is that, by its terms, the statute applies when the defendant was permitted, under the agreement, to use his own property of equivalent value to satisfy the agreement, rather than the actual property of the victim. Because the victim's property may be money, how does one know when there has been a conversion? For example, before § 16-8-15 was enacted, if the construction contract did not require the actual check delivered to the homebuilder to be delivered to suppliers, and the check was simply deposited in the contractor's checking account, at what point could it be said that there had been a conversion? When the next check was written on the account? When the account balance went below the level of outstanding debts? When it was exhausted? This is a difficulty which is hard to overcome without direct evidence or an admission of conversion.

5. Mens Rea

The statutory language requires that the conversion be done "knowingly." In Baker v. State, the court interpreted this to mean fraudulent conversion or an intent not to return. The court in Jackson v. State held that fraudulent intent was what distinguished a criminal conversion from a breach of contract. This fraudulent intent can be established by circumstantial evidence. An intent to return equivalent property has been held not to negate this intent in a pre-1968 embezzlement case. Also, it has been held that later acquiescence by the owner of the property does not negate the intent at the time of the conversion.

A statutory presumption of intent to convert is constructed in § 16-8-4(b), where a government employee or financial institution employee fails to pay an account upon a lawful demand. The value of this presumed intention is questionable if there also must be a proof of an act of conversion. Surely, the failure to pay will not suffice for a showing of a conversion.

It should be noted that the claim of right affirmative defense of § 16-8-10 applies to § 16-8-4 prosecutions. Thus, there is no theft by conversion if there is an honest belief of the defendant that he was authorized to dispose of the property the way he did.

Notwithstanding the statutory presumption that "[a] failure to pay for material or labor furnished for [real] property improvements [is] prima-facie evidence of intent to defraud," § 16-8-15 requires the state to prove not only a general criminal intent but also a specific intent to defraud beyond a reasonable doubt.

6. Separate Offenses

Where the defendant has committed three prohibited acts of theft by conversion against the same victim, based on three separate failures to apply three separate payments to the purpose specified for each such payment, three sequential but entirely separate crimes have been committed against the victim, and a conviction and separate sentence for each crime is authorized.

7. Constitutionality

In Smith v. State, the defendant urged the Georgia Supreme Court to strike down § 16-8-4 as unconstitutional because it provided for imprisonment for debt and involuntary servitude and it was violative of due process. The court rejected the defendant's argument on the grounds that the punishment was not for the contractual debt, rather for the conversion of the victim's property by the defendant. The court found inapposite a prior state case in which the court struck down a statute which punished an employer's willful failure to pay his employees' wages. In that case, the court said, there was a presumption of fraud implied from the fact of legal indebtedness. No similar presumption is operative under § 16-8-4. Instead, this statute creates a form of larceny after trust and not criminal punishment for indebtedness. In dissent, Justice Gunter complained that because the statute, by its terms, is applicable where the original agreement between the parties permits the defendant to treat the owner's property as his own and permits the defendant to use his own property of equivalent value to carry out his obligations under the agreement, that the statute permits imprisonment for debt. In other words, the dissent urged that in that kind of agreement not only is it hard to identify the conversion, there is no conversion and the only "act" being punished is the status of indebtedness.

The focus of Justice Gunter's dissent was the "agreement" provision which punishes the defendant who converts in violation of the agreement. The statute also punishes those who convert in violation of "other known legal obligation." The constitutionality of the latter provision was at issue in Jackson v. State. The Court of Appeals in Jackson rejected, by a bare majority, the claim of the four dissenters that this provision rendered the statute unconstitutional. The Jackson dissenters made this claim because the "other known legal obligation" language would make "every employee, who receives a salary, a criminal if he did not use that salary for paying his 'known legal obligation[s].' " The dissent apparently overlooked the statutory requirement that the converted property be that of another. When an employee receives earned wages, the money is not the property "of another;" it is his property.

In Connally v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court rejected the defendant's constitutional challenge to the theft by conversion statute and affirmed his conviction because the state constitution does not forbid imprisonment for criminal conduct, even though the criminal conduct also results in a civil debt. The state constitution prohibits prosecutions based solely on the failure to repay a lawful debt. The theft by conversion statute, however, requires more than proof of a failure to comply with any contractual obligation. It requires proof of criminal intent: the knowing appropriation of funds or property belonging to another. Because the statute requires proof of a criminal intent, it does not violate the constitutional prohibition against imprisonment for debt.

The court also rejected the defendant's contention that the theft by conversion statute is unconstitutionally vague. The defendant, who was a trustee of several trusts, took money from those trusts for his personal use. The court found that the statute provides more than adequate notice to a person of ordinary intelligence that a trustee's intentional appropriation of trust funds for his personal use and for speculative business ventures is criminal conduct.

8. Conversion of Leased Personal Property

In 1988, the General Assembly repealed § 16-8-19, which prohibited the conversion of leased personal property. However, in the same act the General Assembly amended the theft by conversion statute, § 16-8-4, to include "leased or rented personal property" as the property protected by that statute.

In 1994, the General Assembly further amended the theft by conversion statute to include leased or rented personal property having a replacement cost value greater than $100 and personal property such as heavy equipment, tractors, and farm equipment as the property protected by that statute. A person is presumed to have knowingly converted such personal property in his possession or under his control by virtue of a lease or rental agreement if that person fails to return the personal property within five days, Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays excluded, after the owner of the personal property or the owner's agent has mailed to that person a letter demanding return of the personal property.

In Sherrod v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court found the statutory presumption in § 16-8-4(c)(2) to be mandatory. This provision mandates the finding of all the elements of the crime of theft by conversion of leased property when the state merely proves that the demand letter was sent in accordance with the statute. Accordingly, the court declared this mandatory presumption to be unconstitutional. Since this presumption applied to elements of the crime that were at issue in the case and since evidence of the defendant's guilt was not overwhelming, the court considered the state's reliance upon the presumption to be harmful error.

I. Other Theft Crimes

Two theft offenses are defined solely on the basis of the type of property taken. Section 16-8-13 punishes theft of a trade secret and § 16-8-20 punishes livestock thefts. From the wording of the two statutes, it is clear that, as for the mens rea and actus reus provisions, they are virtually identical to the general prohibition of theft by taking (§ 16-8-2).

Section 16-8-13 has a $100 dividing line between felony and misdemeanor, unlike the $500 dividing line of § 16-8-12. Also, the § 16-8-13 felony offense (which is not reducible) carries a one to five year prison sentence and a fine of not more than $50,000 in contrast to the one to ten years' imprisonment under § 16-8-12.

Livestock theft, for purposes of § 16-8-20, is a felony punishable by one to ten years' imprisonment and a $1,000 fine. If the fair market value of the livestock is less than $100 the theft is a misdemeanor.

A final specific theft crime defined in terms of the type of property taken is found at § 16-8-21. This statute makes it a misdemeanor to take a shopping cart from a store or to abandon it anywhere except the parking lot on the store premises. Section 16-8-21(d) requires that the store owner post at least three copies of the statute in the store before the removal of a shopping cart becomes a crime.

J. Stolen Property Offenses

Included in the criminal code are four separate offenses dealing with offenders who have some connection to stolen property other than having stolen it. These offenses are theft by receiving stolen property, theft by receiving property stolen in another state, theft by bringing stolen property into this state, and retail property fencing.

1. Theft by Receiving Stolen Property

The most important of the stolen property offenses is theft by receiving stolen property (§ 16-8-7). There are two parts to the actus reus and two parts to the mens rea of this crime.

a. Actus Reus

The first part of the actus reus is written in the alternative. The defendant who "receives, disposes of, or retains" the forbidden property has committed the actus reus. Thus, there need be no proof of the transfer of the goods to the defendant, and the retention of property after guilty knowledge is obtained is criminal. This changes Georgia law prior to 1968 which required a concurrence of guilty knowledge and the acquisition of the property. In addition to the alternative means of satisfying the first part of the actus reus, the statute itself defines "receiving," one of the alternatives, very broadly to include "acquiring possession or control or lending on the security of the property." This provision indicates that for purposes of this statute obtaining a security interest in a piece of property is analogous to controlling or possessing it.

The Court of Appeals has decided a number cases concerning what evidence will sustain a finding of possession or control of stolen property. In Williamson v. State, the court held that merely because the gun in question was found under the defendant's seat in an automobile was not enough to sustain a finding of possession. Similarly, in London v. State, considering the lack of direct evidence as to the defendant's possession of or control over the stolen guns and the number of people who had equal access to the places in the apartment where the guns ultimately were found, the court concluded that there was insufficient evidence to sustain a finding of possession or control. In Thomas v. State, however, evidence showing that the defendant had five cartridges in his pocket at the time of his arrest, which were similar to those in the gun at the time of its theft, and that he hid the gun shortly before his arrest was enough to sustain a finding of possession. In Dukes v. State, the court held that the investigating officer's hearsay testimony that the owner of the vehicle informed him that she wanted to have a warrant issued for the defendant's arrest for the theft of her vehicle was not probative evidence that the defendant received or was in possession of the stolen vehicle. In Greenwood v. State, the court held that the defendant's statement, that the stolen truck was his, could be considered as evidence of possession or receipt of the stolen property. In Watkins v. State, the court held that when the victim was placed in the trunk of his automobile or his liberty otherwise restricted by being subjected involuntarily to the will of the defendant's co-conspirators, the co-conspirators were in control and possession of the automobile sufficient to support the conviction of the defendant, who joined the conspiracy later, for theft by receiving stolen property. The evidence was overwhelming that the victim at no time regained possession and control over his vehicle during the course of the conspiracy, notwithstanding his physical presence in the vehicle.

One cannot be convicted of the crime of receiving stolen property absent exercise of control over the stolen goods, or if one is a passenger, intentionally aiding and abetting the commission of the crime. In In Interest of C. W., no evidence was presented by the state that the juvenile ever retained, disposed of, acquired possession of, or controlled the stolen van, nor was any evidence presented of any affirmative act by the juvenile that rose to the level of aiding and abetting the crime. All evidence indicated that the juvenile was simply along for the ride. Thus, the juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for the offense of theft by receiving stolen property had to be reversed.

In Clark v. State, the Court of Appeals held that the essence of this portion of the actus reus was the act of the defendant in obtaining the property from another person. While this is undoubtedly true about the receiving alternative, the words "dispose" and "retain" hardly connote the same requirement of a third person. On its facts, Clark is undoubtedly correct in holding that collateral estoppel forbids the same person from being convicted for both "receiving" and stealing the property because those two situations are contradictory, but it is not equally clear that a defendant's double jeopardy rights would be violated by convictions for both theft and retention or both theft and disposing.

Where a defendant is indicted for "retaining" stolen property, it is not necessary for the state to show how and when the defendant came to have possession, so long as there is sufficient evidence that he retained the stolen property with guilty knowledge. In Floyd v. State, police officers observed a rental truck being driven to the rear of a department store. One of the officers found the truck parked behind the store. A burglary suspect later identified as the defendant was pursued and apprehended, and the key to the truck was found in his pocket. A police officer later determined that the truck had been stolen. The court held that this evidence was sufficient to show retention of stolen property.

The second part of the actus reus is that the goods must be stolen goods. There is no doubt that stolen property includes all property taken in what traditionally would be larceny. As for property obtained by embezzlement or false pretenses, although there is authority from other jurisdictions that such property is not stolen, it would seem that the legislative purpose in consolidating the pre-1968 theft crimes would require adoption of the view that property originally obtained by embezzlement and false pretenses is stolen property.

In Poole v. State, the assistant manager of the victimized store testified that the property was stolen and that the merchandise bore the store label, which would have been removed if sold. The Court of Appeals held that this evidence was sufficient proof of the stolen nature of the goods. The court has also stated that identification of the victim is not a part of the required proof in a theft by receiving case.

In Lopez v. State, the arresting officer found in the car in which the defendant was a passenger a pistol, stamped "Restricted to Law Enforcement Government Only" and fully loaded with Winchester "black talon" hollow-point bullets, ammunition police officers use. The officer reported the serial number on the weapon to dispatch, who told the officer that the pistol had been reported stolen. The officer testified that such a weapon was not available for public sale and could only have been obtained by theft or on the black market. The Court of Appeals found, however, that the officer's testimony that radio dispatch identified the pistol as stolen was nonprobative hearsay. Furthermore, the fact that the weapon was labeled for law enforcement use only and loaded with police-issue ammunition did not exclude the possibility that the weapon may have been given away or sold on the black market in violation of the warning. Consequently, the court held that the circumstantial evidence of a larcenous taking was insufficient to sustain the defendant's conviction for theft by receiving.

The state, of course, bears the burden of proving that the goods in the defendant's possession were the ones proven to have been stolen. In Causey v. State, where the indictment and proof showed that "cotton pajamas" had been stolen and the search of the defendant's premises yielded "739 assorted ladies smocks," the court reversed the conviction for failure to prove the stolen nature of the goods in the defendant's possession. Likewise, in Johnson v. State, the court reversed a § 16-8-7 conviction where the only evidence that the goods were the subject of a theft was the testimony of a company official that it would be "unlikely" that the goods had been sold legitimately by the manufacturer. In Dunbar v. State, however, the court upheld the defendant's conviction because it found that the state had proved the ownership and identity of the stolen vehicle. The year, make, model, and tag number of the vehicle driven by the defendant at the time of his arrest were identified by the victim and the arresting officer at trial and matched the description of the vehicle set out in the indictment as the vehicle stolen from the victim. In Johnson v. State, the defendants' convictions were upheld even though the owner of the getaway car did not testify. Two of the defendants admitted to a law enforcement officer that the getaway car had been stolen, and there was evidence that the car's steering column was busted in such a way as to indicate to an investigating officer that the vehicle had been stolen.

The technical quality of an owner's interest need not be pursued in a prosecution for theft by receiving, because ownership is important only in the sense of whether the goods were owned by someone other than the accused. In Greeson v. State, the court held that the variance between the indictment and the evidence concerning the ownership of the stolen vehicle was not fatal. The state showed that someone other than the defendant owned the vehicle, and the indictment gave sufficient notice of the property which was the subject of the prosecution.

Under the law prior to 1968, an essential element of receiving stolen goods was that the goods were stolen by some person other than the defendant. Under the present law, the state is not required to prove that the defendant did not steal the goods.

Where direct and uncontested evidence identifies the defendant as the original thief, the defendant cannot be convicted of theft by receiving.

b. Mens Rea

The most heavily litigated portion of § 16-8-7 is the mens rea requirement that the defendant "know or should know" that the goods were stolen. As long ago as 1886, in Cobb v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court acknowledged that " . . . it is rare that knowledge can be brought home to the receiver of . . . goods stolen by somebody who knows what the receiver knew touching the fact that they were stolen. The circumstances, the time, the secrecy, all the transactions before, at the time and afterwards, may be brought to bear upon what was the knowledge of the receiver . . .." The wording of the current statute eases the state's burden somewhat in that knowledge need not be coincident with the acquiring of the goods because the statute punishes the retention of stolen goods with guilty knowledge. The state is also aided in that the statute does not require subjective awareness. The defendant who should have, but did not, know of the goods' stolen character is guilty. Permitting the jury to convict on negligence, however, does not change the prosecutor's burden much in actuality because in a circumstantial evidence case the most important factor in determining what the defendant actually knew is the surrounding circumstances which indicate what he should have known. Whether the defendant possessed the requisite guilty knowledge that the property was stolen is for the jury to decide.

The rule with regard to the sufficiency of evidence of guilty knowledge is easily stated but not quite as easily applied. "Unexplained possession of recently stolen goods can be used in conjunction with other evidence to infer guilty knowledge, but standing alone it will not . . . authorize a conviction."

The question of how much and what type of "other evidence" is required is often before the courts. While every prosecutor would like to be able to introduce testimony from the thief that he told the defendant the goods were stolen, this is understandably rare. In affirming convictions, the courts have relied upon a number of factors in the transactions as indicating guilty knowledge, such as (1) the removal of identification marks; (2) attempting to disguise the stolen property; (3) the marked discrepancy between purchase and market price; (4) nighttime transactions; (5) trafficking in weapons "on the street"; (6) the urgency of the seller to deal with the defendant; (7) common knowledge that this type of goods is often stolen; (8) the lack of paperwork showing ownership; (9) contradictory statements concerning one's ownership and possession of property; (10) evidence showing that stolen merchandise is often traded for illegal drugs along with evidence that the defendant was guilty of trafficking in cocaine; (11) the defendant's knowledge of his companion's propensity for theft together with evidence that the car belonged to someone else; (12) the defendant's knowledge of the perpetrators' crimes and his assistance in disposing of some of the stolen property; (13) an acknowledgment of the amount of stolen money remaining and an awareness that the defendants were living thousands of dollars beyond their means; and (14) the use of cash instead of checks. Also, the defendant's reaction to law enforcement officials in denying the possession of the goods, fleeing upon the approach of law enforcement officials, throwing the goods from a car as police approach, and hiding the goods shortly before his arrest have been relied upon by the courts.

In a few cases, the Court of Appeals has affirmed § 16-8-7 convictions on extremely weak evidence. For example, in G. W. v. State, the court pointed to the defendant's failure to explain his possession (which ought to be irrelevant under Higginbotham) and the fact that the defendant was found in possession of a car key to another car on the same lot as the stolen car. The court did not explain how this demonstrated knowledge of the stolen nature of the car. In Poole v. State, the only evidence in addition to the possession was the fact that the defendant threw the goods in question out of his car when approached. The court decided this was evidence of guilty retention of stolen goods knowing they were stolen. In Hurston v. State, although there was sufficient evidence to show that the passenger of a vehicle was aware that it was stolen, thereby satisfying the mens rea requirement of the statute, the only evidence the court found to satisfy the actus reus requirement of possession, control, or retention of the stolen vehicle was that the driver left the passenger alone in the vehicle with the motor running when he went into a convenience store. The evidence in these cases does not seem much stronger, if at all, than the evidence in which the court has reversed convictions because the only evidence was that the defendant was found in the same car as the stolen goods, the defendant tried twice to pawn the goods, the defendant tried to keep police out of the motel room where a stolen gun was hidden in a drawer, or the defendant called a later recipient to get rid of the goods because "they was in hot water."

The definition of theft by receiving stolen property involves another mental element in that the intent to restore the property to the owner is made a defense to a § 16-8-7 prosecution. This might indicate that an intent to deprive is an element which is part of the prosecution's burden, but no cases have held this. The provision might as easily be read as simply providing an affirmative defense on which the defendant bears the initial burden of presenting evidence while the state bears the ultimate burden of proof once the defense has been introduced into the case. The statutory claim of right affirmative defense found in § 16-8-10 is applicable to this as well as most of the other theft offenses.

It is the opinion of the Attorney General that stolen property acquired by a pawn shop remains the property of the original owner. If a pawnbroker does not know at the time of acquiring an item that it is stolen property, but later discovers that the item has been stolen and retains it, the pawnbroker has committed the offense of theft by receiving stolen property.

Evidence of a prior similar theft by receiving incident is admissible to show the defendant's state of mind, that is, whether he intended to retain property he knew or should have known was stolen.

c. Double Jeopardy

In seeking dismissal of a pending charge for theft by receiving on the basis of double jeopardy, the defendant has the burden of proving the facts necessary to establish that the pending charge was committed by the same act and thus constitutes the same offense as the charge under which he was put in jeopardy. In the absence of facts establishing that there was only one offense, the defendant has failed to carry his burden and the denial of his substantive double jeopardy claim would be proper.

d. Relationship to Other Offenses

Important Notice about Repudiation of Actual or Same Evidence Test: The Georgia Supreme Court repudiated the actual evidence test in Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), because it found this test to be inconsistent with the statutory framework governing the prohibition against multiple convictions for included offenses in Georgia. This inconsistency resulted in years of confusion and unpredictable results. In its place, the court adopted the required evidence test and overruled any prior case law that is inconsistent with it. Thus, any prior case law applying the actual evidence test is no longer controlling and should not be relied upon to determine whether one offense is included in another under § 16-1-6(1). The discussion of such case law is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to pending prosecutions that arose before the Drinkard decision. See MULTIPLE CONVICTIONS, II. Tests to Determine Presence of Multiple Convictions, for a complete discussion of the Drinkard decision.

Theft by receiving a motor vehicle is not a lesser included offense of motor vehicle hijacking. The offense of theft by receiving is intended to catch the person who buys or receives the stolen vehicle, as distinct from the principal thief.

Theft by receiving stolen property is not a lesser included offense of armed robbery but is a separate offense proved by an entirely different set of facts.

Although the weapon used to assault the victim is stolen, the offense of theft by receiving stolen property does not merge into the offense of aggravated assault as a matter fact because the theft offense requires proof that the defendant knew or should have known that the weapon was stolen. No such proof is required for an aggravated assault conviction.

A defendant can not be guilty both of theft by taking and theft by receiving the same property. As a matter of law, the crimes are mutually exclusive, and the defendant can not be sentenced on both. Although the crimes are mutually exclusive, the state may charge the defendant with both to provide alternative charges for the jury to choose if the state fails to carry the burden on identity.

Because the offenses of entering an automobile and theft by receiving involve different proscribed conduct and have distinctive elements, they do not merge as a matter of law. However, these offenses may merge as a matter of fact based on the evidence presented at trial.

Erroneously instructing a jury on the unindicted offense of theft by receiving stolen property, unless prejudicial or harmful as revealed by the entire record, does not require or demand reversal.

A conviction for kidnapping would not be void as mutually exclusive of a prior conviction of theft by receiving stolen property. The crime of kidnapping contains no element that the accused either stole property or received stolen property. Because the two crimes have completely different elements, convictions based on them would not be mutually exclusive on the ground that a finding of guilt on the essential elements of one crime by definition excludes a finding of guilt based on an essential element of the other.

2. Theft by Receiving Property Stolen in Another State and Theft by Bringing Stolen Property into this State

Section 16-8-8 creates the crime of theft by receiving property stolen in another state. This section is identical in language to § 16-8-7, but it deals only with property stolen outside of Georgia. In Golden v. State, the court had held that receiving goods stolen in another state was not illegal because it was not larceny to bring stolen goods into the state. The court suggested corrective legislation and the predecessor of § 16-8-8 was enacted. Another statutory provision, the predecessor of present § 16-8-9, was enacted making it illegal to bring stolen property into the state with knowledge that it was stolen.

Subsequent to the original enactments of these statutes in 1918, it was held that in a prosecution for knowingly receiving stolen property, it was not necessary for the state to show that the subject property was stolen in Georgia, thereby minimizing, if not destroying altogether, the need for this corrective legislation. The drafters of the 1968 criminal code did not find it necessary to include these statutes in the code. However, with the enactment of § 16-8-8 and § 16-8-9 in 1972, these statutes are again a part of the criminal code.

The guilty knowledge of § 16-8-9 can be established by direct or circumstantial evidence and can be inferred from circumstances which would, in the opinion of the jury, lead a reasonable person to believe that the property was stolen.

Evidence regarding the defendant's gang activity may be admitted to establish his motive for bringing stolen property into this state.

3. Retail Property Fencing

a. Definition of Offense

Section 16-8-5.2 defines two types of retail property fencing. A person commits one type when he receives, disposes of, or retains retail property which was unlawfully taken or shoplifted over a period not to exceed 180 days with the intent to (1) transfer, sell, or distribute such retail property to a retail property fence or (2) attempt or cause such retail property to be offered for sale, transfer, or distribution for money or other things of value.

Whoever knowingly receives, possesses, conceals, stores, barters, sells, or disposes of retail property with the intent to distribute any retail property which is known or should be known to have been taken or stolen in violation of this law with the intent to distribute the proceeds, or to otherwise promote, manage, carry on, or facilitate this offense commits the other type of retail property fencing.

b. Inference of Intent to Profit from Scheme

It is not necessary in any prosecution under § 16-8-5.2 for the state to prove that any intended profit was actually realized. The trier of fact may infer that a particular scheme or course of conduct was undertaken for profit from all of the attending circumstances.

c. Defenses

It is not a defense that the property was obtained by means other than through the commission of a theft offense if the property was explicitly represented to the accused as being obtained through the commission of a theft.

d. Forfeiture of Property

Any property constituting proceeds derived from or realized through a violation of § 16-8-5.2 is subject to forfeiture to the State of Georgia except that no property of any owner shall be forfeited, to the extent of the interest of such owner, by reason of an act or omission established by such owner to have been committed or omitted without knowledge or consent of such owner. The procedure for forfeiture and disposition of forfeited property is provided for under § 16-13-49.

e. Separate Offense

Each violation of § 16-8-5.2 constitutes a separate offense.

J.1. Inference of Intent to Avoid Payment Due for Rental or Lease of Personal Property in Prosecutions of Certain Theft Crimes

The trier of fact may infer that the accused intended to avoid payment due for the rental or lease of any personal property in a prosecution for theft by taking, theft by deception, theft by conversion, or theft of services, if a person knowingly (1) used false identification; (2) provided false information on a written contract; (3) made, drew, uttered, executed, or delivered an instrument for the payment of money on any bank or other depository in exchange for present consideration, knowing that it would not be honored by the drawee; (4) abandoned any property at a location that is not the location agreed upon for return and that would not be reasonably known to the owner; (5) returned any property to a location that would not reasonably be known to the owner without notifying the owner; or (6) returned any property at a time beyond posted business hours of the owner.

No person can be convicted of these theft crimes, however, where there was an agreement to delay payment for such property or services or the accused made payment in full within two business days after returning the property or obtaining the services.

K. Venue

Although the general venue provision for criminal actions requires that a crime be prosecuted in the county "where the crime was committed," certain theft offenses have their own special venue provision which is much broader. According to § 16-8-11, the prosecution of these certain theft offenses is properly brought "in any county in which the accused exercised control over the property which was the subject of the theft." The provisions of § 16-8-11 simply continue preexisting theft venue provisions.

In 1994, § 16-8-11 was amended to provide that in any prosecution for theft by conversion in which there is a written rental agreement for personal property, the crime is considered to have been committed in the county in which the accused signed the rental agreement.

The state cannot establish venue by means of acts that are not an element of a theft offense by merely alleging that the acts constituted an "ongoing effort" to conceal the already completed theft offense. While efforts to conceal a theft offense may amount to the separate offense of concealing evidence of a crime, such actions do not form part of the theft offense.

Four theft offenses are not specifically covered by the venue provisions of § 16-8-11. These theft offenses include theft by extortion (§ 16-8-16), entering an automobile or other motor vehicle with intent to commit a theft or felony (§ 16-8-18), livestock theft (§ 16-8-20), and the removal or abandonment of shopping carts (§ 16-8-21). These offenses are covered by the general venue provision for criminal actions (§ 17-2-2).

Circumstantial as well as direct evidence may be used to prove venue in theft cases.

L. Punishment for Certain Theft Crimes

Section 16-8-12 establishes a general punishment scheme which covers most theft crimes. The scheme punishes on the basis of the value of the property stolen, the type of property stolen, the nature of the offender, or the age of the victim.

If the property which was the subject of the theft was $500 or less in value, a person convicted of any of the theft offenses covered by § 16-8-12 shall be punished as for a misdemeanor. If the property which was the subject of the theft exceeded $500 in value, a person convicted of the theft shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years or, in the discretion of the trial judge, as for a misdemeanor. There can only be one sentence and conviction if several items are stolen as part of a continuous criminal act.

As originally enacted, § 16-8-12, which provides for the punishment of theft by taking and other theft crimes, overlapped and conflicted with former § 16-8-17, which provided for the punishment of theft of a motor vehicle or a motor vehicle part. Both sections provided for the punishment of the theft of a motor vehicle. Section 16-8-12 provided for punishment of one to ten years imprisonment, while former § 16-8-17 provided for punishment of three to seven years imprisonment.

In Chandler v. State, the Court of Appeals in its holding on venue acknowledged that a motor vehicle theft was a theft by taking and stated that former § 16-8-17 merely provided the punishment for motor vehicle theft. However, in Simmons v. State the court acknowledged that a 1978 amendment, which raised the felony property value level of § 16-8-12, had "impliedly repealed" former § 16-8-17. The court based its conclusion upon language in the amendment's preamble describing the act's purpose as being "to change the penalty provisions relating to the crimes of theft; to repeal conflicting laws . . . ." Simmons held, therefore, that sentencing under § 16-8-12 was proper for theft of a motor vehicle. Apparently, the court viewed the 1978 legislative action as a purposeful reenactment of one of two conflicting provisions which thereby repealed the other statute.

Section § 16-8-17 was repealed by the General Assembly in 1981. The theft of a motor vehicle or a motor vehicle part is considered a theft by taking under § 16-8-2 and is now punished as provided in § 16-8-12(a)(5). Under § 16-8-12(a)(5), if the property which was the subject of the theft was a motor vehicle or was a motor vehicle part or component which exceeded $100 in value, the offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years. In the trial judge's discretion, the felony may be reduced to a misdemeanor. Any person who is convicted of a second or subsequent offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than 20 years. Subsequent offenses are punishable under § 17-10-7.

Section 16-8-12(a)(5)(A) permits felony punishment for the theft of a motor vehicle, regardless of value, and requires evidence of value exceeding $100 only where a motor vehicle part or component was the subject of the theft. This reading of the statute comports with § 16-8-18, which defines as a felony the entry of a person into a motor vehicle with intent to commit a theft. If the entry into the motor vehicle with the intent to steal is a felony, the actual theft of the car (as defined in the theft statutes and as punished in § 16-8-12) should be no less.

If a theft or a fraudulent act was committed by a person engaged in telemarketing, in any activity on the Internet, or in home repair or improvement work, the offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years. In the trial judge's discretion, the felony may be reduced to a misdemeanor. Any person who is convicted of a second or subsequent offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years. Subsequent offenses are punishable under § 17-10-7.

If any amount of anhydrous ammonia, as defined in § 16-11-111, is the subject of the theft, the offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years, a fine not to exceed the amount provided by § 17-10-8, or both.

If the property is taken by a fiduciary in breach of his fiduciary obligation or by a government or financial institution officer or employee, the punishment is imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 15 years, a fine not to exceed the amount provided by § 17-10-8, or both. As the drafters of the 1968 criminal code explained, a theft committed by persons in these categories is punished more severely "[b]ecause it is necessary to maintain the integrity of fiduciaries and employees of governments and financial institutions."

The theft of a memorial to the dead or any ornamentation, flower, tree, or shrub placed on, adjacent to, or within any enclosure of a memorial to the dead, is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than three years.

If a privately owned military grave marker, monument, memorial, or plaque is the subject of the theft and its value is $300 or less, the offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than three years. If its value is more than $300, the offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than three nor more than five years.

If a destructive device, explosive, or firearm is the subject of the theft offense, the offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

If a vehicle engaged in the commercial transportation of cargo or its trailer, semitrailer, container, or cargo is the subject of the theft offense, the offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than three nor more than ten years, by a fine not less than $5,000 nor more than $50,000, and, if applicable, the revocation of the defendant's commercial driver's license in accordance with § 40-5-151, or any combination of such penalties.

If the property of the theft was ferrous metals or regulated metal property, as such terms are defined in § 10-1-350, and the sum of the aggregate amount of such property, in its original and undamaged condition, plus any reasonable costs which are or would be incurred in the repair or the attempt to recover any property damaged in the theft or removal of such regulated metal property, exceeds $500, the offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years, a fine of not more than $5,000, or both.

Any person who commits the offense of theft by deception when the property which was the subject of the theft exceeded $500 in value and the offense was committed against a person who is 65 years of age or older is punishable by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than ten years.

The theft of a growing or otherwise unharvested commercial agricultural product which is being grown or produced as a crop is punishable by a fine of not less than $500 and not more than the maximum fine otherwise authorized by law. This minimum fine is not subject to suspension, stay, or probation. The minimum fine is not required in any case in which a sentence of confinement is imposed and the sentence of confinement is not suspended, stayed, or probated. However, in such a case the imposition of any otherwise authorized fine is not prohibited.

The Georgia Supreme Court has held that, despite the dividing line between felony and misdemeanor theft, theft by taking is only one crime, and the punishment for that crime is controlled by the value of the property taken. Therefore, in Mack v. Ricketts, a felony sentence was upheld when the evidence showed felony-level theft, despite the ambiguity in the indictment with respect to the value of the stolen property.

It should be noted that while value is not an element of either theft by taking or theft by receiving, it is relevant for distinguishing between a misdemeanor and a felony for sentencing. Thus, an indictment must allege whether the value of the property taken is over $500 in order to apprise a defendant of whether the offense charged is a misdemeanor or felony. The indictment need not allege the specific amount taken. Value, however, is not relevant to the punishment to be imposed for theft by taking of an automobile. Proof that the item stolen was an automobile is sufficient to support a felony sentence. Thus, any allegation in an indictment concerning the value of the automobile is mere surplusage and need not be proven.

The state carries the burden of proving the value of stolen property, and a showing of any value will support a conviction carrying misdemeanor punishment. In proving value the state may not rely solely on the price, unless the theft was from a retail establishment and then the retail value may be conclusive. The employees of a retail establishment who are familiar with the stolen item are competent to testify as to its retail value. An owner does not have to be an expert to testify as to the value of his property, or that property under his control, provided he has experience or familiarity with such values.

Opinion evidence as to the value of an item has probative value and may be admitted if a foundation is laid showing that the witness has some knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the value of the property or similar property and if the witness gives reasons for the value assessed and has had an opportunity for forming a correct opinion. The fact that his opinion as to value is based in part on hearsay goes to the weight of his testimony and is not a basis for excluding it. A jury is not bound by opinion evidence, however, and it may draw from its own experience in reaching a valuation as to "everyday objects." The jury's awareness of the market value of such "everyday objects," coupled with evidence concerning the cost, time of purchase, and condition of the stolen property would be sufficient to authorize a conviction.

When the only evidence as to value indicates that the theft by taking should carry felony punishment, the trial court is not required to charge the jury that they might recommend the defendant be punished for the misdemeanor grade of the offense.

The cost of the property to the owner, although relevant on the question of value, is not the ultimate determinant. Nor is the replacement cost. The value of stolen property which is the subject of the theft is the fair cash market value either at the time and place of the theft or at any time during the receipt or concealment of the property. The defendant is chargeable with a felony if the stolen property exceeds $500 in value under this criteria; there is no requirement that the value of the property be known to the defendant either when he received the property or thereafter. Thus, evidence that the defendant was in receipt of a stolen lottery ticket at a time when it still had a redemption value of $5,000 would be sufficient to support his conviction for felony theft by receiving stolen property.

In a guilty plea hearing, a negotiated agreement to tender a guilty plea to a "felony" theft offense necessarily incorporates the defendant's voluntary admission of the existence of the factual element that the stolen property had a value greater than $500. This would be a sufficient substitute for evidence of the actual value of the stolen property, so as to authorize the imposition of a felony sentence for the theft offense to which the defendant has pled guilty.

III. Motor Vehicle Chop Shop and Stolen and Altered Property Act

Any person who knowingly and with intent (1) owns, operates, or conducts a chop shop; (2) transports any motor vehicle or motor vehicle part to or from a location knowing it to be a chop shop; or (3) sells, transfers, purchases, or receives any motor vehicle or motor vehicle part either to or from a location knowing it to be a chop shop is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than three years nor more than ten years, by a fine of not more than $100,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Any person who knowingly alters, counterfeits, defaces, destroys, disguises, falsifies, forges, obliterates, or removes a vehicle identification number with the intent to misrepresent the identity or prevent the identification of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle part is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years, by a fine of not more than $50,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Any person who buys, disposes, sells, transfers, or possesses a motor vehicle or motor vehicle part with knowledge that the vehicle identification number of the motor vehicle or motor vehicle part has been altered, counterfeited, defaced, destroyed, disguised, falsified, forged, obliterated, or removed is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years, by a fine of not more than $50,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment. This provision does not apply to legitimate motor vehicle scrap processors, nor does it apply to any owner or authorized possessor of a motor vehicle after it has been recovered by law enforcement authorities after having been reported stolen.

Under the Act, the offenses of attempt, conspiracy, solicitation, aiding and abetting, and being an accessory after the fact are all felonies punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years, by a fine of not more than $25,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

No prosecution shall be brought and no person shall be convicted of any violation under the Act where the acts of such person otherwise constituting a violation were done in good faith in order to comply with the laws or regulations of any state or territory of the United States or of the United States government.

In addition to the above punishments, the Act also provides for restitution, for the seizure of personal property used or possessed in connection with any violation of the Act, for the forfeiture of the seized personal property, and for civil relief from conduct constituting a violation of the Act.

UNLAWFUL EAVESDROPPING AND SURVEILLANCE AND RELATED CRIMES

See also PEEPING TOM.

I. Generally

Part 1 of Article 3 of Chapter 11 of Title 16 contains four related substantive offenses. The offense of "Peeping Tom" is treated separately. The two remaining offenses are unlawful eavesdropping and surveillance (§ 16-11-62) and possession, sale, and distribution of eavesdropping devices (§ 16-11-63).

The provisions of Part 1 of Article 3 of Chapter 11 of Title 16 of the criminal code were designed to address the problems associated with the great possibility in modern society of invasion of an individual's right to privacy resulting from the proliferation of electronic eavesdropping devices and surveillance devices. These problems are also covered by federal legislation. The Georgia invasion of privacy statutes are supplemental to and not inconsistent with the federal law. It should be stressed that both the federal and state statutes are applicable in Georgia state courts and both must be complied with in order to render wiretap evidence admissible in Georgia state proceedings. However, where the state statutes delineate greater restrictions on interceptions and, therefore, provide greater protection to individual privacy rights than federal law, the state statutes are not preempted by the federal law and should be applied in a state proceeding.

II. Unlawful Eavesdropping and Surveillance

Section 16-11-62 sets forth the general prohibition of eavesdropping and surveillance. Section 16-11-62(1) declares that it is unlawful for "[a]ny person in a clandestine manner intentionally to overhear, transmit, or record or attempt to overhear, transmit, or record the private conversation of another which shall originate in any private place." Paragraph (4) makes it unlawful for "[a]ny person intentionally and secretly to intercept by the use of any device, instrument, or apparatus the contents of a message sent by telephone, telegraph, letter, or by any other means of private communication." This provision has been broadly construed to prohibit the interception of all types of telephone conversations, including those made on cordless telephones. Except as otherwise provided by law, these prohibitions include interceptions by family members. Moreover, these prohibitions apply only to the intentional interception of conversations. Thus, a conversation that is inadvertently recorded would not be inadmissible under the statute.

The remaining paragraphs of § 16-11-62 proscribe related invasions of privacy, not necessarily limited to those involving a "device." For example, paragraph (3) makes it unlawful for any person "to go on or about the premises of another or any private place, except as otherwise provided by law, for the purpose of invading the privacy of others by eavesdropping upon their conversations or secretly observing their activities." Paragraph (6) makes it unlawful for any person "to sell, give, or distribute, without legal authority, to any person or entity any photograph, videotape, or record, or copies thereof, of the activities of another which occur in any private place and out of public view without the consent of all persons observed." Additionally, the final omnibus paragraph (7) prohibits "any other acts of a nature similar to those set out in paragraphs (1) through (6) . . . which invade the privacy of another."

There are three major exceptions to the general prohibition in § 16-11-62. These exceptions are concerned with consent, law enforcement officers, and Public Service Commission licenses. The Georgia courts have run into difficulty in determining the contours of the consent exception, but these problems apparently have now been resolved.

In addition to these major exceptions, there is an express exception for observing, photographing, or recording the activities of incarcerated individuals. Since a police car is much like a jail cell, no reasonable expectation of privacy exists for an arrestee seated in the police car. Thus, the recording of a post-arrest conversation in the back seat of the police car does not offend the state's wiretapping statutes. Likewise, since a prisoner has no reasonable expectation of privacy in the calls he places to nonattorneys from jail, the admission of the prisoner's recorded calls at trial would not violate his right to privacy.

There is also an express exception for observing, photographing, or recording the activities of others for the purpose of security, crime prevention, or crime detection. This exception applies to the activities of persons (1) who are on an owner's or occupier's real property or an approach thereto in areas where there is no reasonable expectation of privacy or (2) who are within the curtilage of one's residence. In the latter situation, a photograph, videotape, or record made by the resident, or a copy thereof, may be disclosed to the district attorney or a law enforcement officer and is admissible in a judicial proceeding without the consent of the person observed, photographed, or recorded.

There is no exception in the statute for illegal or immoral conversations even if these conversations can be so characterized. Waiver of privacy can not be based on the content of the conversation, otherwise all criminal conversations would be admissible.

A. Consent Exception

1. Consent by Party to Conservation

The primary problem for the courts in this area had been the delineation of the exceptions to § 16-11-62. This problem had been compounded by the language of the consent exception. Section 16-11-66 provided:

> "Nothing in Code Section 16-11-62 shall prohibit the interception, recording, and divulging of a message sent by telephone, telegraph, letter, or any other means of communication when the sender and receiver thereof expressly or impliedly consent thereto or in those instances wherein the message is initiated or instigated by a person and the message constitutes the commission of a crime or is directly in the furtherance of a crime, provided at least one party thereto consents." (Emphasis added.)

The language of § 16-11-66 suggested that both parties to a conversation had to consent to the interception or recording of a message, except where such message constituted the commission of a crime or was in direct furtherance of a crime. If the message fell within the latter category, only one person had to consent to authorize an interception. It appeared that all other recording of the conversation was outside the § 16-11-66 exception and, thus, illegal under § 16-11-62.

The above interpretation was a literal interpretation of the exception. However, in interpreting § 16-11-62, the Georgia courts had not always taken a "literal" approach to § 16-11-66. The question of the scope of the consent exception had been litigated in a situation where one of the parties to a conversation recorded the conversation without the knowledge of the other party. If the conversation was not the actual commission of a crime or in direct furtherance, § 16-11-66 appeared to be unavailable to authorize the tape recording.

In Cross v. State, the Georgia Court of Appeals, in analyzing such a situation, held that § 16-11-62 prohibited only nonparties to a conversation from recording or divulging information. Accordingly, it was not unlawful for a party to a conversation to record or transmit a conversation without the knowledge or consent of the other party. Thus, there was no need even to utilize the consent exception. The court justified this interpretation of § 16-11-62 by pointing out that the section's focus was on the overhearing of a conversation, which necessarily involved a nonparty to the conversation. In effect, the court construed § 16-11-62 to incorporate the "misplaced trust" doctrine set out in Hoffa v. United States, under which individuals always are seen to run the risk that those to whom they speak in confidence will betray their trust. The court did recognize that in the situation it was addressing, § 16-11-66 was made "redundant" by its interpretation of § 16-11-62.

Cross sparked a judicial debate that lasted for several years. Several decisions were rendered in which the court adopted a position contrary to the holding in Cross. However, it apparently was settled that Cross correctly stated Georgia law, and the consent exception was largely unnecessary. As the Georgia Supreme Court stated in

Mitchell v. State:

> . . . the General Assembly intended:
> (1) Code § 26-3001(a) [O.C.G.A. § 16-11-62(1)] to prohibit third parties from intercepting in a clandestine manner a private conversation between two or more parties; except under the conditions of
> (2) Code § 26-3006 [O.C.G.A. § 16-11-66], which allows a third party to intercept, record and divulge the conversation, (a) where the parties to the conversation consent, or (b) where the message is a crime or is directly in furtherance of a crime and one party to the conversation consents;
> (4) none of these Code sections prohibits the actual parties to the conversation from recording or divulging it.

Between 1973 when Cross was decided and 1977 when the Georgia Supreme Court adopted the Cross analysis in Mitchell, several cases relied on the consent exception to find no violation of § 16-11-62. In retrospect, these interpretations of § 16-11-66 were unnecessary because under Cross and Mitchell there were no violations of the terms of § 16-11-62 itself.

In 1993, the General Assembly amended the language of the consent exception, apparently in conformance with the Cross/Mitchell rationale. Now, § 16-11-66(a) provides:

> (a) Nothing in Code Section 16-11-62 shall prohibit a person from intercepting a wire, oral, or electronic communication where such person is a party to the communication or one of the parties to the communication has given prior consent to such interception.

A confidential informant's consent to having his conversation monitored by a police officer during a controlled drug buy is implied by the fact that he has permitted the officer to place a body bug on him.

2. Child Consent Procedures; Parental Exception

Prior to 1993, the state could record a child's telephone conversation on its own without having first obtained an investigation warrant as long as it had the valid consent of the child. In Dobbins v. State, police officers, with the consent of the child's father, had arranged for the recording of incriminating phone calls between the child and her molester. The Georgia Supreme Court held that since the evidence showed that the state had obtained neither an investigation warrant nor the valid consent of the child, the recorded telephone conversation containing several incriminating statements made by the defendant to the child was not admissible. The court held further that the father could not consent, on behalf of his child, to the state's recording of the conversation.

The Dobbins decision spurred the General Assembly to amend § 16-11-66 in 1993. This Code section was amended to provide that the telephone conversations of a child under 18 years of age may be recorded and divulged if, upon written application by a private citizen, law enforcement agency, or prosecutor's office, a judge of a superior court and the child consent to such taping. This application does not have to comply with the procedures required for the issuance of an investigation warrant. Consent to the taping could be given only by order of the judge after making certain findings and determinations. Although the Act amending this Code section was originally introduced with a provision allowing for a parent's vicarious consent to the recording of a child's telephone conversation with a suspect, the final version of the Act placed "the decision to grant permission to record [such conversations] in the hands of judges alone as long as certain guidelines [were] followed." Thus, as was held by the Court of Appeals in Bishop v. State, the language of the amendment clearly precluded a parent's vicarious consent to the recording of his child's telephone conversation with a suspect.

The Court of Appeals, however, recognized that this amendment created numerous evidentiary problems in cases when the child is under significant criminal influence by another and the child does not recognize the genuine risk that this influence poses for him. For instance, even if the state or the parents in such a case were to petition a superior court judge for permission to record the telephone conversations between the child and the suspect, the judge would be precluded from issuing his order as long as the child, while under the influence of the suspect, refuses to consent and participate in the recording. Nevertheless, since the language of the amendment was so clear and unambiguous, the court was not authorized to construe it otherwise so that it would have permitted the admission of the tape recordings. Rather, the court found that it was solely the task of the General Assembly to amend the Code section to allow the admission into evidence of tape recordings "made by parents with a good faith, objectively reasonable basis for concern regarding the safety of their children as victims of criminal conduct of another."

At the Court of Appeals' urging, the General Assembly undertook the task of amending the child consent procedures in its 2000 Session. It created a parental exception to these procedures with the enactment of subsection (d) of § 16-11-66. Adopting some of the language used by the court in its decision, this subsection provides that "[t]he provisions of this article shall not be construed to prohibit a parent or guardian of a child under 18 years of age, with or without the consent of such minor child, from monitoring or intercepting telephonic conversations of such minor child with another person by use of an extension phone located within the family home, or electronic or other communications of such minor child from within the family home, for the purpose of ensuring the welfare of such minor child. If the parent or guardian has a reasonable or good faith belief that such conversation or communication is evidence of criminal conduct involving such child as a victim or an attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to involve such child in criminal activity affecting the welfare or best interest of such child, the parent or guardian may disclose the content of such telephonic conversation or electronic communication to the district attorney or a law enforcement officer. A recording or other record of any such conversation or communication made by a parent or guardian in accordance with this subsection that contains evidence of criminal conduct involving such child as a victim or an attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to involve such child in criminal activity shall be admissible in a judicial proceeding except as otherwise provided in subsection

(b) of this Code section." A superior court may give retroactive effect to this enactment.

With the enactment of the parental exception in 2000, Bishop v. State is overruled to the extent that it holds that a parent cannot vicariously consent to the recording of his child's telephone conversation with a suspect. The enactment makes it clear that consent may be given either by order of a judge of a superior court upon written application or by the parent or guardian of the child as provided by the parental exception. Furthermore, the enactment broadens the scope of the child consent procedures to include, in addition to telephone conversations, conversations conducted by "electronic communication," such as e-mail.

Although the child's consent is required before a superior court judge can issue an order authorizing the recording of the child's conservation by a third party, the child alone lacks the capacity to consent to the recording, even if age ten or older. Thus, as a matter of law, the child alone is incapable of giving consent to the recording of his phone calls by a third party either by implication or by subsequent ratification.

However, the child consent procedures apply only to a third party's interception of a child's telephone conversation and does not prohibit a child who is an actual party to the conversation from recording and divulging it.

B. Law Enforcement Exception

Another exception to the prohibitions of § 16-11-62 is found in § 16-11-64 which provides that a law enforcement officer acting in his official capacity can be exempted by following certain procedures.

The Georgia Supreme Court was faced with a constitutional challenge to § 16-11-64 in Granese v. State. The statute was challenged on the basis of the First, Fourth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendments. The court found all of these challenges to be meritless. No First Amendment violation exists because § 16-11-64 does not make private speech the equivalent of public property. There is no Fourth or Fourteenth Amendment violation because § 16-11-64 does not authorize a general search. Finally, the court held that § 16-11-64 does not deprive an individual of his Sixth Amendment right to counsel because no custodial interrogation is involved.

1. Warrant Procedures

As part of Georgia's Support of the War on Terrorism Act of 2002, the General Assembly eliminated the state procedures for the issuance of surveillance warrants and replaced these procedures with a new provision subjecting the issuance of such warrants solely to the terms, conditions, and procedures provided for by federal law. Since the state procedures arguably provided greater protection to individual privacy rights than the federal procedures, the Act's elimination of these procedures effectively enhances state law enforcement's capability to surveil an individual but to the detriment of individual privacy rights. The General Assembly obviously determined that less protection was necessary in order to assist the federal government in its war on terrorism.

a. Current Procedures

As enacted in 2002, § 16-11-64(c) provides that upon written application, under oath, of the prosecuting attorney having jurisdiction over prosecution of the crime under investigation, or the Attorney General, made before a judge of superior court, the court may issue an investigation warrant permitting the use of a surveillance device, as defined in § 16-11-60, for the surveillance of a person or place to the extent the warrant is consistent with and subject to the terms, conditions, and procedures provided for by Chapter 119 of Title 18 of the United States Code Annotated, as amended.

b. Former Procedures

Since warrant procedures are now required to be "consistent with and subject to the terms, conditions, and procedures provided for by Chapter 119 of Title 18 of the United States Code Annotated, as amended," the former state procedures are no longer controlling and should not be followed. These procedures, however, are similar to those applicable under federal law. Hence, the case law discussion construing the former procedures is included below to the extent that it may have some applicability under the current procedures and insofar as it is still applicable to prosecutions arising before the effective date of Georgia's Support of the War on Terrorism Act of 2002.

Former paragraphs (1) through (7) of § 16-11-64(b) prescribed the warrant procedures that law enforcement officers had to follow in order to engage in electronic surveillance activities. These as well as the federal procedures had to be satisfied in order to render the surveillance evidence admissible in Georgia courts. Unless they were satisfied, any evidence obtained would have been in violation of § 16-11-62 and therefore inadmissible. For example, in State v. Toomey, an investigator from the sheriff's office was called on to investigate the unauthorized use of a business phone. After being told that the phone was being used for trafficking in illegal drugs, the investigator himself listened in on these conversations and then obtained a search warrant. The trial court's sustaining of a motion to suppress evidence pursuant to this warrant was upheld on appeal because the procedures required by § 16-11-64 had not been complied with. Thus, the investigator was in violation of § 16-11-62, and the evidence was inadmissible.

The warrant procedures of § 16-11-64 had to be complied with only when law enforcement officers were attempting to use an eavesdropping "device," as that term was defined in § 16-11-60. Other types of eavesdropping could have been engaged in by law enforcement officers. Thus, in Satterfield v. State, the court held that the provisions did not apply where the police overheard a conversation by listening through a thin wall. In Rautenstrauch v. State, the court held that § 16-11-64 did not prevent a law enforcement officer from surreptitiously going upon the premises of another and overhearing a conversation through a window. Of course, whether a law enforcement action passed muster under the Fourth Amendment of the United States Constitution was an entirely different question.

A warrant under § 16-11-64 could have been issued only when there was probable cause to believe that one of the crimes specified in former paragraph (1) of § 16-11-64(b) had been or was being committed. The former paragraph (1) crimes were generally very serious crimes. In Orkin v. State, the defendant, who was charged with conspiracy to commit murder, argued that (1) conspiracy was not one of these crimes because it was not specifically listed in former paragraph (1) and (2) conspiracy was not a "felony involving bodily harm" which was specifically listed in former paragraph (1). The court rejected these arguments, holding that conspiracy to commit murder was a felony involving bodily harm within the meaning of former paragraph (1). The court thus indicated that it would look at the specific facts of a felony to ascertain whether it involved bodily harm rather than looking at felonies in a categorical fashion to determine whether conspiracy, for example, always involved bodily harm.

A warrant to use a videotape camera to depict evidence of a hunter's illegal activities, which instrument or apparatus clearly was a "device" within the meaning of § 16-11-60, would not have been obtainable under the former procedures because a warrant could have been issued only for specified serious felonies, not for misdemeanors. Moreover, a warrant for use of such a device would not have been needed by a law enforcement officer who, in performing his duties, did not invade a private place.

Assuming that the alleged crime being investigated was one of those enumerated in former paragraph (1) of § 16-11-64(b), the question often arose whether the warrant itself was valid. In several cases, an attack on the investigation warrant or the warrant procedure was based on federal law which provided for nonadmissibility of evidence obtained in violation of its provisions. In Orkin v. State, for example, the court held that the warrant issued was sufficiently specific to comply with both state and federal law. The warrant stated which phones were to be tapped and which conversations were to be overheard (those between a named third party and other "unknown persons"). One of the "unknown persons" turned out to be the defendant.

Prior to 2000, the authority to apply for and issue a surveillance warrant in this state was restricted to the circuit wherein the device was to be physically placed. In Granese v. State, the court held that approval of a warrant by the superior court judge of the circuit wherein the wiretap device was to be placed comported with both state and federal requirements. The court further held that the judge's orders were sufficiently complied with by the use of a manual recording device even though the order called for the use of an automatic device. In King v. State, the court held that the application for a wiretap warrant was sufficient to demonstrate the state's compliance with the statutory requirements. The application reflected that it was made in writing under oath to the appropriate superior court judge, by the district attorney of the circuit where the wiretap was placed.

In 2000, the General Assembly eliminated this territorial restriction and expanded the scope of the authority to apply for and issue a surveillance warrant to include any crime over which the prosecuting attorney and the superior court judge have jurisdiction. Notwithstanding the significant changes to the surveillance warrant procedures wrought by Georgia's Support of the War on Terrorism Act of 2002, this expanded jurisdictional authority is still provided for in § 16-11-64(c). Thus, as long as they have jurisdiction over a crime, the prosecuting attorney can apply for and the superior court judge can issue a warrant for the placement of a surveillance device in any judicial circuit where the crime is being committed.

2. Disclosure of Wiretap Information

Prior to the enactment of Georgia's Support of the War on Terrorism Act of 2002, an additional protection against privacy invasion was contained in § 16-11-64. Former paragraph (8) of § 16-11-64(b) provided that there could be no disclosure of wiretap information unless it was "necessary and essential" to the prosecution of the crime specified in the warrant. Thus, even if all warrant procedures had been complied with, any unnecessary or nonessential publication of evidence obtained under the warrant rendered such evidence inadmissible. With the elimination of this provision in 2002, the disclosure of wiretap information must now be "consistent with and subject to the terms, conditions, and procedures provided for by Chapter 119 of Title 18 of the United States Code Annotated, as amended." In other words, any disclosure of wiretap information must be made in compliance with the federal counterpart to former paragraph (b)(8), i.e., 18 U. S. C. § 2517. Under the federal statute, the disclosure must be "appropriate to the proper performance of the official duties of the officer making or receiving the disclosure." With the General Assembly's adoption of this federal standard in place of the state standard, the state standard is no longer controlling and should not be applied to determine whether the disclosure of wiretap information is authorized. Since the state standard arguably provided greater protection to individual privacy rights than the federal standard, its elimination effectively enhances state law enforcement's capability to share information in a criminal investigation but to the detriment of individual privacy rights. The case law discussion construing both the former "necessary and essential" standard and the former state warrant procedures is included below only insofar as it may still be applicable to prosecutions arising before the effective date of Georgia's Support of the War on Terrorism Act of 2002.

In Orkin v. State, two publications of tape recordings were alleged to be unnecessary. The tapes were played to the intended murder victim in order to verify Orkin's voice. In addition, the tapes were played in court for the purpose of conducting sound-level tests. Only district attorney office staff members were present. The court held that the terms necessary and essential "do not mean 'indispensable.' " The court stated:

> The construction to be given the statute is rather what is reasonably necessary and essential to the preparation of and actual prosecution for a crime. What is reasonable will depend upon the facts of a given case and must necessarily rest in the controlled discretion of the district attorney, subject to review by the trial court. Where there is evidence to support the decision of a trial judge . . . that decision will not be disturbed on appeal.

Using this standard, the court found that the "necessary and essential" test had been satisfied. The evidence showed that only limited portions of the tape had been played and that measures had been taken to prevent unnecessary playing of the tapes.

In an extraordinary motion for new trial, based on newly discovered evidence, the Orkin defendant later alleged that the intended murder victim's attorney was present during the playing of the tapes. A majority of the Court of Appeals held this was permissible. On certiorari, the Georgia Supreme Court upheld this decision, although it acknowledged "an admittedly close set of facts." A dissenter urged that the Court of Appeals had erroneously constructed an "attorney exception" to the "necessary and essential" test and that the case ought to stand on the application of the "necessary and essential" test alone.

In a number of decisions, the Court of Appeals failed to correctly apply the statutory standard for determining whether disclosure of wiretap information was authorized. In determining whether the disclosure was "necessary and essential," the Court of Appeals failed to balance the state's interest in disclosing the information with the protection of the citizen's privacy. For instance, in Van Nice v. State, the court held that the statute authorized the disclosure of wiretap information to other law enforcement agencies and officials even though it broadened the scope of the pending investigation and gave probable cause to seek additional wiretaps and to intercept the conversations of additional parties. In Uhler v. State, the court stated that even if the wiretap information was shared with other law enforcement agencies, such disclosure did not cause the information to be inadmissible at trial. In King v. State, the court held that the state properly released the wiretap information to the federal Drug Enforcement Agency to pursue evidence of interstate drug traffic in connection with the state investigation. In Ayers v. State, the court held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to suppress the wiretap information because of the district attorney's action in disseminating the information to an IRS agent in furtherance of the investigation. Likewise, in State v. Anderson, the court held that even though the agent may have acted solely as an IRS agent in preparing a tax assessment, at the time the wiretap evidence was disclosed to him he was acting as an agent of the state. Accordingly, the trial court erred by holding that the IRS agent's listening to the wiretaps was an unauthorized disclosure of the information. In Anderson v. State, the Georgia Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeals' decision and implicitly overruled that court's other decisions suggesting a contrary holding. Although the court recognized the need and importance for such disclosure where the prosecution of the crime specified in the warrant reasonably required it, the mere fact that disclosure was made to another law enforcement agency for assistance or for the prosecution of any crime within its jurisdiction did not abrogate the statutory requirement that the disclosure had to be reasonably necessary and essential to the preparation of and actual prosecution of the crime or crimes alleged in the warrant. Wiretap information disclosed to another law enforcement agency was not admissible unless the state could show that the crimes charged reasonably required the assistance and expertise of the other agency in order to effect their prosecution.

It has been held that disclosure of information to a magistrate to obtain a search warrant of a residence directly related to the crime specified in the wiretap warrant was proper.

Former paragraph (8) of § 16-11-64(b) was held not to automatically override the principle of openness of criminal proceedings or the First Amendment and turn criminal proceedings into closed events. A defendant seeking closure under the statute had to establish such overriding interest that would have required a closure as a matter of law.

In a request for public access to documents containing information gained through wiretaps, the Georgia Supreme Court held that former paragraph (8) of § 16-11-64(b) prohibited the public disclosure of such information and that the trial court should have deleted from the documents information obtained under a warrant authorizing a wiretap.

The U. S. Supreme Court has held that the First Amendment does provide protection to a publisher's repeated intentional disclosure of a lawfully obtained but illegally intercepted cellular telephone conversation about a matter of public concern.

While former paragraph (8) of § 16-11-64(b), relating to disclosure of information gathered under a wiretap, contained a provision requiring exclusion of such evidence where it was improperly disclosed, former paragraph (5) of § 16-11-64(b) did not contain a similar exclusionary rule with respect to handling of the application for a wiretap warrant and related documents. Accordingly, despite the state's failure to strictly comply with the statutory requirements of former paragraph (5) of § 16-11-64(b), in the absence of evidence that the documents were improperly disclosed or tampered with, the wiretap evidence would have been admissible.

In United States v. Hayes, the federal district court was faced with the question of whether Georgia law would have kept evidence obtained by means of wiretapping from a federal grand jury. In this case, a Georgia district attorney was subpoenaed to appear as a witness before a federal grand jury. He was instructed to bring certain records relating to the interception of communications made by a certain individual. In a motion to quash, the district attorney stated that supplying the grand jury with the information requested would have constituted a violation of Georgia law. The federal court held that complying with the order of the federal grand jury would not have constituted a violation of the Georgia law, noting that the Code provisions were concerned with the admissibility of evidence in Georgia as opposed to federal courts and that, in any event, Georgia law would have been ineffectual under the Supremacy Clause of the federal constitution.

In Connally v. State, the court held that the defendant's right to confront the witnesses against him was not denied by the refusal of the state to reveal the identity of an informer who permitted a detective to overhear a conversation between the informant and the defendant. The defendant asserted that only the informer could have countered the detective's claim that consent was given. The court held that the mere possibility that the police might have been impeached was not enough to require disclosure of the informer's identity.

Under the provisions of former paragraph (7) of § 16-11-64(b), the prosecution had to disclose to the defendant any transcripts of wiretap evidence obtained pursuant to a warrant. The Court of Appeals, however, found this provision inapplicable where the transcripts were obtained pursuant to the consent of one of the parties to the conversation under § 16-11-66.

3. Providing Facilities or Technical Assistance

Under former subsection (d) of § 16-11-64, communication carriers, their officers, employees and agents were authorized to provide facilities or technical assistance to persons authorized by warrant to intercept a wire communication. The General Assembly eliminated this provision in its Support of the War on Terrorism Act of 2002. With the elimination this provision, similar federal statutes are now controlling. Since former subsection (d) is similar to these statutes, the case law discussion construing this subsection is included below to the extent that it may have some applicability under the federal statutes and insofar as it is still applicable to prosecutions arising before the effective date of Georgia's Support of the War on Terrorism Act of 2002.

In Uhler v. State, the court held that since the process employed by a telephone company in tracing the "call-forwarding" process did not involve "interception of a wire or oral communication," written application requesting the issuance of an order directing the telephone company to assist the State was not required. In Gonzalez v. State, the court held that although a telephone company started installing a line for electronic surveillance at the request of a police officer three days before a warrant authorizing such surveillance was obtained, the installation was not complete until the date the warrant issued. Further, no device capable of intercepting wire communications was placed on the line by the telephone company. Any error in the telephone company's actions was harmless, as no eavesdropping or recording of wire communications was conducted without a warrant as a result of its action.

C. Law Enforcement Emergency Exceptions

1. Pen Register or Trap and Trace Devices

An investigative or law enforcement officer specifically designated by a prosecuting official may have installed and use a pen register or trap and trace device if he reasonably determines that (1) an emergency situation exists which requires the installation and use of the device before a court order can, with due diligence, be obtained and (2) there are grounds upon which the order could be entered authorizing the device's installation and use. The emergency situation must involve either an immediate danger of death or serious bodily injury to a person or conspiratorial activities characteristic of organized crime. Furthermore, a court order approving the installation or use of the device must be issued in accordance with § 16-11-64.1 within 48 hours of the time the device is installed.

Because pen registers are not among the devices governed by § 16-11-64, the 20-day limit for investigative warrants issued under that Code section do not apply to a pen register order. Rather, such a pen register order would be governed by § 16-11-64.1, which contains no time limitation.

2. Electronic Surveillance Devices

In the event of an emergency situation, an investigative or law enforcement officer specifically designated by a prosecuting official may utilize an electronic surveillance device to intercept the wire, oral, or electronic communications or to observe, monitor, or record the activities of the person or persons involved in the emergency situation. Before the device can be utilize by the officer, the prosecuting official must determine that (1) an emergency situation exists involving the immediate danger of death or serious physical injury to a person; (2) the situation requires the immediate interception of the communications or surveillance of the activities of any person involved in the situation before a court order can, with due diligence, be obtained; and (3) there are grounds upon which an investigation warrant could be issued. Furthermore, an application for an investigation warrant must be made pursuant to § 16-11-64 with 48 hours after the interception or surveillance commences.

If an application for an investigation warrant is granted, the interception or surveillance must be conducted in accordance with § 16-11-64, except that the interception or surveillance continues only so long as the emergency situation exists.

Where an application for an investigation warrant is denied or the interception or surveillance is terminated without an investigation warrant having been issued, the contents of any intercepted communications or other surveillance are not admissible in any court of this state except to prove violations of the wiretap law. The contents of any intercepted communications or other surveillance effected without an investigation warrant having been issued are confidential and must not be disclosed except to prove violations of the wiretap law.

D. Public Service Commission Exception

The final exception to the provisions of § 16-11-62 is found in § 16-11-65, which permits the Public Service Commission to license the use of interception equipment for the purpose of business service improvement. The commission is not authorized to issue a license "until the applicant has demonstrated to the commission a clear, apparent, and logically reasonable need for the use of the equipment in connection with a legitimate business activity of the user or subscriber and demonstrated to the satisfaction of the commission that it will be operated by persons of good moral character and that the equipment will be used in a lawful manner and in conformity with the tariffs filed for the equipment."

The commission is authorized to revoke a license "when it is established to the satisfaction of the commission that the equipment is being used in an unlawful manner contrary to the tariff applicable to the equipment or in a manner contrary to the purposes and uses for which the license had been issued." The commission may also revoke a license if it is discovered that a material misrepresentation was made in applying for the license.

The commission can promulgate rules and regulations relating to the issuance and revocation of licenses and is further permitted to "adopt any and all appropriate rules and regulations of any sort to ensure the privacy of telephonic and telegraphic communications." A violation of such rules constitutes a violation of Part 1 of Article 3 of Chapter 11 of Title 16.

The Georgia Attorney General has issued an opinion stating that a license to use telephone service observing equipment may be revoked upon proof that the licensee is recording conversations on the grounds that said activity is contrary to the purposes and uses for which the license was issued. The recording of conversations is not authorized by the commission's grant of authority to intercept, as the use of the term "recording" is not included within the term "interception" by the enabling legislation.

As part of the public service commission exception, § 16-11-65(d) provides that duly authorized employees of any telephone company regulated by the Public Service Commission are exempted from the provisions of Part 1 of Article 3 of Chapter 11 of Title 16 with respect to "the reasonable and limited intercepting of telephone communications under circumstances reasonably calculated to assure the privacy of telephone communications when such interception is accomplished solely for the purpose of maintaining the quality of service furnished to the public or for the purpose of preventing the unlawful use of telephone service."

III. Possession, Sale, or Distribution of Eavesdropping Devices

The provisions of § 16-11-62, which are designed to prohibit electronic eavesdropping, are bolstered by § 16-11-63, which forbids anyone other than law enforcement officers from possessing, selling, or distributing eavesdropping devices.

An eavesdropping device is any instrument or apparatus which by virtue of its size, design, and method of operation has no normal or customary function or purpose other than to permit the user thereof secretly to intercept, transmit, listen to, or record private conversations of others.

IV. Punishment

Both unlawful eavesdropping and surveillance and the possession, sale, or distribution of eavesdropping devices are felonies, punishable by imprisonment for one to five years and/or a fine of up to $10,000. Law enforcement officers acting in good faith reliance on the statute or a court order have a defense to criminal prosecution.

V. Interception of Cellular Radio Telephone Communications

In 1992, the Georgia Court of Appeals, in a two-judge decision that possessed no precedential value, held that § 16-11-62(4) did not prohibit the interception of a cellular telephone conversation. Unlike landline telephone communications, cellular telephone communications were not considered private, because cellular telephones transmitted "FM" radio waves for anyone to hear. Thus, cellular telephone users had no justifiable expectation of privacy.

In 1993, the General Assembly enacted former § 16-11-66.1, apparently in response to the Court of Appeals decision, to specifically prohibit the interception of cellular radio telephone communications.

The General Assembly, however, eliminated this prohibition in its Support of the War on Terrorism Act of 2002 apparently because in 2000 the Georgia Supreme Court broadly construed the terms "telephone" and "private communication" as used in § 16-11-62(4) to include all types of telephones and telephone communications. Because individuals engaged in conversations on the telephone, whether landline, cordless, or cellular, expect their conversations to be private, the court held that § 16-11-62(4) protects these conversations from interception. This construction rendered the protection afforded by former § 16-11-66.1 redundant and therefore ripe for elimination by the General Assembly in 2002.

V.A. Required Disclosure of Stored Wire or Electronic Communications and Transactional Records

As part of Georgia's Support of the War on Terrorism Act of 2002, the General Assembly enacted a new § 16-11-66.1 in order to provide state law enforcement officers access to stored wire and electronic communications and transactional records.

A law enforcement officer, a prosecuting attorney, or the Attorney General may require the disclosure of stored wire or electronic communications, as well as transactional records pertaining thereto, to the extent and under the procedures and conditions provided for by the laws of the United States.

A provider of electronic communication service or remote computing service must provide the contents of, and transactional records pertaining to, wire and electronic communications in its possession or reasonably accessible thereto when a requesting law enforcement officer, a prosecuting attorney, or the Attorney General complies with the provisions for access thereto set forth by the laws of the United States.

Search warrants for production of stored wire or electronic communications and transactional records pertaining thereto have state-wide application or application as provided by the laws of the United States when issued by a judge with jurisdiction over the criminal offense under investigation and to which the records relate.

A subpoena for the production of stored wire or electronic communications and transactional records pertaining thereto may be issued at any time upon a showing by a law enforcement official, a prosecuting attorney, or the Attorney General that the subpoenaed material relates to a pending criminal investigation.

The failure to comply with a request for disclosure is punishable as contempt.

V.B. Civil Liability of Broker for Unlawful Purchase, Acquisition, Sale, or Release of Telephone Records

A. Legislative Findings

The General Assembly has found that telephone records can be of great use to criminals because the customer information contained in call logs listed in such records include a wealth of personal data. These records are sometimes accessed without authorization of the customer by an employee of the telephone service provider selling the data or by a data broker or other person who pretends to be the owner of the telephone and who convinces the telephone company's employees to release the data to such person. The General Assembly enacted the Telephone Records Privacy Protection Act in 2006 in order to prohibit the unlawful obtaining or release of a customer's telephone records.

B. Prohibited Conduct

It is unlawful for any telephone records broker to purchase, acquire, sell, or release the telephone records of any person who is a Georgia resident or to attempt to purchase, acquire, sell, or release the telephone record of any third party who is a Georgia resident. This prohibition applies whether the customer's telephone record is obtained by the telephone records broker directly from a telecommunications company or from any other third-party source. A person is considered a Georgia resident if the individual has a Georgia billing address.

C. Civil Penalty

This prohibited conduct is punishable by a civil fine in an amount not to exceed $10,000 for each violation. The prosecuting attorney or the Attorney General is authorized to prosecute the civil case. Each telephone record purchased, acquired, sold, or released and each attempt to purchase, acquire, sell, or release a telephone record constitutes a separate violation.

D. Tort Liability

Any violation constitutes a tort and creates a right of action in the person or entity whose telephone records have been purchased, acquired, sold, or released for which damages may be recovered. Special damages may be inferred by the violation. Reasonable attorney's fees should be awarded to the plaintiff where the plaintiff has prevailed in the underlying action.

E. Law Enforcement Exception

This prohibition does not prevent any action by a law enforcement agency or any officer, employee, or agent of a law enforcement agency to obtain the telephone records or personal identifying information of any third party who is a Georgia resident in connection with the performance of the official duties of the agency, officer, employee, or agent.

VI. Evidentiary Impact of Violations of Part 1 of Article 3 of Chapter 11 of Title 16

The basic evidentiary rule relating to criminal invasions of privacy is contained in § 16-11-67 which states: "No evidence obtained in a manner which violates any of the provisions of this part shall be admissible in any court of this state except to prove violations of this part."

The importance of this statute cannot be overestimated. Indeed, because law enforcement officers, the most likely violators of this part, have a good faith defense to § 16-11-62 criminal prosecutions under § 16-11-64(e), the primary function of this statute has not been as a criminal statute, but as an exclusionary rule to bar wiretap evidence in trials of other substantive offenses.

This exclusionary rule applies to administrative procedural violations associated with electronic surveillance warrants. However, procedural violations do not require the exclusion of evidence derived from electronic surveillance, where the defendant makes no showing of prejudice or harm to his privacy interest resulting from the state's noncompliance with these procedures.

Assuming that the exclusionary rule of § 16-11-67 applies, an additional question remains as to its scope. Typically, the evidence sought to be introduced will be the evidence of the intercepted communication itself. In such case, admissibility depends upon compliance with the provisions of this part. However, in Cauley v. State, the court was faced with a different problem. In that case, the prosecution sought to introduce certain physical evidence alleged to have been the product of an unlawfully overheard conversation. The court held that the motion to suppress was properly overruled. Citing the United States Supreme Court case of Wong Sun v. United States, which established the "fruit of the poisonous tree" doctrine, the court found that the evidence in question "was not derived from an exploitation of the [illegally intercepted call] but instead by means sufficiently distinguishable to be purged of any taint attaching to that call." The court implied, however, that evidence obtained through the exploitation of illegal eavesdropping would be inadmissible under the "fruit of the poisonous tree" doctrine. Although the Wong Sun doctrine is based on the Fourth Amendment, Cauley's extension of the statutory exclusionary rule would seem to be warranted under a rationale of discouraging statutory violations.

In Duncan v. State, the court held that evidence seized as a result of an illegal wiretap should have been suppressed. Since the affidavit and application for the wiretap relied upon tainted information from an illegal pen register, then any evidence gathered as a result of the wiretap was also tainted under the "fruit of the poisonous tree" doctrine.

In Dobbins v. State, the court held that the defendant's incriminating statements should not have been admitted into evidence as they were the fruit of an illegal recording of his telephone conversation with the victim and were therefore tainted by its illegality.

In Jordan v. State, the court upheld the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion to suppress evidence derivative of an illegal wiretap by a private individual. The tape illegally made by the private individual was not allowed to be used for any purpose at trial. However, there having been no illegal conduct by state agents involved in the individual's initial taping, the court held that the "fruit of the poisonous tree" doctrine was not applicable to exclude the remaining tapes by an informant and an undercover agent which were legally made subsequent to the initial taping.

In Quintrell v. State, the court held that since a conservation ranger is given by statute the power "[t]o go upon property outside of buildings, posted or otherwise, in the performance of [his] duties," a hunter can not reasonably expect his illegal activities on private property to be safe from surveillance by the ranger. Furthermore, because the special protection accorded by the Fourth Amendment is not extended to the open fields, entry on posted private property by a ranger does not constitute trespass onto a zone of privacy. Thus, the ranger's videotaping of the hunter's illegal activities would not constitute an unlawful surveillance which would subject the videotape to suppression.

Sections 16-11-62 and 16-11-67, while applicable to the content of telephone conversations, do not extend to include telephone company records. Also, the disclosure of information concerning what numbers were dialed from a particular phone is not prohibited.

VII. Civil Liability

An eavesdropping victim can bring a civil action under Georgia's eavesdropping act. If the conduct in intercepting and disclosing the victim's conversations rises to the requisite level of outrageousness, it will support an emotional distress claim.

Part III
CRIMINAL CODE OF GEORGIA, CRIMINAL PROCEDURE AND MISCELLANEOUS CRIMINAL PROVISIONS

TITLE 3

ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES

CHAPTER 2

STATE ADMINISTRATION AND ENFORCEMENT

Article 2

Section

3–2–30 Powers and duties of special agents and enforcement officers of department

3–2–31 Assistance by enforcement officers to local authorities in criminal cases

3–2–32 Agents authorized to enter premises to enforce provisions of title

3–2–33 Untaxed alcoholic beverages declared contraband; seizure; disposition

3–2–34 Disposition of contraband alcoholic beverages

3–2–35 Seizure and disposition of contraband, generally

3–2–36 Prosecution of violators of liquor laws

Article 2

Enforcement

§ 3–2–30. Powers and duties of special agents and enforcement officers of department

(a) Persons appointed by the commissioner as special agents or enforcement officers of the department, in the enforcement of this title and other laws of this state with respect to the manufacture, transportation, distribution, sale, storage, or possession of alcoholic beverages, shall have the authority throughout the state to:

(1) Obtain and execute warrants for arrest of persons charged with violations of such laws;

(2) Obtain and execute search warrants in the enforcement of such laws;

(3) Arrest without warrant any person violating such laws in the officer's presence or within his immediate knowledge when there is likely to be a failure of enforcement of such laws for want of a judicial officer to issue a warrant;

(4) Make investigations in the enforcement of such laws and, in connection with the investigations, to go upon any property outside of buildings, posted or otherwise, in the performance of official duties;

(5) Seize and take possession of all property which is declared contraband under such laws; and

(6) Carry firearms while performing their duties.

(b) Each special agent or enforcement officer shall file with the commissioner a public official's bond in the amount of $1,000.00, the cost of which shall be paid by the department.

(c) Nothing in this title shall be construed so as to relieve any special agent or enforcement officer, after making an arrest, from the duties imposed generally to obtain a warrant promptly and, without undue delay, to return arrested persons before a person authorized to examine, commit, or receive bail, as required by general law.

(d) After an agent or enforcement officer has accumulated 25 years of service with the department, upon leaving the department under honorable conditions, such agent or enforcement officer shall be entitled as part of such officer's compensation to retain his or her weapon and badge pursuant to regulations promulgated by the commissioner.

(e) As used in this subsection, the term "disability" means a disability that prevents an individual from working as a law enforcement officer. When a special agent or an enforcement officer leaves the department as a result of a disability arising in the line of duty, such special agent or an enforcement officer shall be entitled as part of such officer's compensation to retain his or her weapon and badge in accordance with regulations promulgated by the commissioner.

§ 3–2–31. Assistance by enforcement officers to local authorities in criminal cases

(a) Upon a request by the governing authority of any municipality or county, the sheriff or chief of a county police force, the judge of the superior court of any county, or the Governor, the commissioner, in unusual circumstances, may and, in the case of an order from the Governor, shall direct special agents and enforcement officers of the department to render assistance in:

(1) Any criminal case;

(2) The prevention of violations of law; or

(3) Detecting and apprehending those violating any criminal laws of this state, any other state, or the United States.

(b) This Code section shall not apply solely to agents who enforce this title but shall apply to all agents of the department with law enforcement powers.

Formerly Code 1933, § 58–817; Code 1933, § 5A–352.

§ 3–2–33. Untaxed alcoholic beverages declared contraband; seizure; disposition

(a) Except as otherwise specifically provided for by law, it is unlawful for any person to sell, possess, conceal, store, or convey any alcoholic beverage on which any tax or license fee imposed by this title has not been paid.

(b) Any peace officer or authorized agent of the commissioner shall declare as contraband any alcoholic beverage:

(1) Not reported for collection of taxes under a reporting system established by the commissioner;

(2) Found in any county, municipality, or unincorporated area of any county where the sale of alcoholic beverages is not lawful when the alcoholic beverage is intended for use or sale contrary to law; or

(3) Sold, conveyed, or possessed, concealed, stored, or held for sale by any person who has not first obtained all licenses required by this title.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in this title, all contraband alcoholic beverages seized shall be immediately delivered to the commissioner or to persons designated by him to receive the contraband alcoholic beverages.

§ 3–2–34. Disposition of contraband alcoholic beverages

(a) All alcoholic beverages upon which no taxes have been paid to this state or any other state and which are not specifically exempt from the taxes imposed by law shall be destroyed by the peace officer or agent of the commissioner seizing the beverages, except that a small quantity of the illicit alcoholic beverage may be retained for purposes of evidence in the proper court; and then the illicit alcoholic beverage shall be destroyed immediately.

(b) All contraband alcoholic beverages upon which the taxes have been paid either to this state or to any other state shall be either destroyed or sold at public sale as provided by law.

Laws 1980, p. 1573, § 1; Laws 1981, p. 1269, § 15.

Formerly Code 1933, § 5A–355.

§ 3–2–35. Seizure and disposition of contraband, generally

(a) The commissioner and his agents shall seize and take possession of any contraband found in the possession of any person in violation of this title.

(b) Upon seizure, the commissioner or his agent shall give a receipt to the person from whom the contraband property was seized, if known, identifying the property seized and indicating from whom seized and the place of seizure.

(c) A copy of the receipt shall be:

(1) Filed in the office of the commissioner and shall be a public record open to public inspection; and

(2) Posted at the courthouse of the county in which the contraband was seized.

(d) Any person desiring to make claim to the contraband property shall file a claim with the commissioner at his office in Atlanta within ten days from the day of seizure. The commissioner, within 30 days of receipt of any such claim, shall afford the claimant a hearing in which to show his entitlement to the seized items. The burden of proof at such hearing shall be upon the claimant to establish his claim to the items seized and to show compliance with or justification for noncompliance with this Code section. The commissioner shall enter a written order granting or denying the claim within 30 days from the date of the hearing.

(e) An appeal from the commissioner's order may be taken to the Superior Court of Fulton County by filing with the commissioner, within 15 days from the date of the decision, a notice of appeal to the Superior Court of Fulton County. The appeal shall be based upon the record made before the commissioner; and the commissioner, upon the filing of a notice of appeal, shall transmit the record and appropriate documents to the superior court within 30 days from the date of the filing of notice of appeal. The superior court shall review the record for errors of law, violation of constitutional or statutory provisions, violation of the statutory authority of the agency, lawfulness of the procedure, lack of any evidence to support the decision, and arbitrariness and abuse of discretion. However, the court shall not substitute its judgment for that of the hearing officer as to the weight of evidence on questions of fact.

(f) All alcoholic beverages upon which the taxes have been paid to either this state or any other state shall be disposed of as follows:

(1) In the case of malt beverage, the seized goods shall be destroyed by the commissioner or his authorized agent;

(2) In the case of wine, the seized goods shall be sold by the commissioner at public sale, except that, where seized wine is determined by the commissioner to be unfit for human consumption, it shall be destroyed;

(3) In the case of distilled spirits, the seized goods shall be sold by the commissioner at public sale, except that, where seized distilled spirits are determined by the commissioner to be unfit for human consumption, the distilled spirits shall be destroyed.

(g) This Code section shall not apply to unlawfully manufactured alcoholic beverages.

Prohibited Acts

§ 3–3–20. Sale of alcoholic beverages on Sundays and election days prohibited; exceptions

(a) Except as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section or except as specifically authorized by law, no person knowingly and intentionally shall sell or offer to sell alcoholic beverages on Sunday.

(b)(1) As used in this subsection, the term "day" means that period of time beginning with the opening of the polls and ending with the closing of the polls.

(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph and paragraph (3) of this subsection, in any county or municipality in which the sale of alcoholic beverages is authorized, the sale of alcoholic beverages in compliance with such authorization shall be authorized and legal on any election day.

(B) The local governing authority of any county in which the sale of alcoholic beverages is authorized and the local governing authority of any municipality in which the sale of alcoholic beverages is authorized may, by ordinance, prohibit the sale of alcoholic beverages on any election days. In any case where the governing authority of a county or municipality has passed an ordinance prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages on any election days as authorized by this subparagraph, such prohibition shall apply only within the territorial boundaries for which the election is held but such territorial boundaries shall not include any property owned or operated by a county, municipality, or other political subdivision of this state for airport purposes if no person resides on such publicly owned or operated property.

(3)(A) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this subsection, it shall be unlawful for any person to sell alcoholic beverages within 250 feet of any polling place or of the outer edge of any building within which such polling place is established on primary or election days.

(B) Any person violating the provisions of this paragraph shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(c) The governing authority of any county or municipality may, by ordinance or resolution, prohibit the sale of alcoholic beverages on Christmas Day.

(d)(1) In all municipalities within any county having a population of 400,000 or more according to the United States decennial census of 1990 or any future such census in which the sale of alcoholic beverages is lawful, alcoholic beverages may be sold on Sundays between the hours of 12:30 P.M. and 12:00 Midnight at festivals. As used in this paragraph, the term "festival" means a specific outdoor public celebration or gathering for which a license or permit has been issued by the appropriate governing authority which involves the use either of public parks or public streets and which includes entertainment, dancing, music, dramatic productions, art exhibition, parades, or the sale of merchandise, food or alcohol, or any combination of the foregoing; and which of necessity requires for its successful execution the provision and coordination of municipal services to a degree significantly over and above that which the city routinely provides under ordinary everyday circumstances. The definition of "festival," as used in this paragraph, does not include events which are solely parades, foot races, or political demonstrations unless such parade, foot race, or political demonstration is proposed as an integral part of a larger "festival," as defined in this paragraph.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of this subsection, all persons and entities selling alcoholic beverages pursuant to this subsection shall fully comply with all other applicable state and local license and permit requirements.

Sess., p. 103, § 14; Laws 1971, p. 864, § 1; Laws 1972, p. 721, § 1; Laws 1977, p. 1236, § 1; Laws 1977, p. 1316, § 1; Laws 1980, p. 1573, § 1; Laws 1981, p. 460, § 1; Laws 1981, p. 1269, § 19; Laws 1982, p. 890, § 1; Laws 1984, p. 1688, § 1; Laws 1985, p. 1508, § 1; Laws 1986, p. 10, § 3; Laws 1992, p. 1694, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 1405, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 58–813; Code 1933, § 5A–507.

§ 3–3–21. Sales of alcoholic beverages near church, school, or housing authority property; prohibitions

(a)(1) No person knowingly and intentionally may sell or offer to sell:

(A) Any distilled spirits in or within 100 yards of any church building or within 200 yards of any school building, educational building, school grounds, or college campus;

(B) Any wine or malt beverages within 100 yards of any school building, school grounds, or college campus. This subparagraph shall not apply at any location for which a license has been issued prior to July 1, 1981, nor to the renewal of such license. Nor shall this subparagraph apply at any location for which a new license is applied for if the sale of wine and beer was lawful at such location at any time during the 12 months immediately preceding such application;

(C) Any distilled spirits, wine, or malt beverages within 100 yards of an alcoholic treatment center owned and operated by this state or any county or municipal government therein. This paragraph shall not apply to any business having a license in effect on July 1, 1981.

(2) As used in this subsection, the term "school building" or "educational building" shall apply only to state, county, city, or church school buildings and to such buildings at such other schools in which are taught subjects commonly taught in the common schools and colleges of this state and which are public schools or private schools as defined in subsection (b) of Code Section 20–2–690.

(b) Nothing contained in this Code section shall prohibit the licensing of the sale or distribution of alcoholic beverages by:

(1) Hotels of 50 rooms or more which have been in continuous operation for a period of at least five years preceding July 1, 1981;

(2) Bona fide private clubs, owning their own homes, subject to licensing under Chapter 7 of this title; and

(3) Licensees for the retail sale of alcoholic beverages for consumption on the premises only who shall be subject to regulation as to distances from churches, schools, and colleges by counties and municipalities.

(c) For purposes of this Code section, distances shall be measured by the most direct route of travel on the ground.

(d)(1) In counties having a population of not less than 175,000 nor more than 195,000, according to the United States decennial census of 1970 or any future such census, the distances provided in subparagraph (a)(1)(A) of this Code section for separation of businesses licensed under this title from churches and schools shall be measured as follows:

(A) From the property line of the tract on which is located the business regulated under this title;

(B) To the property line of the tract on which is located the church, school ground, or college campus; and

(C) Along a straight line which describes the shortest distance between the two property lines.

(2) No license in effect on April 13, 1979, shall be revoked before its date of expiration by reason of the method of measurement set out in this subsection if the license was granted in reliance on another method of measurement. No application for a license or for a renewal shall be denied by reason of the method of measurement set out in this subsection if the application is for premises for which a license was granted prior to April 13, 1979, in reliance on another method of measurement.

(e)(1) As used in this subsection, the term "housing authority property" means any property containing 300 housing units or fewer owned or operated by a housing authority created by Article 1 of Chapter 3 of Title 8, the "Housing Authorities Law."

(2) No person knowingly and intentionally may sell any alcoholic beverages for consumption on the premises within 100 yards of any housing authority property. This subsection shall not apply at any location for which a license has been issued prior to July 1, 2000, nor to the renewal of such license. Nor shall this subsection apply at any location for which a new license is applied for if the sale of alcoholic beverages for consumption on the premises was lawful at such location at any time during the 12 months immediately preceding such application.

§ 3–3–22. Furnishing alcoholic beverages to intoxicated persons

No alcoholic beverage shall be sold, bartered, exchanged, given, provided, or furnished to any person who is in a state of noticeable intoxication.

Laws 1937–38, Ex. Sess., p. 103, § 15; Laws 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 283, § 1; Laws 1980, p. 1206, §§ 2, 5; Laws 1980, p. 1573, § 1; Laws 1981, p. 1269, § 21.

Formerly Code 1933, § 5A–509.

§ 3–3–23. Furnishing alcoholic beverages to, and purchase of alcoholic beverages by, persons under 21 years of age prohibited; possession of alcoholic beverages by persons under 21 years of age prohibited; exceptions; proper identification; procedure where false identification tendered

(a) Except as otherwise authorized by law:

(1) No person knowingly, directly or through another person, shall furnish, cause to be furnished, or permit any person in such person's employ to furnish any alcoholic beverage to any person under 21 years of age;

(2) No person under 21 years of age shall purchase, attempt to purchase, or knowingly possess any alcoholic beverage;

(3) No person under 21 years of age shall misrepresent such person's age in any manner whatever for the purpose of obtaining illegally any alcoholic beverage;

(4) No person knowingly or intentionally shall act as an agent to purchase or acquire any alcoholic beverage for or on behalf of a person under 21 years of age; or

(5) No person under 21 years of age shall misrepresent his or her identity or use any false identification for the purpose of purchasing or obtaining any alcoholic beverage.

(b) The prohibitions contained in paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall not apply with respect to the sale, purchase, or possession of alcoholic beverages for consumption:

(1) For medical purposes pursuant to a prescription of a physician duly authorized to practice medicine in this state; or

(2) At a religious ceremony.

(c) The prohibitions contained in paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall not apply with respect to the possession of alcoholic beverages for consumption by a person under 21 years of age when the parent or guardian of the person under 21 years of age gives the alcoholic beverage to the person and when possession is in the home of the parent or guardian and such parent or guardian is present.

(d) The prohibition contained in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall not apply with respect to sale of alcoholic beverages by a person when such person has been furnished with proper identification showing that the person to whom the alcoholic beverage is sold is 21 years of age or older. For purposes of this subsection, the term "proper identification" means any document issued by a governmental agency containing a description of the person, such person's photograph, or both, and giving such person's date of birth and includes, without being limited to, a passport, military identification card, driver's license, or an identification card authorized under Code Sections 40–5–100 through 40–5–104. "Proper identification" shall not include a birth certificate and shall not include any traffic citation and complaint form.

(e) If such conduct is not otherwise prohibited pursuant to Code Section 3–3–24, nothing contained in this Code section shall be construed to prohibit any person under 21 years of age from:

(1) Dispensing, serving, selling, or handling alcoholic beverages as a part of employment in any licensed establishment;

(2) Being employed in any establishment in which alcoholic beverages are distilled or manufactured; or

(3) Taking orders for and having possession of alcoholic beverages as a part of employment in a licensed establishment.

(f) Testimony by any person under 21 years of age, when given in an administrative or judicial proceeding against another person for violation of any provision of this Code section, shall not be used in any administrative or judicial proceedings brought against such testifying person under 21 years of age.

(g) Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to modify, amend, or supersede Chapter 11 of Title 15.

(h) In any case where a reasonable or prudent person could reasonably be in doubt as to whether or not the person to whom an alcoholic beverage is to be sold or otherwise furnished is actually 21 years of age or older, it shall be the duty of the person selling or otherwise furnishing such alcoholic beverage to request to see and to be furnished with proper identification as provided for in subsection (d) of this Code section in order to verify the age of such person; and the failure to make such request and verification in any case where the person to whom the alcoholic beverage is sold or otherwise furnished is less than 21 years of age may be considered by the trier of fact in determining whether the person selling or otherwise furnishing such alcoholic beverage did so knowingly.

(i) Any retailer or retail consumption dealer, or any person acting on behalf of such retailer or retail consumption dealer, who upon requesting proper identification from a person attempting to purchase alcoholic beverages from such retailer or retail consumption dealer pursuant to subsection (h) of this Code section is tendered a driver's license which indicates that such driver's license is falsified, is not the driver's license of the person presenting it, or that such person is under the age of 21 years, the person to whom said license is tendered shall be authorized to either write down the name, address, and license number or to seize and retain such driver's license and in either event shall immediately thereafter summon a law enforcement officer who shall be authorized to seize the license either at the scene or at such time as the license can be located. The procedures and rules connected with the retention of such license by the officer shall be the same as those provided for the acceptance of a driver's license as bail on arrest for traffic offenses pursuant to Code Section 17–6–11.

§ 3–3–23.1. Unlawful sale of alcoholic beverages to, and unlawful purchase and possession of alcoholic beverages by, any person under 21 years of age

(a) It is unlawful for any person knowingly to violate any prohibition contained in Code Section 3–3–23, relating to furnishing alcoholic beverages to, and purchasing, attempting to purchase, and possession of alcoholic beverages by, a person under 21 years of age.

(b)(1) Any person convicted of violating any prohibition contained in subsection (a) of Code Section 3–3–23 shall, upon the first conviction, be guilty of a misdemeanor, except that any person convicted of violating paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of Code Section 3–3–23 shall, upon the first conviction, be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by not more than six months' imprisonment or a fine of not more than $300.00, or both and except that any person convicted of violating paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of Code Section 3–3–23 shall, upon the first conviction, be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(2) Any person convicted of violating any prohibition contained in subsection (a) of Code Section 3–3–23 shall, upon the second or subsequent conviction, be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature, except that any person convicted of violating paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of Code Section 3–3–23 shall, upon the second or subsequent conviction, be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(3) In addition to any other penalty provided for in paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, the driver's license of any person convicted of attempting to purchase an alcoholic beverage in violation of paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of Code Section 3–3–23 upon the first conviction shall be suspended for six months and upon the second or subsequent conviction shall be suspended for one year.

(c) Whenever any person who has not been previously convicted of any offense under this Code section or under any other law of the United States or this or any other state relating to alcoholic beverages pleads guilty to or is found guilty of a violation of paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a) of Code Section 3–3–23, the court, without entering a judgment of guilt and with the consent of such person, may defer further proceedings and place such person on probation upon such reasonable terms and conditions as the court may require. The terms of probation shall preferably be such as require the person to undergo a comprehensive rehabilitation program (including, if necessary, medical treatment), not to exceed three years, designed to acquaint such person with the ill effects of alcohol abuse and with knowledge of the gains and benefits which can be achieved by being a good member of society. Upon violation of a term or condition of probation, the court may enter an adjudication of guilt and proceed accordingly. Upon fulfillment of the terms and conditions of probation, the court shall discharge such person and dismiss the proceedings against him or her. Discharge and dismissal under this subsection shall be without court adjudication of guilt and shall not be deemed a conviction for purposes of this subsection or for purposes of disqualifications or disabilities imposed by law upon conviction of a crime. Discharge and dismissal under this subsection may occur only once with respect to any person.

(d) Unless the officer has reasonable cause to believe such person is intoxicated, a law enforcement officer may arrest by issuance of a citation, summons, or accusation a person accused of violating any provision of Code Section 3–3–23. The citation, summons, or accusation shall enumerate the specific charges against the person and either the date upon which the person is to appear and answer the charges or a notation that the person will be later notified of the date upon which the person is to appear and answer the charges. If the person charged shall fail to appear as required, the judge having jurisdiction of the offense may issue a warrant or other order directing the apprehension of such person and commanding that such person be brought before the court to answer the charges contained within the citation, summons, or accusation and the charge of his or her failure to appear as required. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to invalidate an otherwise valid arrest by citation, summons, or accusation of a person who is intoxicated.

(e) A law enforcement officer arresting a person by the issuance of a citation, summons, or accusation under subsection (d) of this Code section may require any such person having a driver's license or instruction permit to deposit such license or permit with the arresting officer in order to ensure the appearance of such person to answer the charges against him or her. The procedures and rules connected with the acceptance of such license or permit and subsequent disposition of the case shall be the same as provided for the acceptance of a driver's license as bail on arrest for traffic offenses pursuant to Code Section 17–6–11.

(f) In addition to any other punishment or sentence, the court may order all persons convicted under subsection (b) of this Code section or sentenced under subsection (c) of this Code section to complete a DUI Alcohol or Drug Use Risk Reduction Program prescribed by the Department of Driver Services within 120 days of such conviction or sentence. Failure to complete such program within 120 days shall be contempt of court and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $300.00 or 20 days imprisonment, or both. If the conviction or sentence results from a charge of unlawful possession of alcoholic beverages while operating a motor vehicle, the court shall report such conviction or sentence to the Department of Driver Services within ten days after conviction or sentencing.

Formerly Code 1933, § 5A–9901.1.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2005 amendment by Act 68, in subsec. (f), substituted "Department of Driver Services" for "Department of Human Resources" in the first sentence and "Department of Driver Services" for "Department of Motor Vehicle Safety" in the second sentence.

The 2006 amendments by Act 510, in subsec. (d), substituted "any provision" for "only paragraph (2) of subsection (a)"; and in subsecs. (d) and (e), inserted ", summons, or accusation" following "citation" throughout.

§ 3–3–24. Persons under 18 years of age not to be allowed or required to serve, sell, or take orders for alcoholic beverages; exceptions

(a) No person shall allow or require a person in his employment under 18 years of age to dispense, serve, sell, or take orders for any alcoholic beverages.

(b) This Code section shall not prohibit persons under 18 years of age who are employed in supermarkets, convenience stores, breweries, or drugstores from selling or handling alcoholic beverages which are sold for consumption off the premises.

Laws 1958, p. 640, §§ 1, 2; Laws 1974, p. 460, § 1; Laws 1976, p. 409, § 1; Laws 1980, p. 1573, § 1; Laws 1981, p. 1269, § 22.

§ 3–3–24.1. Definition; penalty

(a) For purposes of this Code section, the term "business establishment primarily engaged in the retail sale of alcoholic beverages in unbroken packages" means an individual, partnership, corporation, association, or other business entity which derives from its retail sale of alcoholic beverages in unbroken packages at least 75 percent of its total annual gross income.

(b) Reserved.

(c) Any person violating this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, except that the violation of this Code section by a person under 17 years of age shall constitute a delinquent act under Chapter 11 of Title 15 and not a misdemeanor.

§ 3–3–24.2. Posting of laws concerning sales to underage persons; contents of notice; punitive action against violators

(a) Each retail business establishment in this state which is licensed to sell alcoholic beverages of any kind shall post in a conspicuous place or places a notice which shall contain the provisions of the laws of this state which deal with the unlawful sale of such items to underage persons and the penalties for violating such laws.

(b) The department shall prepare, print, and distribute the notices required by subsection (a) of this Code section. The notices shall contain those provisions of the law of this state which the department determines will best inform the citizens of this state of the relevant provisions of the law regarding sale of alcoholic beverages to underage persons.

(c) The commissioner may take punitive action against violators, up to and including revocation of the state retail dealer's license of any retail business establishment which fails to comply with this Code section. The undertaking of any punitive action allowed under this Code section shall not prohibit criminal prosecution for sale to underage persons.

Formerly Code 1933, § 5A–520.

§ 3–3–25. Furnishing alcoholic beverages to prisoners or inmates of places of confinement and possession on grounds or within 200 yards of certain buildings prohibited; exceptions

(a) No person knowingly and intentionally shall:

(1) Offer for sale, sell, barter, exchange, give, provide, or furnish alcoholic beverages to:

(A) Any person confined in any jail, penal institution, correctional facility, or other lawful place of confinement; or

(B) Any person who is a patient or lawful inmate of the Central State Hospital;

(2) Offer for sale any alcoholic beverages within 200 yards of any building of the Central State Hospital which was in existence on July 1, 1977; or

(3) Introduce or possess any alcoholic beverages upon the grounds of the Central State Hospital or in the buildings of the Georgia War Veterans Home.

(b) Nothing contained in this Code section shall prevent or prohibit:

(1) The administration of alcohol by the staff of the above-mentioned institutions to any prisoner, patient, or lawful inmate in strict compliance with the prescription of a licensed physician; or

(2) The staff members of the Central State Hospital and the Georgia War Veterans Home who maintain their domicile on the grounds of these institutions from possessing alcoholic beverages for their own consumption or for that of their families or persons invited to their homes, except patients or lawful inmates of these institutions.

(c) No person shall knowingly allow any other person to violate this Code section.

§ 3–3–27. Prohibitions on distillation, manufacture, making, transporting, shipping, receiving, or possessing of alcoholic beverages; failure to file proper reports or bond, pay tax or license fees, prohibited; stills to be destroyed; penalties

(a) No person knowingly and intentionally shall:

(1) Distill, manufacture, or make any distilled spirits, except as permitted by this title;

(2) Manufacture, make, brew, or ferment any malt beverages or wine, except as permitted by this title;

(3) Transport, ship, receive, possess, sell, offer to sell, distribute, or in any manner use any alcoholic beverages or alcohol, except as permitted by this title;

(4) Fail to file any report required by this title;

(5) File any report required by this title that is either intentionally false or fraudulent, or both;

(6) Fail to pay any tax or license fee imposed or authorized by this title unless specifically exempted from such payment;

(7) Fail to have a sufficient bond filed with the commissioner as required by this title; or

(8) Evade or violate, or conspire to evade or violate, any provision of this title.

(b) Any apparatus, article, or other tangible personal property used in the unlawful distillation, manufacture, or making of any alcoholic beverages is declared contraband and shall be destroyed by the officers or agents seizing the property or otherwise disposed of as the commissioner directs.

(c) Any person who violates the provisions of:

(1) Paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years;

(2) Paragraphs (2) through (8) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

§ 3–3–28. Repealed by Laws 2005, Act 96, § 1, eff. July 1, 2005

Historical and Statutory Notes

Repealed § 3–3–28, prohibiting the reuse, counterfeiting, or forging of tax stamps, was derived from Laws 1937-38, Ex. Sess., p. 103, § 11; Laws 1980, p. 1573, § 1; Code 1933, § 5A–515. The repealing law also reserved the section designation.

§ 3–3–29. Possession, sale, or purchase of unstamped distilled spirits

Except as otherwise expressly provided for by law, no person knowingly and intentionally shall possess, sell, or purchase any distilled spirits upon which the taxes imposed by this title have not been paid.

Formerly Code 1933, § 5A–516.

§ 3–3–30. Foreign trade zones

(a) Any provision of this title to the contrary notwithstanding, any public or private corporation which has been granted the privilege of establishing, operating, and maintaining a foreign trade zone by the Foreign Trade Zones Board in accordance with an act of Congress, approved June 18, 1934, entitled "An Act to provide for the establishment, operation and maintenance of foreign trade zones in ports of entry of the United States, to expedite and encourage foreign commerce and for other purposes,"[1] may store alcoholic beverages, until the termination of such privilege, within the boundaries of such foreign trade zone. Any public or private corporation which has been granted the privilege of establishing, operating, or maintaining a foreign trade zone may also distribute alcoholic beverages to destinations outside this state.

(b) Nothing contained in this Code section shall authorize the sale at retail of any alcoholic beverages within the boundaries of a foreign trade zone if the sale would otherwise be prohibited by the laws of this state.

§ 3–3–31. Prohibition on shipment of alcoholic beverages by persons in another state or country to unauthorized persons in this state; legislative intent

The General Assembly finds, determines, and declares that the direct shipment of alcoholic beverages by persons in the business of selling alcoholic beverages in other states or countries to residents of this state in violation of this title poses a serious threat to the public health, safety, revenue, and the economy of Georgia. The General Assembly further finds, determines, and declares that the present penalties for illegal direct shipments of alcoholic beverages to residents of this state are inadequate to ensure compliance with the provisions of this title and that the measures provided for in Code Section 3–3–32 are fully consistent with the powers conferred upon the State of Georgia by the Twenty-first Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

§ 3–3–32. Penalty; exceptions

(a) Any person in the business of selling alcoholic beverages in another state or country who knowingly and intentionally ships or causes to be shipped any alcoholic beverages directly to any resident of this state who does not hold a valid manufacturer's, importer's, broker's, or wholesaler's license issued by the State of Georgia is in violation of this chapter.

(b) Any person found by the commissioner to be in violation of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be issued a cease and desist order by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery. Any person who, after receiving a cease and desist order, is found by the commissioner to be in violation of subsection (a) of this Code section for a second or subsequent occurrence, within a two-year period of the first violation, shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $10,000.00. This subsection shall not apply to any person who has registered brands for sale with the commissioner pursuant to Code Section 3–4–152, 3–5–31 or 3–6–22 and who shall have current licenses and posted adequate surety bonds as required by this title; provided, however, violations of the provisions of subsection (a) of this Code section shall constitute grounds for the commissioner to take appropriate administrative action against such person, including suspension or cancellation of license and forfeiture of bonds.

(c) This Code section shall not apply to the direct shipment of sacramental alcoholic beverages to bona fide religious organizations as authorized by the commissioner.

Laws 1997, p. 399, § 1; Laws 1998, p. 128, § 3; Laws 2000, p. 1589, § 3.

§ 3–3–33. Vaporized forms of alcoholic beverages; alcohol vaporizing devices; misdemeanor violations

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Alcohol vaporizing device" means any device, machine, or process that mixes any alcoholic beverages with pure oxygen or other gas to produce a vaporized product for the purpose of consumption by inhalation.

(2) "Licensed premises" means any premises in which alcoholic beverages are sold or dispensed for consumption on the premises and shall include any premises which are required by law to be licensed to sell or dispense alcoholic beverages for consumption on the premises.

(3) "Operator" means an owner, license holder, operator, manager, or person in charge of any licensed premises.

(b)(1) No person shall purchase, offer for sale or use, sell, or use any vaporized form of an alcoholic beverage produced by an alcohol vaporizing device. This paragraph shall not apply to a product that contains alcohol as otherwise lawfully prescribed by a health care practitioner who is licensed under Title 43.

(2) No person shall own or possess any alcohol vaporizing device, including but not limited to any machine known as an Alcohol Without Liquid (AWOL) machine. This paragraph shall not apply to any nebulizer or atomizer used to supply a product that contains alcohol as otherwise lawfully prescribed by a health care practitioner who is licensed under Title 43.

(c) No operator shall keep or allow to be kept on the licensed premises thereof any vaporized form of an alcoholic beverage produced by an alcohol vaporizing device.

(d) Any person convicted of a violation of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Any person convicted of a violation of this Code section involving the offer for sale or use to a person under the age of 21 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, except that upon the second or subsequent conviction such person so convicted shall be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

Laws 2008, Act 499, § 1, eff. July 1, 2008.

Article 3

Prohibited Conduct on Licensed Premises

§ 3–3–40. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Licensed premises" means any premises in which alcoholic beverages are sold or dispensed for consumption on the premises and shall include any premises which are required by law to be licensed to sell or dispense alcoholic beverages for consumption on the premises.

(2) "Operator" means and includes the owner, license holder, operator, manager, and person in charge of any licensed premises.

Laws 1988, p. 212, § 1.

§ 3–3–41. Certain nude and sexual conduct, use of devices or objects to perform or simulate such conduct, and showing and displaying of pictures, etc., prohibited

(a) No person shall perform on licensed premises acts of or acts which constitute or simulate:

(1) Sexual intercourse, masturbation, sodomy, bestiality, oral copulation, flagellation, or any sexual acts which are prohibited by law;

(2) The touching, caressing, or fondling of the breast, buttocks, anus, or genitals; or

(3) The displaying of any portion of the female breast below the top of the areola or the displaying of any portion of any person's pubic hair, anus, cleft of the buttocks, vulva, or genitals.

(b) No person shall use on licensed premises artificial devices or inanimate objects to perform, simulate, or depict any of the prohibited conduct or activities described in subsection (a) of this Code section.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any person to show, display, or exhibit, on licensed premises, any film, still picture, electronic reproduction, or any other visual reproduction or image of any act or conduct described in subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section.

Laws 1988, p. 212, § 1.

§ 3–3–42. Solicitation of drinks by certain persons prohibited

It shall be unlawful for any person employed or working in any capacity in any licensed premises to solicit or encourage patrons to purchase drinks to be consumed by or otherwise disposed of by any such person so employed or working.

Laws 1988, p. 212, § 1.

§ 3–3–43. Permitting persons to view acts performed on other premises from the licensed premises prohibited

No operator shall knowingly permit any person in the licensed premises to view from the licensed premises, by glass partition or other artifice, an act or conduct described in Code Section 3–3–41 and performed on premises other than the licensed premises.

Laws 1988, p. 212, § 1.

§ 3–3–44. Permitting persons to remove alcoholic beverages to other premises for certain purposes prohibited

No operator shall knowingly permit any person to remove any alcoholic beverage sold or dispensed on the licensed premises to adjacent or other premises for the purpose of viewing any conduct or activity prohibited on the licensed premises by this article; provided, however, that this Code section shall not be applicable to a person who removes an alcoholic beverage to his home or place of abode.

Laws 1988, p. 212, § 1.

§ 3–3–45. Employing, encouraging, permitting, or assisting persons to engage in certain conduct prohibited

It shall be unlawful for any operator to employ, encourage, permit, or assist any person to engage in any conduct or activity in violation of this article.

Laws 1988, p. 212, § 1.

§ 3–3–46. Penalties

(a) The violation of any provision of this article by the operator of any licensed premises shall constitute grounds for the suspension and revocation of any and all alcoholic beverage licenses issued to such operator.

(b) Any person who violates any provision of this article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

Laws 1988, p. 212, § 1.

CHAPTER 5

MALT BEVERAGES

Article 1

Section
3–5–5 Conditions under which kegs of malt beverages may be sold at retail

Article 1

General Provisions

§ 3–5–5. Conditions under which kegs of malt beverages may be sold at retail

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Keg" means any brewery-sealed container or barrel containing, by liquid volume, more than two gallons of malt beverage.

(2) "Retail dealer," "retail licensee," or "licensee" means a person holding either a retail dealer license, a permit issued by the commissioner authorizing the sale of alcoholic beverages for consumption only on the premises for a period not to exceed one day, or a beverage alcohol caterer license.

(b) No person licensed under this chapter shall sell malt beverages at retail by the keg except as provided in subsections (c), (d), and (e) of this Code section. The commissioner may take punitive action against violators, up to and including revocation of the state retail dealer's license of any licensed retail dealer who fails to comply with this Code section. The undertaking of any punitive action allowed under this Code section shall not prohibit criminal prosecution for sale to underage persons.

(c) Each retail licensee selling kegs containing malt beverages for consumption off licensed premises shall require each keg purchaser to present a Georgia driver's license or other proper identification at the time of purchase. The licensee shall record for each keg sale: the date of sale; the size of keg; the keg identification number; the amount of container deposit; the name; address; date of birth of the purchaser; and the form of identification presented by such purchaser. The purchaser shall sign a statement at the time of purchase attesting to the accuracy of the purchaser's name and address, the location where the contents of the keg will be consumed, and acknowledging that a violation of Code Section 3–3–23, as it relates to furnishing alcoholic beverages to persons under the age of 21 years, may result in civil liability, criminal prosecution, or both. The licensee shall retain the identification form and purchaser's signed statement attesting to the accuracy of the purchaser's name and address and acknowledging that a violation of Code Section 3–3–23, as it relates to furnishing alcoholic beverages to persons under the age of 21 years, may result in civil liability, criminal prosecution, or both, for a minimum of six months following the sale of the keg.

(d) Each keg sold at retail for consumption off licensed premises shall be labeled with the name and address of the retail licensee, the keg identification number, and the state alcohol license number of the business. The Department of Revenue will prescribe the form of registration label or tag to be used for this purpose. The registration label or tag shall be supplied by the Department of Revenue without fee and securely affixed to the keg by the licensee making the sale. In addition to the label or tag, the Department of Revenue shall provide guidelines to the licensee on the information to be recorded on the identification form required under subsection (c) of this Code section.

(e) The licensee shall record the date of return of the keg on the identification form required under subsection (c) of this Code section. If there is no label or tag affixed to the keg or if the identification number is not legible, the licensee shall indicate this fact on the identification form required under subsection (c) of this Code section. The licensee shall not refund a deposit for a keg that is returned without the required label or tag and identification number intact and legible.

(f) The removal of the required label shall be unlawful until such time that it is lawfully returned to the retailer by the purchaser. Possession of a keg without the required label and identification number shall be unlawful and subject to penalty pursuant to Code Section 3–3–9.

Section
4–3–3 Livestock running at large prohibited
4–3–4 Duty of officers to impound; impounding by others
4–3–12 Permitting livestock to run at large; releasing impounded livestock

§ 4–3–3. Livestock running at large prohibited

No owner shall permit livestock to run at large on or to stray upon the public roads of this state or any property not belonging to the owner of the livestock, except by permission of the owner of such property.

(a) It shall be the duty of the sheriff, his deputies, or any other county law enforcement officer to impound livestock found to be running at large or straying. Owners or operators of farms may also impound such livestock, provided that the livestock is kept in a suitable place and cared for properly; such owners or operators shall receive the feed and care fee allowed in Code Section 4–3–10.

(b) If an owner or operator of a farm impounds livestock, it shall be his duty to notify the owner of such livestock immediately. If the owner of the livestock is unknown and is not determined within three days, the person who impounds the livestock shall notify the sheriff of such impoundment; and the sheriff shall transport the livestock as soon as possible to a county pound as provided for in Code Section 4–3–11. The sheriff shall then follow the procedure set out in this chapter as if he had originally impounded such livestock.

§ 4–3–12. Permitting livestock to run at large; releasing impounded livestock

Any owner of livestock who intentionally or knowingly permits the same to run at large or stray upon the public roads of this state or any property not belonging to the owner of the livestock unless by permission of the owner of such property, or any person who shall release livestock, after being impounded, without authority of the impounder, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months, or by fine not exceeding $500.00, or by both fine and imprisonment.

Article 1

General Provisions

§ 4–8–1. Dumping dead dog on property of another

No person shall intentionally abandon a dead dog on any private property belonging to another unless the person so doing shall have first obtained permission from the owner of the property on which the dog is being left and the provisions of Code Section 4–5–3 are complied with in full.

Laws 1969, p. 831, § 1.

§ 4–8–2. Dumping dead dog on public property or public right-of-way

No person shall abandon a dead dog on any public property or public right of way unless the place in which the dog is being left is a public dump or other facility designed for receiving such and has been designated by the local governmental authorities as a public facility for receiving trash or refuse and the provisions of Code Section 4–5–3 are complied with in full.

Laws 1969, p. 831, § 2.

§ 4–8–3. Abandoning dogs

No person shall release a dog on any property, public or private, with the intention of abandoning the dog.

Laws 1969, p. 831, § 3.

§ 4–8–4. Liability for damage done by dogs

(a) The owner or, if no owner can be found, the custodian exercising care and control over any dog which goes upon the land of another and causes injury, death, or damage directly or indirectly to any livestock or poultry shall be civilly liable to the owner of the livestock or poultry for damages, death, or injury caused by the dog. The liability of the owner or custodian of the dog shall include consequential damages.

(b) This Code section is to be considered cumulative of other remedies provided by law. There is no intent to do away with or limit other causes of action which might inure to the owner of any livestock or poultry.

Laws 1969, p. 831, § 4.

§ 4–8–5. Performing cruel acts on, or harming, maiming or killing dogs

(a) No person shall perform a cruel act on any dog; nor shall any person harm, maim, or kill any dog, or attempt to do so, except that a person may:

(1) Defend his person or property, or the person or property of another, from injury or damage being caused by a dog; or

(2) Kill any dog causing injury or damage to any livestock or poultry.

(b) The method used for killing the dog shall be designed to be as humane as is possible under the circumstances. A person who humanely kills a dog under the circumstances indicated in subsection (a) of this Code section shall incur no liability for such death.

(c) This Code section shall not be construed to limit in any way the authority or duty of any law enforcement officer, dog or rabies control officer, humane society, or veterinarian.

Laws 1969, p. 831, § 5.

§ 4–8–6. Permitting female dog in heat to roam free

No owner or custodian of any dog in heat shall permit the dog to roam or run free beyond the limits of his property.

Laws 1969, p. 831, § 6.

§ 4–8–6.1. Removal of dog collar; permission

(a) For the purposes of this Code section, the term "collar" means any electronic or radio transmitting collar that has the purpose of tracking the location of a dog.

(b) No person shall remove a collar from a dog without permission from the dog's owner with the intention of preventing or hindering the owner from locating such dog, and if such dog is lost or killed as a result of the violator's removal of such collar, the violator shall be required to pay the dog's owner restitution in the amount of the actual value of the dog and any associated veterinary expenses.

(c) This Code section shall not apply to an owner or lessee of real property who removes a collar from a dog caught on his or her owned or leased property while such dog remains on such property if such owner or lessee gives notice of such action within 24 hours to the county or municipal law enforcement agency having territorial jurisdiction.

§ 4–8–7. Violations relating to dogs

Except as provided in Code Sections 16–12–4 and 16–12–37, any person who violates any provision of this article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

15–8–5 Deputy clerk; appointment, bond, oath of office, and powers
15–8–6 Power to preside in municipal court in certain counties

§ 15–8–1. City courts as courts of record

City courts created by special Act of the General Assembly shall be courts of record.

Laws 1924, p. 83, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 24–2204.

§ 15–8–2. Judge disqualified for other municipal office

It shall be illegal for the judge of any city court to also hold any municipal office or appointment in the city where the court is held.

Laws 1878–79, p. 137, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 24–2203.

§ 15–8–3. Judges may preside in other city courts; power and authority

(a) The judges of the various city courts may preside in any of the city courts established by the General Assembly in the same manner as the superior court judges preside in the courts of one another; and any city court judge may exercise all the powers, duties, and functions devolved upon the judge of the city court over which he is called to preside by the request of the judge of such city court where the judge is disqualified or is providentially prevented from trying a case.

(b) Any judge of any city court in this state may preside and act in any other city court in this state upon the request of the regular judge thereof, and when so presiding and acting the judge shall have full power and authority over all matters pending in the court.

Formerly Civil Code 1910, § 4828; Code 1933, § 24–2201.

§ 15–8–4. Transfer of criminal cases to superior courts when judge is disqualified

The several judges of the city courts, on the call of any criminal case in the courts in which the presiding judge is disqualified, may pass an order transferring the case for trial to the superior court of the county in which the city court is located. When the case is so transferred, it shall be tried in the superior court as though it had originated therein.

Laws 1920, p. 277, § 1.

§ 15–8–5. Deputy clerk; appointment, bond, oath of office, and powers

The clerks of the city courts shall each have the power to appoint a deputy clerk and may require from him a bond with good security. The deputy clerks shall take the same oath as the clerks do before entering upon the discharge of their duties; and their powers and duties shall be the same as those of the clerk, for as long as the principal continues in office and not longer. For the faithful performance of their duties the deputy clerks and their securities shall be bound. The appointment of deputy clerks shall be in writing and shall be entered upon the minutes of the court.

Laws 1902, p. 106, §§ 1, 2.

Formerly Civil Code 1910, § 4829; Code 1933, § 24–2301.

§ 15–8–6. Power to preside in municipal court in certain counties

Any judge of any city court or like court may, when authorized to do so by the governing authorities of any city having a population of more than 350,000 according to the United States decennial census of 1950 or any future such census, preside in the municipal court, by whatever name called, of such city. When so presiding, such judge shall have full power and authority in all matters pending in the court, including the trial of all offenses against the ordinances of the city.

General Provisions

§ 15–10–1. One magistrate court in each county

There shall be one magistrate court in each county of the state which shall be known as the Magistrate Court of _____ County.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–2. Jurisdiction and powers

Each magistrate court and each magistrate thereof shall have jurisdiction and power over the following matters:

(1) The hearing of applications for and the issuance of arrest and search warrants;

(2) Issuance of warrants and related proceedings as provided in Article 4 of Chapter 6 of Title 17, relating to bonds for good behavior and bonds to keep the peace;

(3) The holding of courts of inquiry;

(4) The trial of charges of violations of county ordinances and penal ordinances of state authorities;

(5) The trial of civil claims including garnishment and attachment in which exclusive jurisdiction is not vested in the superior court and the amount demanded or the value of the property claimed does not exceed $15,000.00, provided that no prejudgment attachment may be granted;

(6) The issuance of summons, trial of issues, and issuance of writs and judgments in dispossessory proceedings and distress warrant proceedings as provided in Articles 3 and 4 of Chapter 7 of Title 44;

(7) The punishment of contempts by fine not exceeding $200.00 or by imprisonment not exceeding ten days or both;

(8) The administration of any oath which is not required by law to be administered by some other officer;

(9) The granting of bail in all cases where the granting of bail is not exclusively committed to some other court or officer;

(10) The issuing of subpoenas to compel attendance of witnesses in the magistrate court and subpoenas for the production of documentary evidence before the magistrate court;

(11) Such other matters as are committed to their jurisdiction by other general laws;

(12) The trial and sentencing of misdemeanor violations of Code Section 16–9–20, relating to criminal issuance of bad checks, as provided by Article 10 of this chapter;

(13) The execution or subscribing and the acceptance of written waivers of extradition in the same manner provided for in Code Section 17–13–46; and

(14) The trial and sentencing of misdemeanor violations of other Code sections as provided by Article 13 of this chapter.

§ 15–10–2.1. Misdemeanor violations relating to littering and related environmental offenses

(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b) of this Code section, in addition to any other jurisdiction vested in the magistrate courts, such courts shall have the right and power to conduct trials, receive pleas of guilty, and impose sentence upon defendants for violating any provision of Part 2, Part 3, or Part 3A of Article 2 of Chapter 7 of Title 16 or Code Section 32–6–51 or 40–6–248.1 that is punishable for its violation as a misdemeanor. Such jurisdiction shall be concurrent with other courts having jurisdiction over such violations.

(b) A magistrate court shall not have the power to dispose of misdemeanor cases as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section unless the defendant shall first waive in writing a trial by jury. If the defendant does not waive a trial by jury, the defendant shall notify the court and, if reasonable cause exists, the defendant shall be immediately bound over to a court in the county having jurisdiction to try the offense wherein a jury may be impaneled.

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 3–6, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

Former § 15–10–2.1 was repealed by Laws 1985, p. 352, § 1, effective March 20, 1985.

§ 15–10–3. Oath; certificate; commission

(a) All magistrates, constables, and clerks of magistrate court shall before entering on the duties of their offices subscribe before the judge of the probate court the oaths prescribed by Code Sections 45–3–1 and 45–3–13 and the following oath:

"I swear or affirm that I will duly and faithfully perform all the duties required of me as (magistrate, constable, or clerk of magistrate court) of _____ County."

(b)(1) The clerk of superior court shall make an entry of the oath of each officer on the minutes of the superior court.

(2) In the case of constables and clerks, the chief judge of the superior court shall issue to the officer taking the oath a certificate which shall serve as the officer's commission.

(3) All magistrates shall be issued a commission under the seal of the office of the Governor as provided in Code Section 45–3–31. In the case of magistrates or an appointed chief magistrate, the appointing authority shall issue to the magistrate or chief magistrate taking the oath a certificate of appointment. A copy of such certificate shall be forwarded to the office of the Secretary of State.

(c) In the case of a probate judge serving as a magistrate, a clerk of superior court serving as clerk of magistrate court, or a sheriff or sheriff's deputy serving as constable, no oath, certificate, or commission shall be required except the oath and commission of the probate judge as probate judge, clerk of superior court as clerk of superior court, or sheriff or deputy as such.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1984, p. 1096, § 1; Laws 1987, p. 398, § 1.

§ 15–10–4. Sessions of court

The magistrate court shall not have fixed terms. The chief magistrate shall provide for sessions of court to be held at such times and in such places, within or without the county seat, as are necessary or convenient.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–5. Offices, courtrooms, supplies, and equipment

The county governing authority shall provide suitable offices and courtrooms for the use of the magistrate court and shall supply all fixtures, supplies, and equipment necessary for the proper functioning of the magistrate court.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–6. Local rules

The chief magistrate may with the approval of the chief judge of superior court adopt local rules for the court not inconsistent with law and the rules adopted by the Supreme Court.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–7. Council of Magistrate Court Judges; creation; membership; officers; purpose; expenses

(a) There is created a council of magistrate court judges to be known as the "Council of Magistrate Court Judges." The council shall be composed of the chief magistrates, magistrates, and senior magistrates of the magistrate courts of this state. The council is authorized to organize itself and to develop a constitution and bylaws. The officers of said council shall consist of a president, a first vice president, a second vice president, a secretary, a treasurer, and such other officers as the council shall deem necessary. The council shall have an executive committee composed of two representatives from each judicial administrative district. No senior magistrate shall serve as an officer of the council or as a regular representative of a judicial administrative district to the executive committee of the council.

(b) It shall be the purpose of the council to effectuate the constitutional and statutory responsibilities conferred upon it by law, to further the improvement of the magistrate courts and the administration of justice, to assist the chief magistrates, magistrates, and senior magistrates throughout the state in the execution of their duties, and to promote and assist in the training of chief magistrates, magistrates, and senior magistrates.

(c) Expenses of the administration of the council shall be paid from state funds appropriated for that purpose, from federal funds available to the council for that purpose, or from other appropriate sources.

Laws 1988, p. 461, § 2; Laws 1993, p. 910, § 3.

§ 15–10–8. Retired magistrates authorized to perform marriage ceremonies

A retired magistrate of a magistrate court of any county of this state shall be vested with the same authority as an active judge of this state for the purpose of performing marriage ceremonies. For purposes of this Code section, a retired magistrate of a magistrate court shall be one who has served not less than eight years.

Laws 1990, p. 297, § 1.

Article 2

Magistrates

§ 15–10–20. Chief magistrate; number of magistrates in each county; term of office; bond; superior court judges removed from office as result of federal court order to become special judges of magistrate court

(a) Each magistrate court shall have a chief magistrate and may have one or more other magistrates. Such magistrates shall be the judges of the magistrate court and shall be known as magistrates of the county. Unless otherwise provided by local law, the number of magistrates in each county shall be fixed from time to time by majority vote of the judges of the superior court of the county, but no magistrate shall be removed from office during a term of office except for cause as provided by Code Sections 15–10–24 and 15–10–25. The number of magistrates authorized for the county shall be one magistrate until increased by the judges of superior court or by local law; but this subsection shall not operate to remove a magistrate from office during his term of office.

(b) The term of office of any magistrate taking office prior to January 1, 1985, shall expire on December 31, 1984, except that this subsection shall not operate to shorten any term of office in violation of Article VI, Section X, Paragraph II of the Constitution. The term of office of any magistrate taking office on or after January 1, 1985, shall be for four years beginning on the first day of an odd-numbered year, except that in selecting magistrates to fill newly created positions or if otherwise necessary, a magistrate may be selected for a term of less than four years to expire on the last day of an even-numbered year.

(c)(1) Unless otherwise provided by local law, all magistrates, other than the officers becoming magistrates pursuant to Code Section 15–10–120, who are selected to take office prior to January 1, 1985, shall be selected as provided in this subsection. The judges of the superior court of the county shall by majority vote appoint as chief magistrate either an officer becoming a magistrate pursuant to Code Section 15–10–120 or some other person meeting the qualifications specified in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–10–22. Any other magistrates, other than the officers becoming magistrates pursuant to Code Section 15–10–120, shall be appointed by the chief magistrate with the consent of the judges of superior court.

(2)(A) If the chief magistrate so selected is an officer becoming a magistrate pursuant to Code Section 15–10–120, then his term as chief magistrate will be as provided by this paragraph.

(B) If the term which he was serving on June 30, 1983, will expire on the last day of 1984 or 1986, then his term as chief magistrate will likewise expire on the last day of 1984 or 1986.

(C) If the term which he was serving on June 30, 1983, will expire other than on the last day of 1984 or 1986, then his term as chief magistrate shall expire on December 31, 1984, even though he is granted a longer term as magistrate by Article VI, Section X, Paragraph II of the Constitution; but his term as magistrate shall not be shortened in violation of said Paragraph of the Constitution. In any case covered by this subparagraph, the person whose term as chief magistrate expires December 31, 1984, but who is granted by the Constitution a longer term as magistrate shall be eligible to succeed himself for a four-year term as chief magistrate beginning January 1, 1985, if he resigns his current term as magistrate prior to beginning such four-year term as chief magistrate.

(d) Unless otherwise provided by local law, all magistrates taking office on or after January 1, 1985, shall be selected as provided in this subsection. The chief magistrate shall be elected by the voters of the county at the general election next preceding the expiration of the term of the incumbent chief magistrate, in a partisan election in the same manner as county officers are elected, for a term beginning on the first day of January following his election. His successors shall likewise be elected quadrennially thereafter for terms beginning on the first day of January following their election. Magistrates other than the chief magistrate shall be appointed by the chief magistrate with the consent of the judges of superior court. The term of a magistrate so appointed shall run concurrently with the term of the chief magistrate by whom he was appointed.

(e) Unless otherwise provided by local law, a vacancy in the office of chief magistrate shall be filled by an appointment by majority vote of the judges of superior court for the remainder of the unexpired term; and a vacancy in the office of any other magistrate shall be filled by an appointment by the chief magistrate with the consent of the judges of superior court for the remainder of the unexpired term. If, however, a vacancy occurs which does not reduce the number of magistrates for the county below the number of magistrates authorized for the county, then such vacancy shall not be filled.

(f) The General Assembly may by local law provide for the number of magistrates of a county, provide for a different method of selecting magistrates than that specified in subsections (c) and (d) of this Code section, and provide for a different method of filling vacancies than that specified in subsection (e) of this Code section.

(g) The General Assembly may at any time provide by local law that the probate judge shall serve as chief magistrate or magistrate and provide for compensation of the probate judge in his or her capacity as chief magistrate or magistrate; and in such a case the chief magistrate or magistrate shall not be separately elected but shall be the probate judge.

(h) Each magistrate taking office after July 1, 1985, shall before entering on the performance of his duties execute bond in the amount of $25,000.00 for the faithful performance of his duties. Each magistrate in office on July 1, 1985, shall execute such a bond not later than September 1, 1985. The amount of bond required of the magistrate or magistrates of any county may be increased by local law. Such bonds shall be subject to all provisions of Chapter 4 of Title 45 in the same manner as bonds of other county officials. The premiums due on such bonds shall be paid by the fiscal authority of the county out of county funds.

(i)(1) Any person who is holding office on January 1, 1994, as a judge of the superior courts of this state, whether within the term for which elected or appointed or otherwise, and who subsequent to such date and prior to December 31, 1996, is effectively removed from such office by federal court order shall upon such removal become a special judge of the magistrate court as provided for in this subsection. As used in this subsection, the term "federal court order" shall mean only an order of a federal court which is entered in a civil action challenging under federal law or federal constitutional provisions (or both) the validity of the manner of selection of superior court judges in this state. A person shall be considered as effectively removed from office by such an order if the order by its terms prohibits such person's continued service as a judge of the superior courts without by the terms of the order allowing such person a meaningful opportunity to seek an appointment or election as a judge of the superior courts which would take effect within 30 days following such removal. Nothing in this subsection shall apply with respect to any removal from office resulting from criminal conduct or other malfeasance on the part of the person removed from office.

(2) Any person becoming a special judge of the magistrate court pursuant to this subsection shall become a special judge of the magistrate court of the county in which such person resides. Any such special judge of the magistrate court shall serve for a term of office expiring December 31, 1996. The Governor shall issue to each such special judge of the magistrate court a commission stating the date of commencement and expiration of such term of office.

(3) Any special judge of the magistrate court serving pursuant to this subsection shall have all the same powers and duties as any other judge of such magistrate court.

(4) Any special judge of the magistrate court serving pursuant to this subsection shall be compensated and reimbursed for expenses in such amount or amounts as are now or hereafter provided by law for a judge of the superior courts, such compensation to be payable from state funds in the same manner as now or hereafter provided by law for a judge of the superior courts.

(5) The provisions of this subsection shall control over any other conflicting provisions of this chapter.

§ 15–10–20.1. Reelection of magistrates performing ordered military duty

(a) Any elected chief magistrate or elected magistrate who is performing ordered military duty, as defined in Code Section 38–2–279, shall be eligible for reelection in any primary or general election which may be held to elect a successor for the next term of office, and may qualify in absentia as a candidate for reelection to such office. The performance of ordered military duty shall not create a vacancy in such office during the term for which such judge was elected.

(b) Where the giving of written notice of candidacy is required, any elected chief magistrate or elected magistrate who is performing ordered military duty may deliver such notice by mail, agent, or messenger to the proper elections official. Any other act required by law of a candidate for the office of chief magistrate or magistrate judge may, during the time such official is on ordered military duty, be performed by an agent designated in writing by the absent chief magistrate or magistrate judge.

Laws 2009, Act 75, § 1, eff. April 30, 2009.

§ 15–10–21. Chief magistrate to assign cases and decide disputes

The chief magistrate shall assign cases among the several magistrates of the county and shall decide any disputes between the magistrates of the county.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–22. Qualifications of magistrates

(a) Each magistrate shall have been a resident of the county for one year next preceding the beginning of his term of office and shall as of such date be at least 25 years of age and shall possess a high school diploma or its equivalent. However, an officer becoming a magistrate pursuant to Code Section 15–10–120 shall be eligible to the office of magistrate without the necessity of meeting these qualifications. Additional qualifications for the office of chief magistrate or magistrate or both may be imposed by local law.

(b) A magistrate who is an attorney may practice in other courts but may not practice in the magistrate's own court or appear in any matter as to which that magistrate has exercised any jurisdiction.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1984, p. 1096, § 3; Laws 1987, p. 430, § 1.

§ 15–10–23. Minimum salaries

(a)(1) As used in this Code section, the term "full-time capacity" means, in the case of a chief magistrate, a chief magistrate who regularly exercises the powers of a magistrate as set forth in Code Section 15–10–2 at least 40 hours per workweek. In the case of all other magistrates, such term means a magistrate who was appointed to a full-time magistrate position and who regularly exercises the powers of a magistrate as set forth in Code Section 15–10–2 at least 40 hours per workweek.

(2) Unless otherwise provided by local law, effective January 1, 2006, the chief magistrate of each county who serves in a full-time capacity other than those counties where the probate judge serves as chief magistrate shall receive a minimum annual salary of the amount fixed in the following schedule:

Population	Minimum Salary
0–5,999	$ 29,832.20
6,000–11,889	40,967.92
11,890–19,999	46,408.38
20,000–28,999	49,721.70
29,000–38,999	53,035.03
39,000–49,999	56,352.46
50,000–74,999	63,164.60
75,000–99,999	67,800.09
100,000–149,999	72,434.13
150,000–199,999	77,344.56
200,000–249,999	84,458.82
250,000–299,999	91,682.66
300,000–399,999	101,207.60
500,000 or more	109,425.84

The minimum salary for each affected chief magistrate shall be fixed from the table in this subsection according to the population of the county in which the chief magistrate serves as determined by the United States decennial census of 2000 or any future such census; provided, however, that such annual salary shall be recalculated in any year following a census year in which the Department of Community Affairs publishes a census estimate for the county prior to July 1 that is higher than the immediately preceding decennial census. Notwithstanding the provisions of this subsection, unless otherwise provided by local law, effective January 1, 1996, in any county in which more than 70 percent of the population according to the United States decennial census of 1990 or any future such census resides on property of the United States government which is exempt from taxation by this state, the population of the county for purposes of this subsection shall be deemed to be the total population of the county minus the population of the county which resides on property of the United States government.

(3) All other chief magistrates shall receive a minimum monthly salary equal to the hourly rate that a full-time chief magistrate of the county would receive according to paragraph (2) of this subsection multiplied by the number of actual hours worked by the chief magistrate as certified by the chief magistrate to the county governing authority.

(4) Unless otherwise provided by local law, each magistrate who serves in a full-time capacity other than the chief magistrate shall receive a minimum monthly salary of $3,851.46 per month or 90 percent of the monthly salary that a full-time chief magistrate would receive according to paragraph (2) of this subsection, whichever is less.

(5) All magistrates other than chief magistrates who serve in less than a full-time capacity or on call shall receive a minimum monthly salary of the lesser of $22.22 per hour for each hour worked as certified by the chief magistrate to the county governing authority or 90 percent of the monthly salary that a full-time chief magistrate would receive according to paragraph (2) of this subsection; provided, however, that notwithstanding any other provisions of this subsection, no magistrate who serves in less than a full-time capacity shall receive a minimum monthly salary of less than $592.58 unless a magistrate waives such minimum monthly salary in writing.

(6) Magistrates shall be compensated solely on a salary basis and not in whole or in part from fees. The salaries and supplements of all magistrates shall be paid in equal monthly installments from county funds.

(b) The amounts provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, as increased by the supplement, if any, provided by subsection (d) of Code Section 15–10–105, shall be increased by multiplying said amounts by the percentage which equals 5 percent times the number of completed four-year terms of office served by any chief magistrate or magistrate where such terms have been completed after December 31, 1995, effective the first day of January following the completion of each such period of service.

(c) On and after July 1, 2006, whenever the employees in the classified service of the State Personnel Administration receive a cost-of-living increase or general performance based increase of a certain percentage or a certain amount, the amounts provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, as increased by the supplement, if any, provided by subsection (d) of Code Section 15–10–105 and as increased by the application of longevity increases pursuant to subsection (b) of this Code section, shall be increased by the same percentage or same amount applicable to such state employees. If the cost-of-living increase or general performance based increase received by state employees is in different percentages or different amounts as to certain categories of employees, the amounts provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, as increased by the supplement, if any, provided by subsection (d) of Code Section 15–10–105 and as increased by the application of longevity increases pursuant to subsection (b) of this Code section, shall be increased by a percentage or an amount not to exceed the average percentage or average amount of the general increase in salary granted to the state employees. The Office of Planning and Budget shall calculate the average percentage increase or average amount increase when necessary. The periodic changes in the amounts provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, as increased by the supplement, if any, provided by subsection (d) of Code Section 15–10–105 and as increased by the application of longevity increases pursuant to subsection (b) of this Code section, as authorized by this subsection, shall become effective on the first day of January following the date that the cost-of-living increases or general performance based increases received by state employees become effective; provided, however, that if the cost-of-living increases received by state employees become effective on January 1, such periodic changes in the amounts provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, as increased by the supplement, if any, provided by subsection (d) of Code Section 15–10–105 and as increased by the application of longevity increases pursuant to subsection (b) of this Code section, as authorized by this subsection, shall become effective on the same date that the cost-of-living increases or general performance based increases received by state employees become effective.

(d) The county governing authority may supplement the minimum annual salary of the chief or other magistrate in such amount as it may fix from time to time, but no such magistrate's compensation or supplement shall be decreased during any term of office. Nothing contained in this subsection shall prohibit the General Assembly by local law from supplementing the annual salary of any magistrates.

(e) The General Assembly may by local law fix the compensation of any or all of a county's magistrates. The chief magistrate or magistrate shall be entitled to the greater of the compensation established by local law, including any supplement by the county governing authority, or the minimum annual salary stated in subsection (a) of this Code section but in no event to both.

(f) This Code section shall apply to any chief magistrate who is also serving as a judge of a civil court which is provided for in Article VI, Section I, Paragraph I of the Constitution of the State of Georgia of 1983. In such case, the salary of such chief magistrate shall be as provided by the local governing authority of the county.

(g) The salaries and supplements of senior magistrates shall be paid from county funds at a per diem rate equal to the daily rate that a full-time chief magistrate of the county would receive under paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section; provided, however, that the minimum annual and monthly salaries provided for in this Code section shall not apply to senior magistrates.

Historical and Statutory Notes

In 2001, the Code Commission, in the first sentence of par. (a)(1), substituted "means, in the case of a chief magistrate, a" for "means in the case of a chief magistrate means a". See § 28–9–5.

§ 15–10–23.1. Monthly expense allowance

In addition to any salary, fees, or expenses now or hereafter provided by law, unless a magistrate waives such expenses in writing, the governing authority of each county is authorized to provide as contingent expenses for the operation of the office of magistrate court, and payable from county funds, a monthly expense allowance to each magistrate of not less than the amount fixed in the following schedule:

Population	Minimum Monthly Expenses
0– 11,889	$ 100.00
11,890– 74,999	200.00
75,000–249,999	300.00
250,000–499,999	400.00
500,000 or more	500.00

§ 15–10–24. Discipline, removal, and involuntary retirement

Magistrates shall be subject to discipline, removal, and involuntary retirement by the Judicial Qualifications Commission in accordance with Article VI, Section VII, Paragraph VII of the Constitution.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1990, p. 336, § 1.

§ 15–10–25. Training requirements

(a) All magistrates shall periodically satisfactorily complete a training course as provided in Article 8 of this chapter. All senior magistrates shall periodically satisfactorily complete a training course as provided in Code Section 15–10–223.

(b) The Georgia Magistrate Courts Training Council shall keep records of training completed by magistrates and senior magistrates.

(c) Subject to the provision of Code Section 15–10–24, if any magistrate or senior magistrate does not satisfactorily complete the required training in any year, the Georgia Magistrate Courts Training Council shall promptly notify the Judicial Qualifications Commission which shall recommend removal of the magistrate from office unless the Judicial Qualifications Commission finds that the failure was caused by facts beyond the control of the magistrate or senior magistrate.

(d) The reasonable costs and expenses of such training shall be paid by the county governing authority from county funds.

§ 15–10–26. Local ordinances not to be inconsistent with local Acts

In any case in which action is authorized under this chapter to be taken by local Act or local ordinance, no local ordinance shall be enacted which is inconsistent with a local Act.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–27. Judge of civil court to serve as chief magistrate in certain counties

(a) With respect to any county in which there exists a civil court of the county continued in existence by Article VI, Section X, Paragraph I, subparagraph (5) of the Constitution and in which there are as of June 30, 1983, no officers who will become magistrates pursuant to Code Section 15–10–120, the provisions of this Code section shall control over any other conflicting provisions of this chapter.

(b) In any county subject to this Code section the judge of such civil court shall serve as chief magistrate for a term of office concurrent with his term as judge of civil court. The chief judge of superior court of any such county shall fix the compensation to be received by the chief magistrate for his services as chief magistrate, and such compensation may be less than the minimum salary otherwise specified by this chapter.

(c) In any county subject to this Code section the clerk of civil court shall serve as clerk of magistrate court and the sheriff and deputies of civil court shall serve as constables of magistrate court.

(d) A civil court judge who appoints an attorney or another trial judge to act as judge pro tempore of the civil court may provide that the attorney or judge so appointed shall also serve as magistrate pro tempore for the magistrate court.

Article 3

Civil Proceedings

§ 15–10–40. Article to govern civil proceedings

This article shall govern civil proceedings in the magistrate court.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–41. No jury trials; appeals

(a) There shall be no jury trials in the magistrate court.

(b)(1) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, appeals may be had from judgments returned in the magistrate court to the state court of the county or to the superior court of the county and the same provisions now provided for by general law for appeals contained in Article 2 of Chapter 3 of Title 5 shall be applicable to appeals from the magistrate court, the same to be a de novo appeal. The provisions of said Article 2 of Chapter 3 of Title 5 shall also apply to appeals to state court.

(2) No appeal shall lie from a default judgment or from a dismissal for want of prosecution after a nonappearance of a plaintiff for trial. Any voluntary dismissal by the plaintiff or by order of the court for want of prosecution shall be without prejudice except that the filing of a second such dismissal shall operate as an adjudication upon the merits. Review, including review of a denial of a postjudgment motion to vacate a judgment, shall be by certiorari to the state court of that county or to the superior court of that county.

§ 15–10–42. Proceedings not subject to "Georgia Civil Practice Act"

Proceedings in the magistrate court shall not be subject to Chapter 11 of Title 9, the "Georgia Civil Practice Act."

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–43. Commencement of action; service; answer

(a) Actions shall be commenced by the filing of a statement of claim, including the last known address of the defendant, in concise form and free from technicalities. The plaintiff or his or her agent shall sign and verify the statement of claim by oath or affirmation. At the request of any individual, the judge or clerk may prepare the statement of claim and other papers required to be filed in an action. The statement of claim shall include a brief statement of the claim giving the defendant reasonable notice of the basis for each claim contained in the statement of claim and the address at which the plaintiff desires to receive the notice of hearing.

(b) A copy of the verified statement of claim shall be served on the defendant personally, or by leaving a copy thereof at the defendant's dwelling or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein, or by delivering a copy of the claim to an agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process, and such service shall be sufficient. Service of said process shall be made within the county as provided in this Code section. Service outside the county shall be by second original as provided in Code Section 9–10–72. Said service shall be made by any official or person authorized by law to serve process in the superior court, by a constable, or by any person sui juris who is not a party to, or otherwise interested in, the action, who is specially appointed by the judge of said court for that purpose. When the claim and notice are served by a private individual, such individual shall make proof of service by affidavit, showing the time and place of such service on the defendant.

(c) An answer to the claim must be filed with the court or orally presented to the judge or clerk of the court within 30 days after service of the statement of claim on the defendant to avoid a default. The answer shall be in concise form and free from technical requirements, but must admit or deny the claim of the plaintiff. The answer shall contain the address at which the defendant desires to receive the notice of hearing. If the answer is presented to the judge or clerk orally, the judge or clerk shall reduce the answer to writing. A copy of the answer shall be forwarded to the plaintiff and defendant with the notice of hearing. If an answer is timely filed or presented, the court shall within ten days of filing or presentation of the answer notify the defendant and the plaintiff of the calling of a hearing on the claim. The notice shall include the date, hour, and location of the hearing, which date shall be not less than 15 nor more than 30 days after the date the notice is given. The notice shall be served on the plaintiff and the defendant by mail or personal service to the address given by the plaintiff at the time he or she files his or her claim and the address given by the defendant at the time he or she files or presents his or her answer. The date of mailing shall be the date the notice is given. The clerk shall enter a certificate of service.

(d) Upon failure of the defendant to answer the claim within 30 days after service of the statement of claim, the defendant shall be in default. The defaulting party may open the default upon filing an answer and upon payment of costs within 15 days of default. If the defendant is still in default after the expiration of 15 days after the answer is due, the plaintiff shall be entitled to a default judgment without further proof if the claim is for liquidated damages. When the claim is for unliquidated damages, the plaintiff must offer proof of the damage amount. Separate notice of the date and time of the unliquidated damages hearing shall be sent to the defendant at his or her service address. The defendant shall be allowed to submit evidence at that hearing on the issue of the amount of damage only.

(e)(1) When a hearing is scheduled pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section, upon failure of the defendant to appear for the hearing, the plaintiff shall be entitled to have the defendant's answer stricken and a default judgment entered; provided, however, that no default judgment shall be granted if the defendant appears at trial through counsel. If the claim is for liquidated damages, the plaintiff shall be entitled to take a judgment in the amount set forth in the complaint without further proof. If the claim is for unliquidated damages, the plaintiff shall proceed to prove his or her damages and take judgment in an amount determined by the judge.

(2) When a hearing is scheduled pursuant to subsection (d) of this Code section, upon failure of the defendant to appear, the plaintiff shall be entitled to submit proof of the damages and take judgment in an amount determined by the judge.

(3) If the plaintiff fails to appear for a hearing scheduled pursuant to either subsection (c) or (d) of this Code section, the court on motion of the defendant, or on its own motion, may dismiss the plaintiff's complaint, with or without prejudice, in the discretion of the court.

(f) At any time before final judgment, the court, in its discretion, upon payment of costs, may allow the default to be opened for providential cause preventing the filing of required pleadings or for excusable neglect or where the judge, from all the facts, shall determine that a proper case has been made for the default to be opened, on terms to be fixed by the court. In order to allow the default to be thus opened, the showing shall be made under oath, shall set up a meritorious defense, shall offer to plead instanter, and shall announce ready to proceed with the trial.

(g) Notwithstanding the provisions of Code Section 15–10–42, the magistrate court may grant relief from a judgment under the same circumstances as the state court may grant such relief. Requests for relief from judgments pursuant to this Code section in the magistrate court shall be by filing a written motion which sets forth the issues with reasonable specificity. The procedure shall then be the same as in other cases except the court may assess costs as seem just.

(h) A complaint in equity to set aside a judgment of the magistrate court may be brought under the same circumstances as a complaint to set aside a judgment in a court of record.

(i) Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to prohibit an employee of any corporation or other legal entity from representing the corporation or legal entity before the magistrate court.

§ 15–10–44. Trial; dismissal; continuance

(a) The trial shall be conducted on the day set for the hearing, or at such later time as the judge may set. Immediately prior to the trial of any case, the judge shall counsel the parties to make an earnest effort to settle the controversy by conciliation. If the parties fail to settle their differences without a trial, the judge shall proceed with the hearing on its merits.

(b) The judge shall conduct the trial in such manner as to do substantial justice between the parties according to the rules of substantive law. All rules and regulations relating to pleading, practice, and procedure shall be liberally construed so as to administer justice.

(c) If the plaintiff fails to appear, the action may be dismissed for want of prosecution, the defendant may proceed to a trial on the merits, or the case may be continued as the judge may direct. If both parties fail to appear, the judge may continue the case, order the same dismissed for want of prosecution, or make any other just and proper disposition thereof, as justice may require.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–45. Counterclaims

(a) If any defendant has a claim against the plaintiff arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim, which claim does not require for its adjudication the presence of third parties over whom the court cannot obtain jurisdiction, such claim must be asserted by the defendant at or before the hearing on plaintiff's claim or thereafter be barred.

(b) If any defendant has a claim against the plaintiff other than a compulsory counterclaim described in subsection (a) of this Code section, such claim may be asserted by the defendant at or before the hearing on the plaintiff's claim.

(c) If any defendant asserts a claim against the plaintiff, the defendant shall file with the court a statement of the claim in concise form and free from technicalities. The defendant's claim shall give the plaintiff reasonable notice of the basis for each claim contained in the statement of claim. The defendant shall sign and verify the statement of claim by oath or affirmation. At the request of a defendant, the judge or clerk may prepare the statement.

(d) If the amount of a counterclaim exceeds the jurisdictional limits of the magistrate court, the case shall be transferred to any court of the county which has jurisdictional limits which exceed the amount of the counterclaim. If there is more than one court to which the action may be transferred, the parties may agree on the court to which the action shall be transferred, and, in the absence of any agreement, the judge of the magistrate court shall determine the court to which the action shall be transferred. If there is no other court to which the action may be transferred, it shall be transferred to the superior court of the county.

(e) A counterclaim may in the discretion of the magistrate be tried either separately or jointly with the plaintiff's claim.

§ 15–10–46. Staying judgments and executions; partial payments

(a) When the judgment is to be rendered and the party against whom it is to be entered requests it, the judge shall inquire fully into the earnings and financial status of such party and shall have full discretionary power to stay the entry of judgment, to stay execution, and to order partial payments in such amounts, over such periods, and upon such terms as seem just under the circumstances and as will assure a definite and steady reduction of the judgment until it is fully and completely satisfied.

(b) The judge of the magistrate court shall not be obligated to collect such deferred partial payments on judgments so rendered but, if the plaintiff so requests, he may do so at the expense of the plaintiff for clerical and accounting costs incurred thereby, not to exceed 10 percent of each payment.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–47. Money judgments

(a) Except where otherwise provided by law, the general laws and rules applicable to the effect, recordation, execution, and enforcement of money judgments in civil cases in the superior courts of this state shall be applicable to and govern the magistrate courts.

(b) Upon the issuance of any execution by the magistrate court, the clerk of the magistrate court shall immediately transmit a copy of the execution to the clerk of superior court of the county. The fee of the clerk of superior court for recording the execution on the general execution docket shall be charged and collected by the magistrate court contemporaneously with or prior to the issuance of the execution but not before the entry of judgment in the action; and such fee shall be transmitted by the clerk of magistrate court to the clerk of superior court together with the copy of the execution. The clerk of the superior court shall immediately enter the execution upon the general execution docket in the same manner as executions issued by the superior court, without the necessity of any action by the plaintiff in fi. fa.

NOTICE

YOU ARE REQUIRED TO PROVIDE COMPLETE ANSWERS TO THE ABOVE–STATED QUESTIONS TO THE PLAINTIFF WITHIN 30 DAYS AFTER SERVICE OF THESE INTERROGATORIES UPON YOU. IF YOU DO NOT ANSWER, OR DO NOT ANSWER COMPLETELY, YOU MAY BECOME SUBJECT TO THE SANCTIONS PROVIDED BY LAW FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT. IF YOU NEED FURTHER INSTRUCTION OR IF YOU NEED ASSISTANCE IN ANSWERING THE QUESTIONS CONTACT THE COURT AT ONCE.

(e) The court in its discretion may limit the number of times interrogatories may be propounded upon a judgment debtor, may relieve a judgment debtor of the obligation to answer one or more propounded interrogatories, and may for good cause shown enlarge the time for answering any interrogatory. The court may if necessary compel the answering of interrogatories, but the sanction of contempt shall be applied only after notice and an opportunity for hearing and a showing of willful failure to answer or willful failure to answer fully and truthfully.

(f) An evasive or incomplete answer to an interrogatory shall be treated as a failure to answer.

(g) Notwithstanding the provisions of Code Section 15–10–42, the judgment creditor or a successor in interest when that interest appears of record may, in addition to any other process or remedy provided by law, utilize the discovery provisions set forth in Code Section 9–11–69.

Historical and Statutory Notes

In 2008, the Code Commission, in subsec. (b), inserted a comma following "by the magistrate court". See § 28–9–5.

§ 15–10–51. Clerk or deputy clerk may be authorized to sign notice or summons in pending civil actions

The chief magistrate of each county may, by local rule of court, authorize the clerk of the magistrate court or one or more deputy clerks of the court to sign any notice or summons in any civil action pending in the court.

Laws 1985, p. 636, § 2.

Formerly Code 1981, § 15–10–50.

§ 15–10–52. Action by assignee of obligee to show action in name of original obligee by assignee

The style of any action, other than a proceeding brought pursuant to Chapter 7 of Title 44, relating to landlord and tenant, brought in the magistrate court by the assignee of the obligee of any obligation shall show the action in the name of the original obligee by the assignee.

Laws 2000, p. 880, § 1.

§ 15–10–53. Filing by electronic means; electronic signature and verification; service; challenge to authenticity; fees

(a) Any magistrate court may provide for the filing of civil, garnishment, distress warrant, dispossessory, foreclosure, abandoned motor vehicle, and all other noncriminal actions, claims, answers, counterclaims, pleadings, postjudgment interrogatories, and other documents by electronic means.

(b) Any pleading or document filed electronically shall be in a format prescribed by the court.

(c) Any pleading or document filed electronically shall include the electronic signature of the person filing the pleading or document as defined in Code Section 10–12–2.

(d) Any pleading or document filed electronically which is required to be verified, verified under oath, or be accompanied by an affidavit may include such verification, oath, or affidavit by one of the following methods:

(1) As provided in Code Section 10–12–11;

(2) By oath or affirmation of the party filing the pleading at the time of the trial of the case;

(3) By supplemental verified pleading; or

(4) By electronic verification, oath, or affidavit in substantially the following form:

"By affixing this electronic verification, oath, or affidavit to the pleading(s) submitted to the court and attaching my electronic signature hereon, I do hereby swear or affirm that the statements set forth in the above pleading(s) are true and correct.

Date:_____ Electronic Signature:_____"

(e) Service of any claim or complaint filed electronically shall be made as provided by law. Service of all subsequent pleadings and notices may be made electronically only on a party who has filed pleadings electronically; service on all other parties shall be made by such other means as are provided by law. Each pleading or document which is required to be served on other parties shall include a certificate of service indicating the method by which service on the other party has been made. An electronic certificate of service shall be made in substantially the following form:

"By affixing this electronic certificate of service to the pleading(s) or document(s) submitted to the court and attaching my electronic signature hereon, I do hereby swear or affirm that I have this date served the opposing party with a copy of this pleading by e-mail or placing a copy in regular mail with sufficient postage thereon to the following address: (set forth address of opposing party).

Date:_____ Electronic Signature:_____"

(f) Nothing in this Code section shall prevent a party from contesting an electronic pleading, document, or signature on the basis of forgery or fraud. Any pleading or document found by the court to have been fraudulently filed shall be stricken from the record.

(g) Where the authenticity or the integrity of an electronic pleading, document, or signature is challenged, the proponent of the electronic pleading, document, or signature shall have the burden of proving that the electronic pleading, document, or signature is authentic.

(h) Upon the receipt of any pleading or other document filed electronically, the clerk of magistrate court shall notify the filer of receipt of the pleading or document. Such notice shall include the date and time the court accepted the pleading or document as filed.

(i) Any pleading or document filed electronically shall be deemed filed as of the time the clerk of court gains electronic control of the document.

(j) When the filing of the pleading or document requires the payment of a fee, the clerk of magistrate court may establish procedures for the payment of such fees connected with such filing. The filing of any such pleading or document shall create an obligation by the party to pay such fee to the clerk of court instanter.

(k) The clerk of court may assess an additional transaction fee or fees for each electronic filing and electronic payment.

Laws 2000, p. 1580, § 1; Laws 2009, Act 141, § 3, eff. July 1, 2009.

Historical and Statutory Notes

In 2000, the Code Commission redesignated § 15–10–52, which was enacted by Laws 2000, p. 1580, § 1, as § 15–10–53. See § 28–9–5.

Article 4

Violation of Ordinances of Counties and State Authorities

§ 15–10–60. Violations of county ordinances and ordinances of state authorities; punishment; suspended sentences

(a) This article governs trials of violations of county ordinances and ordinances of state authorities, which violations may be punished by incarceration or monetary penalty. Nothing in this chapter shall grant to any county or state authority more authority to enact or enforce such ordinances than the county or state authority has independently of this chapter. The punishment imposed for any ordinance violation shall not exceed a fine of $1,000.00 or six months' imprisonment or both, provided the judge shall probate not less than 120 days of any sentence imposed, except as otherwise provided by general law, and shall not exceed the maximum punishment specified by the ordinance. In the event a sentence is revoked, a defendant shall not serve more than 60 days in a county jail.

(b) The trial court may suspend the service of the sentence imposed in the case upon such terms and conditions as it may prescribe for the payment of the fine, for performance of community service in lieu of a fine or incarceration, for the payment of restitution to a victim, or other condition relating to the underlying offense. Service of the sentence, when so suspended, shall not begin unless and until ordered by the court having jurisdiction thereof, after a hearing as in cases of revocation of probated sentences, because of the failure or refusal of the defendant to comply with the terms and conditions upon which service of a sentence was suspended. Service of all or any part of any sentence suspended upon such conditions may be ordered to commence by the trial court any time before the expiration of one year from the date of the sentence after a hearing and a finding by the court that the defendant has failed or refused to comply with the terms and conditions upon which service of the sentence was suspended.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1984, p. 22, § 15; Laws 1987, p. 448, § 2; Laws 1993, p. 910, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 1155, § 2; Laws 2003, Act 168, § 1, eff. July 1, 2003.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2003 amendment by Act 168 rewrote subsec. (a) which had read as follows:

"(a) This article governs trials of violations of county ordinances and ordinances of state authorities, which violations may be punished by incarceration or monetary penalty. Nothing in this chapter shall grant to any county or state authority more authority to enact or enforce such ordinances than the county or state authority has independently of this chapter. The punishment imposed for any ordinance violation shall not exceed a fine of $1,000.00 or 60 days' imprisonment or both, except as otherwise provided by general law, and shall not exceed the maximum punishment specified by the ordinance."

§ 15–10–61. Removal of case to state or superior court

There shall be no jury trials in the magistrate court. Any defendant who is charged with one or more ordinance violations may, at any time before trial, demand that the case be removed for a jury trial to the state court of the county or to the superior court of the county if there is no state court. Such a demand shall be written. Upon such a demand the court shall grant the demand. Failure to so demand removal of the case shall constitute a waiver of any right to trial by jury which the defendant may otherwise have.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1987, p. 448, § 2.

§ 15–10–62. Prosecutions to be upon citation or accusation; service; arrest of accused

(a) Prosecutions for violations of county ordinances shall be upon citation as provided in Code Section 15–10–63 or upon accusation by the county attorney or such other attorney as the county governing authority may designate. Prosecutions for violations of ordinances of state authorities shall be upon citation as provided in Code Section 15–10–63 or upon accusation by such attorney as the state authority may designate. Such attorney shall be the prosecuting attorney in cases tried upon accusation.

(b) Accusations of violations of ordinances and citations shall be personally served upon the person accused. Each accusation shall state the time and place at which the accused is to appear for trial. The accused shall not be arrested prior to the time of trial, except for the offenses of public drunkenness or disorderly conduct and except that ordinances of state authorities may provide for immediate arrest; provided, however, that the accused may be arrested prior to the time of trial for the violation of a county ordinance relating to loitering; and provided, further, that any defendant who fails to appear for trial shall thereafter be arrested on the warrant of the magistrate and required to post a bond for his or her future appearance.

§ 15–10–63. Prosecutions upon citation

(a) The governing authority of any county or any state authority may provide that ordinance violations may be tried upon citations with or without a prosecuting attorney as well as upon accusations.

(b) Each citation shall state the time and place at which the accused is to appear for trial, shall identify the offense with which the accused is charged, shall have an identifying number by which it shall be filed with the court, shall indicate the identity of the accused and the date of service, and shall be signed by the county or authority agent who completes and serves it.

(c) Prosecutions for violations of ordinances upon citations shall be commenced by the completion, signing, and service of a citation by any agent of the county who is authorized by the county governing authority to issue citations or by an agent of the state authority who is authorized by the authority to issue citations. A copy of the citation shall be personally served upon the accused; and the original shall promptly be filed with the court.

(d) No person shall be arrested prior to the time of trial, except for the offenses of public drunkenness or disorderly conduct or as authorized by ordinance of a state authority; provided, however, that the accused may be arrested prior to the time of trial for the violation of a county ordinance relating to loitering; and provided, further, that any defendant who fails to appear for trial shall be arrested thereafter on the warrant of the magistrate and required to post a bond for his or her future appearance.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1984, p. 1096, § 9; Laws 1985, p. 149, § 15; Laws 1987, p. 448, § 2; Laws 1994, p. 292, § 2; Laws 2000, p. 880, § 2.

§ 15–10–63.1. Cash bonds

(a) The chief magistrate of each county may by written order establish a schedule of cash bonds for the personal appearance in court of any person charged with a violation of an ordinance. The chief magistrate shall designate the officer or officers authorized to accept cash bonds pursuant to the schedule of bonds published by the court. In no event shall any officer or agent who is authorized to issue citations be authorized to accept a cash bond at the time of or in conjunction with the issuance of any citation. The officer accepting a cash bond shall issue a receipt for the bond to the person charged with the violation.

(b) Any person who is accused by citation but has not been arrested may, but shall not be required to, give a cash bond for his personal appearance in court for trial. If a person who has given a cash bond fails to appear for trial, the failure to appear shall be deemed to constitute a guilty plea and such cash bond shall be forfeited upon the call of the case for trial. It shall not be necessary for the county to take any further action to forfeit the cash bond. Forfeiture of a cash bond shall be deemed to constitute imposition and payment of a fine and shall be a bar to a subsequent prosecution of the accused for the violation. The court may, however, in any case enter an order pursuant to which bond forfeiture shall not be deemed to constitute imposition of a sentence and subsequent prosecution shall not be barred; and in any such case the amount of the bond forfeited shall be credited against any fine subsequently imposed.

(c) It shall be the duty of the clerk of magistrate court to furnish the officer or officers authorized under the order with a book of blank receipts consecutively numbered in triplicate and readily distinguishable and identifiable. The receipts shall be completed by the officers when accepting a cash bond so as to show the name of the person cited or arrested, the date of citation or arrest, nature of the offense, amount of cash bond given, and the name of the receiving officer. The receiving officer shall deliver a copy of the receipt to the person cited or arrested at the time the cash bond is given and shall file the original together with the cash bond with the clerk of the magistrate court not later than the next succeeding business day following the date of issuance of the receipt.

§ 15–10–64. Executions; confinement

(a) Execution may issue immediately upon any fine imposed by the court and not immediately paid.

(b) The sheriff of the county shall receive and house all persons sentenced to confinement for contempt or arrested or sentenced to confinement for violation of ordinances.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1984, p. 1096, § 10; Laws 1987, p. 448, § 2.

§ 15–10–65. Review by certiorari

Review of convictions shall be by certiorari to the superior court.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1987, p. 448, § 2.

§ 15–10–66. Prosecuting attorney

The county attorney or another attorney designated by the county governing authority may act as prosecuting attorney for violations of county ordinances; and any attorney designated by the affected state authority may act as prosecuting attorney for violation of state authority ordinances.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1987, p. 448, § 2.

Article 8

Magistrate Training

§ 15–10–130. Short title

This article shall be known and may be cited as "The Georgia Magistrate Courts Training Council Act."

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–131. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Certified magistrate" means a magistrate judge who has the appropriate required certificate of training issued by the council and on file with the council or a magistrate judge who is exempt from such training by subsection (d) of Code Section 15–10–137.

(2) "Council" means the Georgia Magistrate Courts Training Council.

(3) "School" means any school, college, university, academy, or training program approved by the council and the Judicial Council of Georgia which offers basic, in-service, advanced, specialized, or continuing judicial training or a combination thereof and includes within its meaning a combination of course curriculum, instructors, and facilities which meet the standards required by the council.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1985, p. 1416, § 1; Laws 1990, p. 8, § 15.

§ 15–10–132. Georgia Magistrate Courts Training Council; creation; membership; terms

(a) There is established a council which shall be known and designated as the "Georgia Magistrate Courts Training Council" and which shall be composed of the director of the Administrative Office of the Courts or such director's designee, which member shall not be a voting member, and five magistrate judges, either elected or appointed, who shall be appointed by the president of the Council of Magistrate Court Judges, with approval of the council's executive committee, for terms of two years.

(b) Membership on the council does not constitute public office and no member shall be disqualified from holding office by reason of his membership.

(c) Members of the Georgia Justice Courts Training Council serving as of June 30, 1983, shall continue on and automatically become members of the Georgia Magistrate Courts Training Council with the same term and office as held on June 30, 1983.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1997, p. 922, § 2; Laws 1999, p. 81, § 15.

§ 15–10–133. Oath of office by council, certificate of appointment

Immediately and before entering upon the duties of office, the members of the Georgia Magistrate Courts Training Council shall take the oath of office and shall file the same in the office of the Judicial Council, which, upon receiving the oath of office, shall issue to each member a certificate of appointment.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–134. Organization of council; officers; quorum; minutes; reports

(a) A chairman and vice chairman shall be elected at the first meeting of each calendar year.

(b) The director of the Administrative Office of the Courts or his designee shall serve as secretary to the council.

(c) A simple majority of the members of the council shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

(d) The council shall maintain minutes of its meetings and such other records as it deems necessary.

(e) The council shall report at least annually to the Governor and to the General Assembly as to its activities.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1; Laws 1990, p. 8, § 15.

§ 15–10–135. Compensation

The members of the council shall receive no salary but shall be reimbursed for their reasonable and necessary expenses actually incurred in the performance of their functions; provided, however, that such expenses shall not exceed those allowed to members of the General Assembly.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–136. Functions, powers and responsibilities

The council is vested with the following functions, powers, and responsibilities:

(1) To make all the necessary rules and regulations to carry out this article;

(2) To cooperate with and secure the cooperation of every department, agency, or instrumentality of the state government or its political subdivisions in furtherance of the purposes of this article;

(3) To approve schools and to prescribe minimum qualifications for instructors at approved schools;

(4) To issue a certification to any magistrate judge satisfactorily complying with an approved training program established;

(5) To do any and all things necessary or convenient to enable it wholly and adequately to perform its duties and to exercise the power granted to it; and

(6) To prescribe, by rules and regulations, the minimum requirements for curricula and standards composing the initial in-service, advanced, specialized, and continuing training courses for certification.

Laws 1983, p. 884, § 2–1.

§ 15–10–137. Training certification requirements

(a) Any person who takes office as a magistrate on July 1, 1983, and who was certified under the former Justice Courts Training Council shall satisfactorily complete 40 hours of training prior to December 31, 1984, in order to become certified under this article.

(b) Any person who becomes a magistrate between July 1, 1983, and June 30, 1998, shall satisfactorily complete 40 hours of training in the performance of his or her duties and shall attend the first scheduled training session held after the date of his or her election or appointment in order to become certified under this article. In order to become certified under this article, any person who becomes a magistrate on or after July 1, 1998, shall satisfactorily complete 80 hours of training specified by the council concerning the performance of his or her duties during the first two years after becoming a magistrate.

(b.1) Any person who becomes a magistrate on or after July 1, 1998, shall complete during the initial year of service as a magistrate a program of orientation activities established by the council and conducted under the guidance and supervision of an experienced adviser or mentor magistrate or judge.

(c)(1) In order to maintain the status of a certified magistrate judge, each person certified as such shall complete 20 hours of additional training per annum during each calendar year after the year of his or her initial certification in which he or she serves as a magistrate judge.

(2) For the calendar years 2009 and 2010 only, the council may suspend, in whole or in part, the training requirements of this subsection. If the council suspends such requirements, and if any magistrate judge has completed all or a portion of the required training prior to suspension of the training requirements, credit for the training so completed shall be carried over and applied to calendar year 2010 or 2011.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this article, any magistrate who is also an active member of the State Bar of Georgia shall be certified as a certified magistrate by the council without being required to complete any training otherwise required by subsection (b) of this Code section but shall be required to complete the mentor program of subsection (b.1) of this Code section within 12 months of taking office as magistrate and the annual training required by subsection (c) of this Code section, commencing with the first full calendar year following the year in which such a magistrate takes office.

Article 9

Magistrate Court Serving as Municipal Court

§ 15–10–150. Counties and municipalities authorized to contract concerning municipal court services

The governing authority of any county may contract with the governing authority of any municipality within the county for the county to furnish municipal court services to the municipality as authorized by this article; and the governing authorities of municipalities are likewise authorized to enter into such contracts with county governing authorities.

Laws 1986, p. 787, § 1.

§ 15–10–151. Provisions of contracts; approval of chief magistrate

Any contract entered into pursuant to this article shall provide that the county shall furnish municipal court services to the municipality through the officers, employees, and facilities of the magistrate court of the county. Any contract so entered into shall not become effective unless it is approved by the chief magistrate then in office; and no such contract shall extend beyond the term of the chief magistrate then in office.

Laws 1986, p. 787, § 1.

§ 15–10–152. Authority of judges and other officers and personnel of magistrate court

When a contract entered into pursuant to this article has become effective, the judges of the magistrate court shall have full authority to act as judges of the municipal court of the municipality; and the other officers and personnel of the magistrate court shall have full authority to act as officers and personnel of the municipal court.

Laws 1986, p. 787, §[1] 1.

§ 15–10–153. Style of judges, pleadings, etc.; dockets and records to be kept separate

When acting as officers of the municipal court all judges and other officers of the magistrate court shall be styled as judges and officers of the municipal court; and all pleadings, process, and papers of the municipal court shall be styled as such and not as pleadings, process, and papers of the magistrate court. The dockets and other records of the municipal court shall be kept separately from those of the magistrate court.

Laws 1986, p. 787, § 1.

§ 15–10–154. Limitations upon punishment for violations of municipal ordinances

Any limitations upon the punishment which may be imposed for violations of municipal ordinances which are contained in the charter of the municipality shall continue to control in municipal courts operated under this article, and if no such limitation exists the maximum punishment imposed shall not exceed a fine of $1,000.00 or six months' imprisonment or both, unless some other general law authorizes greater punishment. Other charter provisions not in conflict with this article shall continue to apply in municipal courts operated under this article.

Laws 1986, p. 787, § 1.

§ 15–10–155. Exceptions

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, the authority granted to municipalities by this article shall not apply to:

(1) A municipality whose charter does not authorize a municipal court;

(2) A municipality whose charter provides for the election, as judge or judges and not as members of the municipal governing authority, of the judge or judges of a court having jurisdiction over municipal ordinance violations; or

(3) A municipality whose charter expressly provides that the municipality shall not have the authority granted by this article.

(b) The authority granted to municipalities by this article shall, notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this Code section, apply to any municipality if as of June 30, 1983, jurisdiction over violation of its ordinances was by law vested in a magistrate court in existence on that date.

Laws 1986, p. 787, § 1; Laws 1987, p. 3, § 15.

Article 10

Deposit Account Fraud Prosecutions

§ 15–10–200. Trials of misdemeanor violations

This article governs trials of misdemeanor violations of Code Section 16–9–20, relating to deposit account fraud, which violations shall be punishable as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–9–20.

Laws 1987, p. 1032, § 2; Laws 1994, p. 1787, § 2.

There shall be no jury trials in the magistrate court. Any person charged with one or more misdemeanor violations of Code Section 16–9–20 may, at any time before trial, demand that the case be removed to the state court of the county or to the superior court of the county if there is no state court. Such demand shall be written. Upon such written demand the court shall grant the demand. Failure to so demand removal of the case shall constitute a waiver of any right to trial by jury which the defendant may otherwise have had and of any other right which could have been secured by such a demand.

Laws 1987, p. 1032, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 13, § 15.

§ 15–10–202. Practice and procedure

(a) Prosecution for a misdemeanor violation of Code Section 16–9–20 may proceed by arrest, as provided in Chapter 4 of Title 17, and an accusation, as provided in Code Section 17–7–71, or by citation.

(b) Each citation shall be based upon an affidavit as in the issuance of an arrest warrant and said citation shall state the time and place at which the accused is to appear for trial, shall identify the offense with which the accused is charged, shall have an identifying number by which it shall be filed with the court, shall indicate the identity of the accused and the date of service, and shall be signed by a judge or clerk of the magistrate court.

(c) Prosecutions upon citations shall be commenced by the completion and signing of the citation by a judge or clerk of the magistrate court and service of the citation by a law enforcement officer. A copy of the citation shall be personally served upon the accused and the original shall promptly be filed with the court.

(d) If the prosecution is proceeding upon citation, the accused shall not be arrested prior to the time of trial; but any defendant who fails to appear for trial shall be arrested thereafter on the warrant of a judge of the magistrate court and required to post a bond for his future appearance. If the accused demands removal of the case to the state or superior court, the magistrate court may require that the accused post a bond for his future appearance in the state or superior court.

(e) The prosecuting attorney of the court in which the case would have been tried if a demand for removal had been made shall be responsible for the prosecution of the case in the magistrate court.

Laws 1987, p. 1032, § 2; Laws 2000, p. 880, § 3.

§ 15–10–203. Optional procedure for forfeiture of no contest cash bonds on misdemeanor bad check violations as final disposition

(a) The chief magistrate of each county may by written order establish a schedule of no contest cash bonds which the accused may post when arrested or accused by warrant or citation pursuant to subsection (d) of Code Section 15–10–202. The schedule of no contest cash bond amounts shall be sufficient to cover court costs, minimum fines as set forth in Code Section 16–9–20, and restitution in the full amount of the dishonored check. At the time of posting a no contest cash bond, the receipt shall contain the following language: "IF YOU GIVE A NO CONTEST CASH BOND AND FAIL TO APPEAR FOR TRIAL, THIS BOND MAY BE FORFEITED AND, IF SO FORFEITED, SHALL CONSTITUTE A MISDEMEANOR GUILTY PLEA AND A WAIVER OF CERTAIN CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS," which shall be acknowledged by the person arrested.

(b) A person arrested or accused by warrant or citation pursuant to subsection (d) of Code Section 15–10–202 who does not wish to post a no contest cash bond may post a property bond or standard appearance bond to assure his or her future appearance in court.

(c) If a person who gives a no contest cash bond fails subsequently to appear for trial, such failure shall constitute a guilty plea and the no contest cash bond shall be forfeited, unless the court proceeds under the provisions of subsection (d) of this Code section. It shall not be necessary for the state to take any further action to forfeit the no contest cash bond. Forfeiture of a no contest cash bond shall be considered to constitute imposition and payment of a fine and restitution and, if so considered, shall be a bar to a subsequent prosecution of the accused for the violation in accordance with Code Section 16–9–20.

(d) If the judge determines at the time of the nonappearance at trial of the defendant in his or her sole discretion that substantial justice will not be accomplished by the forfeiture of the no contest cash bond amount and the disposition of the charges with prejudice, the posting of the no contest cash bond shall not be considered a plea of guilty nor constitute a bar to a subsequent prosecution of the defendant for the violation, and any moneys posted under the no contest cash bond shall be held in the court's registry pending subsequent prosecution, and the defendant shall be served with a citation for a reasonable future appearance date, and, in default of the defendant's appearance, the court shall issue a bench warrant for the defendant's arrest.

(e) Upon a conviction under a subsequent prosecution, the proceeds of any no contest cash bond shall be applied and distributed toward restitution, fine, and court costs imposed by the court.

(f) If a defendant posts a property bond or standard appearance bond and thereafter fails to appear at the designated time, a bench warrant shall be issued for such person and the bond shall be forfeited as provided by Code Section 17–6–17.

Laws 1994, p. 865, § 1.

Article 11

Senior Magistrates

§ 15–10–220. Appointment

There is created the office of senior magistrate. Subject to the approval of the governing authority, any chief magistrate of this state may appoint to the office of senior magistrate any retired chief magistrate, magistrate, or judge who prior to retirement served at least eight consecutive years as chief magistrate or magistrate, or a combination of such offices, or served eight consecutive years as a judge of a court of record or juvenile court, or a combination of such offices. A senior magistrate need not be a member of the State Bar of Georgia, unless required by local law. The term of an appointment made pursuant to this Code section shall not exceed the current term of the appointing officer.

Laws 1993, p. 910, § 2.

§ 15–10–221. Duties

Upon the request of any chief magistrate of this state, a senior magistrate may discharge all of the duties of a magistrate and may assume and exercise all of the jurisdiction, power, and authority of a magistrate.

Laws 1993, p. 910, § 2.

§ 15–10–222. Oath

Before entering on the duties of his or her office, a senior magistrate shall subscribe before the judge of the probate court in which he or she is first appointed the oath prescribed in Code Section 45–3–1 and the following oath:

"I swear or affirm that I will duly and faithfully perform all the duties required of me as senior magistrate and that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Georgia."

Laws 1993, p. 910, § 2.

§ 15–10–223. Training

In order to maintain the status of senior magistrate, a senior magistrate shall complete the 20 hours of training provided for in subsection (c) of Code Section 15–10–137 in each calendar year in which he or she serves as a senior magistrate.

Laws 1993, p. 910, § 2.

Article 13

Trials of Certain Misdemeanors

§ 15–10–260. Concurrent criminal jurisdiction over certain misdemeanor marijuana possession, shoplifting, alcohol violations relating to minors, and criminal trespass

(a) This article governs trials of misdemeanor violations of Code Sections 16–13–30 and 16–13–2, relating to possession of less than one ounce of marijuana; Code Section 16–8–14, relating to theft by shoplifting of $300.00 or less; Code Section 3–3–23, relating to furnishing alcoholic beverages to, and purchase and possession of alcoholic beverages by, a person under 21 years of age; and Code Section 16–7–21, relating to criminal trespass.

(b) Magistrate courts are authorized to conduct trials and impose sentences for violations of misdemeanors specified in subsection (a) of this Code section; provided, however, that the violation must have occurred in the unincorporated area of the county.

(c) A person convicted of violation of a misdemeanor specified in subsection (a) of this Code section shall be punished as provided in paragraphs (1) through (4) of this subsection as follows:

(1) For possession of less than one ounce of marijuana, as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–13–2;

(2) For theft by shoplifting, as provided in paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of Code Section 16–8–14;

(3) For furnishing alcoholic beverages to, and purchase and possession of alcoholic beverages by, a person under 21 years of age, as provided in Code Section 3–3–23.1; and

(4) For criminal trespass, as provided in subsection (d) of Code Section 16–7–21.

(d) The jurisdiction of magistrate courts to try and dispose of the misdemeanor violations enumerated in subsection (a) of this Code section shall be concurrent with the jurisdiction of any other courts having jurisdiction to try and dispose of such cases.

Laws 2000, p. 1155, § 3.

§ 15–10–261. Jury trial; waiver

There shall be no jury trials in the magistrate court. A magistrate court shall not have the power to dispose of the misdemeanor offenses enumerated in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–10–260 unless the defendant shall first waive in writing a trial by jury. If the defendant does not waive a trial by jury, the defendant shall notify the court and, if probable cause exists, the defendant shall be immediately bound over to a court in the county having jurisdiction to try the offense wherein a jury may be impaneled.

Laws 2000, p. 1155, § 3.

§ 15–10–262. Procedures relating to citation arrest or accusation; prosecuting attorneys

(a) Prosecution for misdemeanor violations authorized in this article may proceed by citation, summons, arrest, citation and arrest, or by arrest warrant as provided in Chapter 4 of Title 17, or by an accusation as provided in Code Section 17–7–71.

(b) The solicitor general of counties having solicitors general, or the county attorney or another attorney designated by the county governing authority, may act as the prosecuting attorney of the magistrate court in proceedings under this article.

Laws 2000, p. 1155, § 3.

§ 15–10–263. No contest cash bonds and related procedures

(a) The chief magistrate of each county may by written order establish a schedule of no contest cash bonds which the accused may post when arrested or accused by warrant or citation pursuant to this article. The schedule of no contest cash bond amounts shall be sufficient to cover court costs and minimum fines as set forth in the Code section applicable to the alleged offense. At the time of posting a no contest cash bond, the receipt shall contain the following language: "IF YOU GIVE A NO CONTEST CASH BOND AND FAIL TO APPEAR FOR TRIAL, THIS BOND MAY BE FORFEITED AND, IF SO FORFEITED, SHALL CONSTITUTE A MISDEMEANOR GUILTY PLEA AND A WAIVER OF CERTAIN CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS," which shall be acknowledged by the person arrested.

(b) A person arrested or accused by warrant or citation pursuant to this article who does not wish to post a no contest cash bond may post a property bond or standard appearance bond to assure his or her future appearance in court.

(c) If a person who gives a no contest cash bond fails subsequently to appear for trial, such failure shall constitute a guilty plea and the no contest cash bond shall be forfeited, unless the court proceeds under the provisions of subsection (d) of this Code section. It shall not be necessary for the state to take any further action to forfeit the no contest cash bond. Forfeiture of a no contest cash bond shall be considered to constitute imposition and payment of a fine and, if so considered, shall be a bar to a subsequent prosecution of the accused for the violation.

(d) If the judge determines at the time of the nonappearance at trial of the defendant in his or her sole discretion that substantial justice will not be accomplished by the forfeiture of the no contest cash bond amount and the disposition of the charges with prejudice, the posting of the no contest cash bond shall not be considered a plea of guilty nor constitute a bar to a subsequent prosecution of the defendant for the violation, and any moneys posted under the no contest cash bond shall be held in the court's registry pending subsequent prosecution, and the defendant shall be served with a citation for a reasonable future appearance date, and, in default of the defendant's appearance, the court shall issue a bench warrant for the defendant's arrest.

(e) Upon a conviction under a subsequent prosecution, the proceeds of any no contest cash bond shall be applied and distributed toward the fine and court costs imposed by the court.

(f) If a defendant posts a property bond or standard appearance bond and thereafter fails to appear at the designated time, a bench warrant shall be issued for such person and the bond shall be forfeited as provided by Code Section 17–6–17.

Juvenile Proceedings

Part 1

General Provisions

§ 15–11–1. Construction and purpose

This chapter shall be liberally construed to the end:

(1) That children whose well-being is threatened shall be assisted and protected and restored, if possible, as secure law-abiding members of society;

(2) That each child coming within the jurisdiction of the court shall receive, preferably in his or her own home, the care, guidance, and control that will be conducive to the child's welfare and the best interests of the state; and

(3) That when a child is removed from the control of his or her parents the court shall secure for the child care as nearly as possible equivalent to that which his or her parents should have given the child.

Laws 1971, p. 709, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 20, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 24A–101.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment inserted gender neutral referents.

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 1 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–2. Definitions

As used in this chapter, the term:

(1) "Adult" means any individual who is not a child under the definition in paragraph (2) of this Code section.

(1.1) "Biological father" means the male who impregnated the biological mother resulting in the birth of the child.

(2) "Child" means any individual who is:

(A) Under the age of 17 years;

(B) Under the age of 21 years, who committed an act of delinquency before reaching the age of 17 years, and who has been placed under the supervision of the court or on probation to the court; or

(C) Under the age of 18 years, if alleged to be a "deprived child" or a "status offender" as defined by this Code section.

(3) "Community rehabilitation center" means a rehabilitation and custodial center established within a county for the purpose of assisting in the rehabilitation of delinquent and unruly children in a neighborhood and family environment in cooperation with community educational, medical, and social agencies, which center meets the following requirements:

(A) Is located within any county having a juvenile court presided over by at least one full-time judge exercising jurisdiction exclusively over juvenile matters; and

(B) Is operated by a nonprofit corporation organized under Chapter 3 of Title 14, the "Georgia Nonprofit Corporation Code," and has a full-time chief executive officer. The charter, bylaws, and method of selecting the board of directors and chief executive officer of such nonprofit corporation shall be subject to the unanimous approval of the chief judge of the judicial circuit in which the county is located, the judge or judges of the juvenile court, the superintendent of the county school district, and the commissioner of corrections, which approval shall be in writing and shall be appended to the charter and bylaws of the nonprofit organization. Any amendment of the charter or bylaws of the nonprofit corporation shall be subject to the same written approval as the original charter and bylaws.

(4) "Court" or "juvenile court" means the court exercising jurisdiction over juvenile matters.

(4.1) "Criminal justice purposes" means the performance of any activity directly involving the investigation, detection, apprehension, detention, pretrial release, post-trial release, prosecution, adjudication, correctional supervision, or rehabilitation of children or adults who are accused of, convicted of, or charged with crimes or the collection, storage, and dissemination of criminal history record information.

(5) "Custodian" means:

(A) A person, other than a parent or legal guardian, who stands in loco parentis to the child or a person to whom legal custody of the child has been given by order of a court; or

(B) A public or private agency or other private organization licensed or otherwise authorized by law to receive and provide care for a child to which legal custody of the child has been given by order of a court.

(6) "Delinquent act" means:

(A) An act designated a crime by the laws of this state, or by the laws of another state if the act occurred in that state, under federal laws, or by local ordinance, and the crime does not fall under subparagraph (C) of paragraph (12) of this Code section and is not a juvenile traffic offense as defined in Code Section 15–11–73;

(B) The act of disobeying the terms of supervision contained in a court order which has been directed to a child who has been adjudged to have committed a delinquent act; or

(C) Failing to appear as required by a citation issued with regard to a violation of Code Section 3–3–23.

(7) "Delinquent child" means a child who has committed a delinquent act and is in need of treatment or rehabilitation.

(8) "Deprived child" means a child who:

(A) Is without proper parental care or control, subsistence, education as required by law, or other care or control necessary for the child's physical, mental, or emotional health or morals;

(B) Has been placed for care or adoption in violation of law;

(C) Has been abandoned by his or her parents or other legal custodian; or

(D) Is without a parent, guardian, or custodian.

No child who in good faith is being treated solely by spiritual means through prayer in accordance with the tenets and practices of a recognized church or religious denomination by a duly accredited practitioner thereof shall, for that reason alone, be considered to be a "deprived child."

(8.1) "Identification data" means the fingerprints, name, race, sex, date of birth, and any other unique identifiers of the child.

(9) "Judge" means judge or judges of the court exercising jurisdiction over juvenile matters. Such term shall not mean or include an associate juvenile court judge or associate juvenile court traffic judge unless specifically so stated.

(10) "Juvenile court intake officer" means the juvenile court judge, associate juvenile court judge, court service worker, or person employed as a juvenile probation or intake officer designated by the juvenile court judge or, where there is none, the superior court judge, which person is on duty for the purpose of determining whether any child taken into custody should be released or detained and, if detained, the appropriate place of detention. Each superior or juvenile court judge shall provide for one of the above persons to be on duty or on call as an intake officer during each 24 hour period.

(A) Has legally adopted a child;

(B) Was married to the biological mother of that child at the time the child was conceived or was born, unless such paternity was disproved by a final order pursuant to Article 3 of Chapter 7 of Title 19;

(C) Married the legal mother of the child after the child was born and recognized the child as his own, unless such paternity was disproved by a final order pursuant to Article 3 of Chapter 7 of Title 19;

(D) Has legitimated the child by a final order pursuant to Code Section 19–7–22; or

(E) Has legitimated the child pursuant to Code Section 19–7–21.1

and who has not surrendered or had terminated his rights to the child.

(10.2) "Legal mother" means the female who is the biological or adoptive mother of the child and who has not surrendered or had terminated her rights to the child.

(10.3) "Parent" means either the legal father or the legal mother of the child.

(10.4) "Putative father registry" means the registry established and maintained pursuant to subsections (d) and (e) of Code Section 19–11–9.

(10.5) "Shelter care" means:

(A) A licensed foster home or home approved by the court which may be a public or private home or the home of the noncustodial parent or a relative; or

(B) A facility operated by a licensed child welfare agency.

(11) "Status offender" means a child who is charged with or adjudicated of an offense which would not be a crime if it were committed by an adult, in other words, an act which is only an offense because of the perpetrator's status as a child. Such offenses shall include, but are not limited to, truancy, running away from home, incorrigibility, and unruly behavior.

(12) "Unruly child" means a child who:

(A) While subject to compulsory school attendance is habitually and without justification truant from school;

(B) Is habitually disobedient of the reasonable and lawful commands of his or her parent, guardian, or other custodian and is ungovernable;

(C) Has committed an offense applicable only to a child;

(D) Without just cause and without the consent of his or her parent or legal custodian deserts his or her home or place of abode;

(E) Wanders or loiters about the streets of any city, or in or about any highway or any public place, between the hours of 12:00 Midnight and 5:00 A.M.;

(F) Disobeys the terms of supervision contained in a court order which has been directed to such child, who has been adjudicated unruly; or

(G) Patronizes any bar where alcoholic beverages are being sold, unaccompanied by such child's parents, guardian, or custodian, or possesses alcoholic beverages; and

(H) In any of the foregoing, is in need of supervision, treatment, or rehabilitation; or

(I) Has committed a delinquent act and is in need of supervision, but not of treatment or rehabilitation.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring. In addition the amendment inserted gender neutral referents.

The 2003 amendment by Act 3 rewrote par. (5) which had read:

(5) " 'Custodian' means a person, other than a parent or legal guardian, who stands in loco parentis to the child or a person to whom legal custody of the child has been given by order of a court, and who has the rights and duties provided in Code Section 15–11–13."

The 2003 amendment by Act 268, in subpar. (C) of par. (2), inserted "or a 'status offender' " after "child".

The 2008 amendment by Act 580, in par. (10.1), rewrote subpars. (D) and (E), which formerly read:

"(D) Has been determined to be the father by a final paternity order pursuant to Article 3 of Chapter 7 of Title 19; or

"(E) Has legitimated the child by a final order pursuant to Code Section 19–7–22".

§ 15–11–3. Appeals; supersedeas

In all cases of final judgments of a juvenile court judge, appeals shall be taken to the Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court in the same manner as appeals from the superior court. However, no such judgment or order shall be superseded except in the discretion of the judge; rather, the judgment or order of the court shall stand until reversed or modified by the reviewing court.

(a) Court of inquiry. The juvenile court shall have jurisdiction to act as a court of inquiry with all the powers and rights allowed courts of inquiry in this state and to examine or investigate into the circumstances or causes of any conduct or acts of any person 17 years of age or over that may be in violation of the laws of this state whenever the person is brought before the court in the course of any proceeding instituted under this article. The court shall cause the person to be apprehended and brought before it upon either a writ of summons, a warrant duly issued, or by arrest. Where, after hearing evidence, the court has reasonably ascertained that there is probable cause to believe that the person has committed a misdemeanor or felony as prescribed under the laws of this state, the court shall commit, bind over to the court of proper jurisdiction in this state, or discharge the person. When justice shall require, the court shall cause the person to make the bond or bail as the court shall deem proper under the circumstances, to cause the person to appear before the court of proper jurisdiction in this state to be acted upon as provided by law.

(b) Court of record. The juvenile court is a court of record, having a seal. The judge and the judge's duly appointed representatives shall each have power to administer oaths and affirmations.

(c) Issuance of warrants by juvenile court judge. The juvenile court judge and associate juvenile court judge shall have authority to issue a warrant for the arrest of any child for an offense committed against the laws of this state, based either on personal knowledge or the information of others given under oath.

§ 15–11–5. Contempt powers; other sanctions

(a) In addition to all other inherent powers of the court to enforce its lawful orders, the court may punish a person for contempt of court for willfully disobeying an order of the court or for obstructing or interfering with the proceedings of the court or the enforcement of its orders, subject to the law relating to the procedures therefor and the limitations thereon.

(b) In addition or as an alternative to the punishment provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, after notice and opportunity for hearing, the court may impose any or all of the following sanctions when a parent, guardian, or other custodian willfully violates any order issued by the court directed to that parent, guardian, or other custodian:

(1) Require the parent, guardian, or other custodian of the child to make restitution in an amount not to exceed $2,500.00 for any damage or loss caused by the child's wrongful act;

(2) Impose a fine not to exceed $1,000.00;

(3) Reimburse the state for the costs of detention, treatment, or rehabilitation of the child;

(4) Require the parent, guardian, or other custodian of the child to perform court approved community service designed to contribute to the ability of the parent, guardian, or other custodian to provide proper parental care and supervision of the child; or

(5) Require the parent, guardian, or other custodian of the child to enter into a contract or plan as a part of the disposition of any charges against the child, so as to provide for the supervision and control of the child by the parent, guardian, or custodian and reunification of the child with the parent, guardian, or custodian.

(a) "Indigent person" defined. An indigent person is one who at the time of requesting counsel is unable without undue financial hardship to provide for full payment of legal counsel and all other necessary expenses for representation.

(b) Right to legal representation. Except as otherwise provided under this article, a party is entitled to representation by legal counsel at all stages of any proceedings alleging delinquency, unruliness, incorrigibility, or deprivation and if, as an indigent person, a party is unable to employ counsel, he or she is entitled to have the court provide counsel for him or her. If a party appears without counsel, the court shall ascertain whether such party knows of his or her right to counsel and to be provided with counsel by the court if he or she is an indigent person. The court may continue the proceeding to enable a party to obtain counsel and shall provide counsel for an unrepresented indigent person upon the request of such a person. Counsel must be provided for a child not represented by the child's parent, guardian, or custodian. If the interests of two or more parties conflict, separate counsel shall be provided for each of them.

§ 15–11–7. Other basic rights

(a) A party is entitled to the opportunity to introduce evidence and otherwise be heard in his or her own behalf and to cross-examine adverse witnesses.

(b) A child charged with a delinquent act need not be a witness against or otherwise incriminate himself or herself. An extrajudicial statement obtained in the course of violation of this article or one which would be constitutionally inadmissible in a criminal proceeding shall not be used against such child. Evidence illegally seized or obtained shall not be received over objection to establish the allegations made against a child. A confession validly made by the child out of court is insufficient to support an adjudication of delinquency unless it is corroborated in whole or in part by other evidence.

§ 15–11–8. Costs and expenses for care of child

(a) The following expenses shall be a charge upon the funds of the county upon certification thereof by the court:

(1) The cost of medical and other examinations and treatment of a child ordered by the court;

(2) The cost of care and support of a child committed by the court to the legal custody of an individual or a public or private agency other than the Department of Juvenile Justice, but the court may order supplemental payments, if such are necessary or desirable;

(3) Reasonable compensation for services and related expenses of counsel appointed by the court, where appointed by the court to represent the child and when appointed by the court to conduct the proceedings;

(4) Reasonable compensation for a guardian ad litem;

(5) The expense of service of summons, notices, and subpoenas, travel expenses of witnesses, transportation, subsistence, and detention of the child, and other like expenses incurred in the proceedings under this chapter; and

(6) The cost of counseling and counsel and advice required or provided under the provisions of Code Sections 15–11–57 and 15–11–68.

(b) If, after due notice to the parents or other persons legally obligated to care for and support the child and after affording them an opportunity to be heard, the court finds that they are financially able to pay all or part of the costs and expenses stated in subsection (a) of this Code section, the court may order them to pay the same and prescribe the manner of payment. In addition, the court may order payment from the parents or other legally obligated persons to reimburse all or part of the costs and expenses of the Department of Human Services for treatment, care, and support of the child. Unless otherwise ordered, payment shall be made to the clerk of the court for remittance to the person or agency, including the Department of Human Services, to whom compensation is due or, if the costs and expenses have been paid by the county, to the appropriate officer of the county.

§ 15–11–9. Guardian ad litem

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "court appointed special advocate" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 15–11–9.1.

(b) The court at any stage of a proceeding under this article, on application of a party or on its own motion, shall appoint a guardian ad litem for a child who is a party to the proceeding if the child has no parent, guardian, or custodian appearing on the child's behalf or if the interests of the parent, guardian, or custodian appearing on the child's behalf conflict with the child's interests or in any other case in which the interests of the child require a guardian. A party to the proceeding or the employee or representative of a party to the proceeding shall not be appointed. In deprivation cases, a person appointed as a child's guardian ad litem must have received before the appointment training appropriate to the role that is administered or approved by the Office of the Child Advocate and may be an attorney or court appointed special advocate, or both. For attorneys, the preappointment training required pursuant to this Code section shall be satisfied within attorneys' existing continuing legal education obligations and shall not require attorneys to complete additional training hours in addition to those currently required by the State Bar of Georgia. The Office of the Child Advocate shall exempt from the training required by this Code section attorneys who have practiced as guardians ad litem in juvenile court deprivation proceedings for three or more years and, when such determination is made by the court, have demonstrated a proficiency in child representation.

The 2000 amendment which restructured this chapter redesignated this section from § 15–11–55.

The 2005 amendment by Act 150 rewrote subsec. (b). Prior to amendment subsec. (b) had read:

"(b) The court at any stage of a proceeding under this article, on application of a party or on its own motion, shall appoint a guardian ad litem for a child who is a party to the proceeding if the child has no parent, guardian, or custodian appearing on the child's behalf or if the interests of the parent, guardian, or custodian appearing on the child's behalf conflict with the child's interests or in any other case in which the interests of the child require a guardian. A party to the proceeding or the employee or representative of a party to the proceeding shall not be appointed. In deprivation cases, an attorney or court appointed special advocate, or both, may be appointed as the child's guardian ad litem."

In 2005, the Code Commission, in the third sentence of subsec. (b), deleted a comma following "Office of the Child Advocate". See § 28–9–5.

The 2007 amendment by Act 231, in subsec. (a), substituted "shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 15–11–9.1" for "means a volunteer who has been screened and trained regarding deprivation, child development, and juvenile court procedures and has been appointed as a guardian ad litem by the court in a deprivation case".

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 51 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–9.1. Court appointed special advocate (CASA)

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Court appointed special advocate" or "CASA" means a community volunteer who:

(A) Has been screened and trained regarding deprivation, child development, and juvenile court procedures;

(B) Has met all of the requirements of an affiliate court appointed special advocate program;

(C) Is being actively supervised by an affiliate court appointed special advocate program; and

(D) Has been appointed as a lay guardian ad litem by the court in a juvenile court deprivation proceeding.

(2) "Affiliate court appointed special advocate program" means a locally-operated program operating with the approval of the local juvenile court which screens, trains, and supervises volunteers to advocate for the best interest of abused and neglected children in deprivation proceedings.

(b)(1) Before executing duties as a CASA, and upon completion of all the requirements of an affiliate court appointed special advocate program, a CASA shall be sworn in by a judge of the juvenile court in the court or circuit in which he or she wishes to serve. A CASA shall not be assigned a case prior to being sworn in by a juvenile court judge as set forth in this paragraph.

(2) If a juvenile court judge determines that a child involved in a deprivation proceeding needs a CASA, the judge shall have the authority to appoint a CASA, and in such circumstance shall sign an order appointing a CASA at the earliest possible stage of the proceedings. Such order shall impose on a CASA all the duties, rights, and responsibilities set forth in this Code section.

(c) The role of a CASA in juvenile court deprivation proceedings shall be to advocate for the best interests of the child.

(d) In all cases to which a CASA is assigned, except as ordered by the judge, a CASA shall:

(1) Conduct an independent assessment to determine the facts and circumstances surrounding the case;

(2) Maintain regular and sufficient in-person contact with the child;

(3) Submit written reports to the court regarding the child's best interests;

(4) Advocate for timely court hearings to obtain permanency for the child;

(5) Request a judicial citizen review panel or judicial review of the case;

(6) Collaborate with the child's attorney, if any;

(7) Attend all court hearings and other proceedings to advocate for the child's best interests;

(8) Monitor compliance with the case plan and all court orders; and

(9) Review all court related documents.

(e) As a lay guardian ad litem, a CASA shall not be required to:

(1) Engage in activities which could reasonably be construed as the practice of law; or

(2) Obtain legal counsel or other professional services for a child.

(f)(1) Except as provided in Article 5 of this chapter, the "Georgia Child Advocate for the Protection of Children Act," a CASA shall be notified of all court hearings, judicial reviews, judicial citizen review panels, and other significant changes of circumstances of the child's case to which the CASA has been appointed to the same extent and in the same manner as the parties to the case are notified of such matters.

(2) A CASA shall be notified of the formulation of any case plan of the child's case to which the CASA has been appointed and may be given the opportunity to be heard by the court about such plans.

(g) Upon presentation of an order appointing a CASA as a guardian ad litem, such CASA shall have access to all records and information relevant to the child's case to which such CASA has been appointed when such records and information are not otherwise protected from disclosure pursuant to Code Section 19–7–5. Such records and information shall not include records and information provided under Article 5 of this chapter, the "Georgia Advocate for the Protection of Children Act," or provided under Chapter 4A of Title 49. The CASA's right to access such records shall be as otherwise authorized by law.

(h)(1) All records and information acquired, reviewed, or produced by a CASA during the course of his or her appointment shall be deemed confidential and shall not be disclosed except as ordered by the court.

(2) Except as provided in Code Section 49–5–41, any CASA who discloses confidential information obtained during the course of his or her appointment shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. CASA's shall maintain all information and records regarding mental health, developmental disability, and substance abuse according to the confidentiality requirements contained in Code Section 37–3–166, 37–4–125, or 37–7–166, as applicable.

(i) Any CASA authorized and acting in good faith, in the absence of fraud or malice, and in accordance with the duties required by this Code section shall have immunity from any liability, civil or criminal, that might otherwise be incurred or imposed as a result of taking or failing to take any action pursuant to this Code section. This Code section shall not be construed as imposing any additional duty on a CASA which is not already otherwise imposed by law.

(j)(1) The court may remove a CASA from a case upon finding that the CASA has acted in a manner contrary to the child's best interest, or if the court otherwise deems continued service as unwanted or unnecessary.

(2) The court may discharge a CASA for nonparticipation in a case or upon finding that the CASA has acted in a manner contrary to the mission and purpose of the affiliate court appointed special advocate program.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2008 amendment by Act 471 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

Former § 15–11–9.1 was renumbered as § 15–11–24.3 by Laws 2000, p. 20, § 1.

§ 15–11–10. Community based risk reduction programs

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "program" means a community based risk reduction program established pursuant to this Code section.

(b) Any court may by order establish within the geographical jurisdiction of the court a court approved community based risk reduction program for the purpose of utilizing available community resources in assessment and intervention in cases of delinquency, deprivation, or unruliness. Subject to the procedures, requirements, and supervision established in the order creating such program, any individual and any public or private agency or entity may participate in the program.

(c) In any jurisdiction within which a program has been established, when a child comes before the court for disposition in any case involving delinquency, deprivation, or unruliness, the court may order that an assessment be made of the child and the circumstances resulting in the child being before the court. The assessment would be developed by assembling existing information and individualized plans of the agencies involved in providing services to the child and his or her family. The court may further order that, if the assessment demonstrates a need therefor, a case plan may be developed by a panel representing community agencies as authorized by the court, which plan may be amended or revised from time to time by the court or by the panel taking into consideration requests for revision made by a parent, the parents, or a guardian. Upon request, the child or the parents, or both, may be present during any review of the child's case by the panel. Such case plan shall contain the proposed actions and alternatives for the proper and efficient use of available community resources to assist the child. The case plan shall be served on the child and the child's parent, parents, or guardian. Included with the case plan shall be a cover letter which contains the following information: (1) sources to explain to the recipient of the case plan the process, procedures, and penalties for not responding to the court order in the prescribed time period; and (2) the deadline for responding to the court order and stating objections to the case plan or any portion thereof, which shall be ten days from the date of service. If no objection is made or if the child, parent, parents, or guardian consents to the case plan, the case plan shall be incorporated into and made a part of the disposition order entered in the case by entry of a supplemental order. The case plan may be modified by the court at any time the child is under the jurisdiction of the court. If a child or a parent or guardian objects to the case plan, the court shall conduct a hearing, at which the court may decline to adopt the case plan or may confirm or modify the case plan. In implementing a case plan, the court shall have available all of the protective powers set forth in Code Section 15–11–11, without the necessity of a show cause hearing, unless objection is made to the case plan. Code Section 15–11–11 should provide interventions reasonably necessary to effect the appropriate treatment plan for the protection and benefit of the child.

(d) Notwithstanding any provision contained in this article, in this Code, or in any rule or regulation adopted by any department, board, or agency of the state to the contrary, the court and any individual, public or private agency, or other entity participating in a program established pursuant to this Code section may exchange, as necessary, information, medical records, school records, records of adjudication, treatment records, and any other records or information which may aid in the assessment of and intervention with the children and families in the program. Such information shall be used by such individuals and agencies only for the purposes provided in this Code section and as authorized by the court for the purpose of implementing the case plan and for the purposes permitted under each agency's own rules and regulations. Such information shall not be released to any other individual or agency except as may be necessary to effect the appropriate treatment or intervention as provided in the case plan. Such information shall otherwise remain confidential and the court may punish any violations of confidentiality as contempt of court. Any person who authorizes or permits any person or agency not listed in Code Section 49–5–41, Code Section 19–7–5, or this Code section to have access to such records concerning reports of child abuse declared confidential by Code Section 49–5–40 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Any person who knowingly and under false pretenses obtains or attempts to obtain records or reports of child abuse declared confidential by Code Section 49–5–40 or information contained therein except as authorized by Code Section 49–5–41, Code Section 19–7–5, or this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Records made confidential by Code Section 49–5–40 and information obtained from such records may not be made a part of any record which is open to the public except that a district attorney may use and make public that record or information in the course of any criminal prosecution for any offense which constitutes or results from child abuse. This Code section shall not abridge the provisions of Code Section 37–3–166, 37–4–125, or 37–7–166 relating to confidentiality of patient or client records and shall not serve to destroy or in any way abridge the confidential or privileged character thereof.

(e)(1) As part of a program, a court may implement or adopt an early intervention program designed to identify children and families who are at risk of becoming involved with the court through petitions alleging that a child is delinquent, deprived, or unruly. Such early intervention program shall be for the purpose of developing and implementing intervention actions or plans to divert the children and their families from becoming involved in future cases in the court. The involvement of the judge of the court shall be for the limited purpose of facilitating the development of the program and for the purpose of protecting the confidentiality of the children and families participating in the program.

(2) As part of such an early intervention program, the court may enter into protocol agreements with school systems within the court's jurisdiction, the county department of family and children services, the county department of health, any state or local department or agency, any mental health agency or institution, local physicians or health care providers, licensed counselors and social workers, and any other social service, charitable, or other entity or any individual functioning within the jurisdiction of the court and with any other agency or individual providing educational or treatment services to families and children within the jurisdiction of the court. Such protocol agreements shall authorize those persons and agencies entering into them to exchange confidential information in the same manner and subject to the same restrictions, conditions, and penalties as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section.

(3) When any agency or entity participating in a protocol agreement under this subsection identifies a child who is at risk of becoming delinquent, deprived, or unruly, the agency or entity shall refer the case to a multiagency staffing panel. The panel shall develop a multiagency intervention plan for the child. The child or the parents, or both, may be present during any review of the child's case by the panel. The parents or guardian of the child shall be notified of the plan by the agency making the referral or by a person or entity designated by the panel to administer the program. The staff of the court, but not the judge, shall work with the other agencies involved to educate the parents and the child on the importance of following the plan and on the consequences if either the parents or the child is referred to the court. If an intervention plan is developed for a child and the parent or parents or guardian consents to the plan, the failure to comply with the plan or any portion thereof may constitute the basis for a referral to the department of family and children services as shall be provided in the protocol agreement.

§ 15–11–11. Protective orders

(a) On application of a party or on the court's own motion, the court may make an order restraining or otherwise controlling the conduct of a person if an order of disposition of a child has been or is about to be made in a proceeding under this article and due notice of the application or motion and the grounds therefor and an opportunity to be heard thereon have been given to the person against whom the order is directed. Such an order may require any such person:

(1) To stay away from the home or the child;

(2) To permit a parent to visit the child at stated periods;

(3) To abstain from offensive conduct against the child, the child's parent, or any person to whom custody of the child is awarded;

(4) To give proper attention to the care of the home;

(5) To cooperate in good faith with an agency to which custody of a child is entrusted by the court or with an agency or association to which the child is referred by the court;

(6) To refrain from acts of commission or omission that tend to make the home not a proper place for the child;

(7) To ensure that the child attends school pursuant to any valid law relating to compulsory attendance;

(8) To participate with the child in any counseling or treatment deemed necessary after consideration of employment and other family needs; and

(9) To enter into and complete successfully a substance abuse program approved by the court.

(b) After notice and opportunity for hearing afforded to a person subject to a protective order, the order may be modified or extended for a further specified period, or both, or may be terminated if the court finds that the best interests of the child and the public will be served thereby.

(c) Protective orders may be enforced by citation to show cause for contempt of court by reason of any violation thereof and, where protection of the welfare of the child so requires, by the issuance of a warrant to take the alleged violator into custody and bring him or her before the court.

§ 15–11–12. Investigation and report

(a) If the allegations of a petition alleging delinquency, unruliness, or deprivation are admitted by a party or if notice of a hearing under Code Section 15–11–30.2 has been given, the court prior to the hearing on need for treatment or rehabilitation and disposition may direct that a social study and report in writing to the court be made by the probation officer of the court or other person designated by the court, concerning the child, the child's family, the child's environment, and other matters relevant to disposition of the case. If the allegations of the petition are not admitted and notice of a hearing under Code Section 15–11–30.2 has not been given, the court shall not direct the making of the study and report until after the court has heard the petition upon notice of hearing given pursuant to this article and has found that the child committed a delinquent act or is an unruly or deprived child.

(b) During the pendency of any proceeding, the court may order the child to be examined at a suitable place by a physician or psychologist and may also order medical or surgical treatment of a child who is suffering from a serious physical condition or illness which, in the opinion of a licensed physician, requires prompt treatment, even if the parent, guardian, or other custodian has not been given notice of a hearing, is not available, or without good cause informs the court of his or her refusal to consent to the treatment.

§ 15–11–14. Emergency care and supervision of child without court order

(a) Notwithstanding Code Section 15–11–45 or any other provision of law, the Department of Human Services is authorized to provide emergency care and supervision to any child without seeking a court order for a period not to exceed seven days when:

(1) As a result of an emergency or illness, the person who has physical and legal custody of the child or children is unable to provide for the care and supervision of the child or children, and such person or a law enforcement officer, emergency personnel employed by a licensed ambulance provider, fire rescue personnel, or a hospital administrator or his or her designee requests that the department exercise such emergency custody; and

(2) The child or children are not at imminent risk of abuse or neglect, other than the risks arising from being without a caretaker.

During such period, the department shall endeavor to place the child or children with a relative of the parent or guardian, in shelter care, or in emergency foster care or shall make other appropriate placement arrangements. The department shall have the same rights and powers with regard to the child or children as does the custodial parent or other legal custodian.

(b) Immediately upon receiving custody of the child or children, the department shall begin a diligent search for a relative or other designee of the parent who can provide for the care and supervision of the child or children.

(c) At any time during such seven-day period, upon the parent or guardian's notification to the department that the parent or guardian, or a relative or designee thereof, is able to provide care to and exercise control over the child or children, the department shall release the child or children to the person having custody of the child or children at the time the child or children were taken into the custody of the department or to such person's relative or designee except as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section.

(d) Upon the expiration of such seven-day period, if the child or children have not been released pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section or if the department determines that there is an issue of neglect, abandonment, or abuse, the department shall promptly contact a juvenile court intake officer or bring the child or children before the juvenile court pursuant to Code Section 15–11–47 or 15–11–49. If, upon making an investigation, the intake or other authorized officer of the court finds that shelter care is warranted for the child or children, then, for purposes of this chapter, the child or children shall be deemed to have been placed in shelter care at the time such finding was made. The department may take such other and further actions under this article and all other provisions of law, as are authorized and appropriate, with regard to the child or children.

(e) During the period when a child is in the care and supervision of the department pursuant to this Code section, the department shall have the same authority to consent to medical treatment for the child as does the child's custodial parent or other legal custodian.

(f) The department and its successors, agents, assigns, and employees shall be immune from any and all liability for providing care and supervision for a child pursuant to subsection (a) of this Code section, for consenting to medical treatment for the child pursuant to subsection (e) of this Code section, and for releasing the child pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section.

§ 15–11–15. Temporary protective custody of child by physician without court order and without parental consent

(a) Notwithstanding Code Section 15–11–45 or any other provision of law, a physician, licensed to practice medicine in the State of Georgia in accordance with Article 2 of Chapter 34 of Title 43, who is treating a child may take or retain temporary protective custody of the child, without a court order and without the consent of a parent, guardian, or custodian, provided that:

(1) The physician has reasonable cause to believe that the child is in a circumstance or condition that presents an imminent danger to the child's life or health as a result of suspected abuse or neglect; and

(2) There is not sufficient time for a court order to be obtained under this article for temporary custody of the child before the child may be removed from the presence of the physician.

(b) A physician detaining a child in temporary custody shall:

(1) Make reasonable and diligent efforts to inform the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child of the whereabouts of the child;

(2) As soon as possible, make a report of the suspected abuse or neglect which caused him or her to take temporary custody of the child, as required by subsection (e) of Code Section 19–7–5, and inform the child welfare agency designated by the Department of Human Services to which such report is made that the child has been detained in temporary custody as provided in this Code section; and

(3) Not later than 24 hours after the child is detained in temporary custody:

(A) Contact a juvenile court intake officer as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–47, and inform such intake officer that the child is in imminent danger to his or her life or health as a result of suspected abuse or neglect; or

(B) Contact a law enforcement officer who shall take the child into custody and promptly bring the child before a juvenile court intake officer as provided in Code Sections 15–11–47 and 15–11–48.

(c) A child who meets the requirements for inpatient admission shall be retained in the hospital or institution until such time as the child is medically ready for discharge. Upon notification by the hospital or institution to the department that a child who is not eligible for inpatient admission or who is medically ready for discharge has been taken into custody by a physician in accordance with subsection (b) of this Code section, provided that the child has been placed in the custody of the Department of Human Services, the department shall take physical custody of the child within six hours of being notified.

(d) If the intake officer determines that the child is to be detained, in accordance with Code Sections 15–11–46 and 15–11–48 and subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–49 and the court orders that the child be detained in the legal custody of the Department of Human Services, acting by and through any of the county departments of family and children services, then:

(1) If the child remains in the physical care of the physician, the department shall take physical possession of the child within six hours of being notified by the physician, unless the child meets the criteria for admission to a hospital, or other medical institution or facility where he or she has been detained in the temporary custody by a physician; or

(2) If the child has been brought before the juvenile court by a law enforcement officer, the department shall promptly take physical possession of the child.

(e) If the child is not released, then the court shall notify the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian, the physician, and the Department of Human Services of the detention hearing which is to be held within 72 hours as provided in subsection (c) of Code Section 15–11–49.

(f) If the intake officer determines that the child should not be detained, the child shall be released pursuant to the provisions set forth in Code Section 15–11–49.

(g) If after the detention hearing the child is not released, the physician shall file the petition required by subsection (e) of Code Section 15–11–49 in accordance with this article, provided that such physician continues to believe that the child's life or health is in danger as a result of suspected abuse or neglect.

(h) Any hospital or physician authorized and acting in good faith and in accordance with acceptable medical practice in the treatment of a child under this Code section shall have immunity from any liability, civil or criminal, that might otherwise be incurred or imposed as a result of taking or failing to take any action, pursuant to this Code section. This Code section shall not be construed as imposing any additional duty not already otherwise imposed by law.

Part 2

Juvenile Court Administration

§ 15–11–18. Creation of juvenile courts; term, compensation, and qualifications of judges; presiding judges; practice of law by judges; action by superior court judges

(a) Creation. There is created a juvenile court in every county in the state.

(b) Appointment; authority; judgeships in existence on or before October 1, 2000. The judge or a majority of the judges of the superior court in each circuit in the state may appoint one or more qualified persons as judge of the juvenile courts of the circuit. Such superior court judge or judges shall establish the total number of circuit-wide juvenile court judges and shall establish whether the judge or judges shall be full time or part time, or a combination of full time and part time. Each circuit-wide judge appointed will have the authority to act as judge of each juvenile court in each county of the circuit. If no person is appointed as a juvenile court judge for the circuit, then the superior court judge or judges of the circuit shall assume the duties of the juvenile court judge in all counties in the circuit in which a separate juvenile court judgeship had not been established as part of the duties of the superior court judge. All juvenile court judgeships, their methods of compensation, selection, and operation, established on or before October 1, 2000, shall continue until such time as one or more circuit-wide juvenile court judges are appointed. However, in any circuit where a superior court judge assumes the duties of the juvenile court judge, such circuit shall not be entitled to the state funds provided for in subsection (d) of this Code section.

(c) Fulfilling preexisting terms; jurisdiction. When one or more circuit-wide juvenile court judges are appointed, any juvenile court judge in office at that time shall be authorized to fulfill his or her term of office. The jurisdiction of each judge shall be circuit wide.

(d) Terms and compensation of judges.

(1) Each juvenile court judge appointed under this Code section shall serve for a term of four years. Except as otherwise provided by law, the compensation of the full-time or part-time juvenile court judges shall be set by the superior court as provided in subsection (h) of this Code section with the approval of the governing authority or governing authorities of the county or counties for which the juvenile court judge is appointed.

(2) The state, out of funds appropriated to the judicial branch of government, shall contribute toward the salary of the judges on a per circuit basis in the following amounts:

(A) Each circuit with one or more juvenile court judges who are not superior court judges assuming the duties of juvenile court judges shall receive a state grant of $85,000.00;

(B) In addition to the base amount set out in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, each circuit which on or after October 1, 2000, has more than four superior court judges is eligible for additional state grants. For each superior court judge who exceeds the base of four judges, the circuit shall be eligible for an additional grant in an amount equal to one–fourth of the base amount of the state grant set out in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph;

(C) In those circuits where the judge or judges of the superior court elect to use the state grant provided in this paragraph for one or more part–time judges, the amount of the state grant shall be as follows:

(i) For each part–time judge who works one day weekly ..... $ 17,000.00

(ii) For each part–time judge who works two days weekly 34,000.00

(iii) For each part–time judge who works three days weekly 51,000.00

(iv) For each part–time judge who works four days weekly 68,000.00;

provided, however, that a grant for one or more part–time judges shall not exceed the amount the circuit is eligible for in accordance with subparagraphs (A) and (B) of this paragraph;

(D) Reserved;

(E) Reserved; and

(F) All state grants provided by this paragraph shall be spent solely on salaries for juvenile court judges and shall not be used for any other purposes.

(3) After the initial appointments and prior to any subsequent appointment or reappointment of any part-time or full-time juvenile court judge under this Code section, the judge or judges responsible for making the appointment shall publish notice of the opening on the juvenile court once a month for three months prior to such appointment or reappointment in the official legal organs of each of the counties in the circuit where the juvenile court judge has venue. The expense of such publication shall be paid by the county governing authority in the county where such notice or notices are published.

(e) Qualifications of judges. No person shall be judge of the juvenile court unless, at the time of his or her appointment, he or she has attained the age of 30 years, has been a citizen of the state for three years, and has practiced law for five years. A juvenile court judge shall be eligible for reappointment.

(f) Presiding judge. In the event that more than one juvenile court judge is appointed, one shall be designated presiding judge.

(g) Practice of law by judges. It shall be unlawful for any full-time juvenile court judge to engage in any practice of law outside his or her role as a juvenile court judge. It shall be unlawful for a part-time judge of any juvenile court to engage directly or indirectly in the practice of law in his or her own name or in the name of another as a partner in any manner in any case, proceeding, or matter of any kind in his or her own court or in any other court in any case, proceeding, or any other matters of which his or her own court has pending jurisdiction or has had jurisdiction. It shall be unlawful for any juvenile court judge, full time or part time, to give advice or counsel to any person on any matter of any kind whatsoever which has arisen directly or indirectly in his or her own court, except such advice or counsel as he or she is called upon to give while performing the duties of a juvenile court judge.

(h) Action by superior court judges. In any case in which action under this Code section is to be taken by the superior court judge of the circuit, such action shall be taken as follows:

(1) Where there are one or two judges, such action shall be taken by the chief judge of the circuit; and

(2) Where there are more than two judges, such action shall be taken by a majority vote of the judges of the circuit.

(i) Administration and expenses. Each juvenile court created under this article shall be assigned and attached to the superior court of the county for administrative purposes. The governing authority of the county of residence of each juvenile court judge shall offer the juvenile court judge or judges insurance benefits and any other benefits except retirement or pension benefits equivalent to those offered to employees of the county, with a right to contribution from other counties in the circuit for a pro rata contribution toward the costs of such benefits, based on county population. Counties shall continue to provide membership in retirement plans available to county employees for any juvenile court judge in office before July 1, 1998, who did not become a member of the Georgia Judicial Retirement System provided by Chapter 23 of Title 47. Except as otherwise provided by subsection (d) of this Code section, all expenditures of the court are declared to be an expense of the court and payable out of the county treasury with the approval of the governing authority or governing authorities of the county or counties for which the juvenile court judge is appointed.

(1) To the extent that the provisions of this Code section conflict with a local constitutional amendment authorizing the election of a juvenile court judge and with the provisions of a local Act authorized by such local constitutional amendment to provide for the term of office, vacancies in office, qualifications, compensation, and full-time or part-time status of a juvenile court judge or judges, the provisions of such local constitutional amendment and such local Act shall govern.

(2) The state grants provided by subsection (d) of this Code section shall be provided to any circuit encompassing a juvenile court governed by the provisions of a local constitutional amendment and a local Act in the same manner as other circuits, except that, in any circuit with one or more elected juvenile court judges, the elected juvenile court judge who is senior in duration of service as a juvenile court judge shall establish, subject to other applicable provisions of law, the total number of circuit-wide juvenile court judges, whether the judge or judges shall be full time or part time or a combination of full time and part time, and the compensation of any part-time juvenile court judge or judges.

(k) Simultaneous service by judges.

(1) No person who is serving as a full–time juvenile court judge after appointment as judge pursuant to this Code section shall at the same time hold the office of judge of any other class of court of this state.

(2) The provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall also apply to any person serving as a juvenile court judge after being elected juvenile court judge pursuant to a local law authorized by a constitutional amendment providing for the election of one or more juvenile court judges.

(3) Nothing in this subsection shall prevent any duly appointed or elected juvenile court judge from sitting by designation as a superior court judge pursuant to Code Section 15–1–9.1 or as otherwise provided by law.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment by Act 467, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–3. In addition the amendment inserted gender neutral referents.

The 2000 amendment by Act 742 substantially rewrote this section which, as so amended, was given effect as the section text.

The 2001 amendment was a correction bill.

The 2002 amendment added subsec. (k).

The 2005 amendment by Act 19, inserted "Simultaneous service by judges" between subsec. (k) and par. (1) of the subsec.

The 2005 amendment by Act 86 rewrote subsec. (d), par. (2), which had read:

"(2) The state, out of funds appropriated to the judicial branch of government, shall contribute toward the salary of the judges on a per circuit basis in the following amounts:

"(A) Each circuit with one or more juvenile court judges who are not superior court judges assuming the duties of juvenile court judges shall receive a state grant of $ 85,000.00. Such state funds shall be spent solely on salaries for juvenile court judges and shall not be used for any other purposes.

"(B) In addition to the base amount set out in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, each circuit which on or after October 1, 2000, has more than four superior court judges is eligible for additional state grants. For each superior court judge who exceeds the base of four judges, the circuit shall be eligible for an additional grant in an amount equal to one-fourth of the base amount of the state grant set out in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph. Such additional state grants shall be spent solely on salaries for juvenile court judges and shall not be used for any other purposes.

"(C) In those circuits where the judge or judges of the superior court elect to use the state grant provided in this Code section for one or more part-time judges, the amount of the state grant shall be as follows:

(i) For each part-time judge who works one day weekly $17,000.00
(ii) For each part-time judge who works two days weekly 34,000.00
(iii) For each part-time judge who works three days weekly 51,000.00
(iv) For each part-time judge who works four days weekly 68,000.00;

"provided, however, that a grant for one or more part-time judges shall not exceed the amount the circuit is eligible for in accordance with subparagraphs (A) and (B) of this paragraph."

In 2005, the Code Commission, in subsec. (d), par. (2), reserved subpar. (D) subsequent to its repeal, effective January 1, 2007 and substituted "judges and" for "judges, and" in the first sentence of division (i), and reserved subpar. (E) until it became effective on January 1, 2007, and substituted "judges and" for "judges, and" in the first sentence of division (i). See § 28–9–5.

The 2006 amendments by Act 453 were provisions contained in a correction bill.

Laws 2006, Act 453, § 55, provides in part:

"(b)(1) Paragraph (2) of Section 15 of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2007."

In 2008, the Code Commission, reserved the designation of subpar. (d)(2)(E), and added "; and" at the end of the subparagraph. See § 28–9–5.

§ 15–11–18.1. Commissioning of juvenile court judges; submission of orders of appointment of associate juvenile court judges to Council of Juvenile Court Judges

(a) Whenever a juvenile court judge is appointed pursuant to Code Section 15–11–18, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court to forward to the Secretary of State and to the Council of Juvenile Court Judges a certified copy of the order of appointment. The order of appointment shall set out the name of the person appointed, the term of office, the effective date of the appointment, the name of the person being succeeded, if any, and whether the office was vacated by resignation, death, or otherwise. Upon receipt of said order, the Secretary of State shall issue a commission as for superior court judges.

(b) Whenever an associate juvenile court judge is appointed to serve in a juvenile court, the clerk of the court shall forward a certified copy of the order of appointment to the Council of Juvenile Court Judges.

§ 15–11–19. Council of Juvenile Court Judges

(a) All of the judges and associate judges of the courts exercising jurisdiction over children shall constitute a Council of Juvenile Court Judges. The council shall annually elect from among its members a judge to serve as presiding judge and chairperson of the council. The council shall meet at stated times to be fixed by it, on call of the chairperson. It may establish general policies for the conduct of courts exercising jurisdiction over children and may promulgate uniform rules and forms governing procedures and practices of the courts. It shall publish in print or electronically an annual report of the work of the courts exercising jurisdiction over children, which shall include statistical and other data on the courts' work and services, research studies it may make of the problems of children and families dealt with by the courts, and any recommendations for legislation. The council is authorized to inspect and copy records of the court, law enforcement agencies, and the Department of Human Services for the purpose of compiling statistical data on children.

(b) Subject to the approval of the council, the presiding judge shall appoint a chief administrative and executive officer for the council, who shall have the title of director of the council. Under the general supervision of the presiding judge and within the policies established by the council, the director shall:

(1) Provide consultation to the courts regarding the administration of court services and the recruitment and training of personnel;

(2) Make recommendations to the council for improvement in court services;

(3) With the approval of the presiding judge, appoint consultants and necessary clerical personnel to perform the duties assigned to the council and the director;

(4) Collect necessary statistics and prepare an annual report of the work of the courts;

(5) Promulgate in cooperation with the Department of Juvenile Justice or any successor department or agency standard procedures for coordinating state and local probation services throughout the state; and

(6) Perform such other duties as the presiding judge shall specify.

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Human Services" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

The 2010 amendment by Act 615, in subsec. (a), inserted "in print or electronically" following "publish" throughout the subsection.

(a) The Council of Juvenile Court Judges, in conjunction with the Institute of Continuing Judicial Education of Georgia, shall establish seminars for all judges and associate juvenile court judges exercising juvenile court jurisdiction and may make provisions relative to those seminars by court rules properly adopted; provided, however, that said judges shall receive credit for attending seminars outside of this state only in circumstances of hardship as determined by the Council of Juvenile Court Judges.

(b) These seminars shall offer instruction and training in juvenile law and procedure, child development and psychology, sociological theories relative to delinquency and breakdown of the family structure, and such other training and activities as the council may determine would promote the quality of justice in the juvenile court system.

(c) Expenses of administration of this seminar program and actual expenses incurred by the judges or associate juvenile court judges in attending these seminars shall be paid from state funds appropriated for the council for that purpose, from federal funds available to the council for that purpose, or from other appropriate sources. These expenses for judges and associate juvenile court judges shall not exceed the allowances allowed members of the General Assembly.

(d) Each judge and associate juvenile court judge exercising juvenile jurisdiction shall participate in at least one seminar established or approved by the Council of Juvenile Court Judges each year and meet such rules as established by the council pertaining to such training. Superior court judges may meet this requirement by attending seminars held in conjunction with the seminars for superior court judges provided by the Institute of Continuing Judicial Education of Georgia. Judges and associate juvenile court judges shall not exercise juvenile court jurisdiction after January 1, 1983, unless the Council of Juvenile Court Judges certifies that annual training has been accomplished or unless the judge is in the first year of his or her initial appointment; provided, however, that the council may in hardship cases extend deadlines for compliance with this Code section.

§ 15–11–21. Associate juvenile court judges

(a) The judge may appoint one or more persons to serve as an associate juvenile court judge in juvenile matters on a full-time or part-time basis. The associate juvenile court judge shall serve at the pleasure of the judge, and his or her salary shall be fixed by the judge with the approval of the governing authority or governing authorities of the county or counties for which the associate juvenile court judge is appointed. The salary of each associate juvenile court judge shall be paid from county funds.

(b) Each associate juvenile court judge shall have the same qualifications as required for a judge of the juvenile court as provided in subsection (e) of Code Section 15–11–18; provided, however, that any person serving as an associate juvenile court judge on July 1, 2007, shall be qualified for appointment thereafter to serve as an associate juvenile court judge.

(c) In any case or class of cases involving alleged delinquent, unruly, or deprived children, the judge shall determine whether such case shall be conducted by the judge or by the associate juvenile court judge in the manner provided by this article.

(d) Upon the conclusion of a hearing before an associate juvenile court judge, the associate juvenile court judge shall sign and file an order of the court which sets forth the decision made by the associate juvenile court judge. A copy of the order shall be given to the parties to the proceedings.

(e) A rehearing may be ordered by the judge at any time and, except for detention hearings or probable cause hearings, shall be ordered if a party files a written request therefor within five days after receiving a copy of the order of the associate juvenile court judge.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–10.

The 2007 amendment by Act 236, in subsec. (a), deleted the last sentence which had read "Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, an associate juvenile court judge shall be a member of the State Bar of Georgia or shall be a graduate of a law school; provided, however, that any person serving as a referee on July 1, 1983, shall be qualified for appointment thereafter to serve as an associate juvenile court judge."; and rewrote subsec. (b). Prior to amendment subsec. (b) had read:

"(b) In each county having a population of 75,000 or more according to the United States decennial census of 1990 or any such future census and which employs a full-time juvenile court judge, each associate juvenile court judge appointed after July 1, 1994, shall have the same qualifications as required for a judge of the juvenile court as provided in subsection (e) of Code Section 15–11–18; provided, however, that any person serving as a referee on July 1, 1983, shall be qualified for appointment thereafter to serve as an associate juvenile court judge."

The 2007 amendment by Act 325 rewrote subsec. (c) which had read:

"(c) The judge may direct that hearings in any case or class of cases involving alleged delinquent, unruly, or deprived children shall be conducted in the first instance by the associate juvenile court judge in the manner provided by this article. If a party so requests, the hearing shall be conducted by the judge except for detention hearings or probable cause hearings, which shall be conducted by the associate juvenile court judge if directed to do so by the judge."

The 2008 amendment by Act 471 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

§ 15–11–22. Associate juvenile court traffic judges

(a) The judge may appoint one or more persons to serve at the pleasure of the judge as associate juvenile court traffic judges on a full-time or part-time basis. An associate juvenile court traffic judge shall be a member of the State Bar of Georgia or shall be otherwise qualified by experience and training. The compensation of the associate juvenile court traffic judges shall be fixed by the judge with the approval of the governing authority of the county and shall be paid in equal monthly installments from county funds, unless otherwise provided by law.

(b) The court may direct that any case or class of cases arising under Code Section 15–11–73 shall be heard in the first instance by an associate juvenile court traffic judge who shall conduct the hearing in accordance with Code Section 15–11–73. Upon the conclusion of the hearing, the associate juvenile court traffic judge shall file an order of the court with a copy thereof to the child and other parties to the proceedings.

§ 15–11–23. Pro tempore juvenile court judges

In the event of the disqualification, illness, or absence of the judge of the juvenile court, the judge of the juvenile court may appoint any attorney at law resident in the judicial circuit in which the court lies, any judge or senior judge of the superior courts, or any duly appointed juvenile court judge to serve as judge pro tempore of the juvenile court. In the event the judge of the juvenile court is absent or unable to make such appointment, the judge of the superior court of that county may so appoint. The person so appointed shall have the authority to preside in the stead of the disqualified, ill, or absent judge and shall be paid from the county treasury such emolument as the appointing judge shall prescribe; provided, however, that the emolument shall not exceed the compensation received by the regular juvenile court judge for such services.

§ 15–11–24. Clerks and other personnel

The judge of the juvenile court shall have the authority to appoint clerks and any other personnel necessary for the execution of the purposes of this chapter. The compensation of the employees shall be fixed by the judge, with the approval of the governing authority of the county. The salaries of the employees shall be paid out of county funds. All appointments shall be made from eligible lists secured from the local merit boards in those counties where such boards exist or from lists established by competitive examinations conducted by the court. The appointment, salary, tenure, and all other conditions of employment of the employees shall be in accordance with the laws and regulations governing the merit system in operation or such rules and regulations as are established by the court. Any employee of the court may be removed for cause by the judge of the court, the reasons therefor to be assigned in writing.

§ 15–11–24.2. Duties of probation officers

A probation officer:

(1) Shall make investigations, reports, and recommendations to the court as directed by this article;

(2) Shall receive and examine complaints and charges of delinquency, unruly conduct, or deprivation of a child for the purpose of considering the commencement of proceedings under this article;

(3) Shall supervise and assist a child placed on probation or in the protective supervision or care of such probation officer by order of the court or other authority of law;

(4) Shall make appropriate referrals to other private or public agencies of the community if their assistance appears to be needed or desirable;

(5) May take into custody and detain a child who is under the supervision or care of such probation officer as a delinquent, unruly, or deprived child if the probation officer has reasonable cause to believe that the child's health or safety or that of another is in imminent danger, or that the child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court, or when so ordered by the court pursuant to this article. A probation officer may not conduct accusatory proceedings against a child who is or may be under such probation officer's care or supervision;

(6) Shall perform all other functions designated by this chapter or by order of the court pursuant thereto. Any of the functions specified in this Code section may be performed in another state if authorized by the court located in this state and permitted by the laws of the other state; and

(7) Other laws to the contrary notwithstanding, no county juvenile intake or probation officer or staff of the Department of Juvenile Justice serving as juvenile intake or probation officer shall be liable for the acts of any child not detained or taken into custody as provided in paragraph (5) of this Code section when, in the judgment of such officer, such detention or custody is not warranted.

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 6 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–24.3. Transfer of probation and intake services and employees to Department of Juvenile Justice

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Department" means the Department of Juvenile Justice.

(2) "Probation and intake employees" means any probation officer specified in Code Section 15–11–24.1 and any personnel of a juvenile court to whom are delegated the duties of an intake officer under this article, other than a juvenile court judge, associate juvenile court judge, or court service worker.

(3) "Probation and intake services" means those services provided by probation and intake employees for the juvenile court of a county.

(b) After June 30, 1992, the intake and probation services of the juvenile court of each county may be transferred to and become a part of the state-wide juvenile and intake services and fully funded through the department. The intake and probation employees of juvenile courts of those counties whose intake and probation services are transferred pursuant to this Code section shall become employees of the department on the date of such transfer and on and after that date such employees shall be subject to the salary schedules and other personnel policies of the department, except that the salaries of such employees shall not be reduced as a result of becoming employees of the department.

(c) The intake and probation services of the juvenile court of a county may be transferred to the department pursuant to this Code section by local Act of the General Assembly which approves such transfer and becomes effective after June 30, 1992.

(d) Persons who were probation and intake employees of the juvenile court of a county on June 30, 1996, but who were transferred as probation and intake employees to and became a part of the state-wide juvenile and intake services system fully funded through the department before January 1, 1999, shall be covered employees in the classified service of the State Personnel Administration.

The 2000 amendment by Act 467, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–9.1.

The 2000 amendment by Act 793 added subsec. (d).

§ 15–11–25. Training requirements for juvenile court clerks

(a) Any person who is appointed as or is performing the duties of a clerk of the juvenile court after July 1, 2000, shall satisfactorily complete 20 hours of training in the performance of the duties of a clerk of the juvenile court within the first 12 months following such appointment or the first performance of such duties.

(b) Any person who is appointed as or is performing the duties of a clerk of the juvenile court for any year after 2000, other than the year in which such person satisfactorily completes any initial training required under subsection (a) of this Code section, shall satisfactorily complete in that year 12 hours of additional training in the performance of such person's duties as clerk.

(c) The training required by this Code section shall be provided by the Institute of Continuing Judicial Education of Georgia. Upon satisfactory completion of such training, a certificate issued by such institute shall be placed into the minutes of the juvenile court record in the county in which such person serves as a clerk of the juvenile court. All reasonable expenses of such training including, but not limited to, any tuition fixed by such institution shall be paid from county funds by the governing authority of the county for which the person serves as a clerk of the juvenile court, unless funding is provided from other sources.

(d) A judge of the juvenile court shall appoint a clerk pro tempore for that court for the period of training in order for the regular clerk to attend training required by this Code section. Such clerk pro tempore shall not be required to meet the training otherwise required by this Code section for performing the clerk's duties.

(e) The provisions of this Code section shall not apply to clerks of juvenile courts who also act as clerks of superior courts and who already have mandatory training requirements in such capacity.

Part 3

Jurisdiction and Venue

§ 15–11–28. Jurisdiction over juveniles

(a) Exclusive original jurisdiction. Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, the court shall have exclusive original jurisdiction over juvenile matters and shall be the sole court for initiating action:

(1) Concerning any child:

(A) Who is alleged to be delinquent;

(B) Who is alleged to be unruly;

(C) Who is alleged to be deprived;

(D) Who is alleged to be in need of treatment or commitment as a mentally ill or mentally retarded child;

(E) Who is alleged to have committed a juvenile traffic offense as defined in Code Section 15–11–73; or

(F) Who has been placed under the supervision of the court or on probation to the court; provided, however, that such jurisdiction shall be for the sole purpose of completing, effectuating, and enforcing such supervision or a probation begun prior to the child's seventeenth birthday; or

(2) Involving any proceedings:

(A) For obtaining judicial consent to the marriage, employment, or enlistment in the armed services of any child if such consent is required by law;

(B) Under the Interstate Compact on Juveniles, or any comparable law, if enacted or adopted in this state;

(C) For the termination of the legal parent-child relationship and the rights of the biological father who is not the legal father of the child, other than that in connection with adoption proceedings under Article 1 of Chapter 8 of Title 19, in which the superior courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction to terminate the legal parent-child relationship and the rights of the biological father who is not the legal father of the child;

(D) Under Article 3 of this chapter, relating to prior notice to a parent or guardian relative to an unemancipated minor's decision to seek an abortion; or

(E) Brought by a local board of education pursuant to Code Section 20–2–766.1.

(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the court shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court over a child who is alleged to have committed a delinquent act which would be considered a crime if tried in a superior court and for which the child may be punished by loss of life, imprisonment for life without possibility of parole, or confinement for life in a penal institution.

(2)(A) The superior court shall have exclusive jurisdiction over the trial of any child 13 to 17 years of age who is alleged to have committed any of the following offenses:

(i) Murder;

(ii) Voluntary manslaughter;

(iii) Rape;

(iv) Aggravated sodomy;

(v) Aggravated child molestation;

(vi) Aggravated sexual battery; or

(vii) Armed robbery if committed with a firearm.

(A.1) The granting of bail or pretrial release of a child charged with an offense enumerated in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall be governed by the provisions of Code Section 17–6–1.

(B) After indictment, the superior court may after investigation and for extraordinary cause transfer any case involving a child 13 to 17 years of age alleged to have committed any offense enumerated in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph which is not punishable by loss of life, imprisonment for life without possibility of parole, or confinement for life in a penal institution. Any such transfer shall be appealable by the State of Georgia pursuant to Code Section 5–7–1. Upon such a transfer by the superior court, jurisdiction shall vest in the juvenile court and jurisdiction of the superior court shall terminate. Any case transferred by the superior court to the juvenile court pursuant to this subparagraph shall be subject to the designated felony provisions of Code Section 15–11–63 and the transfer of the case from superior court to juvenile court shall constitute notice to the child that such case is subject to the designated felony provisions of Code Section 15–11–63.

(C) Before indictment, the district attorney may, after investigation and for extraordinary cause, decline prosecution in the superior court of a child 13 to 17 years of age alleged to have committed an offense specified in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph. Upon declining such prosecution in the superior court, the district attorney shall immediately cause a petition to be filed in the appropriate juvenile court for adjudication. Any case transferred by the district attorney to the juvenile court pursuant to this subparagraph shall be subject to the designated felony provisions of Code Section 15–11–63 and the transfer of the case from superior court to juvenile court shall constitute notice to the child that such case is subject to the designated felony provisions of Code Section 15–11–63.

(D) The superior court may transfer any case involving a child 13 to 17 years of age alleged to have committed any offense enumerated in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph and convicted of a lesser included offense not included in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph to the juvenile court of the county of the child's residence for disposition. Upon such a transfer by the superior court, jurisdiction shall vest in the juvenile court and jurisdiction of the superior court shall terminate.

(E) Within 30 days of any proceeding in which a child 13 to 17 years of age is convicted of certain offenses over which the superior court has exclusive jurisdiction as provided in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph or adjudicated delinquent on the basis of conduct which if committed by an adult would constitute such offenses, the superior court shall provide written notice to the school superintendent or his or her designee of the school in which such child is enrolled or, if the information is known, of the school in which such child plans to be enrolled at a future date. Such notice shall include the specific criminal offense that such child committed. A local school system to which the child is assigned may request further information from the court's file.

(c) Custody and support jurisdiction.

(1) Where custody is the subject of controversy, except in those cases where the law gives the superior courts exclusive jurisdiction, in the consideration of these cases the juvenile court shall have concurrent jurisdiction to hear and determine the issue of custody and support when the issue is transferred by proper order of the superior court.

(2)(A) In any case where a child is alleged to be a deprived child as defined in paragraph (8) of Code Section 15–11–2, the juvenile court upon a finding of deprivation shall have jurisdiction to order temporary child support for such child to be paid by that person or those persons determined to be legally obligated to support such child. In determining such temporary child support, the juvenile court shall apply the child support guidelines provided in Code Section 19–6–15. Where there is an existing order of a superior court or other court of competent jurisdiction setting child support for the child, the juvenile court may order the child support obligor in the existing order to make such payments instead to the caretaker of the child on a temporary basis but shall not otherwise modify the terms of the existing order. A copy of the juvenile court's order shall be filed in the clerk's office of the court that entered the existing order. The juvenile court shall have jurisdiction to order temporary child support for the child to be paid by any other person determined to be legally obligated to support such child.

(B) Temporary child support orders entered pursuant to subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall be enforceable by the juvenile court through the contempt powers of the juvenile court as provided in Code Section 15–11–5 so long as the juvenile court is entitled to exercise jurisdiction over the deprivation case.

(d) Age limit for new actions. The juvenile court shall not have jurisdiction to initiate any new action against an individual for acts committed after he or she has reached the age of 17 years. This subsection does not affect the court's jurisdiction to enter extension orders pursuant to Code Section 15–11–58.

(e) Concurrent jurisdiction as to legitimation petitions.

(1) The juvenile court shall have concurrent jurisdiction to hear any legitimation petition transferred to the juvenile court by proper order of the superior court.

(2) The juvenile court shall have jurisdiction to hear any legitimation petition filed pursuant to Code Section 19–7–22 as to a child with respect to whom a deprivation proceeding is pending in the juvenile court at the time the legitimation petition is filed.

(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, after a petition for legitimation is granted, if a demand for a jury trial as to support has been properly filed by either parent, then the case shall be transferred to superior court for such jury trial.

The 2002 amendment substituted in the second sentence of subsec. (b)(2)(C) for "withdraw the case and lodge it" the words "cause a petition to be filed".

The 2003 amendment by Act 377 rewrote subsec. (c) which had read as follows:

"(c) Concurrent custody and support jurisdiction. Where custody is the subject of controversy, except in those cases where the law gives the superior courts exclusive jurisdiction, in the consideration of these cases the juvenile court shall have concurrent jurisdiction to hear and determine the issue of custody and support when the issue is transferred by proper order of the superior court."

The 2009 amendment by Act 171, in subsec. (a), par. (2), subpar. (C), inserted "Article 1 of".

§ 15–11–29. Venue

(a) A proceeding under this article may be commenced in the county in which the child resides. If delinquent or unruly conduct is alleged, the proceeding may be commenced in the county in which the acts constituting the alleged delinquent or unruly conduct occurred. If deprivation is alleged, the proceeding may be brought in the county in which the child is present when it is commenced; provided, however, that for the convenience of the parties and witnesses, the court may transfer the proceeding to the county in which the child resides. If the proceeding is transferred, certified copies of all legal and social documents and records pertaining to the proceeding on file with the clerk of court shall accompany the transfer. A juvenile court judge, an associate juvenile court judge, a judge pro tempore of the juvenile court, or any person sitting as a juvenile court judge may conduct hearings in connection with any proceeding under this article in any county within the judicial circuit.

(b) When a superior court judge sits as juvenile court judge, hearings in connection with any proceeding under this article may be heard before the judge in any county within the judicial circuit over which the judge presides.

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 11 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–30. Transfer to county of residence or retention of jurisdiction

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Adjudicating court" means the juvenile court which makes a finding that a child has committed an unruly or delinquent act.

(2) "Nonresident child" means a child who is a resident of a county of this state other than a county encompassed by the circuit of the adjudicating court.

(3) "Resident child" means a child who is a resident of a county encompassed by the circuit of the adjudicating court.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, if the adjudicating court finds that a nonresident child has committed an unruly or delinquent act, the adjudicating court may after adjudication of delinquency or unruliness retain jurisdiction over the disposition of the nonresident child or may transfer the proceeding to the county of the child's residence for disposition. Like transfer may be made if the residence of the child changes pending the proceeding. Prior to making any order for disposition of the nonresident child, the adjudicating court shall, if it retains jurisdiction, communicate to the court of the county of the child's residence the fact of the adjudication of delinquency or unruliness. This communication shall state the date upon which the adjudicating court plans to enter an order for disposition of the nonresident child and shall request any information or recommendations relevant to the disposition of the nonresident child. Any such recommendation shall be considered by but shall not be binding upon the adjudicating court in making its order for disposition.

(c) If the adjudicating court finds that a nonresident child has committed an unruly or delinquent act and that the court has jurisdiction over one or more resident children who also participated in the same delinquent or unruly act, then the adjudicating court may retain jurisdiction over the disposition of the nonresident child or may transfer the proceedings as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section. Prior to making any order for disposition of the nonresident child the adjudicating court shall, if it retains jurisdiction, communicate to the court of the county of the child's residence the fact of the adjudication of delinquency or unruliness. This communication shall state the date upon which the adjudicating court plans to enter an order for disposition of the nonresident child and shall request any information or recommendations relevant to the disposition of the nonresident child. Any such recommendations shall be considered by but shall not be binding upon the adjudicating court in making its order for disposition.

(d) When any case is transferred pursuant to subsection (b) of this Code section certified copies of all legal and social documents and records pertaining to the case on file with the clerk of the court shall accompany the transfer.

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 12 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–30.1. Appointment of guardian; jurisdiction over custody and support cases

(a)(1) The court is vested with jurisdiction to appoint a guardian of the person or property of any child and with jurisdiction over proceedings involving any child whose custody is the subject of controversy. Any such appointment shall be made pursuant to the same requirements of notice and hearing as are provided for appointments of guardians of the persons and properties of minors by the judge of the probate court.

(2)(A) In addition to the jurisdiction to appoint guardians pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection, the juvenile court shall be vested with jurisdiction to appoint a permanent guardian for a child whose custody is a subject of controversy before the court as a result of an adjudication that the child is deprived in accordance with Part 6 of this article. Prior to the entry of such an order, the court shall:

(i) Find that reasonable efforts to reunify the child with his or her parent would be detrimental to the child in accordance with subsection (h) of Code Section 15–11–58 or find that the living parents or parent of the child have consented to the permanent guardianship;

(ii) Find that termination of parental rights and adoption and, if the proposed guardian is not a relative of the child, that placement with a fit and willing relative, is not in the best interest of the child;

(iii) Find that the proposed permanent guardian can provide a safe and permanent home for the child;

(iv) Find that the appointment of a permanent guardian for the child is in the best interest of the child and that the individual chosen as the child's permanent guardian is the individual most appropriate to be the child's permanent guardian taking into consideration the best interest of the child; and

(v) If the child is 14 years of age or older, find that the appointment of a permanent guardian for the child is in the best interest of the child and that the individual chosen by such child as the child's permanent guardian is the individual most appropriate to be the child's permanent guardian taking into consideration the best interest of the child.

(B) The court may enter an order of support on behalf of the child against the parents of the child in accordance with paragraph (2) of subsection (c) of Code Section 15–11–28.

(C) Orders under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall:

(i) Remain in effect until the child reaches the age of 18 or becomes emancipated;

(ii) Not be subject to review by the court except as provided in subparagraph (D) of this paragraph; and

(iii) Establish a reasonable visitation schedule which allows the child to maintain meaningful contact with his or her parents through personal visits, telephone calls, letters, or other forms of communication or specifically include any restriction on a parent's right to visitation.

(D) The court shall retain jurisdiction over a guardianship action under this paragraph for the sole purpose of entering an order following the filing of a petition to modify, vacate, or revoke the guardianship and to appoint a new guardian. The superior courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction for enforcement or modification of any child support or visitation order entered pursuant to this Code section. The guardianship shall be modified, vacated, or revoked based upon a finding, by clear and convincing evidence, that there has been a material change in the circumstances of the child or the guardian and that such modification, vacation, or revocation of the guardianship order and the appointment of a new guardian is in the best interest of the child. Appointment of a new guardian shall be subject to the provisions of this paragraph.

(E) Notice of a guardianship petition pursuant to this paragraph shall be given in accordance with subsection (c) of Code Section 29–2–17 except that, if the parents have consented to the guardianship, notice of the petition shall not be required to be given to the individuals listed in division (vii) of subparagraph (F) of this paragraph. The hearing shall be conducted in accordance with Code Section 29–2–18, to determine the best interest of the child, and in reaching its determination the court shall consider subparagraph (A) of this paragraph.

(F) The petition for the appointment of a permanent guardian pursuant to this paragraph shall set forth:

(i) A statement of the facts upon which the court's jurisdiction is based;

(ii) The name and date of birth of the child;

(iii) The name, address, and county of domicile of the petitioner and the petitioner's relationship to the child, if any, and, if different from the petitioner, the name, address, and county of domicile of the individual nominated by the petitioner to serve as guardian and that individual's relationship to the child, if any;

(iv) A statement that:

(I) Reasonable efforts to reunify the child with his or her parent would be detrimental to the child in accordance with subsection (h) of Code Section 15–11–58 or that the living parents or parent of the child have consented to the permanent guardianship;

(II) Termination of parental rights and adoption and, if the proposed guardian is not a relative of the child, that placement with a fit and willing relative is not in the best interest of the child;

(III) The proposed guardian can provide a safe and permanent home for the child;

(IV) The appointment of a permanent guardian for the child is in the best interest of the child and that the individual chosen as the child's guardian is the individual most appropriate to be the child's permanent guardian taking into consideration the best interest of the child; and

(V) If the child is 14 years of age or older, that the appointment of a permanent guardian for the child is in the best interest of the child and that the individual chosen by such child as the child's permanent guardian is the individual most appropriate to be the child's permanent guardian taking into consideration the best interest of the child;

(v) A statement of whether the child was born out of wedlock and, if so, the name and address of the biological father, if known;

(vi) Whether, to the petitioner's knowledge, there exists any notarized or witnessed document made by a parent of the child that deals with the guardianship of the child and the name and address of any designee named in the document;

(vii) In addition to the petitioner and the nominated guardian and, if the parents have not consented to the permanent guardianship, the names and addresses of the following relatives of the child whose whereabouts are known:

(I) The adult siblings of the child; provided, however, that not more than three adult siblings need to be listed;

(II) If there is no adult sibling of the child, the grandparents of the child; provided, however, that not more than three grandparents need to be listed; or

(III) If there is no grandparent of the child, any three of the nearest adult relatives of the child determined according to Code Section 53–2–1 of the "Revised Probate Code of 1998";

(viii) Whether a temporary guardian has been appointed for the child or a petition for the appointment of a temporary guardian has been filed or is being filed; and

(ix) The reason for any omission in the petition for appointment of a permanent guardian for the child in the event full particulars are lacking.

(G) A guardian of the person of a child appointed under this paragraph shall have the rights and duties of a permanent guardian as are provided in Code Sections 29–2–21, 29–2–22, and 29–2–23 and shall take the oath required of a guardian as provided in Code Section 29–2–24.

(b) Other courts, in handling divorce, alimony, habeas corpus, or other cases involving the custody of a child or children, may transfer the question of the determination of custody, support, or custody and support to the juvenile court for investigation and a report back to the superior court or for investigation and determination. If the referral is for investigation and determination, then the juvenile court shall proceed to handle the matter in the same manner as though the action originated under this article in compliance with the order of the superior court. At any time prior to the determination of any such question, the juvenile court may transfer the jurisdiction of the question back to the referring superior court.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2003 amendment by Act 377 rewrote subsec. (b) which had read as follows:

"(b) Courts of record, in handling divorce, alimony, or habeas corpus cases involving the custody of a child or children, may transfer the question of the determination of custody and support to the juvenile court for investigation and a report back to the superior court or for investigation and determination. If the referral is for investigation and determination, then the juvenile court shall proceed to handle the matter in the same manner as though the action originated under this article in compliance with the order of the superior court. At any time prior to the determination of such question, the juvenile court may transfer the jurisdiction of the question back to the referring superior court."

The 2008 amendment by Act 795 rewrote this section, which formerly read:

"(a) The court is vested with jurisdiction to appoint a guardian of the person or property of any child and with jurisdiction over proceedings involving any child whose custody is the subject of controversy. Any such appointment shall be made pursuant to the same requirements of notice and hearing as are provided for appointments of guardians of the persons and properties of minors by the judge of the probate court.

"(b) Other courts, in handling divorce, alimony, habeas corpus, or other cases involving the custody of a child or children, may transfer the question of the determination of custody, support, or custody and support to the juvenile court for investigation and a report back to the superior court or for investigation and determination. If the referral is for investigation and determination, then the juvenile court shall proceed to handle the matter in the same manner as though the action originated under this article in compliance with the order of the superior court. At any time prior to the determination of any such question, the juvenile court may transfer the jurisdiction of the question back to the referring superior court."

§ 15–11–30.2. Transfer to other courts after filing of petition

(a) After a petition has been filed alleging delinquency based on conduct which is designated a crime or public offense under the laws, including local ordinances, the court before hearing the petition on its merits may transfer the offense for prosecution to the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense if:

(1) A hearing on whether the transfer should be made is held in conformity with Code Sections 15–11–6, 15–11–7, and 15–11–41;

(2) Notice in writing of the time, place, and purpose of the hearing is given to the child and his or her parents, guardian, or other custodian at least three days before the hearing;

(3) The court in its discretion determines there are reasonable grounds to believe that:

(A) The child committed the delinquent act alleged;

(B) The child is not committable to an institution for the mentally retarded or mentally ill; and

(C) The interests of the child and the community require that the child be placed under legal restraint and the transfer be made; and

(4) The child:

(A) Was at least 15 years of age at the time of the alleged delinquent conduct; or

(B) Was 13 or 14 years of age and either committed an act for which the punishment is loss of life or confinement for life in a penal institution or committed aggravated battery resulting in serious bodily injury to a victim.

(b) After a petition has been filed alleging delinquency based on conduct which is designated a crime or public offense under the laws, including local ordinances, the court before hearing the petition on its merits shall transfer the offense for prosecution to the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense if:

(1) A hearing on whether the transfer should be made is held in conformity with Code Sections 15–11–6, 15–11–7, and 15–11–41;

(2) Notice in writing of the time, place, and purpose of the hearing is given to the child and the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian at least three days before the hearing;

(3) The court in its discretion determines there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child while confined to a youth development center committed the offense of murder, voluntary manslaughter, aggravated assault, or aggravated battery as defined in Chapter 5 of Title 16; and

(4) The child was at least 14 years of age at the time of the alleged conduct described in paragraph (3) of this subsection.

(c) The transfer terminates the jurisdiction of the juvenile court over the child with respect to an adjudication of delinquency as to the delinquent acts alleged in the petition.

(d) No child, either before or after reaching 17 years of age, shall be prosecuted for an offense previously committed unless the case has been transferred as provided in this Code section.

(e) Statements made by the child at any hearing under this article are not admissible against the child over objection in the criminal proceedings following the transfer.

(f) This Code section shall not apply to any proceeding within the exclusive jurisdiction of the superior court pursuant to subparagraph (b)(2)(A) of Code Section 15–11–28.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment by Act 467, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–39. In addition the amendment substituted reference to child for juvenile and provided gender neutral referents.

The 2000 amendment by Act 862 substantially rewrote subsec. (a) which formerly provided:

"(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, after a petition has been filed alleging delinquency based on conduct which is designated a crime or public offense under the laws, including local ordinances, the court before hearing the petition on its merits may transfer the offense for prosecution to the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense if:

"(1) A hearing on whether the transfer should be made is held in conformity with Code Sections 15–11–28, 15–11–30, and 15–11–31:

"(2) Notice in writing of the time, place, and purpose of the hearing is given to the child and his parents, guardian, or other custodian at least three days before the hearing;

"(3) The court in its discretion determines there are reasonable grounds to believe that:

"(A) The child committed the delinquent act alleged;

"(B) The child is not committable to an institution for the mentally retarded or mentally ill; and

"(C) The interests of the child and the community require that the child be placed under legal restraint and the transfer be made; and

"(4) The child was at least 15 years of age at the time of the alleged delinquent conduct or the child was 13 or 14 years of age and committed an act for which the punishment is loss of life or confinement for life in a penal institution."

§ 15–11–30.3. Mandatory transfers when child 15 years of age or older has committed designated felony act

(a) After a petition has been filed alleging that a child 15 years of age or older has committed a designated felony act, the court shall follow the procedure specified in this Code section if the designated felony act alleged to have been committed would have constituted the crime of burglary if done by an adult and the child has been found at separate court appearances to have committed acts which would have constituted the crime of burglary if done by an adult on three or more previous occasions.

(b) If this Code section applies, the court shall hold a hearing in conformity with Code Sections 15–11–6, 15–11–7, and 15–11–41. Notice shall be given in writing of the time, place, and purpose of the hearing to the child and the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian at least three days before the hearing.

(c) If at the hearing the court determines that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child committed the designated felony act alleged, the court shall transfer the offense to superior court for prosecution. The transfer terminates the jurisdiction of the juvenile court over the child with respect to the designated felony act alleged. The transfer order shall constitute a determination by a court of inquiry that there is probable cause to commit the child as a defendant to the criminal court competent to try the child. After such a transfer, until and unless a judgment of guilt is entered and sentence pronounced, the child shall be detained only as provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–48.

(d) Upon the transfer of any matter to superior court under this Code section, the district attorney shall after investigation report to the judge whether the matter should be retransferred to juvenile court; and the superior court may upon such a report or on its own motion order the matter retransferred to juvenile court. After such a retransfer, the provisions of subsection (d) of Code Section 15–11–63 shall apply as in other cases.

(e) The provisions of this Code section shall not apply to a smash and grab burglary.

§ 15–11–30.4. Transfers to juvenile court

If it appears to any court in a criminal proceeding or a quasi-criminal proceeding that the defendant is a child, except in cases where the superior court has exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–28, the case shall forthwith be transferred to the juvenile court together with a copy of the accusatory pleading and all other papers, documents, and transcripts of testimony relating to the case. The transferring court shall order that the child be taken forthwith to the juvenile court or to a place of detention designated by the court or shall release him or her to the custody of his or her parent, guardian, custodian, or other person legally responsible for him or her, to be brought before the juvenile court at a time designated by that court. The accusatory pleading may serve in lieu of a petition in the juvenile court unless that court directs the filing of a petition.

§ 15–11–30.5. Transfers when disposition incorporates reunification plan

Whenever an order of disposition incorporates a reunification plan and the residence of the parent is not in the county of the court with jurisdiction or the residence of the parent changes to a county other than the county of the court with jurisdiction, the court may transfer jurisdiction to the juvenile court of the residence of the parent or parents to whom reunification is directed. Said transferring court shall provide the receiving court within 30 days of the filing of the transfer order with certified copies of the adjudication order, the order of disposition, the order of transfer, the case plan, and such other court documents deemed necessary by the sending court to enable the receiving court to assume jurisdiction over the matter. Compliance with this Code section shall terminate jurisdiction in the transferring court and initiate jurisdiction in the receiving court.

Commencement and Conduct of Proceedings

§ 15–11–35. Commencement of proceedings

A proceeding under this article may be commenced:

(1) By transfer of a case from another court as provided in Code Section 15–11–30.4;

(2) As provided in Code Section 15–11–73 in a proceeding charging a juvenile traffic offense;

(3) By the court accepting jurisdiction as provided in Code Section 15–11–88 or accepting supervision of a child as provided in Code Section 15–11–90;

(4) In other cases of alleged delinquency, unruliness, or deprivation by the filing of a petition as provided in this article. The petition and all other documents in the proceeding shall be entitled "In the interest of ____, a child," except upon appeal, in which event the anonymity of the child shall be preserved by appropriate use of initials; or

(5) In other cases as provided by law.

§ 15–11–38.1. Contents of petition

The petition shall be verified and may be on information and belief. It shall set forth plainly:

(1) The facts which bring the child within the jurisdiction of the court, with a statement that it is in the best interest of the child and the public that the proceeding be brought and, if delinquency or unruly conduct is alleged, that the child is in need of supervision, treatment, or rehabilitation, as the case may be;

(2) The name, age, and residence address, if any, of the child on whose behalf the petition is brought;

(3) The names and residence addresses, if known to petitioner, of the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child and of the child's spouse, if any; or, if neither the child's parents, nor the child's guardian, nor the child's custodian resides or can be found within the state or if their respective places of residence address are unknown, the name of any known adult relative residing within the county or, if there is none, the known adult relative residing nearest to the location of the court; and

(4) If the child is in custody and, if so, the place of his or her detention and the time the child was taken into custody.

§ 15–11–39. Time for hearing; summons

(a) After the petition has been filed the court shall set a hearing thereon, which, if the child is in detention, shall not be later than ten days after the filing of the petition. In the event the child is not in detention, the court shall set a hearing thereon which shall be not later than 60 days from the date of the filing of the petition.

(b) The court shall direct the issuance of a summons to the parents, guardian, or other custodian, a guardian ad litem, and any other persons who appear to the court to be proper or necessary parties to the proceeding, requiring them to appear before the court at the time fixed to answer the allegations of the petition. The summons shall also be directed to the child if he or she is 14 or more years of age or is alleged to be a delinquent or unruly child. A copy of the petition shall accompany the summons unless the summons is served by publication, in which case the published summons shall indicate the general nature of the allegations and where a copy of the petition can be obtained.

(c) The court may endorse upon the summons an order directing the parents, guardian, or other custodian of the child to appear personally at the hearing and directing the person having the physical custody or control of the child to bring the child to the hearing. In the event a parent, guardian, or other custodian of the child willfully fails to appear personally at the hearing after being ordered to so appear, or the parent, guardian, or other custodian of the child willfully fails to bring the child to the hearing after being so directed, the court may enter any order authorized by and in accordance with the provisions of Code Section 15–11–5.

(d) The summons shall state that a party is entitled to counsel in the proceedings and that the court will appoint counsel if the party is unable without undue financial hardship to employ counsel.

(e) A party other than the child may waive service of summons by written stipulation or by voluntary appearance at the hearing. If the child is present at the hearing, the child's counsel, with the consent of the parent, guardian, other custodian, or guardian ad litem, may waive service of summons in the child's behalf.

§ 15–11–39.1. Service of summons

(a) If a party to be served with a summons is within this state and can be found, the summons shall be served upon him or her personally at least 24 hours before the hearing. If a party to be served is within this state and cannot be found but his or her address is known or can with reasonable diligence be ascertained, the summons may be served upon such party by mailing him or her a copy thereof by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery at least five days before the hearing. If a party to be served is outside this state but he or she can be found or his or her address is known or his or her whereabouts or address can with reasonable diligence be ascertained, service of the summons may be made either by delivering a copy thereof to such party personally or by mailing a copy to him or her by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery at least five days before the hearing.

(b) If, after reasonable effort, a party to be served with a summons cannot be found and such party's post office address cannot be ascertained, whether he or she is within or outside this state, the court may order service of the summons upon him or her by publication in accordance with Code Sections 9–11–4 and 9–11–5. The hearing shall not be earlier than five days after the date of the last publication.

(c) Service of the summons may be made by any suitable person under the direction of the court.

(d) The court may authorize the payment from county funds of the costs of service and of necessary travel expenses incurred by persons summoned or otherwise required to appear at the hearing.

§ 15–11–39.2. Interlocutory order of disposition where summons served by publication

(a) If service of summons upon a party is made by publication, the court may conduct a provisional hearing upon the allegations of the petition and enter an interlocutory order of disposition if:

(1) The petition alleges delinquency, unruly conduct, or deprivation of the child;

(2) The summons served upon any party:

(A) States that prior to the final hearing on the petition designated in the summons a provisional hearing thereon will be held at a specified time and place;

(B) Requires the party who is served other than by publication to appear and answer the allegations of the petition at the provisional hearing;

(C) States further that findings of fact and orders of disposition made pursuant to the provisional hearing will become final at the final hearing unless the party served by publication appears at the final hearing; and

(D) Otherwise conforms to Code Section 15–11–39; and

(3) The child is personally before the court at the provisional hearing.

(b) All provisions of this article applicable to a hearing on a petition, to orders of disposition, and to other proceedings dependent thereon shall apply under this Code section, but findings of fact and orders of disposition shall have only interlocutory effect pending final hearing on the petition. The rights and duties of the party served by publication are not affected except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section.

(c) If the party served by publication fails to appear at the final hearing on the petition, the findings of fact and interlocutory orders made shall become final without further evidence and shall be governed by this article as if made at the final hearing. If the party appears at the final hearing, the findings and orders shall be vacated and disregarded and the hearing shall proceed upon the allegations of the petition without regard to this Code section.

§ 15–11–40. Modification or vacation of orders; probation revocation

(a) An order of the court shall be set aside if:

(1) It appears that it was obtained by fraud or mistake sufficient therefor in a civil action;

(2) The court lacked jurisdiction over a necessary party or of the subject matter; or

(3) Newly discovered evidence so requires.

(b) An order of the court may also be changed, modified, or vacated on the ground that changed circumstances so require in the best interest of the child, except an order committing a delinquent child to the Department of Juvenile Justice, after the child has been transferred to the physical custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice, or an order of dismissal. An order granting probation to a child found to be delinquent or unruly may be revoked on the ground that the conditions of probation have not been observed.

(c) Any party to the proceeding, the probation officer, or any other person having supervision or legal custody of or an interest in the child may petition the court for the relief provided in this

Code section. The petition shall set forth in clear and concise language the grounds upon which the relief is requested.

(d) After the petition is filed, the court shall fix a time for hearing and shall cause notice to be served, as a summons is served under Code Section 15–11–39.1, on the parties to the proceeding or those affected by the relief sought. After the hearing, which may be informal, the court shall deny or grant relief as the evidence warrants.

§ 15–11–40.1. Probation management program

(a) For purposes of this Code section, the term:

(1) "Department" means the Department of Juvenile Justice.

(2) "Graduated sanctions' means:

(A) Verbal and written warnings;

(B) Increased restrictions and reporting requirements;

(C) Community service;

(D) Referral to treatment and counseling programs in the community;

(E) Weekend programming;

(F) Electronic monitoring, as such term is defined in Code Section 42–8–151;

(G) Curfew;

(H) An intensive supervision program; or

(I) A home confinement program.

(3) "Hearing officer" means a department employee or county juvenile probation office employee, as applicable, who has been selected and appointed by the department or county juvenile probation office, as applicable, to hear cases alleging violations of probation for administrative sanctioning. A hearing officer shall not be a probation officer who has direct supervision over the child who is the subject of the hearing.

(4) "Probation management program" means a special condition of probation that includes graduated sanctions.

(5) "Secure probation sanctions program" means secure confinement of seven, 14, or 30 days.

(b) In addition to any other terms or conditions of probation provided for under this chapter, the court may require that children who receive a disposition of probation:

(1) Be ordered to a probation management program; or

(2) Be ordered to a secure probation sanctions program by a probation officer or hearing officer.

(c) Where a child has been ordered to a probation management program or secure probation sanctions program, the court shall retain jurisdiction throughout the period of the probated sentence and may modify or revoke any part of a probated sentence as provided in Code Section 15–11–40.

(d)(1) The department in jurisdictions where the department is authorized to provide probation supervision, or the county juvenile probation office in jurisdictions where probation supervision is provided directly by the county, as applicable, shall be authorized to establish rules and regulations for graduated sanctions as an alternative to judicial modifications or revocations for probationers who violate the terms and conditions of a probation management program.

(2) The department or county juvenile probation office, as applicable, shall not sanction probationers for violations of conditions of probation if the court has expressed an intention in a written order that such violations be heard by the court.

(e) The department or county juvenile probation office, as applicable, shall impose only those restrictions equal to or less restrictive than the maximum sanction established by the court.

(f) The secure probation sanctions program shall be established by the department. Exclusion of a child from a secure probation sanctions program otherwise authorized by this Code section to enter such program shall be mutually agreed upon by the Council of Juvenile Court Judges and the department. The secure probation sanctions program shall be available to the juvenile courts to the extent that each secure facility has capacity for such offenders within its facilities. Prior to reaching full capacity, the department shall inform the various juvenile courts of its capacity constraints.

(g)(1) When requesting the secure probation sanctions program, probation officers supervising a child under a probation management program shall provide an affidavit to the court specifying:

(A) The elements of the child's probation program;

(B) The child's failures to respond to graduated sanctions in the community; and

(C) The child's number of violations and the nature of each violation.

(2) If a probation officer fails to document the violations and specify how the child has failed to complete a probation management program, such child shall be ineligible to enter the secure probation sanctions program.

(3) A child may enter the secure probation sanctions program if ordered by the court and:

(A) The probation officer has complied with the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection and the criteria set by the department for entrance into such program and the child has had three or more violations of probation; or

(B) A child in a probation management program and his or her parent or guardian, or a child in such program and his or her attorney, admit to three or more violations of such program and sign a waiver accepting the sanction proposed by the probation officer.

(4) Each new violation of a condition of a probated sentence may result in a child being sentenced to the secure probation sanctions program; provided, however, that if a child is sentenced to the secure probation sanctions program and completes all program components in the seven, 14, and 30 day programs, such child shall be ineligible to attend the secure probation sanctions program for a future violation of a condition of the same probated sentence.

(h)(1) When a violation of a condition of probation occurs, a child may have an administrative hearing conducted by a hearing officer. If the hearing officer determines by a preponderance of the evidence that such child violated the conditions of probation, the probation officer shall be authorized to impose graduated sanctions or a secure probation sanctions program. A child's failure to comply with a sanction imposed under this paragraph shall constitute another violation of probation.

(2) The hearing officer's decision shall be final unless such child files, within five days of the service of such decision, a written demand with the hearing officer for review of such decision. Such demand shall not stay the sanction decision. The hearing officer shall issue a response to such demand within five days of receiving such demand.

(3) If the hearing officer insists on the sanction, such decision shall be final unless the child files an appeal in the court that originally adjudicated the child. Such appeal shall be filed within ten days of the date of the decision of the hearing officer.

(4) The appeal shall first be reviewed by the court upon the record. At the court's discretion, a de novo hearing may be held on the decision. The filing of the appeal shall not stay the sanction decision.

(5) Where the court does not act on the appeal within 15 days of the date of the filing of the appeal, the sanction decision shall be affirmed by operation of law.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2010, Act 674, § 10, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2010, and Sections 2 and 5 of this Act shall apply to any child sentenced to probation on and after July 1, 2010; the former provisions of Code Section 15–11–66 shall continue to apply to any child sentenced to probation prior to July 1, 2010."

§ 15–11–41. Conduct of hearings

(a) All hearings shall be conducted by the court without a jury. Any hearing may be adjourned from time to time within the discretion of the court as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–56.

(b) The proceedings shall be recorded by stenographic notes or by electronic, mechanical, or other appropriate means, unless such recording is waived by the child and the child's parent, guardian, or attorney.

(c) In any proceeding before the juvenile court, the judge, upon the court's own motion, may request the assistance of the district attorney or a member of the district attorney's staff to conduct the proceedings on behalf of the petitioner. If for any reason the district attorney is unable to assist, the judge may appoint legal counsel for such purpose.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–26. In addition the amendment substituted reference to child for juvenile and provided gender neutral referents and deleted former subsecs. (c) and (c.1) pertaining to exclusions from and admissions to juvenile court hearings, respectively.

The 2002 amendment substantially rewrote the section which prior thereto provided:

"(a) All hearings shall be conducted by the court without a jury. Any hearing may be adjourned from time to time within the discretion of the court as set forth in subsection (d) of Code Section 15–11–56.

"(b) Unless waived by the child and the child's parent, guardian, or attorney, the proceedings shall be recorded by stenographic notes or by electronic, mechanical, or other appropriate means.

"(c) In any proceeding before the juvenile court, the judge, upon the court's own motion, may request the assistance of the district attorney or a member of the district attorney's staff to conduct the proceedings on behalf of the petitioner. If for any reason the district attorney is unable to assist, the judge may appoint legal counsel for such purpose.

"(d) In any delinquency proceeding in which a petition has been filed, the district attorney or a member of the district attorney's staff shall conduct the proceedings on behalf of the state if requested to do so by the juvenile court if the state is not otherwise represented by a solicitor of the juvenile court. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law to the contrary, in any delinquency proceedings conducted by the district attorney or a member of the district attorney's staff, the district attorney or staff member shall be entitled to complete access to all court files, probation files, hearing transcripts, delinquency reports, and any other juvenile court records which may be of assistance to the district attorney or staff member in the conduct of such delinquency proceedings. It shall be the duty of the clerk and probation officers of the juvenile court to assist the district attorney or staff member in obtaining any such files, transcripts, reports, or records, or copies thereof, as may be requested by the district attorney or staff member. In any such case, the petition shall be dismissed by the court upon the motion of the district attorney setting forth that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant the further conduct of the proceeding.

"(e) (1) In any delinquency proceeding in which a petition has been filed, the juvenile court shall notify any victim of a delinquent child's alleged offense that the victim may submit a victim impact statement if:

"(A) The delinquent child, in committing a felony, caused physical, psychological, or economic injury to the victim; or

"(B) The delinquent child, in committing a misdemeanor, caused serious physical injury or death to the victim.

"(2) A victim impact statement submitted by a victim shall be attached to the case file and may be used by the district attorney or the judge during any stage of the proceedings against the child involving predisposition, disposition, or determination of restitution.

"(3) A victim impact statement shall:

"(A) Identify the victim of the offense and the perpetrator;

"(B) Itemize any economic loss suffered by the victim as a result of the offense;

"(C) Identify any physical injury suffered by the victim as a result of the offense along with its seriousness and permanence;

"(D) Describe any change in the victim's personal welfare or familial relationships as a result of the offense;

"(E) Identify any request for psychological services initiated by the victim or the victim's family as a result of the offense; and

"(F) Contain any other information related to the impact of the offense upon the victim that the court requires.

"(4) The victim may complete the victim impact statement form and submit such form to the juvenile court. If the victim is unable to do so because of such victim's mental, emotional, or physical incapacity, or because of such victim's age, the victim's attorney or a family member may complete the victim impact statement form on behalf of the victim.

"(5) The court shall, in the manner prescribed by rule of court, provide the child with a copy of the victim impact statement within a reasonable time prior to any hearing at which it is to be considered and allow the child to have the opportunity to rebut the victim's written statements.

"(6) No disposition of the child shall be invalidated because of failure to comply with the provisions of this Code section. This Code section shall not be construed to create any cause of action or any right of appeal on behalf of any person.

"(f) At any hearing on a petition alleging deprivation of a child, the court shall make and file its findings as to whether the child is a deprived child, as defined in paragraph (8) of Code Section 15–11–2, and whether such deprivation is found to have been the result of alcohol or other drug abuse."

Part 5

Arrest and Detention

§ 15–11–45. Taking into custody

(a) A child may be taken into custody:

(1) Pursuant to an order of the court under this article, including an order to an employee of the Department of Juvenile Justice designated in accordance with paragraph (2) of subsection (i) of Code Section 49–4A–8 or to an employee of the Department of Corrections, to apprehend a child who has escaped from an institution or facility operated either by the Department of Juvenile Justice or the Department of Corrections or a child who has been placed under supervision and who has broken the conditions thereof;

(2) Pursuant to the laws of arrest;

(3) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child has committed a delinquent act or if there are reasonable grounds to believe that he or she is an unruly child;

(4) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child is suffering from illness or injury or is in immediate danger from his or her surroundings and that his or her removal is necessary;

(5) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child has run away from his or her parents, guardian, or other custodian;

(6) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court if a parent or guardian of a child has contacted a law enforcement agency and reported that the child is absent from parental custody without consent and a facility created pursuant to paragraph (2) of subsection (e) of Code Section 15–11–47 is available; or

(7) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court if a child is violating a curfew and a facility created pursuant to paragraph (2) of subsection (e) of Code Section 15–11–47 is available.

(b) The taking of a child into custody is not an arrest, except for the purpose of determining its validity under the Constitution of this state or of the United States.

(c) When a child who is taken into custody pursuant to this article has committed an act which would constitute a felony under the laws of this state if committed by an adult, the juvenile court, within 48 hours after it learns of the taking into custody, shall notify the district attorney or duly authorized assistant district attorney of the judicial circuit in which the juvenile proceedings are to be instituted.

§ 15–11–46. Detention

A child taken into custody shall not be detained or placed in shelter care prior to the hearing on the petition unless:

(1) The child's detention or care is required to protect the person or property of others or of the child;

(2) The child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court;

(3) The child has no parent, guardian, or custodian or other person able to provide supervision and care for him or her and return him or her to the court when required; or

(4) An order for the child's detention or shelter care has been made by the court pursuant to this article.

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 14 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–46.1. Interim control or detention of accused children

(a) As a matter of public policy, restraints on the freedom of accused children prior to adjudication shall be imposed only when there is probable cause to believe that the accused child did the act of which he or she is accused and there is clear and convincing evidence that the child's freedom should be restrained.

(b) The imposition of interim control or detention on an accused child may be considered for the purposes of:

(1) Protecting the jurisdiction and process of the court;

(2) Reducing the likelihood that the child may inflict serious bodily harm on others during the interim period; or

(3) Protecting the accused child from imminent bodily harm upon his or her request.

(c) Interim control or detention shall not be imposed on an accused child:

(1) To punish, treat, or rehabilitate the child;

(2) To allow parents to avoid their legal responsibilities;

(3) To satisfy demands by a victim, the police, or the community;

(4) To permit more convenient administrative access to the child; or

(5) To facilitate further interrogation or investigation.

(d) Whenever an accused child cannot be unconditionally released, conditional or supervised release that results in the least necessary interference with the liberty of the child shall be favored over more intrusive alternatives.

(e) Whenever the interim curtailment of an accused child's freedom is permitted under this Code section, the exercise of authority shall reflect the following values:

(1) Respect for the privacy, dignity, and individuality of the accused child and his or her family;

(2) Protection of the psychological and physical health of the child;

(3) Tolerance of the diverse values and preferences among different groups and individuals;

(4) Assurance of equality of treatment by race, class, ethnicity, and sex;

(5) Avoidance of regimentation and depersonalization of the child;

(6) Avoidance of stigmatization of the child; and

(7) Assurance that the child has been informed of his or her right to consult with an attorney and that if the child cannot afford an attorney, one will be provided.

§ 15–11–47. Procedure after taking child into custody

(a) Release to parents; delivery to medical facility, intake officer, or court. A person taking a child into custody, with all reasonable speed and without first taking the child elsewhere, shall:

(1) Forthwith release without bond the child to the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian upon their promise to bring the child before the court when requested by the court;

(2) Forthwith deliver the child to a medical facility if the child is believed to suffer from a serious physical condition or illness which requires prompt treatment and, upon delivery, shall promptly contact a juvenile court intake officer. Immediately upon being notified by the person taking a child into custody, the intake officer shall determine if such child should be released, detained, or brought before the court. Prior to an informal detention hearing or committal hearing authorized under Code Sections 17–6–15 and 17–6–16 and Articles 1, 2, and 8 of Chapter 7 of Title 17, the child shall be placed in detention, if necessary, only in such places as are authorized by Code Section 15–11–48;

(3) Bring the child immediately before the juvenile court or promptly contact a juvenile court intake officer. The intake officer shall determine if the child should be released or detained. Prior to an informal detention hearing, the child shall be placed in detention, if necessary, only in such places as are authorized by Code Section 15–11–48; or

(4) Bring the child who is suspected of committing a delinquent act before the superior court of the county where the delinquent act occurred if the act is an act over which the superior court has exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–28; however, pending a commitment hearing authorized under Code Sections 17–6–15 and 17–6–16 and Articles 1, 2, and 8 of Chapter 7 of Title 17 or an indictment, the child shall be returned and placed in detention, if necessary, only in such places as are authorized by Code Section 15–11–48.

(b) Failure of parent to bring child before court. If a parent, guardian, or other custodian, when requested, willfully fails to bring the child before the court as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, the court may issue its order directing that the child be taken into custody and brought before the court and, in addition, may enter any order authorized by and in accordance with the provisions of Code Section 15–11–5. If it is necessary to place the child in detention prior to his or her appearance in court, the child shall be placed in a facility as authorized by Code Section 15–11–48.

(c) Notice; temporary detention or questioning. The person taking a child into custody shall promptly give notice thereof, together with a statement of the reason for taking the child into custody, to a parent, guardian, or other custodian and to the court. Any temporary detention or questioning of the child necessary to comply with this Code section shall conform to the procedures and conditions prescribed by this article and rules of court.

(d) Bail. All children subject to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court and alleged to be delinquent or unruly shall have the same right to bail as adults; and the judge shall admit to bail all children under the court's jurisdiction in the same manner and under the same circumstances and procedures as are applicable to adults accused of the commission of crimes. Any person having legal custody or an adult blood relative or stepparent shall be entitled to post bail but shall be required immediately to return the child to the individual or entity having legal custody of the child.

(1) With respect to a child suspected of being unruly as defined in paragraph (12) of Code Section 15–11–2 or a child who is in violation of a curfew, a person taking such a child into custody shall not exercise custody over the child except for a period of 12 hours. A child taken into custody may be detained in a holding facility for unruly children as provided for in paragraph (2) of this subsection. If a parent or guardian has not assumed custody of the child at the end of such period or if the child has not been brought before the juvenile court or if an intake officer has not made a detention decision, the child shall be released from custody. In no case shall such a child in custody be detained in a jail.

(2) Counties and municipalities are authorized to establish facilities where a child who is suspected of being unruly or who is in violation of a curfew may be informally detained until the parent or guardian assumes custody of the child. Immediately after a child is brought into such a facility, every effort shall be made to contact the parent or guardian of the child. A child shall not be restrained in a cell or other such place apart from other children unless such child engages in disruptive or unruly behavior while at the holding facility.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–19. In addition the amendment substituted reference to child for juvenile and provided gender neutral referents.

The 2006 amendment by Act 476, in subsec. (d), deleted ", on application of the parent or guardian," following "delinquent and unruly", and added "Any person having legal custody or an adult blood relative or stepparent shall be entitled to post bail but shall be required immediately to return the child to the individual or entity having legal custody of the child." at the end of the subsection.

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 15 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–48. Place of detention; data on child detained

(a) Allegation of delinquency. A child alleged to be delinquent may be detained only in:

(1) A licensed foster home or a home approved by the court which may be a public or private home or the home of the noncustodial parent or of a relative;

(2) A facility operated by a licensed child welfare agency; or

(3) A detention home or center for delinquent children which is under the direction or supervision of the court or other public authority or of a private agency approved by the court.

(b) Allegation of capital or violent offense. A child alleged to have committed an offense over which the superior court has exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction under subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–28 shall be detained pending a commitment hearing under Code Sections 17–6–15 and 17–6–16 and Articles 1, 2, and 8 of Chapter 7 of Title 17 or an indictment only in a facility described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of subsection (a) of this Code section unless it appears to the satisfaction of the court in which the case is pending that public safety and protection reasonably require detention in the jail and the court so orders, but only where the detention is in a room separate and removed from those for adults and constructed in such a way that there can be no physical contact between a child and an adult offender.

(c) Transfer following indictment. Following an indictment for an offense over which the superior court has exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction under subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–28 or following the transfer of a case to any court for criminal prosecution under Code Section 15–11–30.2, the child shall be held only in a facility described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of subsection (a) of this Code section unless it appears to the satisfaction of the superior court that public safety and protection reasonably require detention in the jail and the court so orders, but only where the detention is in a room separate and removed from those for adults and constructed in such a way that there can be no physical contact between a child and an adult offender.

(d) Notification of court by official of jail. The official in charge of a jail or other facility for the detention of adult offenders or persons charged with crime shall immediately inform the juvenile court or a duly authorized officer of the juvenile court if a person who is or appears to be under the age of 17 years is received at the facility and shall bring him or her before the court upon request or deliver him or her to a detention or shelter care facility designated by the court; provided, however, the official in charge of a jail or other facility for the detention of adult offenders or persons charged with a crime shall immediately inform the court in which the case is pending or a duly authorized officer of such court if a person who is or appears to be 13 to 17 years of age and who is alleged to have committed any offense enumerated in subparagraph (b)(2)(A) of Code Section 15–11–28 is received at the facility and shall bring him or her before the court upon request or deliver him or her to a detention facility designated by the court. Such child shall not be held in the jail but may be held in a temporary holding area outside of the jail constructed as such for not longer than six hours pending transfer to the detention facility. For purposes of this Code section, the term "jail" shall include not only the cells, but any other secured area of the jail adjacent to the cells in which adult offenders are held or through which they are transported.

(e) Allegation of unruliness. A child unruly or alleged to be unruly who has not been released from custody as provided in subsection (e) of Code Section 15–11–47 may be detained or placed in shelter care only in the facilities stated in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section or in a secure juvenile detention facility for a period not to exceed 72 hours; provided, however, upon written order of the judge having jurisdiction of the case and upon good cause shown, a child alleged to be unruly may be detained for one additional period not to exceed 48 hours; provided, further, that no child alleged to be or found to be unruly who has not previously been adjudicated unruly may be detained in a secure juvenile detention facility unless such child is alleged to be under the court's jurisdiction as provided in subparagraph (D) of paragraph (12) of Code Section 15–11–2 and then shall be detained in that facility only so long as is required to effect the child's return home or to ensure the child's presence at a scheduled court appearance when the child has previously failed to appear for a scheduled court appearance. In the event a child alleged to be unruly comes within the purview of the Interstate Compact on Juveniles and the proper authorities of a demanding state have made an official return request to the proper authorities of this state, the Interstate Compact on Juveniles shall apply to the child.

(f) Allegation of deprivation. A child alleged to be deprived may be placed in shelter care only in the facilities stated in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section or in a shelter care facility operated by the court. The actual physical placement of a child pursuant to this subsection shall require the approval of the judge of the juvenile court or his or her designee.

(g) Data to be maintained. All facilities that detain children for pretrial detention shall maintain the following data on each child detained:

(1) Name;

(2) Date of birth;

(3) Sex;

(4) Race;

(5) Offense or offenses for which being detained;

(6) Date of and authority for confinement;

(7) Date of and authority for release or transfer; and

(8) Where transferred or to whom released.

Such data shall be recorded and retained by the facility for three years and shall be made available for inspection during normal business hours by any court exercising juvenile court jurisdiction, by the Department of Juvenile Justice, by the Department of Corrections, and by the Georgia Council of Juvenile Court Judges.

§ 15–11–49. Release from detention or shelter care; hearing

(a) If a child is brought before the court or delivered to a detention or shelter care facility designated by the court, the intake or other authorized officer of the court shall immediately make an investigation and release the child unless it appears that the child's detention or shelter care is warranted or required under Code Section 15–11–46.

(b) If a child is so released and the case is to be prosecuted further other than by informal adjustment, a petition under Code Section 15–11–38.1 shall be made and presented to the court within 30 days.

(c)(1) If a child alleged to be delinquent is not so released, an informal detention hearing shall be held promptly and not later than 72 hours after the child is placed in detention or shelter care to determine whether detention or shelter care of the child is required under Code Section 15–11–46, provided that, if the 72 hour time period expires on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the hearing shall be held on the next day which is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

(2) If a child alleged to be unruly is not so released, the informal detention hearing shall be held promptly and not later than 72 hours after the child is placed in detention or shelter care as provided in subsection (e) of Code Section 15–11–48.

(3) If a child alleged to be deprived is not so released, the informal detention hearing shall be held promptly and not later than 72 hours after the child is placed in shelter care as provided in subsection (f) of Code Section 15–11–48, provided that, if the 72 hour time period expires on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the hearing shall be held on the next day which is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

(4) Reasonable notice of the hearing specified in this subsection, either oral or written, stating the time, place, and purpose of the detention hearing, shall be given to the child and, if they can be found, to the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian. In the event the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian cannot be found, the court shall forthwith appoint a guardian ad litem. Prior to the commencement of the hearing, the court shall inform the parties of their right to counsel and to appointed counsel if they are indigent persons and of the child's right to remain silent with respect to any allegations of delinquency or unruly conduct.

(d) If the child is not so released and a parent, guardian, custodian, or guardian ad litem has not been notified of the hearing and did not appear or waive appearance at the hearing and files the affidavit of such person showing these facts, the court shall rehear the matter without unnecessary delay and shall order the child's release unless it appears from the hearing that the child's detention or shelter care is required under Code Section 15–11–46.

(e) If the child is not so released, a petition under Code Section 15–11–38.1 shall be made and presented to the court within 72 hours of the detention hearing; provided, however, that, if the child not so released is alleged to be a deprived child, a petition under Code Section 15–11–38.1 shall be made and presented to the court within five days of the detention hearing.

§ 15–11–49.1. Order to take child into immediate custody

If it appears from a filed affidavit or from sworn testimony before the court that the conduct, condition, or surroundings of the child are endangering the child's health or welfare or those of others or that the child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court or will not be brought before the court, notwithstanding the service of the summons, the court may endorse upon the summons an order that a law enforcement officer shall serve the summons and take the child into immediate custody and bring the child forthwith before the court.

§ 15–11–51. Release of child from detention; notification to victim

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Notice" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 17–17–3.

(2) "Victim" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 17–17–3.

(3) "Violent delinquent act" means the commission, attempt to commit, conspiracy to commit, or solicitation of another to commit a delinquent act which if committed by an adult would constitute:

(A) A serious violent felony as defined by Code Section 17–10–6.1;

(B) A designated felony as defined by Code Section 15–11–63;

(C) Stalking or aggravated stalking as provided by Article 7 of Chapter 5 of Title 16; or

(D) Any attempt to commit, conspiracy to commit, or solicitation of another to commit an offense enumerated in subparagraphs (A) through (C) of this paragraph.

(b) If a child accused of a violent delinquent act is detained pending adjudication as provided by Code Sections 15–11–46.1 and 15–11–47, the juvenile court intake officer shall provide notice to the victim, whenever practicable, that such child is to be released from detention not less than 24 hours prior to such child's release from detention.

(c) Not less than 48 hours prior to the release from detention of a child who has been adjudicated to have committed a violent delinquent act, the juvenile court intake officer shall, whenever practicable, provide notice to the victim of such pending release.

(d) Notification need not be given unless the victim has expressed a desire for such notification and has provided the juvenile court intake officer with a current address and telephone number. It shall be the duty of the juvenile court intake officer to advise the victim of his or her right to notification and of the requirement of the victim's providing a primary and personal telephone number to which such notification shall be directed.

Part 6

Deprivation

§ 15–11–54. Findings; findings with regard to result of alcohol or drug abuse; disposition

(a) Findings. After hearing the evidence on any petition alleging deprivation, the court shall make and file its findings as to whether the child is a deprived child. If the court finds that the child is not a deprived child, it shall dismiss the petition and order the child discharged from any detention or other restriction theretofore ordered in the proceeding.

(b) Findings with regard to result of alcohol abuse or drug abuse. If the court finds that a child is deprived, the court shall also make and file a finding as to whether such deprivation is the result of alcohol abuse or drug abuse by a parent or guardian.

(c) Disposition. The court shall proceed immediately or at a postponed hearing to make a proper disposition of the case in accordance with Code Section 15–11–55 if the court finds from clear and convincing evidence that the child is deprived.

Laws 2002, p. 1162, § 5.

§ 15–11–55. Disposition of deprived child

(a) If the child is found to be a deprived child, the court may make any of the following orders of disposition best suited to the protection and physical, mental, and moral welfare of the child:

(1) Permit the child to remain with his or her parents, guardian, or other custodian, including a putative father, subject to conditions and limitations as the court prescribes, including supervision as directed by the court for the protection of the child;

(2)(A) Subject to conditions and limitations as the court prescribes, transfer temporary legal custody to any of the persons or entities described in this paragraph. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, such conditions and limitations shall include a provision that the court shall approve or direct the retransfer of the physical custody of the child back to the parents, guardian, or other custodian either upon the occurrence of specified circumstances or in the discretion of the court. Any such retransfer of physical custody may be made subject to such further conditions and limitations as the court prescribes, including supervision for the protection of the child. The persons or entities to whom or which temporary legal custody may be transferred shall include the following:

(i) Any individual including a putative father who, after study by the probation officer or other person or agency designated by the court, is found by the court to be qualified to receive and care for the child;

(ii) An agency or other private organization licensed or otherwise authorized by law to receive and provide care for the child;

(iii) Any public agency authorized by law to receive and provide care for the child; provided, however, that for the purpose of this Code section, the term "public agency" shall not include the Department of Juvenile Justice; or

(iv) An individual in another state with or without supervision by an appropriate officer under Code Section 15–11–89.

(B) Except for dispositions pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–66 and Code Section 15–11–67, within 30 days after the removal of a child from the custody of the parent or parents of the child, the Department of Human Services shall exercise due diligence to identify a parent or relative of the child or other persons who have demonstrated an ongoing commitment to the child. All identified adult relatives of the child, subject to exceptions due to family or domestic violence, shall be provided with notice:

(i) Specifying that the child has been or is being removed from parental custody;

(ii) Explaining the options the relative has to participate in the care and placement of the child and any options that may be lost by failing to respond to the notice;

(iii) Describing the process for becoming an approved foster family home and the additional services and supports available for children placed in approved foster homes; and

(iv) Describing any financial assistance for which the relative may be eligible.

(C) The results of such search and notification shall be documented in writing and filed with the court by the time of the first review. During such 30 day period, the court may order that the child be placed in the temporary legal custody of the Department of Human Services or any other appropriate entity or person.

(D) The court shall order in its preliminary disposition that the parent or other legal guardian of the child shall provide within ten days the names and addresses of all relatives and other persons who might be considered as possible placements for the child. The parties shall have an ongoing duty to supplement this information during the course of the case at each judicial review or citizen panel review. The court shall include in all published summons a notice that this information must be provided.

(E) The Council of Juvenile Court Judges shall be authorized to create uniform rules and forms to implement the provisions of this paragraph; or

(3) Without making any of the orders specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, transfer custody of the child to the court of another state exercising jurisdiction over children if authorized by and in accordance with Code Section 15–11–87 if the child is or is about to become a resident of that state.

(b) Unless a child found to be deprived is found also to be delinquent, such child shall not be committed to or confined in an institution or other facility designed or operated for the benefit of delinquent children.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the court after transferring temporary legal custody of a child to the Division of Family and Children Services within the Department of Human Services may at any time conduct sua sponte a judicial review of the current placement plan being provided to said child. After its review the court may order the division to comply with the current placement plan, order the division to devise a new placement plan within available division resources, or make any other order relative to placement or custody outside the Department of Human Services as the court finds to be in the best interest of the child. Placement or a change of legal custody by the court outside the Department of Human Services shall relieve the department of further responsibility for the child so placed.

(d) The policy of this state is that children in the custody of the Division of Family and Children Services should have stable placements. Not less than five days in advance of any placement change, the division shall notify the court, a child who is 14 years of age or older, the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian, and any attorney of record of such change in the location of the child's placement while the child is in the division's custody; provided, however, that if the child's health or welfare may be endangered by any delay in changing the child's placement, only the court and any attorney of record shall be notified of such placement change within 24 hours of such change. A child who is 14 years of age or older, the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian, and any attorney of record may request a hearing with regard to the child's case plan or the permanency plan in order for the court to consider the change in the location of the child's placement and any changes to the case plan or permanency plan resulting from the child's change in placement location. Such hearing shall be held within five days of receiving notice of a change in the location of the child's placement and prior to any such placement change, unless the child's health or welfare may be endangered by any delay in changing the child's placement. At the hearing to consider the child's case plan and permanency plan, the court shall consider the case plan and permanency plan recommendations made by the division, including a recommendation as to the location of the placement of the child, and shall make findings of fact upon which the court relied in determining to reject or accept the case plan or permanency plan and the recommendations made by the division, including the location of the child's placement. If the court rejects the recommendations of the division, the court shall demonstrate that the division's recommendations were considered and explain why it did not follow the recommendations. If the court rejects the division's case plan and permanency plan recommendations, including the change in the location of the placement of the child, the court may order the division to devise a new case plan and permanency plan recommendation, including a new recommendation as to the location of the child within the resources of the department, or make any other order relative to placement or custody outside the Department of Human Services as the court finds to be in the best interest of the child and consistent with this subsection. Placement or a change of legal custody by the court outside the Department of Human Services shall relieve the department of further responsibility for the child so placed.

(e) A juvenile court shall not be required to make an order of disposition pursuant to this Code section regarding a child who is discharged from a facility in which the child was hospitalized or habilitated pursuant to Chapter 3, 4, or 7 of Title 37 unless the child is to be discharged into the physical custody of any person who had such custody when the court made its most recent finding that such child was deprived.

(f) If a child is found to be a deprived child and the deprivation is found to have been the result of alcohol or other drug abuse by a parent or guardian, as specified in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–54, and the court orders transfer of temporary legal custody of the child, as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section, the court is authorized to further order that legal custody of the child may not be transferred back to the child's custodian or guardian whose abuse of alcohol or another drug resulted in the child's deprivation unless such person undergoes substance abuse treatment and random substance abuse screenings and those screenings remain negative for a period of no less than six consecutive months.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–34. In addition the amendment substituted reference to child for juvenile and provided gender neutral referents.

The 2002 amendment rewrote subsec. (e) which formerly provided:

"(e) If a child is found to be a deprived child and the deprivation is found to have been the result of alcohol or other drug abuse, as specified in subsection (f) of Code Section 15–11–41, and the court orders transfer of temporary legal custody of the child, as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section, the court is authorized to further order that legal custody of the child may not be transferred back to the person having custody of the child when the deprivation occurred unless such person undergoes substance abuse treatment and random substance abuse screenings and those screenings remain negative for a period of no less than six consecutive months."

The 2003 amendment by Act 3 in subsec. (a), par. (2), substituted "." for "; or" at the end of subpar. (D), and added the paragraph beginning "Except for dispositions..." following subpar. (D).

The 2007 amendment by Act 325, in subsec. (a), inserted "provided, however, that for the purpose of this Code section, the term 'public agency' shall not include the Department of Juvenile Justice;" in subpar. (2)(C); in subsec. (c), inserted "legal" following "Placement or a change of"; inserted a new subsec. (d); and redesignated former subsecs. (d) and (e) as (e) and (f).

The 2009 amendment by Act 37 rewrote the par. (a)(2) which had read:

"(2) Subject to conditions and limitations as the court prescribes, transfer temporary legal custody to any of the persons or entities described in this paragraph. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, such conditions and limitations shall include a provision that the court shall approve or direct the retransfer of the physical custody of the child back to the parents, guardian, or other custodian either upon the occurrence of specified circumstances or in the discretion of the court. Any such retransfer of physical custody may be made subject to such further conditions and limitations as the court prescribes, including supervision for the protection of the child. The persons or entities to whom or which temporary legal custody may be transferred shall include the following:

"(A) Any individual including a putative father who, after study by the probation officer or other person or agency designated by the court, is found by the court to be qualified to receive and care for the child;

"(B) An agency or other private organization licensed or otherwise authorized by law to receive and provide care for the child;

"(C) Any public agency authorized by law to receive and provide care for the child; provided, however, that for the purpose of this Code section, the term 'public agency' shall not include the Department of Juvenile Justice; or

"(D) An individual in another state with or without supervision by an appropriate officer under Code Section 15–11–89.

"Except for dispositions pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–66 and Code Section 15–11–67, before transferring temporary legal custody in an order of disposition under this paragraph a reasonably diligent search for a parent or relative of the child or other persons who have demonstrated an ongoing commitment to the child shall be conducted by the court and the Department of Human Resources. Such search shall be completed within 90 days from the date on which the child was removed from the home, the results of such search documented in writing and filed with the court at the time of the first review. During such 90 day period, the child may be placed in the temporary legal custody of the Department of Human Resources or any other appropriate entity or person; or"

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Human Services" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

In 2009, the Code Commission, due to irreconcilable conflicts, treated the amendment of subpars. (a)(2)(B) and (a)(2)(C) by Laws 2009, Act 37, § 1, as superseded by Laws 2009, Act 102, § 2–2. See Butts County v. Strahan, 107 S.E. 163, 151 Ga. 417 (1921).

The 2010 amendment by Act 418, in subsec. (a), par. (2), subpar. (B), substituted "within 30 days after the removal of a child from the custody of the parent or parents of the child, the Department of Human Services shall exercise due diligence to identify" for "before transferring temporary legal custody in an order of disposition under this paragraph a reasonably diligent search for", deleted "shall be conducted by the court and the Department of Human Services. Such search shall be completed within 90 days from the date on which the child was removed from the home" after "commitment to the child", added "All identified adult relatives of the child, subject to exceptions due to family or domestic violence, shall be provided with notice" and divs. (i) to (iv); in subpar. (C), inserted "and notification" after "such search", substituted "by the time" for "at the time", substituted "30 day" for "90 day" and inserted "the court may order that" preceding "the child".

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 30 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–55.1. Notice of hearings or other proceedings to foster parents and preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for child

In advance of any hearing or other proceeding to be held with respect to a child pursuant to Code Section 15–11–55 or a deprivation hearing to be held with respect to a child pursuant to paragraph (3) of subsection (c) of Code Section 15–11–49 and Code Sections 15–11–39 and 15–11–39.2, the court shall provide notice or shall direct that a party shall provide notice of such hearing or other proceeding, including their right to be heard at such hearing or other proceeding, to the foster parents of the child, and to any preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for the child, consistent with the form and timing of notice to parties; provided, however, that this provision shall not be construed to require a foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative caring for the child to be made a party to the hearing solely on the basis of such notice and right to be heard.

Laws 2007, Act 248, § 2, eff. May 24, 2007.

§ 15–11–56. Hearing; findings; disposition

(a) Evidence. In dispositional hearings under subsection (c) of Code Section 15–11–54 and in all proceedings involving custody of a child, all information helpful in determining the questions presented, including oral and written reports, may be received by the court and relied upon to the extent of its probative value even though not otherwise competent in the hearing on the petition. The parties or their counsel shall be afforded an opportunity upon request to examine and controvert written reports so received and to cross-examine individuals making the reports, except that portions of such reports not relied on by the court in reaching its decision which, if revealed, would be prejudicial to the interests of the child or any party to the proceeding may be withheld in the court's discretion. Confidential sources of information need not be disclosed.

(b) Continuances; scheduling. On its own motion or that of a party, the court may continue the hearings under subsection (c) of Code Section 15–11–54 for a reasonable period to receive reports and other evidence bearing on the disposition of a child. In this event, the court shall make an appropriate order for protection of the child during the period of the continuance. In scheduling investigations and hearings, the court shall give priority to proceedings in which a child has been removed from his or her home before an order of disposition has been made.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–33(a), (b), (d), and (e). In addition the amendment substituted reference to child for juvenile and provided gender neutral referents.

The 2002 amendment substantially rewrote this section which, prior thereto, provided:

"(a) Findings. After hearing the evidence on any petition alleging delinquency, unruliness, or deprivation, the court shall make and file its findings as to whether the child is a deprived child or, if the petition alleges that the child is delinquent or unruly, after hearing the evidence the court shall make and file its findings as to whether the acts ascribed to the child were committed by the child. If the court finds that the child is not a deprived child or that the allegations of delinquency or unruly conduct have not been established, it shall dismiss the petition and order the child discharged from any detention or other restriction theretofore ordered in the proceeding.

"(b) Disposition. The court shall proceed immediately or at a postponed hearing to make a proper disposition of the case if the court finds from clear and convincing evidence that the child:

"(1) Is deprived;

"(2) Is in need of treatment or rehabilitation as a delinquent child; or

"(3) Is in need of treatment or rehabilitation or supervision as an unruly child.

"(c) Evidence. In dispositional hearings under subsection (b) of this Code section and in all proceedings involving custody of a child, all information helpful in determining the questions presented, including oral and written reports, may be received by the court and relied upon to the extent of its probative value even though not otherwise competent in the hearing on the petition. The parties or their counsel shall be afforded an opportunity upon request to examine and controvert written reports so received and to cross-examine individuals making the reports, except that portions of such reports not relied on by the court in reaching its decision which, if revealed, would be prejudicial to the interests of the child or any party to the proceeding may be withheld in the court's discretion. Confidential sources of information need not be disclosed.

"(d) Continuances; scheduling. On its own motion or that of a party, the court may continue the hearings under this Code section for a reasonable period to receive reports and other evidence bearing on the disposition or the child's need for treatment or rehabilitation. In this event, the court shall make an appropriate order for detention of the child or for the child's release from detention subject to supervision of the court during the period of the continuance. In scheduling investigations and hearings, the court shall give priority to proceedings in which a child is in detention or has otherwise been removed from his or her home before an order of disposition has been made."

§ 15–11–57. Counseling or counsel and advice for deprived child

When any child is before a juvenile court and such child is found by the court to be a deprived child, the court shall be authorized, in addition to any other disposition authorized by this article, to order such child and such child's parents or guardian to participate in counseling or in counsel and advice as determined by the court. Such counseling and counsel and advice may be provided by the court, court personnel, probation officers, professional counselors or social workers, psychologists, physicians, qualified volunteers, or appropriate public, private, or volunteer agencies as directed by the court and shall be designed to assist in deterring future conditions of deprivation, or other conduct or conditions which would be harmful to the child or society.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–36.1. In addition the amendment rephrased the section which prior thereto provided:

"When any child is before a juvenile court and such child is found by the court to have committed a delinquent act, to be a deprived child, to be an unruly child, or to have committed a juvenile traffic offence as defined in Code Section 15–11–49, the court shall be authorized, in addition to any other disposition authorized by this article, to order such child and such child's parents or guardian to participate in counseling or in counsel and advice as determined by the court. Such counseling and counsel and advice may be provided by the court, court personnel, probation officers, professional counselors or social workers, psychologists, physicians, qualified volunteers, or appropriate public, private, or volunteer agencies as directed by the court and shall be designed to assist in deterring future delinquent or unruly acts, conditions of deprivation, or other conduct or conditions which would be harmful to the child or society."

§ 15–11–58. Reunification services

court places custody of the child in the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services, the court shall also determine as a finding of fact whether reasonable efforts were made by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services and any other appropriate agencies to preserve and reunify families prior to the placement of a child in the custody of the Department of Human Services, to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of the child from that child's home, and to make it possible for the child to return safely to the child's home. Such findings shall also be made at every subsequent review of the court's order under this chapter.

(1) In determining reasonable efforts to be made with respect to a child, as described in this subsection, and in making such reasonable efforts, the child's health and safety shall be the paramount concern;

(2) Except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, reasonable efforts shall be made to preserve and reunify families:

(A) Prior to the placement of a child in the custody of the Department of Human Services, to prevent or eliminate the need for removing the child from the child's home; and

(B) To make it possible for a child to return safely to the child's home;

(3) If continuation of reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection is determined to be inconsistent with the permanency plan for the child, reasonable efforts shall be made to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanency plan and to complete whatever steps are necessary to finalize the permanent placement of the child;

(4) Reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall not be required to be made with respect to a parent of a child if a court of competent jurisdiction has determined that:

(A) The parent has subjected the child to aggravated circumstances which may include but need not be limited to abandonment, torture, chronic abuse, and sexual abuse;

(B) The parent has:

(i) Committed murder of another child of the parent;

(ii) Been convicted of the murder of the other parent of the child;

(iii) Committed voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent;

(iv) Aided or abetted, attempted, conspired, or solicited to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent; or

(v) Committed a felony assault that results in serious bodily injury to the child or another child of the parent; or

(C) The parental rights of the parent to a sibling have been terminated involuntarily;

(5) If reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection are not made with respect to a child as a result of a determination made by a court of competent jurisdiction in accordance with paragraph (4) of this subsection:

(A) A permanency hearing in accordance with subsection (o) of this Code section shall be held for the child within 30 days after such determination; and

(B) Reasonable efforts shall be made to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanency plan and to complete whatever steps are necessary to finalize the permanent placement of the child; and

(6) Reasonable efforts to place a child for adoption or with a legal guardian may be made concurrently with reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection.

(b) Within 30 days of the date a child who is placed in the custody of the Department of Human Services is removed from the home and at each subsequent review of the disposition order, the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services must submit a written report to the court which shall either include a case plan for a reunification of the family or include a statement of the factual basis or bases for determining that a plan for reunification is not appropriate. Such report shall become a discrete part of the case record in a format determined by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services and shall be made available to the parents or guardian of the foster child. The contents of the report shall be determined at a meeting to be held by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services in consultation with the judicial citizen review panel, if one is designated by the court for such purpose, and the parents and children, when available. The parents shall be given written notice of the meeting at least five days in advance and shall be advised that the report will be submitted to the court for consideration to become an order of the court. The report submitted to the court shall also contain any dissenting recommendations of the judicial citizen review panel, if applicable, and any recommendations of the parents, if such are available.

(c) If the report contains a plan for reunification services, such plan if adopted by the court shall be in effect until modification by the court. The plan shall address each reason requiring removal and shall contain at least the following:

(1) The purpose for which the child was placed in foster care, including a statement of the reasons why the child cannot be adequately protected at home and the harm which may occur if the child remains in the home, and shall also include a description of the services offered and the services provided to prevent removal of the child from the home;

(2) A discussion of how the plan is designed to achieve a placement in a safe setting that is the least restrictive, most family-like, and most appropriate setting available and in close proximity to the home of the parents, consistent with the best interests and special needs of the child;

(3) A clear description of the specific actions to be taken by the parents and the specific services to be provided by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services or other appropriate agencies in order to bring about the identified changes that must be made in order for the child to be safely returned home; provided, however, that all services and actions required of the parents which are not directly related to the circumstances necessitating separation cannot be made conditions of the return of the child without further court review;

(4) Specific time frames in which the goals of the plan are to be accomplished to fulfill the purpose of the reunification plan;

(5) The person within the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services or other agency who is directly responsible for ensuring that the plan is implemented;

(6) Consideration of the advisability of a reasonable visitation schedule which allows the parents to maintain meaningful contact with their children through personal visits, telephone calls, and letters;

(7) A statement that reasonable efforts have been made and a requirement that reasonable efforts shall be made for so long as the child remains in the custody of the department:

(A) To place siblings removed from their home in the same foster care, kinship, guardianship, or adoptive placement, unless the Division of Family and Children Services documents that such a joint placement would be contrary to the safety or well-being of any of the siblings; and

(B) In the case of siblings removed from their home who are not so jointly placed, for frequent visitation or other ongoing interaction between the siblings, unless the Division of Family and Children Services documents that such frequent visitation or other ongoing interaction would be contrary to the safety or well-being of any of the siblings;

(8) Provisions ensuring the educational stability of the child while in foster care, including:

(A) An assurance that the placement of the child in foster care takes into account the appropriateness of the current educational setting and the proximity to the school in which the child is enrolled at the time of placement;

(B) An assurance that the state agency has coordinated with appropriate local educational agencies to ensure that the child remains in the school in which the child is enrolled at the time of placement; or

(C) If remaining in such school is not in the best interests of the child, an assurance by the Division of Family and Children Services that such division and the local educational agencies have cooperated to assure the immediate and appropriate enrollment in a new school, with all of the educational records of the child provided to such new school; and

(9) A requirement that the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services case manager and staff, and, as appropriate, other representatives of the child, provide the child with assistance and support in developing a transition plan that is personalized at the direction of the child; includes specific options on housing, health insurance, education, local opportunities for mentors and continuing support services, and work force supports and employment services; and is as detailed as the child may elect in the 90 day period immediately prior to the date on which the child will attain 18 years of age.

(d) If the submitted report contains a proposed plan for reunification services, and no hearing is requested as provided in this Code section, the court shall enter a dispositional order or supplemental order incorporating all elements of the plan for reunification services which the court finds essential to reunification of the child with his or her family, specifying what must be accomplished by all parties before reunification of the family can be achieved. If the report contains a plan for reunification services, a copy of the report must be transmitted to the parents at the same time the report is transmitted to the court, along with written notice that the report will be considered by the court without a hearing unless, within five days from the date the copy of the report was received, the parents request a hearing before the court to review the report. The Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services shall provide the custodian of the child, the foster parents of the child, and any preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for the child with a copy of those portions of the court approved plan that involve the permanency goal and the services to be provided to the child. The provisions of subsection (p) of this Code section concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, authority of the court, and content of the court's order are applicable to proceedings under this subsection.

(e) If the report submitted to the court does not contain a plan for reunification services, upon proper notice being provided to the parents, the court shall, no later than 30 days following the filing of the report, hold a hearing to review the report and the determination that a plan for reunification services is not appropriate.

(f) When a recommendation is made that reunification services are not appropriate and should not be allowed, the report shall address each reason requiring removal and shall contain at least the following:

(1) The purpose for which the child was placed in foster care, including a statement of the reasons why the child cannot be adequately and safely protected at home and the harm which may occur if the child remains in the home, and a description of the services offered and the services provided to prevent removal of the child from the home;

(2) A clear statement describing all of the reasons supporting a finding that reasonable efforts to reunify a child with the child's family will be detrimental to the child, and that reunification services therefore need not be provided, including specific findings as to whether any of the grounds for terminating parental rights exist, as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–94 or paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section; and

(3) The statements, provisions, and requirements found in paragraphs (7) and (8) of subsection (c) of this Code section.

(g) At the hearing held for the purpose of reviewing the determination by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services that a reunification plan is not appropriate, the representative of the Division of Family and Children Services shall notify the court whether and when it intends to proceed with termination of parental rights at that time. If the Division of Family and Children Services indicates that it does not intend to petition for the termination of parental rights, the court may appoint a guardian ad litem and charge such guardian with the duty of determining whether termination proceedings should be commenced.

(h) When reviewing the determination by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services that a reunification plan is not appropriate, the court shall determine by clear and convincing evidence whether reasonable efforts to reunify a child with his or her family will be detrimental to the child and that reunification services, therefore, should not be provided or should be terminated. There shall be a presumption that reunification services should not be provided if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that:

(1) The parent has unjustifiably failed to comply with a previously ordered plan designed to reunite the family;

(2) A child has been removed from the home on at least two previous occasions and reunification services were made available on those occasions;

(3) Any of the grounds for terminating parental rights exist, as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–94; or

(4) Any of the circumstances set out in paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section exist, making it unnecessary to provide reasonable efforts to reunify.

(i)(1) If the court has entered an order finding that reasonable efforts to reunify a child with his or her family would be detrimental to the child in accordance with subsection (h) of this Code section and if the court finds that referral for termination of parental rights and adoption is not in the best interest of the child, the court may, upon proper petition, enter a custody order which shall remain in effect until the child's eighteenth birthday:

(A) Placing the child in the custody of a relative of the child if such a person is willing and, after study by the probation officer or other person or agency designated by the court, is found by the court to be qualified to receive and care for the child;

(B) Placing the child in the custody of any nonrelative individual who, after study by the probation officer or other person or agency designated by the court, is found by the court to be qualified to receive and care for the child;

(C) Placing the child in the custody of a suitable individual custodian in another state pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 15–11–89; or

(D) In the case where the court has found a compelling reason that a placement pursuant to subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of this paragraph is not in the child's best interest, placing the child in the custody of an agency or organization licensed or otherwise authorized by law to receive and provide care for the child which is operated in a manner that provides such care, guidance, and control as would be provided in a family home as defined in the court's order.

Such order may be modified following a petition for modification by a party or upon motion of the court pursuant to Code Section 15–11–40.

(2) A probation officer, judicial citizen review panel established by the court, or other person or agency designated by the court shall, after study or review, submit a report to the court addressing whether the custodian to whom custody of a child has been given pursuant to this Code section continues to be qualified to receive and care for the child within:

(A) Thirty–six months of an order placing a child in the custody of a relative pursuant to subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) of this subsection and every 36 months thereafter; or

(B) Twelve months of an order placing a child in the custody of a nonrelative, an out-of-state custodian, or an agency or organization licensed or otherwise authorized by law to receive and provide care for the child pursuant to subparagraph (B), (C), or (D) of paragraph (1) of this subsection and every 12 months thereafter.

(3) Whenever a child is placed in the custody of an agency or organization licensed or otherwise authorized by law to receive and provide care for the child pursuant to subparagraph (D) of paragraph (1) of this subsection, such agency or organization shall be charged with the responsibility of notifying the court within ten days in the event its license is placed on probation, suspended, revoked, or surrendered and, in such event, the court shall conduct a judicial review within ten days of such notification to determine whether another placement should be made for the child.

(j) At the hearing required by subsection (e) of this Code section, the court shall hold a permanency hearing in accordance with subsection (o) of this Code section and shall consider and incorporate a permanency plan for the child in its order which shall comply with subsection (o) of this Code section.

(k) Except as otherwise provided by law, an order of disposition placing a deprived child in foster care under the supervision of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services shall continue in force for 12 months after the date the child is considered to have entered foster care or until sooner terminated by the court. For the purposes of this Code section, the date the child is considered to have entered foster care shall be the date of the first judicial finding that the child has been subjected to child abuse or neglect, or the date that is 60 days after the date on which the child is removed from the home, whichever is earlier. All cases of children in foster care in the custody of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services shall be initially reviewed within 90 days of the entering of the dispositional order but no later than six months following the child's placement and shall be conducted by the juvenile court judge, by an associate juvenile court judge or judge pro tempore, or by judicial citizen review panels established by the court, as the court directs, meeting such standards and using such procedures as shall be established by court rule by the Supreme Court of Georgia, with the advice and consent of the Council of Juvenile Court Judges. At the time of each review of every case of a child in foster care in the custody of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services, a representative of the Division of Family and Children Services shall notify the court whether such division intends to proceed with the termination of parental rights at that time. If such division indicates that it does not intend to petition for the termination of parental rights at that time, the court may appoint a guardian ad litem and charge such guardian with the duty of determining whether termination proceedings should be commenced. In the event the review is conducted by judicial citizen review panels, the panel shall transmit its report, including its findings and recommendations and those of such division, along with such division's proposed revised plan for reunification or other permanency plan, if necessary, to the court and the parents within five days after the review. Any party may request a hearing on the proposed revised plan in writing within five days after receiving a copy of such plan. The Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services shall provide the custodian of the child, the foster parents of the child, and any preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for the child with a copy of those portions of the report of the judicial citizen review panel that involve the recommended permanency goal and the recommended services to be provided to the child. Following such initial review, additional periodic reviews shall be held at six-month intervals. The provisions of subsection (p) of this Code section concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, authority of the court, and content of the court's order are applicable to proceedings under this subsection.

(l) If no hearing is requested or scheduled by the court on its own motion, the court shall review the proposed revised plan and enter a supplemental order incorporating a revised plan as part of its disposition in the case. In the event that a hearing is held, the court shall, after hearing evidence, enter a supplemental order incorporating all elements that the court finds essential in the proposed revised plan. The provisions of subsection (p) of this Code section concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, authority of the court, and content of the court's order are applicable to proceedings under this subsection. The judge's supplemental order shall be entered within a reasonable time from the conclusion of the hearing or expiration of the time for the hearing to be requested and shall also provide one of the following:

(1) That the child return to the home of his or her parents, legal guardian, or custodian with or without court imposed conditions;

(2) That the child continue in the current custodial placement and that the current placement is appropriate for the child's needs; or

(3) That the child continue in the current custodial placement but that the current placement plan is no longer appropriate for the child's needs and direct the department to devise another plan within available resources. The new plan must be submitted within ten days for court approval. Copies of any court approved revised plan shall be furnished to all parties. The Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services shall provide the custodian of the child, the foster parents of the child, and any preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for the child with a copy of those portions of the court approved revised plan that involve the permanency goal and the services to be provided to the child.

In the event that the judicial citizen review panel determines that the parents have unjustifiably failed to comply with the ordered plan designed to reunite the family and that such failure is significant enough to warrant consideration of termination of parental rights, the panel may make a recommendation to the guardian ad litem of the child, the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services, and the intake officer of the court that a petition for termination of parental rights should be prepared. Any such party or officer of the court shall file a petition if, upon examination, they find sufficient evidence. In the event that no guardian ad litem has been appointed when the judicial citizen review panel recommends that a petition to terminate parental rights be filed, the court shall have the authority to appoint a guardian ad litem who shall have the duty to determine whether termination proceedings should be commenced.

(m) In the event that a child has been in foster care under the responsibility of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services for 15 of the most recent 22 months, or, if the court has determined a child to be an abandoned infant, as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–94, or has made a determination that the parent has committed murder of another child of the parent; been convicted of the murder of the other parent of the child; committed voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent; aided or abetted, attempted, conspired, or solicited to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent, or committed felony assault that has resulted in serious bodily injury to the child or to another child of the parent, the department shall file a petition to terminate the parental rights of the child's parents or, if such a petition has been filed by another party, seek to be joined as a party to the petition, and, concurrently, to identify, recruit, process, and approve a qualified family for an adoption, unless, at the option of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services, the child is being cared for by a relative; the case plan documents a compelling reason for determining that filing such a petition would not be in the best interests of the child; or the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services has not provided to the family of the child, consistent with the specific time frames for the accomplishment of the case plan goals, such services deemed necessary for the safe return of the child to the child's home.

(n) The court which made the order may extend its duration for not more than 12 months if:

(1) A hearing is held upon motion of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services prior to the expiration of the order;

(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and opportunity to be heard are given to the parties affected; and

(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the order extended.

(o)(1) With respect to each child in the custody of the Department of Human Services, a permanency hearing shall be held no later than 30 days after the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services has submitted a written report to the court which does not contain a plan for reunification services as provided in subsection (j) of this Code section, or no later than 12 months after the child is considered to have entered foster care, whichever comes first. Thereafter, a permanency hearing shall be held not less frequently than every 12 months during the time the child continues in the custody of the Department of Human Services. A permanency hearing may be held by the court at the time of the hearing on a motion to extend custody permitted by subsection (n) of this Code section. The provisions of subsection (p) of this Code section concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, authority of the court, and content of the court's order are applicable to proceedings under this paragraph.

(2) At the time of the permanency hearing, the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services shall submit for the court's consideration a report recommending a permanency plan for the child which shall include whether and, if applicable, when the child shall be returned to the parent or parents; referred for termination of parental rights and adoption; referred for legal guardianship; placed permanently with a fit and willing relative; or, in the case where the division has provided a compelling reason that none of the foregoing options would be in the best interest of the child, placed in another planned permanent living arrangement. The report shall include documentation of the steps to be taken by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services to finalize the permanent placement of the child. When the permanency plan recommended is referral for termination of parental rights and adoption, such report shall include child specific recruitment efforts such as the use of state, regional, and national adoption exchanges, including electronic exchange systems. The provisions of subsection (p) of this Code section concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, authority of the court, and content of the court's order are applicable to proceedings under this paragraph.

(3) The permanency hearing may be conducted as the court directs by the juvenile court judge or by an associate juvenile court judge or judge pro tempore. The court may also direct that the permanency hearing be conducted by a judicial citizen review panel established by the court in the manner provided in subsection (k) of this Code section, unless the permanency hearing is one required under subsection (j) of this Code section as a result of a recommendation that reunification services are not appropriate. The judicial citizen review panel may conduct its hearing in the same manner as it conducts a case review under subsection (k) of this Code section. The provisions of subsection (p) of this Code section concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, authority of the court, and content of the court's order are applicable to proceedings under this paragraph.

(A) The panel shall transmit its report, including its findings and recommendations and those of the Division of Family and Children Services, to the court and the parties within five days after such hearing. The report of the judicial citizen review panel shall include all the elements required in paragraphs (5) and (6) of this subsection. Any party may request a hearing on the proposed permanency plan by submitting a request in writing within five days of receiving a copy of such plan. If a hearing is not requested, the court shall review the proposed permanency plan and enter a supplemental order incorporating all elements required by paragraphs (5) and (6) of this subsection that the court finds essential in the proposed permanency plan. In the event a hearing before the court is requested on the report transmitted by the judicial citizen review panel, the court shall, after hearing evidence, enter a supplemental order incorporating all the elements required in paragraphs (5) and (6) of this subsection.

(B) If a permanency hearing is held before the court, the court shall, after hearing evidence, enter a supplemental order incorporating all elements of the proposed permanency plan required by paragraphs (5) and (6) of this subsection that the court finds essential in the proposed permanency plan.

(4) The parents, the custodian of the child, the foster parents of the child, any preadoptive parent or relative providing care for the child, and other parties shall be given written notice of a permanency hearing at least five days in advance and shall be advised that the permanency plan recommended by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services will be submitted to the court for consideration to become an order of the court. Procedural safeguards shall be applied with respect to parental rights pertaining to the removal of the child from the home of his or her parents, to a change in the child's placement, and to any determination affecting visitation privileges of parents. Procedural safeguards shall also be applied to assure that the court or the judicial citizen review panel conducting a permanency hearing, including any hearing regarding transition of the child from foster care to independent living, shall consult, in an age-appropriate manner, with the child regarding the proposed permanency or transition plan for such child. The provisions of subsection (p) of this Code section concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, authority of the court, and content of the court's order are applicable to proceedings under this paragraph.

(5) The permanency plan incorporated in the court's order shall include whether and, if applicable, when the child shall be returned to the parent or parents, referred for termination of parental rights and adoption, referred for legal guardianship, or placed permanently with a fit and willing relative. If the court finds that there is a compelling reason that it would not be in the child's best interests to be returned to the parent or parents, referred for termination of parental rights and adoption, referred for legal guardianship, or placed permanently with a fit and willing relative, then the court's order shall document the compelling reason and provide that the child should be placed in another planned permanent living arrangement as defined in the court's order. The provisions of subsection (p) of this Code section concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, authority of the court, and content of the court's order are applicable to proceedings under this paragraph.

(6) The court or judicial citizen review panel which conducts the permanency hearing shall determine, as a finding of fact, whether the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services has made reasonable efforts to finalize the permanency plan which is in effect at the time of the hearing. Further, the court or the judicial citizen review panel, if applicable, shall determine as a finding of fact whether, in the case of a child placed out of the state, the out-of-state placement continues to be appropriate and in the best interest of the child and, in the case of a child who has attained the age of 14, shall determine the services needed to assist the child to make a transition from foster care to independent living. Also, in the case of a child whose permanency plan provides that the child will not be returned to the parent, the court or judicial citizen review panel, if applicable, shall consider in-state and out-of-state placement options for such child. Such findings of fact shall be made a part of the report of the judicial citizen review panel to the court and any supplemental order entered by the court.

(7) A supplemental order of the court adopting the permanency plan shall be entered within 30 days after the court has determined that reunification efforts will not be made by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services, if applicable, or within 12 months after the child is considered to have entered foster care, whichever is first, and at least every 12 months thereafter while the child is in foster care, unless the court finds good cause why such order cannot be entered by that time. The supplemental order shall include a requirement that the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services case manager and staff, and, as appropriate, other representatives of the child, provide the child with assistance and support in developing a transition plan that is personalized at the direction of the child; includes specific options on housing, health insurance, education, local opportunities for mentors and continuing support services, and work force supports and employment services; and is as detailed as the child may elect in the 90 day period immediately prior to the date on which the child will attain 18 years of age.

(p) In advance of each review, hearing, or other proceeding to be held with respect to a child pursuant to this Code section, the court shall provide written notice or shall direct that a party shall provide written notice of such review, hearing, or other proceeding, including their right to be heard at such review, hearing, or other proceeding to the custodian of the child, to the foster parents of the child, and to any preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for the child, consistent with the form and timing of notice to parties; provided, however, that this provision shall not be construed to require a custodian, foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative caring for the child to be made a party to the review, hearing, or other proceeding solely on the basis of such notice and opportunity to be heard. At each such review, hearing, or proceeding, the court in its discretion, based upon the evidence, may enter an order accepting or rejecting any report of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services, ordering an additional evaluation, appointing a guardian ad litem, or undertaking such other review as it deems necessary and appropriate to determine the disposition that is in the child's best interest. The court's order may incorporate all or part of the report of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services. In its order the court shall include findings of fact which reflect the court's consideration of the oral and written testimony offered by the parents, the custodian of the child, the foster parents of the child, any preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for the child who are required to be provided with notice and a right to be heard in any review, hearing, or proceeding to be held with respect to the child, and the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services. A disposition may be made under the terms of this Code section only if the court finds that such disposition is in the best interest of the child.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–41 (b) to (r). In addition the amendment substituted reference to child for juvenile and provided gender neutral referents and inserted "judicial" preceding "citizens review panel".

The 2002 amendments substantially rewrote this section which prior thereto provided:

"(a) A court's order removing a child from the child's home shall be based upon a finding by that court that continuation in the home would be contrary to the welfare of the child. The court shall also determine as a finding of fact whether reasonable efforts were made by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources and any other appropriate agencies to preserve and reunify families prior to the placement of a child in foster care, to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of the child from that child's home, and to make it possible for the child to return safely to the child's home. Such findings shall also be made at every subsequent review of the court's order under this chapter.

"(1) In determining reasonable efforts to be made with respect to a child, as described in this subsection, and in making such reasonable efforts, the child's health and safety shall be the paramount concern;

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, reasonable efforts shall be made to preserve and reunify families:

"(A) Prior to the placement of a child in foster care, to prevent or eliminate the need for removing the child from the child's home; and

"(B) To make it possible for a child to return safely to the child's home;

"(3) If continuation of reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection is determined to be inconsistent with the permanency plan for the child, reasonable efforts shall be made to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanency plan and to complete whatever steps are necessary to finalize the permanent placement of the child;

"(4) Reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall not be required to be made with respect to a parent of a child if a court of competent jurisdiction has determined that:

"(A) The parent has subjected the child to aggravated circumstances which may include but need not be limited to abandonment, torture, chronic abuse, and sexual abuse;

"(B) The parent has:

"(i) Committed murder of another child of the parent;

"(ii) Committed voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent;

"(iii) Aided or abetted, attempted, conspired, or solicited to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent; or

"(iv) Committed a felony assault that results in serious bodily injury to the child or another child of the parent; or

"(C) The parental rights of the parent to a sibling have been terminated involuntarily;

"(5) If reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection are not made with respect to a child as a result of a determination made by a court of competent jurisdiction in accordance with paragraph (4) of this subsection:

"(A) A permanency hearing shall be held for the child within 30 days after such determination; and

"(B) Reasonable efforts shall be made to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanency plan and to complete whatever steps are necessary to finalize the permanent placement of the child; and

"(6) Reasonable efforts to place a child for adoption or with a legal guardian may be made concurrently with reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(b) Within 30 days of the date of removal of the child from the home and at each subsequent review of the disposition order, the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources must submit a written report to the court which shall either include a case plan for a reunification of the family or include a statement of the factual basis or bases for determining that a plan for reunification is not appropriate. Such report shall become a discrete part of the case record in a format determined by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources and shall be made available to the parents or guardian of the foster child. The contents of the report shall be determined at a meeting to be held by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources in consultation with the judicial citizen review panel, if one is designated by the court for such purpose, and the parents and children, when available. The parents shall be given written notice of the meeting at least five days in advance and shall be advised that the report will be submitted to become an order of the court. The report submitted to the court shall also contain any dissenting recommendations of the judicial citizen review panel, if applicable, and any recommendations of the parents, if such are available.

"(c) If the report contains a plan for reunification services, such plan if adopted by the court shall be in effect until modification by the court. The plan shall address each reason requiring removal and shall contain at least the following:

"(1) The purpose for which the child was placed in foster care, including a statement of the reasons why the child cannot be adequately protected at home and the harm which may occur if the child remains in the home and shall also include a description of the services offered and the services provided to prevent removal of the child from the home;

"(2) A discussion of how the plan is designed to achieve a placement in a safe setting that is the least restrictive, most family-like, and most appropriate setting available and in close proximity to the home of the parents, consistent with the best interests and special needs of the child;

"(3) A clear description of the specific actions to be taken by the parents and the specific services to be provided by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources or other appropriate agencies in order to bring about the identified changes that must be made in order for the child to be safely returned home; provided, however, that all services and actions required of the parents which are not directly related to the circumstances necessitating separation cannot be made conditions of the return of the child without further court review;

"(4) Specific time frames in which the goals of the plan are to be accomplished to fulfill the purpose of the reunification plan;

"(5) The person within the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources or other agency who is directly responsible for ensuring that the plan is implemented; and

"(6) Consideration of the advisability of a reasonable visitation schedule which allows the parents to maintain meaningful contact with their children through personal visits, telephone calls, and letters.

"(d) If the submitted report contains a proposed plan for reunification services, and no hearing is requested as provided in this Code section, the court shall enter a dispositional order or supplemental order incorporating all elements of the plan for reunification services which the court finds essential to reunification of the child with his or her family, specifying what must be accomplished by all parties before reunification of the family can be achieved. If the report contains a plan for reunification services, a copy of the report must be transmitted to the parents at the same time the report is transmitted to the court, along with written notice that the report will be made the order of the court unless, within five days from the date the copy of the report was received, the parents request a hearing before the court to review the report.

"(e) If the report submitted to the court does not contain a plan for reunification services, upon proper notice being provided to the parents, the court shall, no later than 30 days following the filing of the report, hold a permanency hearing to review the report and the determination that a plan for reunification services is not appropriate.

"(f) When a recommendation is made that reunification services are not appropriate and should not be allowed, the report shall address each reason requiring removal and shall contain at least the following:

"(1) The purpose for which the child was placed in foster care, including a statement of the reasons why the child cannot be adequately and safely protected at home and the harm which may occur if the child remains in the home and a description of the services offered and the services provided to prevent removal of the child from the home; and

"(2) A clear statement describing all of the reasons supporting a finding that reasonable efforts to reunify a child with the child's family will be detrimental to the child, and that reunification services therefore need not be provided, including specific findings as to whether any of the grounds for terminating parental rights exist, as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–94 or paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section.

"(g) At the permanency hearing held for the purpose of reviewing the determination by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources that a reunification plan is not appropriate, the representative of the Division of Family and Children Services shall notify the court whether and when it intends to proceed with termination of parental rights at that time. If the Division of Family and Children Services indicates that it does not intend to petition for the termination of parental rights, the court may appoint a guardian ad litem and charge such guardian with the duty of determining whether termination proceedings should be commenced.

"(h) When reviewing the determination by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources that a reunification plan is not appropriate, the court shall determine by clear and convincing evidence whether reasonable efforts to reunify a child with his or her family will be detrimental to the child and that reunification services, therefore, should not be provided or should be terminated. There shall be a presumption that reunification services should not be provided if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that:

"(1) The parent has unjustifiably failed to comply with a previously ordered plan designed to reunite the family;

"(2) A child has been removed from the home on at least two previous occasions and reunification services were made available on those occasions;

"(3) Any of the grounds for terminating parental rights exist, as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–94; or

"(4) Any of the circumstances set out in paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section exist, making it unnecessary to provide reasonable efforts to reunify.

"(i) If, after a judicial hearing in which the court finds that reunification is not in the best interests of the child and custody is granted to a relative, the custody order shall remain in effect until the child's eighteenth birthday unless modified following a petition for modification by a party pursuant to Code Section 15–11–40. Within 36 months of the custody order and every 36 months thereafter, a probation officer, judicial citizen review panel established by the court, or other person or agency designated by the court shall, after study or review, submit a report to the court addressing whether the relative with custody continues to be qualified to receive and care for the child. A copy of the report shall be mailed to the parents at their last known address.

"(j) Whenever the permanency plan is adoption or placement in another permanent home, the report submitted to the court shall document the steps to be taken by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources to find an adoptive family or other permanent living arrangement for the child; to place the child with an adoptive family, a fit and willing relative, a legal guardian, or in another planned permanent living arrangement; and to finalize the adoption or legal guardianship. At a minimum, such documentation shall include child specific recruitment efforts such as the use of state, regional, and national adoption exchanges including electronic exchange systems.

"(k) Except as otherwise provided by law, an order of disposition placing a deprived child in foster care under the supervision of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources shall continue in force for 12 months after the date the child is considered to have entered foster care or until sooner terminated by the court. For the purposes of this subsection, the date the child is considered to have entered foster care shall be the date of the first judicial finding that the child has been subjected to child abuse or neglect, or the date that is 60 days after the date on which the child is removed from the home, whichever is earlier. All cases of children in foster care in the custody of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources shall be initially reviewed within 90 days of the entering of the dispositional order but no later than six months following the child's placement and shall be conducted by the juvenile court judge, by an associate juvenile court judge or judge pro tempore, or by judicial citizen review panels established by the court, as the court directs, meeting such standards and using such procedures as shall be established by court rule by the Supreme Court of Georgia, with the advice and consent of the Council of Juvenile Court Judges. At the time of each review of every case of a child in foster care in the custody of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources, a representative of the Division of Family and Children Services shall notify the court whether such division intends to proceed with the termination of parental rights at that time. If such division indicates that it does not intend to petition for the termination of parental rights at that time, the court may appoint a guardian ad litem and charge such guardian with the duty of determining whether termination proceedings should be commenced. In the event the review is conducted by judicial citizen review panels, the panel shall transmit its report, including its findings and recommendations and those of such division, along with such division's proposed revised plan for reunification or other permanency plan, if necessary, to the court and the parents within five days after the review. Any party may request a hearing on the proposed revised plan in writing within five days after receiving a copy of such plan. Following such initial review, additional periodic reviews shall be held at six-month intervals. The foster parents, if any, of a child and any preadoptive parent or relative providing care for the child shall be provided with notice of and an opportunity to be heard in any review or hearing to be held with respect to the child, except that this provision shall not be construed to require that any foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative providing care for the child be made a party to such a review or hearing solely on the basis of such notice and opportunity to be heard.

"(l) If no hearing is requested or scheduled by the court on its own motion, the court shall review the proposed revised plan and enter a supplemental order incorporating a revised plan as part of its disposition in the case. In the event that a hearing is held, the court shall, after hearing evidence, enter a supplemental order incorporating all elements that the court finds essential in the proposed revised plan. The judge's supplemental order shall be entered within a reasonable time from the conclusion of the hearing or expiration of the time for the hearing to be requested and shall also provide one of the following:

"(1) That the child return to the home of his or her parents, legal guardian, or custodian with or without court imposed conditions;

"(2) That the child continue in the current custodial placement and that the current placement is appropriate for the child's needs; or

"(3) That the child continue in the current custodial placement but that the current placement plan is no longer appropriate for the child's needs and direct the department to devise another plan within available resources. The new plan must be submitted within ten days for court approval. Copies of any court approved revised plan shall be furnished to all parties.

"In the event that the judicial citizen review panel determines that the parents have unjustifiably failed to comply with the ordered plan designed to reunite the family and that such failure is significant enough to warrant consideration of termination of parental rights, the panel may make a recommendation to the guardian ad litem of the child, the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources, and the intake officer of the court that a petition for termination of parental rights should be prepared. Any such party or officer of the court shall file a petition if, upon examination, they find sufficient evidence. In the event that no guardian ad litem has been appointed when the judicial citizen review panel recommends that a petition to terminate parental rights be filed, the court shall have the authority to appoint a guardian ad litem who shall have the duty to determine whether termination proceedings should be commenced.

"(m) In the event that a child has been in foster care under the responsibility of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources for 15 of the most recent 22 months, or, if the court has determined a child to be an abandoned infant, as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–94, or has made a determination that the parent has committed murder of another child of the parent; committed voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent; aided or abetted, attempted, conspired, or solicited to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent, or committed felony assault that has resulted in serious bodily injury to the child or to another child of the parent, the department shall file a petition to terminate the parental rights of the child's parents or, if such a petition has been filed by another party, seek to be joined as a party to the petition, and, concurrently, to identify, recruit, process, and approve a qualified family for an adoption, unless, at the option of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources, the child is being cared for by a relative; the case plan documents a compelling reason for determining that filing such a petition would not be in the best interests of the child; or the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources has not provided to the family of the child, consistent with the specific time frames for the accomplishment of the case plan goals, such services deemed necessary for the safe return of the child to the child's home.

"(n) The court which made the order may extend its duration for not more than 12 months if:

"(1) A hearing is held upon motion of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources prior to the expiration of the order, which hearing shall, after the making of appropriate findings of fact, determine the permanency plan for the child. Such a permanency plan shall state whether and, if applicable, when the child shall be returned to the parent or referred for termination of parental rights and placed for adoption or referred for legal guardianship. In cases where the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources has documented to the court a compelling reason for determining that it would not be in the best interest of the child to return home, be referred for termination of parental rights, be placed for adoption, or be placed with a fit and willing relative or with a legal guardian, the permanency plan shall state that the child shall be placed in another planned permanent living arrangement. The permanency plan shall also state whether reunification services, if in effect, should be continued. With respect to a child placed out of state, procedural safeguards shall be applied as to whether the out-of-state placement continues to be appropriate and in the best interest of the child, and, in the case of a child who has attained age 16, the services needed to assist the child to make a transition from foster care to independent living. Procedural safeguards shall also be applied with respect to parental rights pertaining to the removal of the child from the home of his or her parents, to a change in the child's placement, and to any determination affecting visitation privileges of parents;

"(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and opportunity to be heard are given to the parties affected, including foster parents, if any, of a child and any preadoptive parent or relative providing care for the child except that this provision shall not be construed to require that any foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative providing care for the child be made a party to such a review or hearing solely on the basis of such notice and opportunity to be heard; and

"(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the order extended.

"(o) Except as otherwise provided by law, any other order of disposition in a proceeding involving delinquency, unruliness, or deprivation, except in an order involving the appointment of a guardian of the person or property of a child, continues in force for not more than two years. The court may sooner terminate its order or extend its duration for further periods. An order of extension may be made if:

"(1) A hearing is held prior to the expiration of the order upon motion of a party or on the court's own motion;

"(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and opportunity to be heard are given to the parties affected;

"(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the order extended; and

"(4) The extension does not exceed two years from the expiration of the prior order.

"(p) Except as provided in Code Section 15–11–70, the court may terminate an order of disposition or extension prior to its expiration, on or without an application of a party, if it appears to the court that the purposes of the order have been accomplished.

"(q) Unless otherwise provided by law, when the child reaches 21 years of age all orders affecting him or her then in force terminate and he or she is discharged from further obligation or control."

The 2003 amendment by Act 3 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a) A court's order removing a child from the child's home shall be based upon a finding by that court that continuation in the home would be contrary to the welfare of the child. If the court places custody of the child in the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources, the court shall also determine as a finding of fact whether reasonable efforts were made by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources and any other appropriate agencies to preserve and reunify families prior to the placement of a child in the custody of the Department of Human Resources, to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of the child from that child's home, and to make it possible for the child to return safely to the child's home. Such findings shall also be made at every subsequent review of the court's order under this chapter.

"(1) In determining reasonable efforts to be made with respect to a child, as described in this subsection, and in making such reasonable efforts, the child's health and safety shall be the paramount concern;

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, reasonable efforts shall be made to preserve and reunify families:

"(A) Prior to the placement of a child in the custody of the Department of Human Resources, to prevent or eliminate the need for removing the child from the child's home; and

"(B) To make it possible for a child to return safely to the child's home;

"(3) If continuation of reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection is determined to be inconsistent with the permanency plan for the child, reasonable efforts shall be made to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanency plan and to complete whatever steps are necessary to finalize the permanent placement of the child;

"(4) Reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall not be required to be made with respect to a parent of a child if a court of competent jurisdiction has determined that:

"(A) The parent has subjected the child to aggravated circumstances which may include but need not be limited to abandonment, torture, chronic abuse, and sexual abuse;

"(B) The parent has:

"(i) Committed murder of another child of the parent;

"(ii) Committed voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent;

"(iii) Aided or abetted, attempted, conspired, or solicited to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent; or

"(iv) Committed a felony assault that results in serious bodily injury to the child or another child of the parent; or

"(C) The parental rights of the parent to a sibling have been terminated involuntarily;

"(5) If reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection are not made with respect to a child as a result of a determination made by a court of competent jurisdiction in accordance with paragraph (4) of this subsection:

"(A) A permanency hearing in accordance with subsection (o) of this Code section shall be held for the child within 30 days after such determination; and

"(B) Reasonable efforts shall be made to place the child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanency plan and to complete whatever steps are necessary to finalize the permanent placement of the child; and

"(6) Reasonable efforts to place a child for adoption or with a legal guardian may be made concurrently with reasonable efforts of the type described in paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(b) Within 30 days of the date a child who is placed in the custody of the Department of Human Resources is removed from the home and at each subsequent review of the disposition order, the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources must submit a written report to the court which shall either include a case plan for a reunification of the family or include a statement of the factual basis or bases for determining that a plan for reunification is not appropriate. Such report shall become a discrete part of the case record in a format determined by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources and shall be made available to the parents or guardian of the foster child. The contents of the report shall be determined at a meeting to be held by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources in consultation with the judicial citizen review panel, if one is designated by the court for such purpose, and the parents and children, when available. The parents shall be given written notice of the meeting at least five days in advance and shall be advised that the report will be submitted to become an order of the court. The report submitted to the court shall also contain any dissenting recommendations of the judicial citizen review panel, if applicable, and any recommendations of the parents, if such are available.

"(c) If the report contains a plan for reunification services, such plan if adopted by the court shall be in effect until modification by the court. The plan shall address each reason requiring removal and shall contain at least the following:

"(1) The purpose for which the child was placed in foster care, including a statement of the reasons why the child cannot be adequately protected at home and the harm which may occur if the child remains in the home and shall also include a description of the services offered and the services provided to prevent removal of the child from the home;

"(2) A discussion of how the plan is designed to achieve a placement in a safe setting that is the least restrictive, most family-like, and most appropriate setting available and in close proximity to the home of the parents, consistent with the best interests and special needs of the child;

"(3) A clear description of the specific actions to be taken by the parents and the specific services to be provided by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources or other appropriate agencies in order to bring about the identified changes that must be made in order for the child to be safely returned home; provided, however, that all services and actions required of the parents which are not directly related to the circumstances necessitating separation cannot be made conditions of the return of the child without further court review;

"(4) Specific time frames in which the goals of the plan are to be accomplished to fulfill the purpose of the reunification plan;

"(5) The person within the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources or other agency who is directly responsible for ensuring that the plan is implemented; and

"(6) Consideration of the advisability of a reasonable visitation schedule which allows the parents to maintain meaningful contact with their children through personal visits, telephone calls, and letters.

"(d) If the submitted report contains a proposed plan for reunification services, and no hearing is requested as provided in this Code section, the court shall enter a dispositional order or supplemental order incorporating all elements of the plan for reunification services which the court finds essential to reunification of the child with his or her family, specifying what must be accomplished by all parties before reunification of the family can be achieved. If the report contains a plan for reunification services, a copy of the report must be transmitted to the parents at the same time the report is transmitted to the court, along with written notice that the report will be made the order of the court unless, within five days from the date the copy of the report was received, the parents request a hearing before the court to review the report.

"(e) If the report submitted to the court does not contain a plan for reunification services, upon proper notice being provided to the parents, the court shall, no later than 30 days following the filing of the report, hold a hearing to review the report and the determination that a plan for reunification services is not appropriate.

"(f) When a recommendation is made that reunification services are not appropriate and should not be allowed, the report shall address each reason requiring removal and shall contain at least the following:

"(1) The purpose for which the child was placed in foster care, including a statement of the reasons why the child cannot be adequately and safely protected at home and the harm which may occur if the child remains in the home and a description of the services offered and the services provided to prevent removal of the child from the home; and

"(2) A clear statement describing all of the reasons supporting a finding that reasonable efforts to reunify a child with the child's family will be detrimental to the child, and that reunification services therefore need not be provided, including specific findings as to whether any of the grounds for terminating parental rights exist, as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–94 or paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section.

"(g) At the hearing held for the purpose of reviewing the determination by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources that a reunification plan is not appropriate, the representative of the Division of Family and Children Services shall notify the court whether and when it intends to proceed with termination of parental rights at that time. If the Division of Family and Children Services indicates that it does not intend to petition for the termination of parental rights, the court may appoint a guardian ad litem and charge such guardian with the duty of determining whether termination proceedings should be commenced.

"(h) When reviewing the determination by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources that a reunification plan is not appropriate, the court shall determine by clear and convincing evidence whether reasonable efforts to reunify a child with his or her family will be detrimental to the child and that reunification services, therefore, should not be provided or should be terminated. There shall be a presumption that reunification services should not be provided if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that:

"(1) The parent has unjustifiably failed to comply with a previously ordered plan designed to reunite the family;

"(2) A child has been removed from the home on at least two previous occasions and reunification services were made available on those occasions;

"(3) Any of the grounds for terminating parental rights exist, as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–94; or

"(4) Any of the circumstances set out in paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section exist, making it unnecessary to provide reasonable efforts to reunify.

"(i) If, after a judicial hearing in which the court finds that reunification is not in the best interests of the child and custody is granted to a relative, the custody order shall remain in effect until the child's eighteenth birthday unless modified following a petition for modification by a party pursuant to Code Section 15–11–40. Within 36 months of the custody order and every 36 months thereafter, a probation officer, judicial citizen review panel established by the court, or other person or agency designated by the court shall, after study or review, submit a report to the court addressing whether the relative with custody continues to be qualified to receive and care for the child. A copy of the report shall be mailed to the parents at their last known address.

"(j) At the hearing required by subsection (e) of this Code section, the court shall hold a permanency hearing in accordance with subsection (o) of this Code section and shall consider and incorporate a permanency plan for the child in its order which shall comply with subsection (o) of this Code section.

"(k) Except as otherwise provided by law, an order of disposition placing a deprived child in foster care under the supervision of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources shall continue in force for 12 months after the date the child is considered to have entered foster care or until sooner terminated by the court. For the purposes of this Code section, the date the child is considered to have entered foster care shall be the date of the first judicial finding that the child has been subjected to child abuse or neglect, or the date that is 60 days after the date on which the child is removed from the home, whichever is earlier. All cases of children in foster care in the custody of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources shall be initially reviewed within 90 days of the entering of the dispositional order but no later than six months following the child's placement and shall be conducted by the juvenile court judge, by an associate juvenile court judge or judge pro tempore, or by judicial citizen review panels established by the court, as the court directs, meeting such standards and using such procedures as shall be established by court rule by the Supreme Court of Georgia, with the advice and consent of the Council of Juvenile Court Judges. At the time of each review of every case of a child in foster care in the custody of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources, a representative of the Division of Family and Children Services shall notify the court whether such division intends to proceed with the termination of parental rights at that time. If such division indicates that it does not intend to petition for the termination of parental rights at that time, the court may appoint a guardian ad litem and charge such guardian with the duty of determining whether termination proceedings should be commenced. In the event the review is conducted by judicial citizen review panels, the panel shall transmit its report, including its findings and recommendations and those of such division, along with such division's proposed revised plan for reunification or other permanency plan, if necessary, to the court and the parents within five days after the review. Any party may request a hearing on the proposed revised plan in writing within five days after receiving a copy of such plan. Following such initial review, additional periodic reviews shall be held at six-month intervals. The foster parents, if any, of a child and any preadoptive parent or relative providing care for the child shall be provided with notice of and an opportunity to be heard in any review or hearing to be held with respect to the child, except that this provision shall not be construed to require that any foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative providing care for the child be made a party to such a review or hearing solely on the basis of such notice and opportunity to be heard.

"(l) If no hearing is requested or scheduled by the court on its own motion, the court shall review the proposed revised plan and enter a supplemental order incorporating a revised plan as part of its disposition in the case. In the event that a hearing is held, the court shall, after hearing evidence, enter a supplemental order incorporating all elements that the court finds essential in the proposed revised plan. The judge's supplemental order shall be entered within a reasonable time from the conclusion of the hearing or expiration of the time for the hearing to be requested and shall also provide one of the following:

"(1) That the child return to the home of his or her parents, legal guardian, or custodian with or without court imposed conditions;

"(2) That the child continue in the current custodial placement and that the current placement is appropriate for the child's needs; or

"(3) That the child continue in the current custodial placement but that the current placement plan is no longer appropriate for the child's needs and direct the department to devise another plan within available resources. The new plan must be submitted within ten days for court approval. Copies of any court approved revised plan shall be furnished to all parties.

"In the event that the judicial citizen review panel determines that the parents have unjustifiably failed to comply with the ordered plan designed to reunite the family and that such failure is significant enough to warrant consideration of termination of parental rights, the panel may make a recommendation to the guardian ad litem of the child, the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources, and the intake officer of the court that a petition for termination of parental rights should be prepared. Any such party or officer of the court shall file a petition if, upon examination, they find sufficient evidence. In the event that no guardian ad litem has been appointed when the judicial citizen review panel recommends that a petition to terminate parental rights be filed, the court shall have the authority to appoint a guardian ad litem who shall have the duty to determine whether termination proceedings should be commenced.

"(m) In the event that a child has been in foster care under the responsibility of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources for 15 of the most recent 22 months, or, if the court has determined a child to be an abandoned infant, as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–94, or has made a determination that the parent has committed murder of another child of the parent; committed voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent; aided or abetted, attempted, conspired, or solicited to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of the parent, or committed felony assault that has resulted in serious bodily injury to the child or to another child of the parent, the department shall file a petition to terminate the parental rights of the child's parents or, if such a petition has been filed by another party, seek to be joined as a party to the petition, and, concurrently, to identify, recruit, process, and approve a qualified family for an adoption, unless, at the option of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources, the child is being cared for by a relative; the case plan documents a compelling reason for determining that filing such a petition would not be in the best interests of the child; or the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources has not provided to the family of the child, consistent with the specific time frames for the accomplishment of the case plan goals, such services deemed necessary for the safe return of the child to the child's home.

"(n) The court which made the order may extend its duration for not more than 12 months if:

"(1) A hearing is held upon motion of the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources prior to the expiration of the order;

"(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and opportunity to be heard are given to the parties affected; and

"(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the order extended.

"(o) With respect to each child in the custody of the Department of Human Resources, a permanency hearing shall be held no later than 30 days after the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources has submitted a written report to the court which does not contain a plan for reunification services as provided in subsection (j) of this Code section, or no later than 12 months after the child is considered to have entered foster care, whichever comes first. Thereafter, a permanency hearing shall be held not less frequently than every 12 months during the time the child continues in the custody of the Department of Human Resources. A permanency hearing may be held by the court at the time of the hearing on a motion to extend custody permitted by subsection (n) of this Code section.

"(1) At the time of the permanency hearing, the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources shall submit for the court's consideration a report recommending a permanency plan for the child which shall include whether and, if applicable, when the child shall be returned to the parent or parents; referred for termination of parental rights and adoption; referred for legal guardianship; placed permanently with a fit and willing relative; or, in the case where the division has provided a compelling reason that one of the foregoing options would not be in the best interest of the child, placed in another planned permanent living arrangement. The report shall include documentation of the steps to be taken by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources to finalize the permanent placement of the child. When the permanency plan recommended is referral for termination of parental rights and adoption, such report shall include child specific recruitment efforts such as the use of state, regional, and national adoption exchanges, including electronic exchange systems.

"(2) The permanency hearing may be conducted as the court directs by the juvenile court judge or by an associate juvenile court judge or judge pro tempore. The court may also direct that the permanency hearing be conducted by a judicial citizen review panel established by the court in the manner provided in subsection (k) of this Code section, unless the permanency hearing is one required under subsection (j) of this Code section as a result of a recommendation that reunification services are not appropriate. The judicial citizen review panel may conduct its hearing in the same manner as it conducts a case review under subsection (k) of this Code section.

"(A) In the event that the permanency hearing is conducted by a judicial citizen review panel, the panel shall transmit its report, including its findings and recommendations and those of the Division of Family and Children Services, to the court and the parties within five days after such hearing. The report of the judicial citizen review panel shall include all the elements required in paragraphs (4) and (5) of this subsection. Any party may request a hearing on the proposed permanency plan by submitting a request in writing within five days of receiving a copy of such plan. If a hearing is not requested, the court shall review the proposed permanency plan and enter a supplemental order incorporating all elements required by paragraphs (4) and (5) of this subsection. In the event a hearing before the court is requested on the report transmitted by the judicial citizen review panel, the court shall, after hearing evidence, enter a supplemental order incorporating all the elements required in paragraphs (4) and (5) of this subsection.

"(B) If a permanency hearing is held before the court, the court shall, after hearing evidence, enter a supplemental order incorporating all elements of the proposed permanency plan required by paragraphs (4) and (5) of this subsection.

"(3) The parents and other parties shall be given written notice of a permanency hearing at least five days in advance and shall be advised that the permanency plan recommended by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources will be submitted to become an order of the court. Procedural safeguards shall be applied with respect to parental rights pertaining to the removal of the child from the home of his or her parents, to a change in the child's placement, and to any determination affecting visitation privileges of parents. In addition, the foster parents, if any, of a child and any preadoptive parent or relative providing care for the child shall receive written notice of the permanency hearing at least five days in advance and shall be given an opportunity to be heard; provided, however, that this provision shall not be construed to require a foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative caring for the child to be made a party to the hearing solely on the basis of such notice and opportunity to be heard.

"(4) The permanency plan incorporated in the court's order shall include whether and, if applicable, when the child shall be returned to the parent or parents, referred for termination of parental rights and adoption, referred for legal guardianship, or placed permanently with a fit and willing relative. If the court finds that there is a compelling reason that it would not be in the child's best interests to be returned to the parent or parents, referred for termination of parental rights and adoption, referred for legal guardianship, or placed permanently with a fit and willing relative, then the court's order shall document the compelling reason and provide that the child should be placed in another planned permanent living arrangement.

"(5) The court or judicial citizen review panel which conducts the permanency hearing shall determine, as a finding of fact, whether the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources has made reasonable efforts to finalize the permanency plan which is in effect at the time of the hearing. Further, the court or the judicial citizen review panel, if applicable, shall determine as a finding of fact whether, in the case of a child placed out of the state, the out-of-state placement continues to be appropriate and in the best interest of the child and, in the case of a child who has attained the age of 14, shall determine the services needed to assist the child to make a transition from foster care to independent living. Such findings of fact shall be made a part of the report of the judicial citizen review panel to the court and any supplemental order entered by the court.

"(6) A supplemental order of the court adopting the permanency plan must be entered within 30 days after the court has determined that reunification efforts will not be made by the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Resources, if applicable, or within 12 months after the child is considered to have entered foster care, whichever is first, and at least every 12 months thereafter while the child is in foster care, unless the court finds good cause why such order cannot be entered by that time."

The 2004 amendment by Act 596, in subpar. (a)(4)(B), inserted new div. (ii) and redesignated former divs. (ii), (iii), and (iv) as new divs. (iii), (iv), and (v) respectively; and in subsec. (m), inserted "been convicted of the murder of the other parent of the child;" following "murder of another child of the parent;".

The 2007 amendment by Act 248, in par. (4) of subsec. (o), inserted "Procedural safeguards shall also be applied to assure that the court or the judicial citizen review panel conducting a permanency hearing, including any hearing regarding transition of the child from foster care to independent living, shall consult, in an age–appropriate manner, with the child regarding the proposed permanency or transition plan for such child."; in par. (6) of subsec. (o), inserted "Also, in the case of a child whose permanency plan provides that the child will not be returned to the parent, the court or judicial citizen review panel, if applicable, shall consider in–state and out–of–state placement options for such child." and deleted "The provisions of subsection (p) of this Code section concerning notice, opportunity to be heard, authority of the court, and content of the court's order are applicable to proceedings under this paragraph." following "entered by the court." at the end of the paragraph; and, in subsec. (p), substituted "review, hearing, or other proceeding" for "review or hearing" three times in the first clause of the first sentence and once in the fourth sentence, and substituted "review, hearing, or other proceeding" for "hearing" in the proviso clause of the first sentence and in the second sentence.

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Human Services" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

The 2010 amendment by Act 469, in subsec. (c), added pars. (7) through (9); in subsec. (f), added par. (3); and in subsec. (o), in the first sentence of par. (7) replaced "must" with "shall", and added new second sentence.

§ 15–11–58.1. Proceedings involving deprivation of children

(a) Except as otherwise provided by law, an order of disposition in a proceeding involving deprivation, except an order involving the appointment of a guardian of the person or property of a child, continues in force for not more than two years. The court may sooner terminate its order or extend its duration for further periods. An order of extension may be made if:

(1) A hearing is held prior to the expiration of the order upon motion of a party or on the court's own motion;

(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and opportunity to be heard are given to the parties affected;

(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the order extended; and

(4) The extension does not exceed two years from the expiration of the prior order.

(b) The court may terminate an order of disposition of a child adjudicated as deprived or an extension of such a disposition order prior to its expiration, on or without an application of a party, if it appears to the court that the purposes of the order have been accomplished.

(c) Unless otherwise provided by law, when a child adjudicated as deprived reaches 18 years of age all orders affecting him or her then in force terminate and he or she is discharged from further obligation or control.

Part 7

Delinquent and Unruly Children

§ 15–11–62. Child 13 to 17 years of age convicted of certain violent crimes; confinement in youth confinement unit

(a) A child 13 to 17 years of age convicted of any offense enumerated in subparagraph (b)(2)(A) of Code Section 15–11–28 shall be committed to the custody of the Department of Corrections; provided, however, that any child in the custody of the Department of Corrections shall be housed in a designated youth confinement unit until reaching the age of 17 notwithstanding that such child was tried and convicted as an adult in superior court. Any designated youth confinement unit in which a child is housed shall be designed to ensure that children are at all times housed separately from any adult offender incarcerated in the facility in which such youth confinement unit is located and shall be designed to facilitate rehabilitation of such children, which shall mean that a youth confinement unit shall be of a nondormitory design whenever possible and whenever such facilities become available and staffed by personnel who have received specialized training in the field of juvenile justice. All designated youth confinement units shall provide to children 13 to 17 years of age who have been sentenced to such units as a result of a conviction in superior court as an adult of an offense enumerated in subparagraph (b)(2)(A) of Code Section 15–11–28 life skills training, academic or vocational training, and substance abuse and violence prevention counseling to the extent that appropriations are available for such activities.

(b) When given legal custody over a child for confinement in a youth confinement unit as provided under this Code section, the Department of Corrections shall have:

(1) The right of physical possession of the child;

(2) The right and duty to protect, train, and discipline the child;

(3) The responsibility to provide the child with food, clothing, shelter, and education;

(4) The right to determine the facility in which the child shall be confined; and

(5) The right and duty to provide or obtain for a child medical, hospital, psychiatric, surgical, or dental care or services as may be considered appropriate and necessary by competent medical authority without securing prior consent of parents or legal guardians.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–5.1. In addition the amendment substituted reference to child for juvenile or youth and provided gender neutral referents.

§ 15–11–63. Designated felony acts; restrictive custody

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "A carefully arranged and monitored home visit" means a home visit during which a child is monitored by appropriate personnel of the Department of Juvenile Justice designated pursuant to regulations of the commissioner of juvenile justice.

(2) "Designated felony act" means an act which:

(A) Constitutes a second or subsequent offense under subsection (b) of Code Section 16–11–132 if committed by a child 13 to 17 years of age;

(B) If done by an adult, would be one or more of the following crimes:

(i) Kidnapping or arson in the first degree, if done by a child 13 or more years of age;

(ii) Aggravated assault, arson in the second degree, aggravated battery, robbery, armed robbery not involving a firearm, or battery in violation of Code Section 16–5–23.1 if the victim is a teacher or other school personnel, if done by a child 13 or more years of age;

(iii) Attempted murder or attempted kidnapping, if done by a child 13 or more years of age;

(iv) Reserved;

(v) Hijacking a motor vehicle, if done by a child 13 or more years of age;

(vi) Any violation of Code Section 16–7–82, 16–7–84, or 16–7–86 if done by a child 13 or more years of age;

(vii) Any other act which, if done by an adult, would be a felony, if the child committing the act has three times previously been adjudicated delinquent for acts which, if done by an adult, would have been felonies;

(viii) Any violation of Code Section 16–13–31, relating to trafficking in cocaine, illegal drugs, marijuana, or methamphetamine;

(ix) Any criminal violation of Code Section 16–14–4, relating to racketeering;

(x) Any violation of Code Section 16–10–52, relating to escape, if the child involved in the commission of such act has been previously adjudicated to have committed a designated felony; or

(xi) Any violation of Code Section 16–7–2;

(C) Constitutes a second or subsequent adjudication of delinquency based upon a violation of Code Section 16–7–85 or 16–7–87;

(C.1) Constitutes any violation of Code Section 16–15–4, relating to criminal street gangs;

(C.2) Constitutes a second or subsequent adjudication of delinquency based on a violation of Code Section 16–11–127.1 or is a first violation of Code Section 16–11–127.1 involving:

(i) Any weapon, as such term is defined in Code Section 16–11–127.1, together with an assault;

(ii) A firearm as defined in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of Code Section 16–11–131; or

(iii) A dangerous weapon or machine gun as defined in Code Section 16–11–121;

(D) Constitutes an offense within the exclusive jurisdiction of the superior court pursuant to subparagraph (b)(2)(A) of Code Section 15–11–28 which is transferred by the superior court to the juvenile court for adjudication pursuant to subparagraph (b)(2)(B) of Code Section 15–11–28 or which is transferred by the district attorney to the juvenile court for adjudication pursuant to subparagraph (b)(2)(C) of Code Section 15–11–28; or

(E) Constitutes a second or subsequent violation of Code Sections 16–8–2 through 16–8–9, relating to theft, if the property which was the subject of the theft was a motor vehicle.

(3) "Intensive supervision" means the monitoring of a child's activities on a more frequent basis than regular aftercare supervision, pursuant to regulations of the commissioner of juvenile justice.

(b) Where a child is found to have committed a designated felony act, the order of disposition shall be made within 20 days of the conclusion of the dispositional hearing and shall include a finding based on a preponderance of the evidence as to whether, for the purposes of this Code section, the child does or does not require restrictive custody under this Code section, in connection with which the court shall make specific written findings of fact as to each of the elements set forth in paragraphs (1) through (5) of subsection (c) of this Code section as related to the particular child. If the court finds that restrictive custody under this Code section is not required, the order of disposition shall be as otherwise provided in this article. If the court finds that restrictive custody is required, it shall continue the proceeding and enter an order of disposition for restrictive custody. Every order under this Code section shall be a dispositional order, shall be made after a dispositional hearing, and shall state the grounds for the order.

(c) In determining whether restrictive custody is required, the court shall consider:

(1) The needs and best interests of the child;

(2) The record and background of the child;

(3) The nature and circumstances of the offense, including whether any injury involved was inflicted by the child or another participant;

(4) The need for protection of the community; and

(5) The age and physical condition of the victim.

(d) Notwithstanding subsection (c) of this Code section, the court shall order restrictive custody in any case where the child is found to have committed a designated felony act in which the child inflicted serious physical injury upon another person who is 62 years of age or more.

(e) When the order is for restrictive custody in the case of a child found to have committed a designated felony act:

(1) The order shall provide that:

(A) The child shall be placed in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice for an initial period of five years;

(B) The child shall initially be confined in a youth development center for a period set by the order, to be not less than 12 nor more than 60 months; provided, however, that time spent in secure detention prior to placement in a youth development center shall be counted toward the period set by the order; and provided, further, that where the order of the court is made in compliance with subsection (f) of this Code section, the child shall initially be confined in a youth development center for 18 months;

(C) After the period set under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, the child shall be placed under intensive supervision for a period of 12 months; and

(D) The child may not be released from a youth development center or transferred to a nonsecure facility during the period provided in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph nor may the child be released from intensive supervision during the period provided in subparagraph (C) of this paragraph, unless by court order. No home visits shall be permitted during the first six-month period of confinement in a youth development center unless authorized by the court except for emergency visits for medical treatment or severe illness or death in the family. All home visits must be carefully arranged and monitored while a child is confined in a youth development center, whether such confinement is pursuant to a court order or otherwise;

(2) During the placement or any extension thereof:

(A) After the expiration of the period provided in subparagraph (C) of paragraph (1) of this subsection, the child shall not be released from intensive supervision without the written approval of the commissioner of juvenile justice or such commissioner's designated deputy;

(B) While in a youth development center, the child may be permitted to participate in all youth development center services and programs and shall be eligible to receive special medical and treatment services, regardless of the time of confinement in the youth development center. After the first six months of confinement in a youth development center, a child may be eligible to participate in youth development center sponsored programs including community work programs and sheltered workshops under the general supervision of a youth development center staff outside of the youth development center; and, in cooperation and coordination with the Department of Human Services, the child may be allowed to participate in state sponsored programs for evaluation and services under the Division of Rehabilitation Services of the Department of Labor and the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities;

(C) The child shall not be discharged from the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice unless a motion therefor is granted by the court, which motion shall not be made prior to the expiration of one year of custody; and

(D) Unless otherwise specified in the order, the Department of Juvenile Justice shall report in writing to the court not less than once every six months during the placement on the status, adjustment, and progress of the child; and

(3) Upon the expiration of the initial period of placement in a youth development center, or any extension thereof, the placement may be extended on motion by the Department of Juvenile Justice, after a dispositional hearing, for an additional period of 12 months, provided that no initial placement or extension of custody under this Code section may continue beyond the individual's twenty-first birthday.

(f) When the order is for restrictive custody in the case of a child found to have committed any designated felony act and such child has been found by a court to have committed a designated felony act on a prior occasion, regardless of the age of the child at the time of commission of such prior act, the order of the court shall be made pursuant to subparagraph (e)(1)(B) of this Code section.

(g) The Department of Juvenile Justice shall retain the power to continue the confinement of the child in a youth development center or other program beyond the periods specified by the court within the term of the order.

(h) Any court making a finding or adjudication that a child has committed a designated felony act shall identify the school last attended by such child and the school which such child intends to attend and shall transmit a copy of such adjudication or finding to the principals of the school which the child last attended and the school which the child intends to attend within 15 days of the adjudication or finding. Such information shall be subject to notification, distribution, and requirements as provided in Code Section 20–2–671.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment by Act 467, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–37. In addition the amendment substituted reference to child for juvenile or youth and provided gender neutral referents.

The 2000 amendment by Act 751 modified language to reflect the transfer of division of rehabilitation services from department of human resources to department of labor.

The 2002 amendment in subsec. (e)(2)(B) substituted for "Division of Mental Health, Mental Retardation, and Substance Abuse" the words Division of Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Addictive Diseases of the Department of Human Resources.

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 in par. (e)(2), substituted "cooperation and coordination with the Department of Human Services" for "cooperation and coordination with the Department of Human Resources" and "Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities" for "Division of Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Addictive Diseases of the Department of Human Resources" in subpar. (B).

The 2010 amendment by Act 465, in subsec. (a), par. (2), deleted and reserved subpar. (B), subdiv. (iv) which prior thereto had read "The carrying or possession of a weapon in violation of subsection (b) of Code Section 16–11–127.1", and added subpar. (C.2).

The 2010 amendment by Act 674, in subsec. (a), par. (2), subpar. (B), added div. (xi); in subsec. (e), par. (1), subpar. (B), deleted "subsequent to the date of the order and" after "secure detention".

§ 15–11–64. Termination of proceedings relating to a runaway child

Any proceeding or other processes or actions relating to a child in which the sole allegation is that the child deserted without cause the child's home or place of abode for the first time shall be terminated or dismissed upon the request of the parent or legal custodian of the child.

§ 15–11–64.1. Conduct of delinquency proceeding by district attorney or staff

In any delinquency proceeding in which a petition has been filed, the district attorney or a member of the district attorney's staff shall conduct the proceedings on behalf of the state if requested to do so by the juvenile court if the state is not otherwise represented by a solicitor of the juvenile court. Notwithstanding any other provisions of law to the contrary, in any delinquency proceedings conducted by the district attorney or a member of the district attorney's staff, the district attorney or staff member shall be entitled to complete access to all court files, probation files, hearing transcripts, delinquency reports, and any other juvenile court records which may be of assistance to the district attorney or staff member in the conduct of such delinquency proceedings. It shall be the duty of the clerk and probation officers of the juvenile court to assist the district attorney or staff member in obtaining any such files, transcripts, reports, or records, or copies thereof, as may be requested by the district attorney or staff member. In any such case, the petition shall be dismissed by the court upon the motion of the district attorney setting forth that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant the further conduct of the proceeding.

Laws 2002, p. 1162, § 10.

§ 15–11–64.2. Victim impact form in delinquency proceeding

(a) In any delinquency proceeding in which a petition has been filed, the juvenile court shall notify any victim of a delinquent child's alleged delinquent act that the victim may submit a victim impact form as provided in Code Section 17–10–1.1 if:

(1) The allegedly delinquent child, in conduct which would constitute a felony if committed by an adult, caused physical, psychological, or economic injury to the victim; or

(2) The allegedly delinquent child, in conduct which would constitute a misdemeanor if committed by an adult, caused serious physical injury or death to the victim.

(b) The provisions of subsection (e) of Code Section 17–10–1.1 shall apply to the use and disclosure of the victim impact form.

(c) The victim may complete the victim impact form and submit such form to the juvenile court. If the victim is unable to do so because of such victim's mental, emotional, or physical incapacity, or because of such victim's age, the victim's attorney or a family member may complete the victim impact form on behalf of the victim.

(d) Prior to the imposition of a dispositional order for an allegedly delinquent child, the juvenile court shall permit the victim to address the juvenile court and present any information or opinions that concern the victim or the victim's family, including the impact of the delinquent act on the victim, the harm caused by the allegedly delinquent child and the delinquent act, the need for restitution, or the terms of the disposition order. Such statement shall be given in the presence of the allegedly delinquent child and shall be subject to cross-examination. The prosecuting attorney and the allegedly delinquent child shall be afforded the opportunity to explain, support, or deny the victim's statement. It shall be the duty of the juvenile court to advise the victim of the right to address the court prior to the entry of a dispositional order for a delinquent child. The victim shall have the discretion to exercise the right to be present and be heard at the dispositional hearing. If the victim is voluntarily absent from the dispositional hearing, such absence shall constitute a waiver of the rights provided by this subsection.

(e) Except as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section, no disposition of the child shall be invalidated because of failure to comply with the provisions of this Code section. This Code section shall not be construed to create any cause of action or any right of appeal on behalf of the victim, the state, or the accused; provided, however, that if the court intentionally fails to comply with this Code section, the victim may file a complaint with the Judicial Qualifications Commission.

Laws 2002, p. 1162, § 10; Laws 2010, Act 403, § 1, eff. July 1, 2010.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2010 amendment by Act 403 rewrote the section which had read as follows:

"(a) In any delinquency proceeding in which a petition has been filed, the juvenile court shall notify any victim of a delinquent child's alleged offense that the victim may submit a victim impact statement if:

"(1) The allegedly delinquent child, in conduct which would constitute a felony if committed by an adult, caused physical, psychological, or economic injury to the victim; or

"(2) The allegedly delinquent child, in conduct which would constitute a misdemeanor if committed by an adult, caused serious physical injury or death to the victim.

"(b) A victim impact statement submitted by a victim shall be attached to the case file and may be used by the district attorney or the judge during any stage of the proceedings against the child involving predisposition, disposition, or determination of restitution.

"(c) A victim impact statement shall:

"(1) Identify the victim of the offense and the perpetrator;

"(2) Itemize any economic loss suffered by the victim as a result of the offense;

"(3) Identify any physical injury suffered by the victim as a result of the offense along with its seriousness and permanence;

"(4) Describe any change in the victim's personal welfare or familial relationships as a result of the offense;

"(5) Identify any request for psychological services initiated by the victim or the victim's family as a result of the offense; and

"(6) Contain any other information related to the impact of the offense upon the victim that the court requires.

"(d) The victim may complete the victim impact statement form and submit such form to the juvenile court. If the victim is unable to do so because of such victim's mental, emotional, or physical incapacity, or because of such victim's age, the victim's attorney or a family member may complete the victim impact statement form on behalf of the victim.

"(e) The court shall, in the manner prescribed by rule of court, provide the child with a copy of the victim impact statement within a reasonable time prior to any hearing at which it is to be considered and allow the child to have the opportunity to rebut the victim's written statements.

"(f) No disposition of the child shall be invalidated because of failure to comply with the provisions of this subsection. This subsection shall not be construed to create any cause of action or any right of appeal on behalf of any person."

§ 15–11–65. Dispositional hearing for delinquent or unruly child; evidence; continuances; scheduling

(a) Dispositional hearing for delinquent or unruly child. If the court finds on proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the child committed the acts by reason of which he or she is alleged to be delinquent or unruly, it shall proceed immediately or at a later time to conduct a dispositional hearing for the purpose of hearing evidence as to whether the child is in need of treatment, rehabilitation, or supervision and shall make and file its findings thereon. If the court finds that the allegations of delinquency or unruly conduct have not been established, it shall dismiss the petition and order the child discharged from any detention or other restriction theretofore ordered in relation to the allegations. If the child is to be held in custody at a detention facility between the adjudicatory hearing and the dispositional hearing, the court shall conduct the dispositional hearing within 30 days of the adjudicatory hearing unless the court makes and files written findings of fact explaining the need for the delay. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, evidence sufficient to warrant a finding that acts have been committed which constitute a felony is also sufficient to sustain a finding that the child is in need of treatment or rehabilitation. If the court finds that the child is not in need of treatment, rehabilitation, or supervision, it shall dismiss the proceeding and discharge the child from any detention or other restriction theretofore ordered.

(b) Evidence. In dispositional hearings under subsection (a) of this Code section and in all proceedings involving custody of a child, all information helpful in determining the questions presented, including oral and written reports, may be received by the court and relied upon to the extent of its probative value even though not otherwise competent in the hearing on the petition. The parties or their counsel shall be afforded an opportunity upon request to examine and controvert written reports so received and to cross-examine individuals making the reports, except that portions of such reports not relied on by the court in reaching its decision which, if revealed, would be prejudicial to the interests of the child or any party to the proceeding may be withheld in the court's discretion. Confidential sources of information need not be disclosed.

(c) Continuances; scheduling. On its own motion or that of a party, the court may continue the hearings under this Code section for a reasonable period to receive reports and other evidence bearing on the disposition or the child's need for treatment or rehabilitation. In this event, the court shall make an appropriate order for detention of the child or for the child's release from detention subject to supervision of the court during the period of the continuance. In scheduling investigations and hearings, the court shall give priority to proceedings in which a child is in detention or has otherwise been removed from his or her home before an order of disposition has been made.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–33(c) and (d). In addition the amendment provided gender neutral referents.

The 2002 amendment rewrote subsec. (a) and added subsec. (c). Prior to amendment subsec. (a) provided:

"(a) Dispositional hearing for delinquent or unruly child. If the court finds on proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the child committed the acts by reason of which he or she is alleged to be delinquent or unruly, it shall proceed immediately or at a later time to conduct a dispositional hearing for the purpose of hearing evidence as to whether the child is in need of treatment, rehabilitation, or supervision and shall make and file its findings thereon. If the child is to be held in custody at a detention facility between the adjudicatory hearing and the dispositional hearing, the court shall conduct the dispositional hearing within 30 days of the adjudicatory hearing. If the dispositional hearing is conducted more than 30 days after the adjudicatory hearing, the court shall make and file written findings of fact explaining the need for the delay. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, evidence sufficient to warrant a finding that acts have been committed which constitute a felony is also sufficient to sustain a finding that the child is in need of treatment or rehabilitation. If the court finds that the child is not in need of treatment, rehabilitation, or supervision, it shall dismiss the proceeding and discharge the child from any detention or other restriction theretofore ordered."

§ 15–11–66. Disposition of delinquent child

(a) At the conclusion of the dispositional hearing provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–65, if the child is found to have committed a delinquent act and is subsequently determined to be in need of treatment or rehabilitation, the court may make any of the following orders of disposition best suited to the child's treatment, rehabilitation, and welfare:

(1) Any order authorized by Code Section 15–11–55 for the disposition of a deprived child;

(2) An order placing the child on probation under conditions and limitations the court prescribes, under the supervision of:

(A) The probation officer of the court or the court of another state as provided in Code Section 15–11–89;

(B) Any public agency authorized by law to receive and provide care for the child; or

(C) The chief executive officer of any community rehabilitation center acknowledging in writing such officer's willingness to accept the responsibility for the supervision of the child;

(3) An order placing the child in an institution, camp, or other facility for delinquent children operated under the direction of the court or other local public authority;

(4) An order committing the child to the Department of Juvenile Justice;

(5) An order requiring that the child make such restitution as defined in paragraph (7) of Code Section 17–14–2. Such order may remain in force and effect simultaneously with any other order of the court, including, but not limited to, an order of commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice. While an order requiring restitution is in effect, the enforcement thereof may be transferred to the Department of Juvenile Justice. In the event that the child changes his or her place of residence while the order is still in effect, the court may transfer enforcement of its order to the juvenile court of the county of the child's residence and its probation staff; however, no order of restitution shall be enforced while such child is in placement at a youth development center unless the commissioner of juvenile justice certifies that a restitution program is available at such facility. Payment of funds under this paragraph shall be made by the child or the child's family or employer directly to the clerk of the juvenile court entering the order or another employee of that court designated by the judge, and that court shall disburse such funds in the manner authorized in the order;

(6) An order requiring that the child perform community service in a manner prescribed by the court and under the supervision of an individual designated by the court; or

(7) An order requiring the child to remit to the general fund of the county a sum not to exceed the maximum applicable to an adult for commission of any of the following offenses: homicide by vehicle, manslaughter resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle, any felony in the commission of which a motor vehicle is used, hit and run or leaving the scene of an accident, racing on highways or streets, using a motor vehicle in fleeing or attempting to elude an officer, fraudulent or fictitious use of a license, driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, possession of controlled substances or marijuana, driving without proof of minimum required motor vehicle insurance, or any violation of the Code sections contained in Title 40 which is properly adjudicated as a delinquent act.

(b)(1) At the conclusion of the dispositional hearing provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–65, if the child is found to have committed a delinquent act, the court may, in addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation, suspend the driver's license of such child for any period not to exceed the date on which the child becomes 18 years of age or, in the case of a child who does not have a driver's license, prohibit the issuance of a driver's license to such child for any period not to exceed the date on which the child becomes 18 years of age. The court shall retain the driver's license for a period of suspension and return it to the offender at the end of such period. The court shall notify the Department of Driver Services of any such actions taken pursuant to this subsection.

(2)(A) If the child is adjudicated for the commission of a delinquent act, the court may in its discretion in those cases involving:

(i) An offense that would be a felony if committed by an adult; or

(ii) An offense that would be a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature if committed by an adult and involving bodily injury or harm or substantial likelihood of bodily injury or harm, in addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation, order the child to serve up to a maximum of 30 days in a youth development center, or after assessment and with the court's approval, in a treatment program provided by the Department of Juvenile Justice or the juvenile court.

(B) A child ordered to a youth development center under this paragraph and detained in a secured facility pending placement in the youth development center shall be given credit for time served in the secured facility awaiting placement. On and after July 1, 2013, the maximum number of days that the court may order a child to serve in a youth development center under this paragraph shall be increased to 60 days.

(b.1) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section, at the conclusion of the dispositional hearing provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–65, if the child is found to have committed a delinquent offense which would be a violation of subsection (k) of Code Section 40–6–391 if committed by an adult, the court shall make an order of disposition which, for purposes of the child's rehabilitation, imposes the same penalty, period of confinement, and period of community service provided in Code Section 40–6–391 which are applicable to an adult convicted of violating subsection (k) of Code Section 40–6–391, with any such period of confinement to be served in an institution, camp, or other facility for delinquent children operated under the direction of the court or other local public authority or, if no such facility is available, in a regional youth detention center, provided that such child shall be kept segregated from all children other than those confined for violating subsection (k) of Code Section 40–6–391. A previous finding that the child committed such a delinquent offense shall be deemed a previous conviction for purposes of this subsection. The judge shall have the same authority and discretion regarding allowing service of confinement on weekends or during nonworking hours as is provided under subsection (a) of Code Section 17–10–3.1.

(c) In any case in which a child who has not achieved a high school diploma or the equivalent is placed on probation, the court may require as a condition of probation that the child pursue a course of study designed to lead to achieving a high school diploma or the equivalent; and, in any case in which such a condition of probation may be imposed, the court shall give express consideration to whether such a condition should be imposed.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–35. In addition the amendment provided gender neutral referents.

The 2001 amendment added at the end of the fourth sentence of subsec. (b) "or, after assessment and with the court's approval, in a treatment program provided by the Department of Juvenile Justice or the juvenile court."

The 2002 amendment by Act 462 was a correction.

The 2002 amendment by Act 934 substituted for references to "adjudicatory hearing" references to "dispositional hearing provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–65".

The 2005 amendment by Act 57 rewrote subsec. (b) which had read:

"(b) At the conclusion of the dispositional hearing provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–65, if the child is found to have committed a delinquent act, the court may, in addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation, suspend the driver's license of such child for any period not to exceed the date on which the child becomes 18 years of age or, in the case of a child who does not have a driver's license, prohibit the issuance of a driver's license to such child for any period not to exceed the date on which the child becomes 18 years of age. The court shall retain the driver's license for a period of suspension and return it to the offender at the end of such period. The court shall notify the Department of Motor Vehicle Safety of any such actions taken pursuant to this subsection. If the child is adjudicated for the commission of a delinquent act, the court may in its discretion, in addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation, order the child to serve up to a maximum of 90 days in a youth development center, or after assessment and with the court's approval, in a treatment program provided by the Department of Juvenile Justice or the juvenile court."

The 2005 amendment by Act 68, in subsec. (b), substituted "Department of Driver Services" for "Department of Motor Vehicle Safety".

The 2006 amendment by Act 453 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

The 2009 amendment by Act 36, in par. (1) of subsec. (b), substituted "30 days" for "60 days", and inserted "On and after July 1, 2011, the maximum number of days that the court may order a child to serve in a youth development center under this paragraph shall be increased to 60 days."

The 2010 amendment by Act 674, rewrote subsec. (b) which had read:

"(b)(1) At the conclusion of the dispositional hearing provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–65, if the child is found to have committed a delinquent act, the court may, in addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation, suspend the driver's license of such child for any period not to exceed the date on which the child becomes 18 years of age or, in the case of a child who does not have a driver's license, prohibit the issuance of a driver's license to such child for any period not to exceed the date on which the child becomes 18 years of age. The court shall retain the driver's license for a period of suspension and return it to the offender at the end of such period. The court shall notify the Department of Driver Services of any such actions taken pursuant to this subsection. If the child is adjudicated for the commission of a delinquent act, the court may in its discretion in those cases involving: (A) a violation of probation involving another adjudicated delinquent act and upon the court making a finding of fact that the child has failed to respond to the graduated alternative sanctions set forth in paragraph (2) of this subsection; (B) an offense that would be a felony if committed by an adult; or (C) an offense that would be a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature if committed by an adult and involving bodily injury or harm or substantial likelihood of bodily injury or harm, in addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation, order the child to serve up to a maximum of 30 days in a youth development center, or after assessment and with the court's approval, in a treatment program provided by the Department of Juvenile Justice or the juvenile court. A child ordered to a youth development center under this paragraph and detained in a secured facility pending placement in the youth development center shall be given credit for time served in the secured facility awaiting placement. On and after July 1, 2011, the maximum number of days that the court may order a child to serve in a youth development center under this paragraph shall be increased to 60 days.

"(2) The Department of Juvenile Justice, in conjunction with the Council of Juvenile Court Judges of Georgia, shall establish and monitor a graduated alternative sanctions program for children on probation. The graduated alternative sanctions program shall be implemented in each judicial circuit in consultation with the judge of the juvenile court. The graduated alternative sanctions program may include, but shall not be limited to, community service, electronic monitoring, increased reporting or intensive supervision, home confinement, day or evening reporting centers, or treatment intervention."

Laws 2010, Act 674, § 10, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2010, and Sections 2 and 5 of this Act shall apply to any child sentenced to probation on and after July 1, 2010; the former provisions of Code Section 15–11–66 shall continue to apply to any child sentenced to probation prior to July 1, 2010."

§ 15–11–66.1. Disposition of child adjudged to have committed delinquent act constituting AIDS transmitting crime; HIV testing

(a) Any term used in this Code section and defined in Code Section 31–22–9.1 shall have the meaning provided for such term in Code Section 31–22–9.1.

(b) As part of any order of disposition regarding a child adjudged to have committed a delinquent act constituting an AIDS transmitting crime, the court may in its discretion and after conferring with the director of the health district, as such officer is provided for in Code Section 31–3–15, order that child to submit to an HIV test within 45 days following the adjudication of delinquency and shall mail the Department of Juvenile Justice a copy of such order within three days following the issuance thereof.

(c) The Department of Juvenile Justice, within 30 days following receipt of the copy of order under subsection (b) of this Code section, shall arrange for the HIV test for the child ordered to submit thereto.

(d) Any child sentenced to the custody and control of the Department of Corrections or the Department of Juvenile Justice shall be HIV tested in accordance with the policies and procedures of the respective department.

(e) If a child is required by this Code section to submit to an HIV test and is thereby determined to be infected with HIV, that determination and the name of the child shall be deemed to be AIDS confidential information and shall be reported to:

(1) The Department of Juvenile Justice or the Department of Corrections, as the case may be, and the Department of Community Health, the latter of which may disclose the name of the child if necessary to provide and shall provide counseling to each victim of that child's AIDS transmitting crime or to any parent or guardian of any victim who is a minor or incompetent person, if the Department of Juvenile Justice or the Department of Corrections believes the crime posed a reasonable risk of transmitting HIV to the victim;

(2) The court which ordered the HIV test; and

(3) Those persons in charge of any facility to which the child has been confined by order of the court. In addition to any other restrictions regarding the confinement of children, a child determined to be an HIV infected person may be confined in that facility separately from any other children in that facility other than those who have been determined to be infected with HIV if:

(A) That child is reasonably believed to be sexually active while confined;

(B) That child is reasonably believed to be sexually predatory either during or prior to detention; or

(C) The commissioner of juvenile justice or the commissioner of corrections, as the case may be, reasonably determines that other circumstances or conditions exist which indicate that separate confinement would be warranted.

The 2009 amendment by Act 102, in subsec. (e), substituted "Department of Community Health" for "Department of Human Resources" in par. (1).

§ 15–11–67. Disposition of unruly child

If the child is found to be unruly, the court may make any disposition authorized for a delinquent child except that, if commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice is ordered, the court shall first find that the child is not amenable to treatment or rehabilitation pursuant to paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–66.

§ 15–11–68. Counseling or counsel and advice for child found to have committed delinquent act, to be unruly child, or to have committed juvenile traffic offense

When any child is before a juvenile court and such child is found by the court to have committed a delinquent act, to be an unruly child, or to have committed a juvenile traffic offense as defined in Code Section 15–11–73, the court shall be authorized, in addition to any other disposition authorized by this article, to order such child and such child's parents or guardian to participate in counseling or in counsel and advice as determined by the court. Such counseling and counsel and advice may be provided by the court, court personnel, probation officers, professional counselors or social workers, psychologists, physicians, qualified volunteers, or appropriate public, private, or volunteer agencies as directed by the court and shall be designed to assist in deterring future delinquent or unruly acts or other conduct or conditions which would be harmful to the child or society.

§ 15–11–69. Counsel and advice with view to informal adjustment

(a) Before a petition is filed, the probation officer or other officer of the court designated by the court, subject to the court's direction, may give counsel and advice to the parties with a view to an informal adjustment if it appears that:

(1) The admitted facts bring the case within the jurisdiction of the court;

(2) Counsel and advice without an adjudication would be in the best interest of the public and the child; and

(3) The child and the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian consent thereto with knowledge that consent is not obligatory.

(b) The giving of counsel and advice cannot extend beyond three months from the day commenced unless extended by the court for an additional period not to exceed three months and does not authorize the detention of the child if not otherwise permitted by this article.

(c) An incriminating statement made by a participant to the person giving counsel or advice and in the discussion or conferences incident thereto shall not be used against the declarant over objection in any hearing except in a hearing on disposition in a juvenile court proceeding or in a criminal proceeding against such declarant after conviction for the purpose of a presentence investigation.

(d) If a child is alleged to have committed a designated felony act as defined in Code Section 15–11–63, the case shall not be subject to informal adjustment, counsel, or advice without the prior written notification of the district attorney or his or her authorized representative.

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–14. In addition the amendment provided gender neutral referents.

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 10 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–70. Duration of orders of disposition; extensions of duration

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, an order of disposition committing a delinquent or unruly child to the Department of Juvenile Justice continues in force for two years or until the child is sooner discharged by the Department of Juvenile Justice. The court which made the order may extend its duration for an additional two years subject to like discharge, if:

(1) A hearing is held upon motion of the Department of Juvenile Justice prior to the expiration of the order;

(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and an opportunity to be heard are given to the child and the parent, guardian, or other custodian; and

(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary for the treatment or rehabilitation of the child.

(b) If the court commits a delinquent child to the Department of Juvenile Justice for a delinquent act which if done by an adult would be the crime of murder, then the court's commitment may continue until the child's twenty-first birthday. The court shall determine whether any or all of the child's commitment should include an order for restrictive custody by making specific written findings of fact using the elements set forth in paragraphs (1) through (5) of subsection (c) of Code Section 15–11–63. Any child committed to the Department of Juvenile Justice under the provisions of this subsection shall not be released from confinement or discharged from the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice unless a motion for early release is granted by the court. The court which made the order of commitment may shorten the duration of its order if:

(1) A hearing is held prior to the expiration of the order upon motion of a party or on the court's own motion;

(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and an opportunity to be heard are given to the parties affected; and

(3) The court finds that the discharge is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the original order and for the treatment or rehabilitation of the child.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, any other order of disposition in a proceeding involving delinquency or unruliness, except an order involving the appointment of a guardian of the person or property of a child, continues in force for not more than two years. The court may sooner terminate its order or extend its duration for further periods. An order of extension may be made if:

(1) A hearing is held prior to the expiration of the order upon motion of a party or on the court's own motion;

(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and opportunity to be heard are given to the parties affected;

(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the order extended; and

(4) The extension does not exceed two years from the expiration of the prior order.

(d) The court may terminate an order of disposition of a child adjudicated as delinquent or unruly or an extension of such a disposition order prior to its expiration, on or without an application of a party, if it appears to the court that the purposes of the order have been accomplished.

(e) Unless otherwise provided by law, when a child who has been adjudicated as delinquent or unruly reaches 21 years of age all orders affecting him or her then in force terminate and he or she is discharged from further obligation or control.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–41(a).

The 2002 amendment designated the existing provisions as subsec. (a) and added subsecs. (b) to (d).

The 2006 amendment by Act 541, in subsec. (a), substituted "Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code Section" for "Except as otherwise provided by law"; redesignated subsecs. (b) through (d) as (c) through (e) respectively and added new subsec. (b); and in newly designated subsec. (c), substituted "Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code Section" for "Except as otherwise provided by law".

Laws 2006, Act 541, § 2, provides:

"This part shall be known and may be cited as the 'Amy's [so in original] Law.' "

§ 15–11–71. Supervision fees

(a) The purpose of this Code section is to allow the juvenile courts of Georgia to collect supervision fees from those who are placed under the courts' formal or informal supervision in order that the court may use those fees to expand the provision of the following types of ancillary services:

(1) Housing in nonsecure facilities that meet the requirements of Code Section 15–11–48;

(2) Educational services, tutorial services, or both;

(3) Counseling and diagnostic testing;

(4) Mediation;

(5) Transportation to and from court ordered services;

(6) Truancy intervention services;

(7) Restitution programs; and

(8) Job development or work experience programs.

(b) The juvenile court may order each delinquent or unruly child who receives supervision under paragraph (2), (5), or (6) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–66 or Code Section 15–11–67 or counsel and advice pursuant to Code Section 15–11–69 to pay:

(1) An initial court supervision user's fee of not less than $10.00 nor more than $200.00; and

(2) A court supervision user's fee of not less than $2.00 nor more than $30.00 for each month that the child receives supervision to the clerk of the court. The child and each parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the child may be jointly and severally liable for the payment of the fee and shall be subject to the enforcement procedure stated in subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–8. The judge shall attempt to provide that any such fees shall be imposed on such terms and conditions as shall assure that the funds for the payment are from moneys earned by the child. All moneys collected by the clerk under this subsection shall be transferred to the county treasurer, or such other county official or employee who performs duties previously performed by said treasurer, who shall deposit the moneys into a county supplemental juvenile services fund. The governing authority of the county shall appropriate moneys from the county supplemental juvenile services fund to the juvenile court for the court's discretionary use in providing supplemental community based services described in subsection (a) of this Code section to offenders who are children. These funds shall be administered by the county and the court may draw upon them by submitting invoices to the county. The county supplemental juvenile services fund may be used only for these services. Any moneys remaining in the fund at the end of the county fiscal year shall not revert to any other fund but shall continue in the county supplemental juvenile services fund. The county supplemental juvenile services fund may not be used to replace other funding of services.

(c) For the purpose of this Code section, the term "guardian" or "legal custodian" shall not be interpreted or construed to include the Department of Human Services or the Department of Juvenile Justice.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–56.1. In addition the amendment substituted references to "child" for "juvenile" and provided gender neutral referents.

The 2005 amendment by Act 161, in subsec. (a), inserted a new par. (6) and redesignated former pars. (6) and (7) as pars. (7) and (8); in subsec. (b), substituted "paragraph (2), (5), or (6) of subsection (a)" for "paragraph (5) of subsection (a)" and substituted "Code Section 15–11–66 or Code Section 15–11–67 or counsel and advice pursuant to" for "Code Section 15–11–66, Code Section 15–11–67, or paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of"; and inserted "or the Department of Juvenile Justice" in subsec. (c).

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Human Services" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

§ 15–11–72. Order of disposition not conviction of crime

An order of disposition or other adjudication in a proceeding under this article is not a conviction of a crime and does not impose any civil disability ordinarily resulting from a conviction nor operate to disqualify the child in any civil service application or appointment.

Uniform Law

This section is based upon § 33 of the Uniform Law Commissioners' Model Juvenile Court Act. See 9A Uniform Laws Annotated, Master Edition, or ULA Database on Westlaw.

§ 15–11–73. Juvenile traffic offenses

(a) Definition. Except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, a juvenile traffic offense consists of a violation by a child under the age of 17 of:

(1) A law or local ordinance governing the operation of a moving motor vehicle upon the streets or highways of this state or upon the waterways within or adjoining this state; or

(2) Any other motor vehicle traffic law or local ordinance if the child is taken into custody and detained for its violation or is transferred to the juvenile court by the court hearing the charge.

(b) Jurisdiction. Notwithstanding the provisions of Title 40 which grant jurisdiction over traffic court offenses to certain courts, the juvenile court shall have exclusive original jurisdiction over juvenile traffic offenses.

(c) Exceptions. The following offenses shall be delinquent offenses and shall not be handled as juvenile traffic offenses: homicide by vehicle, manslaughter resulting from the operation of a vehicle, any felony in the commission of which a motor vehicle is used, racing on highways and streets, using a motor vehicle in fleeing or attempting to elude an officer, fraudulent or fictitious use of a license, hit and run or leaving the scene of an accident, driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, possession of a controlled substance or marijuana, and any other offense for which driving privileges may be suspended or revoked for an adult.

(d) Nature of offense. A juvenile traffic offense is not an act of delinquency unless the case is transferred to the delinquency calendar as provided in subsection (i) of this Code section.

(e) Procedure. The summons, notice to appear, or other designation of a citation accusing a child of committing a juvenile traffic offense constitutes the commencement of the proceedings in the court of the county in which the alleged violation occurred and serves in place of a summons and petition under this article. These cases shall be filed and heard separately from other proceedings of the court. If the child is taken into custody on the charge, Code Sections 15–11–46 and 15–11–49 shall apply. If the child is, or after commencement of the proceedings becomes, a resident of another county of this state, the court in the county where the alleged traffic offense occurred may retain jurisdiction over the entire case.

(f) Hearing. The court shall fix a time for a hearing and shall give reasonable notice thereof to the child and, if their address is known, to the parents, guardian, or custodian. If the accusation made in the summons, notice to appear, or other designation of a citation is denied, an informal hearing shall be held at which the parties shall have the right to subpoena witnesses, present evidence, cross-examine witnesses, and appear by counsel. The hearing shall be open to the public.

(g) Disposition. If the court finds on the admission of the child or upon the evidence that the child committed the offense charged, it may make one or more of the following orders:

(1) Reprimand, counsel, or warn the child and the child's parents; provided, however, that this dispositional order is not available for any offense listed in subsection (c) of this Code section;

(2) As a matter of probation or if the child is committed to the custody of the state, order the Department of Driver Services to suspend the child's privilege to drive under stated conditions and limitations for a period not to exceed 12 months;

(3) Require the child to attend a traffic school approved by the Department of Driver Services or a substance abuse clinic or program approved by either the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities or the Council of Juvenile Court Judges for a reasonable period of time;

(4) Order the child to remit to the general fund of the county a sum not exceeding the maximum applicable to an adult for a like offense;

(5) Require the child to participate in a program of community service as specified by the court;

(6) Impose any sanction authorized by Code Section 15–11–66, 15–11–67, or 15–11–68; or

(7) Place the child on probation subject to the conditions and limitations imposed by Title 40 on probation granted to adults for like offenses, but such probation shall be supervised by the court as provided in Code Section 15–11–66.

(h) Fines. If a fine is assessed under paragraph (4) of subsection (g) of this Code section, such fine shall be subject to all additions and penalties as specified under this title and Title 47.

(i) Transfer to delinquency calendar. In lieu of the preceding orders, if the evidence indicates the advisability thereof, the court may transfer the case to the delinquency calendar of the court and direct the filing and service of a summons and petition in accordance with this article. The judge so ordering is disqualified, upon objection, from acting further in the case prior to an adjudication that the child committed a delinquent act.

(j) Reporting procedure. Upon finding that the child has committed a juvenile traffic offense or a delinquent offense which would be a violation of Title 40 if committed by an adult, the court shall forward, within ten days, a report of the final adjudication and disposition of the charge to the Department of Driver Services; provided, however, that this procedure shall not be applicable to those cases which have been dismissed or in which the child and the child's parents have been reprimanded, counseled, or warned by the court pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (g) of this Code section. The Department of Driver Services shall record the adjudication and disposition of the offense on the child's permanent record and such adjudication and disposition shall be deemed a conviction for the purpose of suspending or revoking the individual's driver's license. Such record shall also be available to law enforcement agencies and courts as are the permanent traffic records of adults.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–49. In addition the amendment substituted references to "child" for "juvenile" and provided gender neutral referents.

The 2002 amendment was a correction bill.

The 2005 amendment by Act 68 in subsec. (g)(2) and (3) substituted "Department of Driver Services" for "Department of Motor Vehicle Safety" and also in par. (3) substituted "approved" for "conducted" following "attend a traffic school"; and, in subsec. (j) substituted "Department of Driver Services" for "Department of Motor Vehicle Safety" twice.

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

Part 7A

Discovery Proceedings

§ 15–11–75. Discovery procedures; limitations; orders

(a) Request for discovery. In all cases in which a child is charged with having committed a delinquent act as defined in Code Section 15–11–2, the child shall, upon written request to the person or entity prosecuting the case having actual custody, control, or possession of the material to be produced, have full access to the following for inspection, copying, or photographing:

(1) A copy of the complaint;

(2) A copy of the petition;

(3) The names and last known addresses and telephone numbers of each witness to the occurrence which forms the basis of the charge;

(4) A copy of any written statement made by the child or any witness that relates to the subject matter concerning the testimony of the witness that the prosecuting attorney or entity prosecuting the case intends to call as a witness;

(5) Transcriptions, recordings, and summaries of any oral statement of the child or of any witness, except the product of counsel;

(6) Any scientific or other report which is intended to be introduced at the hearing or that pertains to physical evidence which is intended to be introduced;

(7) Photographs and any physical evidence which are intended to be introduced at the hearing; and

(8) Copies of the police incident report and supplemental report, if any, regarding the occurrence which forms the basis of the charge.

(b) Reciprocal discovery. If the child requests disclosure of information pursuant to subsection (a) of this Code section, it shall be the duty of the child to promptly make the following available for inspection, copying, or photographing to the prosecuting attorney or the entity prosecuting the case:

(1) The names and last known addresses and telephone numbers of each witness to the occurrence which forms the basis of the defense;

(2) Any scientific or other report which is intended to be introduced at the hearing or that pertains to physical evidence which is intended to be introduced;

(3) Photographs and any physical evidence which are intended to be introduced at the hearing; and

(4) A copy of any written statement made by any witness that relates to the subject matter concerning the testimony of the witness that the child intends to call as a witness.

(c) Timing of response to discovery. A request for discovery or reciprocal discovery shall be complied with promptly and not later than 48 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing except when later compliance is made necessary by the timing of the request. If the request for discovery is made fewer than 48 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing, the discovery response shall be produced in a timely manner. If, subsequent to providing a discovery response in compliance with this Code section, the existence of additional evidence is found, it shall be promptly provided to the person or child making the discovery request.

(1) Upon written request by the prosecuting attorney or entity prosecuting the case stating the time, date, and place at which the alleged delinquent act was committed, the child shall serve upon the prosecuting attorney or entity prosecuting the case a written notice of the child's intention to offer a defense of alibi. Such notice by the child shall state the specific place or places at which the child claims to have been at the time of the alleged delinquent act and the names, addresses, dates of birth, and telephone numbers of the witnesses, if known to the child, upon whom the child intends to rely to establish such alibi unless previously supplied. A request for alibi evidence shall be complied with promptly and not later than 48 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing except when later compliance is made necessary by the timing of the request. If the request for alibi evidence is made fewer than 48 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing, the alibi evidence shall be produced in a timely manner. If the defendant withdraws the notice of intention to rely upon an alibi defense, the notice and intention to rely upon an alibi defense are not admissible. However the prosecuting attorney or entity prosecuting the case may offer any other evidence regarding alibi.

(2) The prosecuting attorney or entity prosecuting the case shall serve upon the child a written notice stating the names, addresses, dates of birth, and telephone numbers of the witnesses, if known to the state, upon whom the state intends to rely to rebut the child's evidence of alibi unless previously supplied.

(e) Order granting discovery; limitations; sanctions. If a request for discovery is refused, application may be made to the court for a written order granting discovery. Motions for discovery shall certify that a request for discovery was made and was refused. An order granting discovery shall require reciprocal discovery. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this Code section, the court may deny, in whole or in part, or otherwise limit or set conditions concerning the discovery response upon a sufficient showing by a person or entity to whom a request for discovery is made that disclosure of the information would:

(1) Jeopardize the safety of a party, witness, or confidential informant;

(2) Create a substantial threat of physical or economic harm to a witness or other person;

(3) Endanger the existence of physical evidence;

(4) Disclose privileged information; or

(5) Impede the criminal prosecution of a minor who is being prosecuted as an adult or the prosecution of an adult charged with an offense arising from the same transaction or occurrence.

(f) Failure to comply. If at any time during the course of the proceedings it is brought to the attention of the court that a person or entity has failed to comply with an order issued pursuant to this Code section, the court may grant a continuance, prohibit the party from introducing in evidence the information not disclosed, or enter such other order as the court deems just under the circumstances.

(g) Court discretion. Nothing contained in this Code section shall prohibit the court from ordering the disclosure of any information that the court deems necessary and appropriate for proper adjudication.

(h) Confidentiality of discovery responses. Any material or information furnished to the child pursuant to this part shall remain in the exclusive custody of the child and shall only be used during the pendency of the case and shall be subject to such other terms and conditions as the court may provide.

(i) Danger of proceeding pro se. If a child proceeds pro se, the court shall instruct the child concerning the danger of proceeding pro se and his or her rights under this Code section.

Laws 2003, Act 61, § 1, eff. July 1, 2003.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2003, Act 61, § 2, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2003, and shall apply to all cases in which a petition is filed on or after that date."

Part 8

Access to Records and Hearings

§ 15–11–78. Exclusion from and admission to hearings of general public

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "deprivation proceeding" means a court proceeding stemming from a petition alleging that a child is a deprived child.

(b) The general public shall be admitted to:

(1) An adjudicatory hearing involving an allegation of a designated felony pursuant to Code Section 15–11–63;

(2) An adjudicatory hearing involving an allegation of delinquency brought in the interest of any child who has previously been adjudicated delinquent; provided, however, the court shall close any delinquency hearing on an allegation of sexual assault or any delinquency hearing at which any party expects to introduce substantial evidence related to matters of deprivation;

(3) Any child support hearing;

(4) Any hearing in a legitimation action filed pursuant to Code Section 19–7–22;

(5) At the court's discretion, any dispositional hearing involving any proceeding under this article; or

(6) Any hearing in a deprivation proceeding, except as otherwise provided in subsection (c) of this Code section.

(c) The court may close the hearing in a deprivation proceeding only upon making a finding upon the record and issuing a signed order as to the reason or reasons for closing all or part of a hearing in such proceeding and stating that:

(A) The proceeding involves an allegation of an act which, if done by an adult, would constitute a sexual offense under Chapter 6 of Title 16; or

(B) It is in the best interest of the child. In making such a determination, the court shall consider such factors as:

(i) The age of the child;

(ii) The nature of the allegations;

(iii) The effect that an open court proceeding will have on the court's ability to reunite and rehabilitate the family unit; and

(iv) Whether the closure is necessary to protect the privacy of a child, of a foster parent or other caretaker of a child, or of a victim of domestic violence.

(d) The court may close a hearing or exclude a person from a hearing in any proceeding on its own motion, by motion of a party to the proceeding, or by motion of a child who is the subject of the proceeding or the child's attorney or guardian ad litem.

(e) Only the parties, their counsel, witnesses, persons accompanying a party for his or her assistance, the victim, and any other persons as the court finds have a proper interest in the proceeding or in the work of the court may be admitted by the court to hearings from which the public is excluded; provided, however, that when the conduct alleged in the deprivation proceeding could give rise to a criminal or delinquent prosecution, attorneys for the prosecution and the defense shall be admitted.

(f) The court may refuse to admit a person to a hearing in any proceeding upon making a finding upon the record and issuing a signed order that the person's presence at the hearing would:

(1) Be detrimental to the best interest of a child who is a party to the proceeding;

(2) Impair the fact-finding process; or

(3) Be otherwise contrary to the interest of justice.

(g) The court may temporarily exclude any child from a termination of parental rights hearing except while allegations of his or her delinquency or unruly conduct are being heard.

(h) Any request for installation and use of electronic recording, transmission, videotaping, or motion picture or still photography of any judicial proceeding shall be made to the court at least two days in advance of the hearing. The request shall be evaluated by the court pursuant to the standards set forth in Code Section 15–1–10.1.

(i) The judge may order the media not to release identifying information concerning any child or family members or foster parent or other caretaker of a child involved in hearings open to the public.

(j) The general public shall be excluded from proceedings in juvenile court unless such hearing has been specified as one in which the general public shall be admitted to pursuant to this Code section.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–28(c) and (c.1).

The 2009 amendment by Act 67 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a) Except as otherwise provided by subsection (b) of this Code section, the general public shall be excluded from hearings involving delinquency, deprivation, or unruliness. Only the parties, their counsel, witnesses, persons accompanying a party for his or her assistance, and any other persons as the court finds have a proper interest in the proceeding or in the work of the court may be admitted by the court. The court may temporarily exclude the child from the hearing except while allegations of his or her delinquency or unruly conduct are being heard.

"(b) The general public shall be admitted to:

"(1) An adjudicatory hearing involving an allegation of a designated felony pursuant to Code Section 15–11–63;

"(2) An adjudicatory hearing involving an allegation of delinquency brought in the interest of any child who has previously been adjudicated delinquent; provided, however, the court shall close any delinquency hearing on an allegation of sexual assault or any delinquency hearing at which any party expects to introduce substantial evidence related to matters of deprivation;

"(3) Any child support hearing;

"(4) Any hearing in a legitimation action filed pursuant to Code Section 19–7–22; or

"(5) At the court's discretion, any dispositional hearing involving any proceeding under this article."

Laws 2009, Act 67, § 6, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on January 1, 2010, and shall not apply to any juvenile court proceeding filed before that date. Any such proceeding filed before January 1, 2010, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time the juvenile court proceeding was filed."

The 2010 amendment by Act 403, in subsec. (e), added "the victim" to the list of persons who may be admitted to hearings.

§ 15–11–79. Inspection of court files and records

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, all files and records of the court in a proceeding under this article are open to inspection only upon order of the court.

(b) Subject to the requirements of subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–56, subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–65, and Code Section 15–11–79. 2, the general public shall be allowed to inspect court files and records for cases arising under Code Section 15–11–73 or any complaint, petition, or order from any case that was open to the public pursuant to paragraphs (1) through (5) of subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–78. The general public shall be allowed to inspect court files and records for proceedings involving a legitimation petition under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court pursuant to paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (e) of Code Section 15–11–28.

(c)(1) The judge may permit authorized representatives of recognized organizations compiling statistics for proper purposes to inspect and make abstracts from official records under whatever conditions upon their use and distribution the judge may deem proper and may punish by contempt any violation of those conditions.

(2) The judge may permit any school principal or any school guidance counselor, school social worker, or school psychologist who is certified under Chapter 2 of Title 20 and who is counseling a child as a part of such counseling person's school employment duties to review official records of the court in any proceeding under this chapter concerning that child, including but not limited to records of that child's controlled substance or marijuana abuse, which records are protected by Code Section 49–5–41.1, under whatever conditions that the judge may deem proper and may punish by contempt any violation of those conditions.

(d) The judge shall permit authorized representatives of the Department of Juvenile Justice, the Department of Corrections, the Governor's Office for Children and Families, and the Council of Juvenile Court Judges to inspect and extract data from any court files and records for the purpose of obtaining statistics on children and to make copies pursuant to the order of the court.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the complaint, petition, order of adjudication, and order of disposition in any delinquency case in which the child has been adjudicated to be delinquent for a violation of the criminal laws of this state shall be disclosed upon request of counsel for the state or the accused for use preliminarily to or in conjunction with a subsequent juvenile or criminal proceeding in a court of record.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–58. In addition the amendment substituted references to "child" for "student" and "children" for "juveniles".

The 2002 amendment modified a subsection reference in the first sentence of subsec. (b).

The 2008 amendment by Act 562 substituted "Governor's Office for Children and Families" for "Children and Youth Coordinating Council" throughout the section.

The 2009 amendment by Act 67, in subsec. (b), inserted "paragraphs (1) through (5) of" preceding "subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–78".

Laws 2009, Act 67, § 6, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on January 1, 2010, and shall not apply to any juvenile court proceeding filed before that date. Any such proceeding filed before January 1, 2010, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time the juvenile court proceeding was filed."

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–38(b).

§ 15–11–79.2. Sealing of files and records

(a) Upon dismissal of a petition or complaint alleging delinquency or unruliness, or, in a case handled through informal adjustment, following completion of the informal adjustment, the court shall order the sealing of the files and records in the case, including those specified in Code Sections 15–11–82 and 15–11–83.

(b) On application of a person who has been adjudicated delinquent or unruly or on the court's own motion, and after a hearing, the court shall order the sealing of the files and records in the proceeding, including those specified in Code Sections 15–11–82 and 15–11–83, if the court finds that:

(1) Two years have elapsed since the final discharge of the person;

(2) Since the final discharge of the person he or she has not been convicted of a felony or of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude or adjudicated a delinquent or unruly child and no proceeding is pending against the person seeking conviction or adjudication; and

(3) The person has been rehabilitated.

(c) Reasonable notice of the hearing required by subsection (b) of this Code section shall be given to:

(1) The district attorney;

(2) The authority granting the discharge if the final discharge was from an institution or from parole; and

(3) The law enforcement officers or department having custody of the files and records if the files and records specified in Code Sections 15–11–82 and 15–11–83 are included in the application or motion.

(d) Upon the entry of the order the proceeding shall be treated as if it had never occurred. All index references shall be deleted and the person, the court, the law enforcement officers, and the departments shall properly reply that no record exists with respect to the person upon inquiry in any matter. Copies of the order shall be sent to each agency or official therein named and shall also be sent to the deputy director of the Georgia Crime Information Center. Inspection of the sealed files and records thereafter may be permitted by an order of the court upon petition by the person who is the subject of the records and only by those persons named in the order or to criminal justice officials upon petition to the court for official judicial enforcement or criminal justice purposes.

(e) The court may seal any record containing information identifying a victim of an act which, if done by an adult, would constitute a sexual offense under Chapter 6 of Title 16.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–61. In addition the amendment provided gender neutral referents.

The 2002 amendment deleted subsection (b), redesignated subsections (a), (c), and (d) as subsections (b), (d), and (e), respectively, and inserted new subsections (a) and (c). Prior to deletion, former subsec. (b) provided:

"(b) Reasonable notice of the hearing shall be given to:

"(1) The district attorney;

"(2) The authority granting the discharge if the final discharge was from an institution or from parole; and

"(3) The law enforcement officers or department having custody of the files and records specified in Code Sections 15–11–82 and 15–11–83 are included in the application or motion."

The 2009 amendment by Act 67 rewrote subsec. (e) which had read:

"(e) Except as otherwise provided by the court, no order sealing files and records under this Code section may be issued regarding any proceeding in which the general public may not be excluded from the hearing under subsection (a) or (b) of Code Section 15–11–78."

Laws 2009, Act 67, § 6, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on January 1, 2010, and shall not apply to any juvenile court proceeding filed before that date. Any such proceeding filed before January 1, 2010, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time the juvenile court proceeding was filed."

§ 15–11–80. Notice to school superintendent

Within 30 days of any proceeding in which a child is adjudicated delinquent for a second or subsequent time or any adjudicatory proceeding involving a designated felony, the court shall provide written notice to the school superintendent or his or her designee of the school in which such child is enrolled or, if the information is known, of the school in which such child plans to be enrolled at a future date. Such notice shall include the specific delinquent act or designated felony act that such child committed.

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–58.1.

§ 15–11–81. Preservation and destruction of records; computer retrieval

(a) Records. Subject to the earlier sealing of certain records pursuant to Code Section 15–11–79.2, the juvenile court shall make and keep records of all cases brought before it and shall preserve the records pertaining to a child in accordance with the common records retention schedules for courts approved by the State Records Committee pursuant to Code Section 50–18–92. Thereafter, the court may destroy such records, except that records of cases where orders were entered permanently depriving a parent of the custody of a child and records of cases involving a petition for legitimation of a child filed pursuant to Code Section 19–7–22 shall be preserved permanently. The court shall notify the deputy director of the Georgia Crime Information Center upon the destruction of any such felony records. The juvenile court shall make official minutes consisting of all petitions and orders filed in a case and any other pleadings, certificates, proofs of publication, summonses, warrants, and other writs which may be filed therein and shall make social records consisting of records of investigation and treatment and other confidential information. The provisions of this subsection notwithstanding, identification data shall be maintained and shall be disseminated to criminal justice officials for official judicial enforcement or criminal justice purposes as provided in Code Section 35–3–33.

(b) Records, dockets, indexes, files. Nothing in this chapter shall restrict or otherwise prohibit a juvenile court clerk from electing to store for computer retrieval any or all records, dockets, indexes, or files; nor shall a juvenile court clerk be prohibited from combining or consolidating any books, dockets, files, or indexes in connection with the filing for record of papers of the kind specified in this chapter or any other law, provided that any automated or computerized record-keeping method or system shall provide for the systematic and safe preservation and retrieval of all books, dockets, records, or indexes. When the clerk of a juvenile court elects to store for computer retrieval any or all records, the same data elements used in a manual system shall be used, and the same integrity and security maintained.

§ 15–11–82. Law enforcement records

(a) Except as provided in Code Sections 15–11–79 and 15–11–83, law enforcement records and files concerning a child shall be kept separate from the records and files of arrests of adults.

(b) Unless a charge of delinquency is transferred for criminal prosecution under Code Section 15–11–30.2, or the interest of national security requires, or the case is one in which the general public may not be excluded from the hearings under Code Section 15–11–78, or the court otherwise orders in the interest of the child, the records and files shall not be open to public inspection nor shall their contents be disclosed to the public.

(c) Inspection of the records and files is permitted by:

(1) A juvenile court having the child before it in any proceeding;

(2) Counsel for a party to the proceedings, with the consent of the court;

(3) The officers of public institutions or agencies to whom the child is committed;

(4) Law enforcement officers of this state, the United States, or any other jurisdiction when necessary for the discharge of their official duties;

(5) A court in which the child is convicted of a criminal offense, for the purpose of a presentence report or other dispositional proceeding;

(6) Officials of penal institutions and other penal facilities to which the child is committed;

(7) A parole board in considering the child's parole or discharge or in exercising supervision over the child; or

(8) Any school superintendent, principal, assistant principal, school guidance counselor, school social worker, school psychologist certified under Chapter 2 of Title 20, or school law enforcement officer appointed pursuant to Chapter 2, 3, or 8 of Title 20 when necessary for the discharge of his or her official duties.

(d) The court shall allow authorized representatives of the Department of Juvenile Justice, the Department of Corrections, and the Council of Juvenile Court Judges to inspect and copy law enforcement records for the purpose of obtaining statistics on children.

(e) Any law enforcement records and files involving an offense over which the superior court shall have exclusive jurisdiction as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of Code Section 15–11–28 shall be kept and reported in the same manner as the records and files of adults.

(f) Access to fingerprint records submitted to the Georgia Bureau of Investigation pursuant to Code Section 15–11–83 shall be limited to the administration of criminal justice purposes as defined in Code Section 15–11–2.

§ 15–11–83. Children's fingerprints, photographs, and names

(a)(1) Every child charged with an act which would be a felony if committed by an adult, other than those status offender crimes as defined in Code Section 15–11–2, shall be fingerprinted and photographed upon being taken into custody. Fingerprints and photographs of children shall be taken and filed separately from those of adults by law enforcement officials to be used in investigating the commission of crimes and to be made available as provided in this article and as may be directed by the court.

(2) Law enforcement agencies may photograph a child who for any reason has been placed in the custody and control of the Department of Juvenile Justice and who has absconded and subsequently returned to such custody. Photographs shall be maintained in accordance with paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(b) All children sentenced to the custody of the Department of Corrections shall be fingerprinted. The fingerprinting of child inmates will be processed in accordance with the Department of Corrections' policies for adult inmates.

(c) Fingerprint files and photographs of children may be inspected by law enforcement officers when necessary for criminal justice purposes and for the discharge of their official duties. The names and addresses of children who have been fingerprinted or photographed and the offense or offenses charged shall be made available in the discretion of the court to the appropriate department of family and children services and school superintendent. This information may be disseminated by the appropriate school superintendent to the child's teachers and counselors in the superintendent's discretion. Other inspections may be authorized by the court in individual cases upon a showing that it is necessary in the public interest.

(d) If a child has been charged with an offense that if committed by an adult would be a felony, or if the case is transferred to another court for prosecution, the child's fingerprints, personal identification data, and other pertinent information shall be forwarded to the Georgia Crime Information Center of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. The Georgia Crime Information Center shall create a juvenile fingerprint file and enter the data into the computerized criminal history files. The Georgia Bureau of Investigation shall act as the official state repository for juvenile history data and is authorized to disseminate such data for the purposes specified in Code Section 15–11–82.

(e) Upon application of the child, fingerprints and photographs of a child shall be removed from the file and destroyed if a petition alleging delinquency is not filed or the proceedings are dismissed after either a petition is filed or the case is transferred to the juvenile court as provided in Code Section 15–11–30.4 or the child is adjudicated not to be a delinquent child. The court shall notify the deputy director of the Georgia Crime Information Center when fingerprints and photographs are destroyed pursuant to this subsection, and the Georgia Bureau of Investigation shall treat such records in the same manner as expunged records pursuant to subsection (c) of Code Section 35–3–37.

(f) Except as provided in this Code section, without the consent of the judge, a child shall not be photographed after he or she is taken into custody unless the case is transferred to another court for prosecution.

(g)(1) The name or picture of any child under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court for the first time shall not be made public by any news media, upon penalty of contempt under Code Section 15–11–5, except as otherwise provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection or as authorized by an order of the court.

(2) It shall be mandatory upon the judge of the juvenile court or his or her designee to release the name of any child with regard to whom a petition has been filed alleging the child committed a designated felony act or alleging the child committed a delinquent act if the child has previously been adjudicated delinquent or if the child has previously been before the court on a delinquency charge and adjudication was withheld. No person, firm, or corporation shall be guilty of any offense by making public the name or picture of any such child.

§ 15–11–84. Government departments, boards, and agencies sharing nonconfidential information in order to serve the best interest of a child

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "governmental entity" shall mean the court, superior court, the Department of Juvenile Justice, the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities, the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services, county departments of family and children services, or public school, as such term is defined in Code Section 16–11–35.

(b) Governmental entities and state, county, municipal, or consolidated government departments, boards, or agencies shall exchange with each other all information not held as confidential pursuant to federal law and relating to a child which may aid a governmental entity in the assessment, treatment, intervention, or rehabilitation of a child, notwithstanding Code Section 15–1–15 or 15–11–9.1, subsection (d) of Code Section 15–11–10, or Code Section 15–11–66.1, 15–11–75, 15–11–81, 15–11–82, 15–11–174, 20–2–751.2, 20–14–40, 24–9–40.1, 24–9–41, 24–9–42, 26–4–5, 26–4–80, 26–5–17, 31–5–5, 31–33–6, 37–1–53, 37–2–9.1, 42–5–36, 42–8–40, 42–8–106, 49–5–40, 49–5–41, 49–5–41.1, 49–5–44, 49–5–45, 49–5–183, 49–5–184, 49–5–185, or 49–5–186, in order to serve the best interest of the child. Information which is shared pursuant to this subsection shall not be utilized to assist in the prosecution of the child in juvenile court or superior court or utilized to the detriment of the child.

(c) Information released pursuant to this Code section shall not change or rescind the confidential nature of such information and such information shall not be subject to public disclosure or inspection unless otherwise provided by law.

§ 15–11–87. Disposition of nonresident child

(a) If the court finds that a child who has been adjudged to have committed a delinquent act or to be unruly or deprived is or is about to become a resident of another state which has adopted the Uniform Juvenile Court Act or a substantially similar act which includes provisions corresponding to this Code section and Code Section 15–11–88, the court may defer the hearing on the need for treatment or rehabilitation and disposition and may request by any appropriate means the juvenile court of the child's residence or prospective residence to accept jurisdiction of the child.

(b) If the child becomes a resident of another state while on probation or under protective supervision under order of a court of this state, the court may request the juvenile court of the county of the state in which the child has become a resident to accept jurisdiction of the child and to continue his or her probation or protective supervision.

(c) Upon receipt and filing of an acceptance, the court of this state shall transfer custody of the child to the accepting court and cause the child to be delivered to the person designated by that court to receive custody of the child. It also shall provide that court with certified copies of the order adjudging the child to be a delinquent, unruly, or deprived child, of the order of transfer, and, if the child is on probation or under protective supervision under order of the court, of the order of disposition. It also shall provide that court with a statement of the facts found by the court of this state and any recommendations and other information it considers of assistance to the accepting court in making a disposition of the case or in supervising the child on probation or otherwise.

(d) Upon compliance with subsection (c) of this Code section the jurisdiction of the court of this state over the child is terminated.

§ 15–11–88. Disposition of resident child received from another state

(a) If a juvenile court of another state which has adopted the Uniform Juvenile Court Act or a substantially similar act which includes provisions corresponding to this Code section and Code Section 15–11–87 requests a court of this state to accept jurisdiction of a child found by the requesting court to have committed a delinquent act or to be an unruly or deprived child and the court of this state finds, after investigation, that the child is or is about to become a resident of the county in which the court presides, it shall promptly and not later than 14 days after receiving the request issue its acceptance in writing to the requesting court and shall direct its probation officer or other person designated by it to take physical custody of the child from the requesting court and bring the child before the court of this state or make other appropriate provisions for the child's appearance before the court.

(b) Upon the filing of certified copies of the orders of the requesting court determining that the child committed a delinquent act or is an unruly or deprived child and committing the child to the jurisdiction of a court of this state, the court of this state shall immediately fix a time for a hearing on the need for treatment or rehabilitation and disposition of the child or on the continuance of any probation or protective supervision.

(c) The hearing and notice thereof and all subsequent proceedings shall be governed by this article. The court may make any order of disposition permitted by the facts and this article. The orders of the requesting court are conclusive that the child committed the delinquent act or is an unruly or deprived child and of the facts found by the court in making the orders, subject only to Code Section 15–11–40. If the requesting court has made an order placing the child on probation or under protective supervision, a like order shall be entered by the court of this state. The court may modify or vacate the order in accordance with Code Section 15–11–40.

§ 15–11–89. Ordering out-of-state supervision

(a) Subject to the provisions of this article governing dispositions and to the extent that funds of the county are available, the court may place a child in the custody of a suitable person in another state. On obtaining the written consent of a juvenile court of another state which has adopted the Uniform Juvenile Court Act or a substantially similar act which includes provisions corresponding to this Code section and Code Section 15–11–90, the court of this state may order that the child be placed under the supervision of a probation officer or other appropriate official designated by the accepting court. One certified copy of the order shall be sent to the accepting court and another shall be filed with the clerk of the governing authority of the county of the requesting court of this state.

(b) The reasonable cost of the supervision, including the expenses of necessary travel, shall be borne by the county of the requesting court of this state. Upon receiving a certified statement signed by the judge of the accepting court of the cost incurred by the supervision, the court of this state shall certify if it appears that the sum so stated was reasonably incurred and shall file it with the appropriate officials of the county for payment. The appropriate officials shall thereupon issue a warrant for the sum stated payable to the appropriate officials of the county of the accepting court.

§ 15–11–89.1. Powers of out-of-state probation officers

If a child has been placed on probation or protective supervision by a juvenile court of another state which has adopted the Uniform Juvenile Court Act or a substantially similar act which includes provisions corresponding to this Code section and the child is in this state with or without the permission of that court, the probation officer of that court or other person designated by that court to supervise or take custody of the child has all the powers and privileges in this state with respect to the child as are given by this article to like officers or persons of this state, including the rights of visitation, counseling, control, direction, taking into custody, and returning to that state.

§ 15–11–90. Supervision under out-of-state order

(a) Upon receiving a request from a court exercising jurisdiction over children of another state which has adopted the Uniform Juvenile Court Act or a substantially similar act which includes provisions corresponding to this Code section and Code Section 15–11–89 to provide supervision of a child under the jurisdiction of that court, a court of this state may issue its written acceptance to the requesting court and may designate its probation or other appropriate officer who is to provide supervision, stating the probable cost per day therefor.

(b) Upon the receipt and filing of a certified copy of the order of the requesting court placing the child under the supervision of the officer so designated, the officer shall arrange for the reception of the child from the requesting court, shall provide supervision pursuant to the order and this article, and shall report thereon from time to time to the requesting court, including in the report any recommendations which he or she may have.

(c) The court in this state from time to time shall certify to the requesting court the cost of supervision that has been incurred and shall request payment therefor from the appropriate officials of the county of the requesting court to the appropriate officials of the county of the accepting court.

(d) The court of this state at any time may terminate supervision by notifying the requesting court. In that case, or if the supervision is terminated by the requesting court, the probation officer supervising the child shall return the child to a representative of the requesting court authorized to receive the child.

Article 2

Termination of Parental Rights

§ 15–11–93. Scope and duration of order

An order terminating the parental rights of a parent under this article is without limit as to duration and terminates all the parent's rights and obligations with respect to the child and all rights and obligations of the child to the parent arising from the parental relationship, including rights of inheritance. The parent is not thereafter entitled to notice of proceedings for the adoption of the child by another, nor has the parent any right to object to the adoption or otherwise to participate in the proceedings.

§ 15–11–94. Conditions and procedures under which parental rights may be terminated

(a) In considering the termination of parental rights, the court shall first determine whether there is present clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section. If there is clear and convincing evidence of such parental misconduct or inability, the court shall then consider whether termination of parental rights is in the best interest of the child, after considering the physical, mental, emotional, and moral condition and needs of the child who is the subject of the proceeding, including the need for a secure and stable home. If the court finds clear and convincing evidence of the circumstance provided in paragraph (5) of subsection (b) of this Code section, the court shall presume that termination of parental rights is in the best interest of the child.

(b) Except as provided in subsections (e) through (h) of Code Section 15–11–96, the court by order may terminate the parental rights of a parent with respect to the parent's child if:

(1) The written consent of the parent, acknowledged before the court, has been given; provided, however, that acknowledgment before the court is not necessary where the parent or parents voluntarily surrender the child for adoption as provided by subsection (e) of Code Section 19–8–4, 19–8–5, 19–8–6, or 19–8–7;

(2) A decree has been entered by a court of competent jurisdiction of this or any other state ordering the parent, guardian, or other custodian to support the child, and the parent, guardian, or other custodian has wantonly and willfully failed to comply with the order for a period of 12 months or longer;

(3) The parent has abandoned the child or the child was left under circumstances that the identity of the parent is unknown and cannot be ascertained despite diligent searching, and the parent has not come forward to claim the child within three months following the finding of the child;

(4)(A) The court determines parental misconduct or inability by finding that:

(i) The child is a deprived child, as such term is defined in Code Section 15–11–2;

(ii) The lack of proper parental care or control by the parent in question is the cause of the child's status as deprived;

(iii) Such cause of deprivation is likely to continue or will not likely be remedied; and

(iv) The continued deprivation will cause or is likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the child.

(B) In determining whether the child is without proper parental care and control, the court shall consider, without being limited to, the following:

(i) A medically verifiable deficiency of the parent's physical, mental, or emotional health of such duration or nature as to render the parent unable to provide adequately for the physical, mental, emotional, or moral condition and needs of the child;

(ii) Excessive use of or history of chronic unrehabilitated abuse of intoxicating liquors or narcotic or dangerous drugs or controlled substances with the effect of rendering the parent incapable of providing adequately for the physical, mental, emotional, or moral condition and needs of the child;

(iii) Conviction of the parent of a felony and imprisonment therefor which has a demonstrable negative effect on the quality of the parent-child relationship;

(iv) Egregious conduct or evidence of past egregious conduct of the parent toward the child or toward another child of a physically, emotionally, or sexually cruel or abusive nature;

(v) Physical, mental, or emotional neglect of the child or evidence of past physical, mental, or emotional neglect of the child or of another child by the parent; and

(vi) Injury or death of a sibling under circumstances which constitute substantial evidence that such injury or death resulted from parental neglect or abuse.

(C) In addition to the considerations in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, where the child is not in the custody of the parent who is the subject of the proceedings, in determining whether the child is without proper parental care and control, the court shall consider, without being limited to, whether the parent without justifiable cause has failed significantly for a period of one year or longer prior to the filing of the petition for termination of parental rights:

(i) To develop and maintain a parental bond with the child in a meaningful, supportive manner;

(ii) To provide for the care and support of the child as required by law or judicial decree; and

(iii) To comply with a court ordered plan designed to reunite the child with the parent or parents; or

(5) The parent has been convicted of the murder of the child's other parent.

(c) If the court does not make an order of termination of parental rights, it may grant an order under Code Section 15–11–55 if the court finds from clear and convincing evidence that the child is a deprived child.

§ 15–11–95. Petition

(a) The petition to terminate parental rights and all subsequent court documents in the proceeding shall be entitled "In the matter of _____, a child.", except upon appeal, in which event the anonymity of the child shall be preserved by appropriate use of initials. The petition shall be in writing.

(b) The petition shall be made, verified, and endorsed by the court as provided in Article 1 of this chapter for a petition alleging deprivation.

(c) The petition shall state clearly that an order for termination of parental rights is requested and that the effect thereof will be as stated in Code Section 15–11–93, and shall set forth in ordinary and concise language the facts required by Code Section 15–11–38.1.

(d) When a petition seeks termination of the rights of a biological father who is not the legal father and who has not surrendered his rights to the child, the petition shall be amended to include a certificate from the putative father registry disclosing the name, address, and social security number of any registrant acknowledging paternity of the child pursuant to subparagraph (d)(2)(A) of Code Section 19–11–9 or indicating the possibility of paternity of a child of the child's mother pursuant to subparagraph (d)(2)(B) of Code Section 19–11–9 for a period beginning no later than two years immediately prior to the child's date of birth. Such certificate shall document a search of the registry on or after the date of the filing of the petition and shall include a statement that the registry is current as to filings of registrants as of the date of the petition or as of a date later than the date of the petition.

§ 15–11–96. Summons; rights of biological fathers

(a) Upon filing of the petition, summons shall be issued forthwith on the child's parents, guardian, lawful custodian, and on the person presently having physical custody of the child.

(b) A copy of the petition shall be attached to the summons in all cases other than service by publication. When served by publication, the notice shall indicate the general nature of the allegations and where a copy of the petition may be obtained by the child's parents, guardian, lawful custodian, and the person presently having physical custody of the child. Such copy shall be available from the court during business hours. A free copy shall be available to the parent or, upon request, shall be mailed to the parent. All summons shall contain a statement to the effect that the hearing is for the purpose of terminating parental rights.

(c) The summons shall require the person who has physical custody of the child to appear personally and to bring the child before the court at the time and place stated in the summons. Where, at the court's discretion, it is deemed in the interest of the child that the child need not be brought before the court, the court may so indicate. The summons shall be served at least 30 days before the time set for the hearing, and a copy of the petition shall be served together with the summons and shall be made in the manner provided in Code Section 9–11–4, relating to service in civil practice.

(d) If the paternity of a child born out of wedlock has been established in a judicial proceeding to which the father was a party prior to the filing of the petition, the father shall be served with summons as provided by this article. Such father has the right to be heard unless he has relinquished all paternal rights with reference to the child.

(e) If there is a biological father who is not the legal father of a child and he has not executed a surrender as specified in paragraph (2) of subsection (e) of Code Section 19–8–4, 19–8–5, 19–8–6, or 19–8–7 he shall be notified of the proceedings pursuant to this Code section in the following circumstances:

(1) If his identity is known to the petitioner or the petitioner's attorney;

(2) If he is a registrant on the putative father registry who has acknowledged paternity of the child in accordance with subparagraph (d)(2)(A) of Code Section 19–11–9;

(3) If he is a registrant on the putative father registry who has indicated possible paternity of a child of the child's mother in accordance with subparagraph (d)(2)(B) of Code Section 19–11–9 during a period beginning two years immediately prior to the child's date of birth; or

(4) If the court finds from the evidence, including but not limited to the affidavit of the mother executed in compliance with the court's requirement pursuant to subsection (g) of this Code section in the form provided in subsection (h) of Code Section 19–8–26, that such biological father who is not the legal father has performed any of the following acts:

(A) Lived with the child;

(B) Contributed to the child's support;

(C) Made any attempt to legitimate the child; or

(D) Provided support or medical care for the mother either during her pregnancy or during her hospitalization for the birth of the child.

(f) Notification provided for in subsection (e) of this Code section shall be given to a biological father who is not a legal father by the following methods:

(1) Registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested, at his last known address, which notice shall be deemed received upon the date of delivery shown on the return receipt;

(2) Personal service, which notice shall be deemed received when personal service is perfected; or

(3) Publication once a week for three weeks in the official organ of the county where the petition has been filed and of the county of his last known address, which notice shall be deemed received upon the date of the last publication.

If feasible, the methods specified in paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection shall be used before publication.

(g) If there is a biological father who is not the legal father of the child and the identity of such biological father is not known to the petitioner or the petitioner's attorney, then the court shall be authorized to require the mother to execute an affidavit regarding such father in the form provided in subsection (h) of Code Section 19–8–26 or show cause before the court if she refuses. If the court finds from the evidence including but not limited to the affidavit of the mother that such biological father who is not the legal father has not performed any of the following acts:

(1) Lived with the child;

(2) Contributed to the child's support;

(3) Made any attempt to legitimate the child; or

(4) Provided support or medical care for the mother either during her pregnancy or during her hospitalization for the birth of the child, and the petitioner provides a certificate from the putative father registry stating that there is no entry on the putative father registry either acknowledging paternity of the child or indicating possible paternity of a child of the child's mother for a period beginning no later than two years immediately prior to the child's date of birth, then it shall be rebuttably presumed that the biological father who is not the legal father is not entitled to notice of the proceedings. Absent evidence rebutting the presumption, then no further inquiry or notice shall be required by the court and the court shall enter an order terminating the rights of such biological father to the child.

(h) When notice is given pursuant to subsection (e) of this Code section, it shall advise such biological father who is not the legal father that he loses all rights to the child and will not be entitled to object to the termination of his rights to the child unless, within 30 days of receipt of such notice, he files:

(1) A petition to legitimate the child pursuant to Code Section 19–7–22 or an acknowledgment of legitimation pursuant to Code Section 19–7–21.1; and

(2) Notice of the filing of the petition to legitimate or acknowledgment of legitimation with the court in which the action under this Code section is pending.

(i) A biological father who is not the legal father loses all rights to the child and the court shall enter an order terminating all such father's rights to the child and such father may not thereafter object to the termination of his rights to the child if within 30 days from his receipt of the notice provided for in subsection (e) of this Code section he:

(1) Does not file a legitimation petition and give notice as required in subsection (h) of this Code section;

(2) Files a legitimation petition which is subsequently dismissed for failure to prosecute; or

(3) Files a legitimation petition and the action is subsequently concluded without a court order declaring a finding that he is the legal father of the child.

§ 15–11–97. Sanctions for failure to be served or failure to obey summons

(a) If any person named in and properly served with summons shall without reasonable cause fail to appear or, when directed in the summons, to bring the child before the court, then the court may issue a rule nisi against such person, directing the person to appear before the court to show cause why such person should not be held in contempt of court.

(b) If the summons cannot be served or if the person to whom the summons is directed fails to obey it, the court may issue an order to take the child into protective custody.

(a) In any proceeding for terminating parental rights or any rehearing or appeal thereon, the court shall appoint an attorney to represent the child as the child's counsel and may appoint a separate guardian ad litem or a guardian ad litem who may be the same person as the child's counsel.

(b) If the parent or parents of the child desire to be represented by counsel but are indigent, the court shall appoint an attorney for such parent or parents, which shall be a charge upon the funds of the county upon certification thereof by the court in the same manner as authorized for other expenses under Code Section 15–11–8.

§ 15–11–103. Custody of child following termination proceedings; adoption

(a) Upon the entering of an order terminating the parental rights of a parent, a placement may be made only if the court finds that such placement is in the best interest of the child and in accordance with the child's court approved permanency plan created pursuant to Code Section 15–11–58. In determining which placement is in the child's best interest, the court shall enter findings of fact reflecting its consideration of the following:

(1) The child's need for a placement that offers the greatest degree of legal permanence and security;

(2) The least disruptive placement alternative for the child;

(3) The child's sense of attachment and need for continuity of relationships; and

(4) Any other factors the court deems relevant to its determination.

(b) A placement effected under the provisions of this Code section shall be conditional upon the person who is given permanent custody or who is granted an adoption of the child agreeing to abide by the terms and conditions of the order of the court.

(c) The court shall transmit a copy of every final order terminating the parental rights of a parent to the Office of Adoptions of the Department of Human Services within 15 days of the filing of such order.

(d) The custodian has authority to consent to the adoption of the child, the child's marriage, the child's enlistment in the armed forces of the United States, and surgical and other medical treatment for the child.

(e) In those cases in which the court has placed the child pursuant to a permanency plan of adoption, if a petition seeking the adoption of the child is not filed within six months after the date of the disposition order, the court shall then, and at least every six months thereafter as long as the child remains unadopted, review the circumstances of the child to determine what efforts have been made to assure that the child will be adopted. The court may then enter such orders as it deems necessary to further the adoption, including but not limited to another placement. In those cases where parental rights to the child were terminated without the designation of a permanent guardian or adoptive family, the court shall, at least every six months thereafter as long as the child remains subject to the jurisdiction of the court, review the circumstances of the child to determine that placement in the family home-like setting continues to be in the child's best interest.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–90. In addition the amendment added gender neutral referents.

The 2003 amendment by Act 3 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a)(1) If, upon the entering of an order terminating the parental rights of a parent, there is no parent having parental rights, the court shall first attempt to place the child with a person related to the child by blood or marriage or with a member of the child's extended family. A thorough search for a suitable family member shall be made by the court and the Department of Human Resources in attempting to effect this placement. A placement effected under this paragraph shall be conditioned upon the family member who is given permanent custody or who is granted an adoption of the child agreeing to abide by the terms and conditions of the order of the court. A placement shall be made under the terms of this paragraph only if such a placement is in the best interest of the child.

"(2) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the court may make any of the following dispositions: commit the child to the custody of the Department of Human Resources or to a licensed child-placing agency willing to accept custody for the purpose of placing the child for adoption or, in the absence of an adoption, in a foster home, or take other suitable measures for the care and welfare of the child.

"(b) The court shall transmit a copy of every final order terminating the parental rights of a parent to the Division of Family and Children Services Adoption Unit of the Department of Human Resources within 15 days of the filing of such order.

"(c) The custodian has authority to consent to the adoption of the child, the child's marriage, the child's enlistment in the armed forces of the United States, and surgical and other medical treatment for the child.

"(d) If a petition seeking the adoption of the child is not filed within one year after the date of the disposition order, the court shall then, and at least yearly thereafter as long as the child remains unadopted, review the circumstances of the child to determine what efforts have been made to assure that the child will be adopted. The court may then enter such orders as it deems necessary to further the adoption, including but not limited to another placement."

The 2003 amendment by Act 207, in subsec. (b) (redesignated as subsec. (c) by Act 3), substituted "Office of Adoptions" for "Division of Family and Children Services Adoption Unit".

The 2004 amendment by Act 489, in subsec. (e), substituted "within six months" for "within one year", and substituted "every six months" for "yearly" twice.

The 2009 amendment by Act 37 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a)(1) If, upon the entering of an order terminating the parental rights of a parent, there is no parent having parental rights, the court shall first attempt to place the child with a person related to the child by blood or marriage or with a member of the child's extended family if such a person is willing and, after study by the probation officer or other person or agency designated by the court, is found by the court to be qualified to receive and care for the child, if the court determines such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child. A placement effected under this paragraph shall be conditioned upon the family member who is given permanent custody or who is granted an adoption of the child agreeing to abide by the terms and conditions of the order of the court.

"(2) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the court may commit the child to the custody of the Department of Human Resources or to a licensed child-placing agency willing to accept custody for the purpose of placing the child for adoption, if the court determines such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child.

"(3) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection, the court may commit the child to a suitable individual on the condition that the person becomes the guardian of the person of the child pursuant to the court's authority under Code Section 15–11–30.1, if the court determines such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child.

"(4) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of this subsection, the court may commit the child to the custody of the Department of Human Resources or to a licensed child-placing agency willing to accept custody for the purpose of placing the child in a foster home, if the court determines such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child.

"(5) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4) of this subsection, the court may commit the child to the custody of an agency or organization authorized by law to receive and provide care for children which is operated in a manner that provides such care, guidance, and control as would be provided in a family home as defined in the court's order, if the court determines that such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child.

"(6) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), or (5) of this subsection, the court may take other suitable measures for the care and welfare of the child.

"(b) A placement may be made under the terms of this Code section only if the court finds that such placement is in the best interest of the child.

"(c) The court shall transmit a copy of every final order terminating the parental rights of a parent to the Office of Adoptions of the Department of Human Resources within 15 days of the filing of such order.

"(d) The custodian has authority to consent to the adoption of the child, the child's marriage, the child's enlistment in the armed forces of the United States, and surgical and other medical treatment for the child.

"(e) Except in those cases where the child was placed pursuant to paragraph (3) or (5) of subsection (a) of this Code section, if a petition seeking the adoption of the child is not filed within six months after the date of the disposition order, the court shall then, and at least every six months thereafter as long as the child remains unadopted, review the circumstances of the child to determine what efforts have been made to assure that the child will be adopted. The court may then enter such orders as it deems necessary to further the adoption, including but not limited to another placement. In those cases where the child was placed with a guardian of the child's person pursuant to paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this Code section, the guardian shall report to the court in the same manner and at the same frequency as is required for guardians of the person of minors appointed by the judge of the probate court. In those cases where the child was placed pursuant to paragraph (5) of subsection (a) of this Code section, the court shall, at least every six months thereafter as long as the child remains subject to the jurisdiction of the court, review the circumstances of the child to determine that placement in the family home-like setting continues to be in the child's best interests."

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Human Services" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

In 2009, the Code Commission, due to irreconcilable conflicts, treated the amendment of this section by Laws 2009, Act 37, § 2, as superseded by Laws 2009, Act 102, § 2–2. See Butts County v. Strahan, 107 S.E. 163, 151 Ga. 417 (1921).

The 2010 amendment by Act 418 rewrote subsec. (a) which had read as follows:

"(a)(1) If, upon the entering of an order terminating the parental rights of a parent, there is no parent having parental rights, the court shall first attempt to place the child with a person related to the child by blood or marriage or with a member of the child's extended family if such a person is willing and, after study by the probation officer or other person or agency designated by the court, is found by the court to be qualified to receive and care for the child, if the court determines such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child. A placement effected under this paragraph shall be conditioned upon the family member who is given permanent custody or who is granted an adoption of the child agreeing to abide by the terms and conditions of the order of the court.

"(2) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the court may commit the child to the custody of the Department of Human Services or to a licensed child-placing agency willing to accept custody for the purpose of placing the child for adoption, if the court determines such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child.

"(3) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection, the court may commit the child to a suitable individual on the condition that the person becomes the guardian of the person of the child pursuant to the court's authority under Code Section 15–11–30.1, if the court determines such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child.

"(4) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of this subsection, the court may commit the child to the custody of the Department of Human Services or to a licensed child-placing agency willing to accept custody for the purpose of placing the child in a foster home, if the court determines such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child.

"(5) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4) of this subsection, the court may commit the child to the custody of an agency or organization authorized by law to receive and provide care for children which is operated in a manner that provides such care, guidance, and control as would be provided in a family home as defined in the court's order, if the court determines that such placement is the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child.

"(6) If no placement of the child is effected under paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), or (5) of this subsection, the court may take other suitable measures for the care and welfare of the child."

§ 15–11–104. Conflicting provisions; notice of hearing or other proceeding to foster parents and preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for child

In a proceeding under this article, the provisions of Article 1 of this chapter shall apply unless in conflict with this article. In advance of any hearing or other proceeding to be held with respect to a child pursuant to this article, the court shall provide written notice or shall direct that a party shall provide written notice of such hearing or other proceeding, including their right to be heard at such hearing or other proceeding, to the foster parents of the child and to any preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for the child, consistent with the form and timing of notice to parties; provided, however, that this provision shall not be construed to require a foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative caring for the child to be made a party to the hearing solely on the basis of such notice and right to be heard.

§ 15–11–106. Time of hearings; order of disposition

Provided that no just cause has been shown for delay, all hearings contemplated by this article shall be conducted within 90 days of the date a petition to terminate parental rights is filed pursuant to Code Section 15–11–95. Provided that no just cause has been shown by written finding of fact by the court for delay, an order of disposition shall be issued by the juvenile court no later than 30 days after the conclusion of the hearing on the petition to terminate parental rights. This Code section shall not affect the right to request a rehearing or the right to appeal the juvenile court's order.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–93.

The 2005 amendment by Act 75 rewrote the section which had read:

"All hearings contemplated by this article shall be conducted in an expedient manner. An order of disposition shall be issued by the juvenile court no later than one year after the filing of the petition required by Code Section 15–11–95, provided that no just cause has been shown for delay. This Code section shall not affect the right to request a rehearing or the right to appeal the juvenile court's order."

Article 3

Parental Notification

§ 15–11–110. Short title

This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Parental Notification Act."

Laws 1987, p. 1013, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 13, § 15; Laws 1988, p. 661, § 1.

§ 15–11–111. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Abortion" means the use or prescription of any instrument, medicine, drug, or any other substance or device with the intent to terminate the pregnancy of a female known to be pregnant. The term "abortion" shall not include the use or prescription of any instrument, medicine, drug, or any other substance or device employed solely to increase the probability of a live birth, to preserve the life or health of the child after live birth, or to remove a dead unborn child who died as a result of a spontaneous abortion. The term "abortion" also shall not include the prescription or use of contraceptives.

(2) "Proper identification" means any document issued by a governmental agency containing a description of the person, the person's photograph, or both, including, but not limited to, a driver's license, an identification card authorized under Code Sections 40–5–100 through 40–5–104 or similar identification card issued by another state, a military identification card, a passport, or an appropriate work authorization issued by the United States Immigration and Customs Enforcement Division of the Department of Homeland Security.

(3) "Unemancipated minor" means any person under the age of 18 who is not or has not been married or who is under the care, custody, and control of such person's parent or parents, guardian, or the juvenile court of competent jurisdiction.

Laws 1987, p. 1013, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 661, § 1; Laws 2005, Act 400, § 1, eff. May 10, 2005; Laws 2008, Act 471, § 15, eff. May 12, 2008.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2005 amendment by Act 400 rewrote the section, which had read:

"As used in this article, the term:

"(1) 'Abortion' means the intentional termination of human pregnancy with an intention other than to produce a live birth or to remove a dead fetus.

"(2) 'Unemancipated minor' means any person under the age of 18 who is not or has not been married or who is under the care, custody, and control of such person's parent or parents, guardian, person standing in loco parentis, or the juvenile court of competent jurisdiction."

The 2008 amendment by Act 471 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

§ 15–11–112. Notification requirements; waiver; court order

(a) No physician or other person shall perform an abortion upon an unemancipated minor under the age of 18 years unless:

(1)(A) The minor seeking an abortion shall be accompanied by a parent or guardian who shall show proper identification and state that the parent or guardian is the lawful parent or guardian of the minor and that the parent or guardian has been notified that an abortion is to be performed on the minor;

(B) The physician or the physician's qualified agent gives at least 24 hours' actual notice, in person or by telephone, to a parent or guardian of the pending abortion and the name and address of the place where the abortion is to be performed; provided, however, that, if the person so notified indicates that he or she has been previously informed that the minor was seeking an abortion or if the person so notified has not been previously informed and he or she clearly expresses that he or she does not wish to consult with the minor, then in either event the abortion may proceed in accordance with Chapter 9A of Title 31; or

(C) The physician or a physician's qualified agent gives written notice of the pending abortion and the address of the place where the abortion is to be performed, sent by certified mail, return receipt requested with delivery confirmation, addressed to a parent or guardian at the usual place of abode of the parent or guardian. Unless proof of delivery is otherwise sooner established, such notice shall be deemed delivered 48 hours after mailing. The time of mailing shall be recorded by the physician or agent in the minor's file. The abortion may be performed 24 hours after the delivery of the notice; provided, however, that, if the person so notified certifies in writing that he or she has been previously informed that the minor was seeking an abortion or if the person so notified has not been previously informed and he or she certifies in writing that he or she does not wish to consult with the minor, then in either event the abortion may proceed in accordance with Chapter 9A of Title 31; and

(2) The minor signs a consent form stating that she consents, freely and without coercion, to the abortion.

(b) If the unemancipated minor or the physician or a physician's qualified agent, as the case may be, elects not to comply with any one of the requirements of subparagraph (a)(1)(A), (a)(1)(B), or (a)(1)(C) of this Code section, or if the parent or legal guardian of the minor cannot be located, the minor may petition, on the minor's own behalf or by next friend, any juvenile court in the state for a waiver of such requirement pursuant to the procedures provided for in Code Section 15–11–114. The juvenile court shall assist the minor or next friend in preparing the petition and notices required pursuant to this Code section. Venue shall be lawful in any county, notwithstanding Code Section 15–11–29.

(c) No abortion shall be performed unless the requirements of subparagraph (a)(1)(A), (a)(1)(B), or (a)(1)(C) of this Code section have been met or the minor has obtained a court order waiving such requirements.

Laws 1987, p. 1013, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 661, § 1; Laws 2001, p. 4, § 15; Laws 2005, Act 400, § 2, eff. May 10, 2005.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2001 amendment was a correction bill.

The 2005 amendment by Act 400 rewrote the section, which had read:

"(a) No physician or other person shall perform an abortion upon an unemancipated minor under the age of 18 years unless:

"(1)(A) The minor seeking an abortion shall furnish a statement, signed by a parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis and such minor, stating that such parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis is the lawful parent or guardian of such minor, or is the person standing in loco parentis of such minor, and that such parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis has been notified that an abortion is to be performed on such minor; or

"(B) The physician or an agent gives at least 24 hours' actual notice, in person or by telephone, to a parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis of the minor, of the pending abortion and the name and address of the place where the abortion is to be performed; provided, however, that, if the person so notified indicates that he or she has been previously informed that the minor was seeking an abortion or if the person so notified has not been previously informed and he or she clearly expresses that he or she does not wish to consult with the minor, then in either event the abortion may proceed immediately; or

"(C) The physician or an agent gives written notice of the pending abortion and the address of the place where the abortion is to be performed, sent by regular mail, addressed to a parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis of the minor at the usual place of abode of the parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis. Unless proof of delivery is otherwise sooner established, such notice shall be deemed delivered 48 hours after mailing. The time of mailing shall be recorded by the physician or agent in the minor's file. The abortion may be performed 24 hours after the delivery of the notice; provided, however, that, if the person so notified indicates that he or she has been previously informed that the minor was seeking an abortion or if the person so notified has not been previously informed and he or she clearly expresses that he or she does not wish to consult with the minor, then in either event the abortion may proceed immediately; and

"(2) The minor signs a consent form stating that she consents, freely and without coercion, to the abortion.

"(b) If the unemancipated minor or the physician or an agent, as the case may be, elects not to comply with any one of the notification requirements of subparagraph (a)(1)(A), (a)(1)(B), or (a)(1)(C) of this Code section, or if the parent, legal guardian, or person standing in loco parentis of such minor cannot be located, such minor may petition, on such minor's own behalf or by next friend, any juvenile court in the state for a waiver of such requirement pursuant to the procedures provided for in Code Section 15–11–114. Such juvenile court shall assist the minor or next friend in preparing the petition and notices required pursuant to this Code section. Venue shall be lawful in any county, notwithstanding Code Section 15–11–29."

§ 15–11–113. Hearing; notification of date, time and place

Notwithstanding Code Sections 15–11–38, 15–11–38.1, and 15–11–39, the unemancipated minor or next friend shall be notified of the date, time, and place of the hearing in such proceedings at the time of filing the petition. The hearing shall be held within three days of the date of filing, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays. The parents or guardian or person standing in loco parentis of the unemancipated minor shall not be served with the petition or with a summons or otherwise notified of the proceeding. If a hearing is not held within the time prescribed in this Code section, the petition shall be deemed granted.

Laws 1987, p. 1013, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 661, § 1; Laws 2001, p. 4, § 15.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2001 amendment was a correction bill.

§ 15–11–114. Court proceedings; appellate review

(a) An unemancipated minor may participate in proceedings in the court on such minor's own behalf and the court shall advise such minor of the right to court appointed counsel and shall provide such minor with such counsel upon request or if such minor is not already adequately represented.

(b) All court proceedings under this Code section shall be conducted in a manner to preserve the complete anonymity of the parties and shall be given such precedence over other pending matters as is necessary to ensure that a decision is reached by the court as expeditiously as is possible under the circumstances of the case. In no event shall the name, address, birth date, or social security number of such minor be disclosed.

(c) The requirement of subparagraph (a)(1)(A), (a)(1)(B), or (a)(1)(C) of Code Section 15–11–112 shall be waived if the court finds either:

(1) That the unemancipated minor is mature enough and well enough informed to make the abortion decision in consultation with her physician, independently of the wishes of such minor's parent or guardian; or

(2) That the notice to a parent or, if the minor is subject to guardianship, the legal guardian pursuant to Code Section 15–11–112 would not be in the best interests of the minor.

(d) A court that conducts proceedings under this Code section shall issue written and specific factual findings and legal conclusions supporting its decision and shall order that a record of the evidence be maintained. The juvenile court shall render its decision within 24 hours of the conclusion of the hearing and a certified copy of same shall be furnished immediately to the minor. If the juvenile court fails to render its decision within 24 hours after the conclusion of the hearing, then the petition shall be deemed granted. All juvenile court records shall be sealed in a manner which will preserve anonymity.

(e) An expedited appeal completely preserving the anonymity of the parties shall be available to any unemancipated minor to whom the court denies a waiver of notice. The appellate courts are authorized and requested to issue promptly such rules as are necessary to preserve anonymity and to ensure the expeditious disposition of procedures provided by this Code section. In no event shall the name, address, birth date, or social security number of such minor be disclosed during the expedited appeal or thereafter.

(f) No filing fees shall be required of any unemancipated minor who uses the procedures provided by this Code section.

Laws 1987, p. 1013, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 13, § 15; Laws 1988, p. 661, § 1; Laws 2005, Act 400, § 3, eff. May 10, 2005.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2005 amendment by Act 400, in subsec. (c), deleted "notification" preceding "requirement" in the introductory language, substituted "parent or guardian" for "parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis" in par. (1), and deleted "or person standing in loco parentis" following "legal guardian" in par. (2).

§ 15–11–115. Applicability of law

The requirements and procedures of this article shall apply to all unemancipated minors within this state whether or not such persons are residents of this state.

Laws 1987, p. 1013, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 661, § 1.

§ 15–11–116. Exceptions based upon medical emergency

This article shall not apply when, in the best clinical judgment of the attending physician on the facts of the case before him, a medical emergency exists that so complicates the condition of the minor as to require an immediate abortion. A person who performs an abortion as a medical emergency under the provisions of this Code section shall certify in writing the medical indications on which this judgment was based when filing such reports as are required by law.

Laws 1987, p. 1013, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 661, § 1.

§ 15–11–117. Civil and criminal immunities

Any physician or any person employed or connected with a physician, hospital, or health care facility performing abortions who acts in good faith shall be justified in relying on the representations of the unemancipated minor or of any other person providing the information required under this article. No physician or other person who furnishes professional services related to an act authorized or required by this article and who relies upon the information furnished pursuant to this article shall be held to have violated any criminal law or to be civilly liable for such reliance, provided that the physician or other person acted in good faith.

Laws 1987, p. 1013, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 661, § 1.

§ 15–11–118. Violations

Any person who violates the provisions of this article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and any person who intentionally encourages another to provide false information pursuant to this article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Laws 1987, p. 1013, § 2; Laws 1988, p. 661, § 1.

Article 4

Mental Health

§ 15–11–149. Disposition of mentally ill or mentally retarded child

(a) Study and report. If, at any time, the evidence indicates that a child may be suffering from mental retardation or mental illness, the court may commit the child to an appropriate institution, agency, or individual for study and report on the child's mental condition.

(b) Determination of disability. The juvenile court judge shall determine whether a child has been determined to be handicapped as defined in 20 U.S.C. Sections 1401(a)(1) and 1401(a)(15). If there is an Individualized Education Program (IEP) as defined in 20 U.S.C. Section 1401(a)(20), it shall be made a part of the dispositional hearing record.

(c) Commitment. If it appears from the study and report undertaken pursuant to subsection (a) of this Code section that the child is committable under the laws of this state as a mentally retarded or mentally ill child, the court shall order the child detained and shall proceed within ten days to commit the child to the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities.

(d) Other disposition or transfer. If the child is found not to be committable, the court shall proceed to the disposition or transfer of the child as otherwise provided by Article 1 of this chapter.

(e) Applicability of Code Section 15–11–62. The provisions of Code Section 15–11–62 shall not apply to any child 13 to 15 years of age who is found to be suffering from mental illness or mental retardation. Any such child shall not be committed to the Department of Corrections but shall be committed to the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities as provided in this Code section.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, renumbered this section from § 15–11–40.

The 2002 amendment in two instances substituted "Division of Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Addictive Diseases of the Department of Human Resources" for "Division of Mental Health, Mental Retardation, and Substance Abuse of the Department of Human Resources."

The 2006 revision of Article 4 of Chapter 11 by Act 541 reenacted the section without amendment.

The 2007 amendment by Act 18 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities" for "Division of Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Addictive Diseases of the Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

§ 15–11–150. Legislative purpose

(a) The purpose of this article is to:

(1) Set forth procedures for a determination of mental incompetency and a declaration of dependency for any child while the child is determined to be not mentally competent; and

(2) Provide a mechanism for the development and implementation of a mental competency plan for treatment, habilitation, support, or supervision, within current resources, for any child who is determined to be not mentally competent to participate in an adjudication or disposition hearing and is adjudicated dependent upon the court.

(b) The provisions of this article shall not apply to any case in which the superior court has jurisdiction pursuant to Code Section 15–11–62.

Laws 1999, p. 507, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 20, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 541, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring.

The 2006 revision of Article 4 of Chapter 11 by Act 541 reenacted the section without amendment.

§ 15–11–151. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Dependent" means a child who is alleged to have committed a delinquent or unruly act, is found not mentally competent to stand trial by the court, and has charges pending which have not been dismissed by the court.

(2) "Judge" means any judge, associate judge, or judge pro tempore of the court exercising jurisdiction over juvenile matters.

(3) "Mental competency plan" means an interagency treatment, habilitation, support, or supervision plan developed at an interagency meeting of state or local agency representatives, parties, and other interested persons, which is achievable within the limits of current resources, following a court's finding that a child is not mentally competent and dependent upon the court and submitted to the court for approval as part of the disposition of the dependency case. The goal of a mental competency plan is supervision, to bring or restore the child to mental competency such that he or she is able to participate in adjudication, a disposition hearing for delinquency or unruliness, or a proceeding regarding transfer to superior court.

(4) "Mental competency proceedings" means hearings conducted to determine whether a child is mentally competent to participate in adjudication, a disposition hearing, or a transfer proceeding held pursuant to this chapter.

(5) "Mentally competent" means having sufficient present ability to understand the nature and objectives of the proceedings, against himself or herself, to comprehend his or her own situation in relation to the proceedings, and to render assistance to the defense attorney in the preparation and presentation of his or her case in all adjudication, disposition, or transfer hearings held pursuant to this chapter. The child's age or immaturity may be used as the basis for determining the child's competency.

(6) "Mentally ill" means having a disorder of thought or mood which significantly impairs judgment, behavior, capacity to recognize reality, or ability to cope with the ordinary demands of life.

(7) "Mental retardation" means a state of significant subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior and originating in the developmental period.

(8) "Plan manager" means a person who is under the supervision of the court and is appointed by the court to convene a meeting of all relevant parties for the purpose of developing a mental competency plan. Said person is responsible for collecting all previous histories of the child including evaluations, assessments, and school records.

(9) "Qualified examiner" means a licensed psychologist or psychiatrist who has expertise in child development and has received training in forensic evaluation procedures through formal instruction, professional supervision, or both.

Laws 1999, p. 507, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 20, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 541, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, reenacted this section without change.

The 2006 amendment by Act 541, in par. (1), added "to stand trial" following "not mentally competent"; in par. (5), added "The child's age of immaturity may be used as the basis for determining the child's competency." at the end of the paragraph; redesignated pars. (6) and (7) as pars. (8) and (9) respectively, and added new pars. (6) and (7).

§ 15–11–152. Stay of proceedings regarding child who may not be mentally competent; evaluation of child's mental condition

(a) If at any time after the filing of a petition alleging delinquency or unruliness the court has reason to believe that the child named in the petition may not be mentally competent, the court on its own motion or on the motion of the attorney representing the child, any guardian ad litem for the child, the child's parent or legal guardian, or the attorney representing the state may stay all delinquency or unruly conduct proceedings relating to that petition and order an evaluation of the child's mental condition. Prior to the administration of any such evaluation, the court shall appoint an attorney to represent the child if the child is not yet represented by counsel. All time limits under Article 1 of this chapter for adjudication and disposition of that petition are tolled during the evaluation, adjudication, and disposition phases of the mental competency proceeding.

(b) An evaluation ordered under subsection (a) of this Code section shall be conducted by a qualified examiner who shall consider whether the child is mentally competent. If the qualified examiner determines that the child is not competent, the qualified examiner shall complete a full mental health evaluation, study, and report pursuant to Code Section 15–11–149. If the basis for questioning the child's mental competency concerns a problem with intellectual functioning, mental retardation, mental illness, maturity, or a learning disability, the qualified examiner must be a psychiatrist or licensed psychologist. The juvenile court shall provide the qualified examiner with any law enforcement or court records necessary for understanding the petition alleging delinquency or unruliness. The attorney for the child may provide the qualified examiner with any records from any other available sources that are deemed necessary for the mental competency evaluation.

(c) A qualified examiner who conducts an evaluation under subsection (b) of this Code section shall submit a written report to the court, within 30 days from receipt of the court order requiring the evaluation, which report shall contain the following:

(1) The reason for the evaluation;

(2) The evaluation procedures used, including any psychometric instruments administered, any records reviewed, and the identity of any persons interviewed;

(3) Any available pertinent background information;

(4) The results of a mental status exam, including the diagnosis and description of any psychiatric symptoms, cognitive deficiency, or both;

(5) A description of abilities and deficits in the following mental competency functions:

(A) The ability to understand and appreciate the nature and object of the proceedings;

(B) The ability to comprehend his or her situation in relation to the proceedings; and

(C) The ability to render assistance to the defense attorney in the preparation of his or her case;

(6) An opinion regarding the potential significance of the child's mental competency, strengths, and deficits;

(7) An opinion regarding whether or not the child should be considered mentally competent; and

(8) A specific statement for the basis for a determination of incompetence.

(d) If, in the opinion of the qualified examiner, the child should not be considered mentally competent, the qualified examiner shall complete a full mental health evaluation and report pursuant to Code Section 15–11–149, and such report shall also include the following:

(1) A diagnosis made as to whether there is a substantial probability that the child will attain mental competency to participate in adjudication, a disposition hearing, and a transfer hearing in the foreseeable future;

(2) A recommendation as to the appropriate treatment setting and whether residential or nonresidential treatment is required or appropriate;

(3) Where appropriate, recommendations for the general level and type of remediation necessary for significant deficits; and

(4) Where appropriate, recommendations for modifications of court procedure which may help compensate for mental competency weaknesses.

(e) The court in its discretion may grant the qualified examiner an extension in filing the evaluation report.

(f) Copies of the written evaluation report shall be provided by the court to the attorney representing the child, the attorney representing the state, the prosecuting attorney or a member of his or her staff, and any guardian ad litem for the child no later than five working days after receipt of the report by the court.

(g) Upon a showing of good cause by any party or upon the court's own motion, the court may order additional examinations by other qualified examiners. In no event shall more than one examination be conducted by a qualified examiner employed by the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities.

(h) No statement made by a child or information obtained in the course of an evaluation, hearing, or other proceeding provided for in this Code section, whether the evaluation is with or without the consent of the child, shall be admitted into evidence against the child in any future proceeding in the state's case-in-chief.

Laws 1999, p. 507, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 20, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 541, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006; Laws 2009, Act 102, § 3–2, eff. July 1, 2009.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, reenacted this section without change.

The 2006 amendment by Act 541, in subsec. (a), added "the child's parent or legal guardian," after "guardian ad litem for the child," and added "Prior to the administration of any such evaluation, the court shall appoint an attorney to represent the child if the child is not yet represented by counsel." following "child's mental condition."; in subsec. (b), added "If the qualified examiner determines that the child is not competent, the qualified examiner shall complete a full mental health evaluation, study, and report pursuant to Code Section 15–11–149." following "child is mentally competent.", added "mental illness, maturity," following "mental retardation,", and deleted "probation officers of" preceding "juvenile court shall provide"; in subsec. (c), added new par. (8); rewrote subsec. (d); and in subsec. (f), substituted "prosecuting attorney" for "district attorney". Prior to amendment, subsec. (d) had read:

"(d) If, in the opinion of the qualified examiner, the child should not be considered mentally competent, the evaluation report shall also include the following:

"(1) A diagnosis made as to whether there is a substantial probability that the child will attain mental competency to participate in adjudication, a disposition hearing, and a transfer hearing in the foreseeable future;

"(2) Recommendations for the general level and type of remediation necessary for significant deficits; and

"(3) Recommendations for modifications of court procedure which may help compensate for mental competency weaknesses."

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

§ 15–11–153. Mental competency hearings; findings by court

(a) A hearing to determine mental competency shall be conducted within 60 days after the initial court order for evaluation. At least ten days' prior written notice of the hearing shall be transmitted to the child, any parent, guardian, or other legal custodian of the child, any guardian ad litem for the child, the attorney representing the child, and the attorney representing the state. Ten days' prior written notice of the hearing shall be served on the prosecuting attorney for all mental competency proceedings in which the prosecuting attorney, or a member of the prosecuting attorney's staff, may participate. The hearing may be continued by the court for good cause shown.

(b) The burden of proving that the child is not mentally competent shall be on the child. The standard of proof necessary for proving mental incompetency shall be a preponderance of the evidence.

(c) At the hearing to determine mental competency, the attorney representing the child and the attorney representing the state shall have the right to:

(1) Present evidence;

(2) Call and examine witnesses;

(3) Cross-examine witnesses; and

(4) Present arguments.

The qualified examiner appointed by the court shall be considered the court's witness and shall be subject to cross-examination by both the attorney representing the child and the attorney representing the state.

(d) The court's findings of fact shall be based on any evaluations of the child's mental condition conducted by qualified examiners appointed by the court and any evaluations of the child's mental condition conducted by independent evaluators hired by the parties and any additional evidence presented.

(e) If the court finds that the child is mentally competent, the proceedings which have been suspended shall be resumed and the time limits under Article 1 of this chapter for adjudication and disposition of the petition shall begin to run from the date of the order finding the child mentally competent.

(f) If the court finds that the child is not mentally competent, the child shall be adjudicated dependent by the court. At the time the child is adjudicated dependent upon the court, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem to represent the best interests of the child if a guardian ad litem has not been appointed previously.

(g) All court orders determining incompetency shall include specific written findings by the court as to the nature of the incompetency and whether the child requires a secure or nonsecure treatment.

(h) Copies of the court's findings shall be transmitted to the same parties to whom notice of the hearing was provided within ten days following the issuance of those findings.

Laws 1999, p. 507, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 20, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 541, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, which restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring, reenacted this section without change.

The 2006 amendment by Act 541 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a) A hearing of mental competency shall be conducted within 60 days after the initial court order for evaluation. At least ten days' prior written notice of the hearing shall be transmitted to the child, any parent, guardian, or other legal custodian of the child, any guardian ad litem for the child, the attorney representing the child, and the attorney representing the state. Ten days' prior written notice of the hearing shall be served on the district attorney, for all mental competency proceedings in which the district attorney, or a member of the district attorney's staff, may participate. The hearing may be continued by the court for good cause shown.

"(b) At the hearing of mental competency, the attorney representing the child and the attorney representing the state shall have the right to:

"(1) Present evidence;

"(2) Call and examine witnesses;

"(3) Cross-examine witnesses; and

"(4) Present arguments.

"The qualified examiner appointed by the court shall be considered the court's witness and shall be subject to cross-examination by both the attorney representing the child and the attorney representing the state.

"(c) The court's findings of fact shall be based on any evaluations of the child's mental condition conducted by qualified examiners appointed by the court and any evaluations of the child's mental condition conducted by independent evaluators hired by the parties. The burden of proving that the child is not mentally competent shall be on the child. The standard of proof necessary for proving mental incompetency shall be a preponderance of the evidence. Copies of the court's findings shall be transmitted to the same parties to whom notice of the hearing was provided within ten days following the issuance of those findings.

"(d) If the court finds that the child is mentally competent, the proceedings which have been suspended shall be resumed and the time limits under Article 1 of this chapter for adjudication and disposition of the petition shall begin to run from the date of the order finding the child mentally competent.

"(e) If the court finds that the child is not mentally competent, the child may be adjudicated dependent by the court. If the court determines that a child alleged to have committed an act which is a misdemeanor if committed by an adult or an unruly act is not mentally competent, and the child is adjudicated dependent, the court may dismiss the petition without prejudice. A child who is thus found not to be mentally competent shall not be subject to discretionary transfer to superior court, adjudication, disposition, or modification of disposition as long as such mental incompetency exists. At the time the child is adjudicated dependent upon the court, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem to represent the best interests of the child if a guardian ad litem has not been appointed previously."

§ 15–11–153.1. Finding of mental incompetency; dismissal of petition; transfer to state court

(a) If the court determines that a child is mentally incompetent, is dependent, or is alleged to have committed an unruly act or an act which would be a misdemeanor if committed by an adult, the court may dismiss the petition without prejudice.

(b) A child who is found to be mentally incompetent shall not be subject to discretionary transfer to superior court, adjudication, disposition, or modification of disposition provided that the mental incompetency exists.

Laws 2006, Act 541, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

In 2006, the Code Commission, in subsec. (a), inserted "or" following ", is dependent,". See § 28–9–5.

§ 15–11–153.2. Transfer of proceedings; jurisdiction

(a) If at any time following an adjudication of dependency, the court determines that the child is a resident of a county of this state other than the county in which the court sits, the court may transfer the proceeding to the county of the child's residence unless the act alleged would be a felony if committed by an adult.

(b) When any case is transferred pursuant to this Code section, certified copies of all legal, social history, health, or mental health records pertaining to the case on file with the clerk of the court shall accompany the transfer. Compliance with this Code section shall terminate jurisdiction in the sending court and initiate jurisdiction in the receiving court.

(c) If the child's mental competency is restored, jurisdiction of the case may be returned to the sending court.

Laws 2006, Act 541, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

§ 15–11–154. Plan manager; mental competency plan

(a) Upon an adjudication of dependency, the court having jurisdiction of the case shall appoint a plan manager who may be any guardian ad litem for the child or may be any other person who is under the supervision of the court. The person so appointed shall submit a mental competency plan to the court within 30 days of the court's adjudication of dependency. That plan shall include the following:

(1) The specific deficits the plan is attempting to address, including supervision, mental competency, or mental competency restoration;

(2) An outline of the specific provisions for supervision of the child for protection of the community and the child;

(3) An outline of a plan designed to provide for treatment, habilitation, support, or supervision services in the least restrictive environment achievable within the limits of current resources;

(4) If the plan recommends treatment in a secure environment, certification by the plan manager that all other appropriate community based treatment options have been exhausted; and

(5) Identification of all parties, including the child, agency representatives, and other persons responsible for each element of the plan.

The court in its discretion may grant the plan manager an extension in filing the mental competency plan.

(b)(1) The mental competency plan shall be developed at a meeting of all relevant parties convened by the plan manager. The plan manager shall request that the following persons attend the meeting:

(A) Any parent, guardian, or other legal custodian of the child;

(B) The attorney representing the child;

(C) The attorney representing the state;

(D) Any guardian ad litem of the child;

(E) Mental health or mental retardation representatives;

(F) Any probation officer or caseworker who works with the child;

(G) A representative from the child's school; and

(H) Any family member of the child who has shown an interest and involvement in the child's well-being.

(2) The plan manager may request that other relevant persons attend the mental competency plan meeting including but not limited to the following:

(A) A representative from the Division of Public Health of the Department of Community Health;

(B) A child protective services worker; and

(C) Representatives of the public and private resources to be utilized in the plan.

(3) The plan manager shall be responsible for collecting all previous histories of the child, including but not limited to previous evaluations, assessments, and school records, and for making such histories available for consideration by the persons at the meeting.

(4) Before the disposition hearing and review hearings, the plan manager shall be responsible for convening a meeting of all parties and representatives of all agencies.

(5) The plan manager and persons enumerated in paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of this Code section shall identify to the court any person who should provide testimony at such hearing.

(6) The plan manager shall be responsible for monitoring the competency plan, presenting to the court amendments to such plan as needed, and presenting evidence to the court for the reapproval of such plan at subsequent review hearings.

Laws 1999, p. 507, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 20, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 541, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006; Laws 2010, Act 624, § 15, eff. June 3, 2010.

Historical and Statutory Notes

"(3) The plan manager shall be responsible for collecting all previous histories of the child, including but not limited to previous evaluations, assessments, and school records, and for making such histories available for consideration by the persons at the meeting."

The 2010 amendment by Act 624 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

§ 15–11–155. Disposition hearing on mental competency plan; commitment of child to certain agencies; continuing jurisdiction

(a) The court shall hold a disposition hearing for the purpose of approving the mental competency plan within 30 days after the mental competency plan has been submitted to the court. Thereafter, the court shall hold a hearing for the purpose of reviewing the child's condition and approving the mental competency plan every six months during the child's dependency.

(b) The persons required to be notified of the mental competency disposition hearing and witnesses identified by the plan manager shall be given at least ten days' prior notice of the disposition hearing and any subsequent hearing to review the child's condition and shall be afforded an opportunity to be heard at any such hearing. The victim, if any, of the child's delinquent or unruly act shall also be provided with the same ten days' prior notice regarding any such hearing and shall be afforded an opportunity to be heard and to present a victim impact form to the court at any such hearing. The judge shall make a determination regarding sequestration of witnesses in order to protect the privileges and confidentiality rights of the child.

(c) At the disposition hearing, the court shall enter an order incorporating a mental competency plan as part of the disposition. At the time of disposition, a child who has been adjudicated a dependent of the court shall be placed in an appropriate treatment setting. If a dependent child is housed in a detention or youth development facility at the time of disposition, such child shall be moved to an appropriate treatment setting within five business days.

(d) If the court determines at any time that the child will not become competent to proceed, the court may dismiss the delinquency petition. If, at the end of the two-year period following the date of the order of incompetence, the child has not attained competence and there is no substantial evidence that the child will attain competence within a year, the court shall dismiss the delinquency petition. If appropriate, the court may order that civil commitment proceedings be initiated. Such proceedings shall be instituted not less than 60 days prior to the dismissal of the delinquency petition.

(e) The prosecuting attorney or a member of the prosecuting attorney's staff may seek civil commitment pursuant to Chapters 3 and 4 of Title 37. If, during the disposition hearing or any subsequent review hearing, the court determines that the child meets criteria for commitment and that services are available under the relevant laws for commitment to any agency or agencies for treatment, habilitation, support, or supervision, the court may commit the child to an appropriate agency or agencies for services under applicable law.

(f) At any time, in the event of a change in circumstances regarding the child, the court on its own motion or on the motion of the attorney representing the child, any guardian ad litem for the child, the attorney for the state, or the plan manager may set a hearing for review of the mental competency plan and any proposed amendments to that plan. The court may issue an appropriate order incorporating an amended mental competency plan.

(g) At the disposition hearing and at every review hearing, the court shall consider whether the petition alleging delinquency or unruliness should be withdrawn, maintained, or dismissed, without prejudice, upon grounds other than the child's not being mentally competent. If the court dismisses the petition, the state may seek to refile petitions alleging felonies if the child is later determined to be mentally competent. The state may also seek transfer to superior court if the child is later determined to be mentally competent.

(h)(1) If the court determines that a child alleged to have committed an act which is a felony if committed by an adult is not mentally competent and the child is adjudicated as a dependent, the court shall retain jurisdiction of the child for up to two years after the date of the order of adjudication. The order may be extended for additional two-year periods as provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–58.1.

(2) If the court determines that a child alleged to have committed an act which is a misdemeanor if committed by an adult or an unruly act is not mentally competent and the child is adjudicated as a dependent, the court shall retain jurisdiction of the child for up to 120 days following the disposition order incorporating the mental competency plan. The order may not be extended by the court.

(i) If the court finds that a child is not mentally competent to stand trial, any party may file at any time a motion for a rehearing on the issue of the child's mental incompetency. The court shall grant such motion upon a showing by the moving party that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child is now mentally competent. If this motion is granted, the court shall proceed as provided in Code Sections 15–11–152, 15–11–153, 15–11–153.1, 15–11–153.2, 15–11–154, and this Code section and shall enter findings of fact as to the child's mental competency.

(j) If a child is under a mental competency plan when the child reaches the age of 18, the plan manager shall make a referral to appropriate adult services.

Laws 1999, p. 507, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 20, § 2; Laws 2005, Act 19, § 15, eff. April 7, 2005; Laws 2006, Act 541, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006; Laws 2010, Act 403, § 3, eff. July 1, 2010.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment restructured this chapter into parts and modified statutory references to reflect this restructuring.

The 2005 amendment by Act 19 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

The 2006 amendment by Act 541 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a) The court shall hold a disposition hearing for the purpose of approving the mental competency plan within 30 days after the mental competency plan has been submitted to the court. Thereafter, the court shall hold a hearing for the purpose of reviewing the child's condition and approving the mental competency plan every six months during the child's dependency. Before the disposition hearing and any review hearings, the plan manager shall be responsible for convening a meeting of all parties, representatives of all agencies, and other persons responsible for the plan and for identifying to the court any persons who should provide testimony at such hearing.

"(b) The persons required to be notified of the mental competency hearing and witnesses identified by the plan manager shall be given at least ten days' prior notice of the disposition hearing and any subsequent hearing to review the child's condition and shall be afforded an opportunity to be heard at any such hearing. The victim, if any, of the child's delinquent or unruly act shall also be provided with the same ten days' prior notice regarding any such hearing and shall be afforded an opportunity to be heard and to present a victim impact statement to the court at any such hearing. The judge shall make a determination regarding sequestration of witnesses in order to protect the privileges and confidentiality rights of the child.

"(c) At the disposition hearing, the court shall enter an order incorporating a mental competency plan as part of the disposition. If, upon subsequent review, the court determines that the child may be mentally competent, the court shall proceed as provided in Code Sections 15–11–152, 15–11–153, and 15–11–154 and enter findings of fact as to the child's mental competency.

"(d) At any time, in the event of a change in circumstances regarding the child, the court on its own motion or on the motion of the attorney representing the child, any guardian ad litem for the child, the attorney for the state, or the plan manager may set a hearing for review of the mental competency plan and any proposed amendments to that plan. The court may issue an appropriate order incorporating an amended mental competency plan.

"(e) At the disposition hearing and at every review hearing, the court shall consider whether the petition alleging delinquency or unruliness should be withdrawn, maintained, or dismissed, without prejudice, upon grounds other than the child's not being mentally competent. If the court dismisses the petition, the state may seek to refile petitions alleging felonies if the child is later determined to be mentally competent. The state may also seek transfer to superior court if the child is later determined to be mentally competent.

"(f) The district attorney or a member of his or her staff may seek civil commitment pursuant to Chapters 3 and 4 of Title 37. If, during the disposition hearing or any subsequent review hearing, the court determines that the child meets criteria for commitment and that services are available under the relevant Code provisions for commitment to any agency or agencies for treatment, habilitation, support, or supervision, the court may commit the child to an appropriate agency or agencies for services under applicable law.

"(g)(1) If the court determines that a child alleged to have committed an act which is a felony if committed by an adult is not mentally competent and the child is adjudicated as a dependent, the court shall retain jurisdiction of the child for up to two years after the date of the order of adjudication. The order may be extended for additional two-year periods as provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15–11–58.1.

"(2) If the court determines that a child alleged to have committed an act which is a misdemeanor if committed by an adult or an unruly act is not mentally competent and the child is adjudicated as a dependent, the court shall retain jurisdiction of the child for up to 120 days following the disposition order incorporating the mental competency plan. The order may not be extended by the court.

"(h) If the court finds that a child is not mentally competent to stand trial, any party may file at any time a motion for a rehearing on the issue of the child's mental incompetency. The court shall grant such motion upon a showing by the moving party that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child is now mentally competent. If this motion is granted, the court shall proceed as provided in Code Sections 15–11–152, 15–11–153, 15–11–154, and this Code section and shall enter findings of fact as to the child's mental competency.

"(i) If a child is under a mental competency plan when the child reaches the age of 18, the plan manager shall make a referral to appropriate adult services."

The 2010 amendment by Act 403, in subsec. (b), substituted "victim impact form" for "victim impact statement".

Article 5

Child Advocate for the Protection of Children

§ 15–11–170. Short title; legislative intent

(a) This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Georgia Child Advocate for the Protection of Children Act."

(b) In keeping with this article's purpose of assisting, protecting, and restoring the security of children whose well-being is threatened, it is the intent of the General Assembly that the mission of protection of the children of this state should have the greatest legislative and executive priority. Recognizing that the needs of children must be attended to in a timely manner and that more aggressive action should be taken to protect children from abuse and neglect, the General Assembly creates the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children to provide independent oversight of persons, organizations, and agencies responsible for providing services to or caring for children who are victims of child abuse and neglect, or whose domestic situation requires intervention by the state. The Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children will provide children with an avenue through which to seek relief when their rights are violated by state officials and agents entrusted with their protection and care.

Laws 2000, p. 243, § 1.

§ 15–11–171. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Advocate" or "child advocate" means the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children established under Code Section 15–11–172.

(2) "Agency" shall have the same meaning and application as provided for in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 50–14–1.

(3) "Child" or "children" means an individual receiving protective services from the division, for whom the division has an open case file, or who has been, or whose siblings, parents, or other caretakers have been the subject of a report to the division within the previous five years.

(4) "Department" means the Department of Human Services.

(5) "Division" means the Division of Family and Children Services of the Department of Human Services.

Laws 2000, p. 243, § 1; Laws 2009, Act 102, § 2–2, eff. July 1, 2009.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Human Services" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

§ 15–11–172. Creation of Office of Child Advocate for the Protection of Children; administrative assignment; staff and personnel; contracts

(a) There is created the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children. The Governor, by executive order, shall create a nominating committee which shall consider nominees for the position of the advocate and shall make a recommendation to the Governor. Such person shall have knowledge of the child welfare system, the juvenile justice system, and the legal system and shall be qualified by training and experience to perform the duties of the office as set forth in this article.

(b) The advocate shall be appointed by the Governor from a list of at least three names submitted by the nominating committee for a term of three years and until his or her successor is appointed and qualified and may be reappointed. The salary of the advocate shall not be less than $60,000.00 per year, shall be fixed by the Governor, and shall come from funds appropriated for the purposes of the advocate.

(c) The Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children shall be assigned to the Office of Planning and Budget for administrative purposes only, as described in Code Section 50–4–3.

(d) The advocate may appoint such staff as may be deemed necessary to effectively fulfill the purposes of this article, within the limitations of the funds available for the purposes of the advocate. The duties of the staff may include the duties and powers of the advocate if performed under the direction of the advocate. The advocate and his or her staff shall receive such reimbursement for travel and other expenses as is normally allowed to state employees, from funds appropriated for the purposes of the advocate.

(e) The advocate shall have the authority to contract with experts in fields including but not limited to medicine, psychology, education, child development, juvenile justice, mental health, and child welfare, as needed to support the work of the advocate, utilizing funds appropriated for the purposes of the advocate.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of state law, the advocate shall act independently of any state official, department, or agency in the performance of his or her duties.

(g) The advocate or his or her designee shall be an ex officio member of the State-wide Child Abuse Prevention Panel.

Laws 2000, p. 243, § 1.

§ 15–11–173. Duties of advocate

The advocate shall perform the following duties:

(1) Identify, receive, investigate, and seek the resolution or referral of complaints made by or on behalf of children concerning any act, omission to act, practice, policy, or procedure of an agency or any contractor or agent thereof that may adversely affect the health, safety, or welfare of the children;

(2) Refer complaints involving abused children to appropriate regulatory and law enforcement agencies;

(3) Coordinate and supervise the work of the Georgia Child Fatality Review Panel created by Code Section 19–15–4 and provide such staffing and administrative support to the panel as may be necessary to enable the panel to carry out its statutory duties;

(4) Report the death of any child to the chairperson of the child fatality review subcommittee of the county in which such child resided at the time of death, unless the advocate has knowledge that such death has been reported by the county medical examiner or coroner, pursuant to Code Section 19–15–3, and to provide such subcommittee access to any records of the advocate relating to such child;

(5) Provide periodic reports on the work of the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children, including but not limited to an annual written report for the Governor and the General Assembly and other persons, agencies, and organizations deemed appropriate. Such reports shall include recommendations for changes in policies and procedures to improve the health, safety, and welfare of children and shall be made expeditiously in order to timely influence public policy;

(6) Establish policies and procedures necessary for the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children to accomplish the purposes of this article including without limitation providing the division with a form of notice of availability of the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children. Such notice shall be posted prominently, by the division, in division offices and in facilities receiving public moneys for the care and placement of children and shall include information describing the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children and procedures for contacting that office; and

(7) Convene quarterly meetings with organizations, agencies, and individuals who work in the area of child protection to seek opportunities to collaborate and improve the status of children in Georgia.

Laws 2000, p. 243, § 1; Laws 2008, Act 562, § 3, eff. July 1, 2008.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2008 amendment by Act 562 redesignated pars. (3) through (6) as pars. (4) through (7), and added new par. (3).

§ 15–11–174. Rights and powers of advocate; motions to quash subpoenas; judicial actions

(a) The advocate shall have the following rights and powers:

(1) To communicate privately, by mail or orally, with any child and with each child's parent or guardian;

(2) To have access to all records and files of the division concerning or relating to a child, and to have access, including the right to inspect, copy, and subpoena records held by clerks of the various courts, law enforcement agencies, service providers, including medical and mental health, and institutions, public or private, with whom a particular child has been either voluntarily or otherwise placed for care or from whom the child has received treatment within the state. To the extent any such information provides the names and addresses of individuals who are the subject of any confidential proceeding or statutory confidentiality provisions, such names and addresses or related information which has the effect of identifying such individuals shall not be released to the public without the consent of such individuals. The Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children is bound by all confidentiality safeguards provided in Code Sections 49–5–40 and 49–5–44. Anyone wishing to obtain records held by the Office of the Child Advocate shall petition the original agency of record where such records exist;

(3) To enter and inspect any and all institutions, facilities, and residences, public and private, where a child has been placed by a court or the division and is currently residing. Upon entering such a place, the advocate shall notify the administrator or, in the absence of the administrator, the person in charge of the facility, before speaking to any children. After notifying the administrator or the person in charge of the facility, the advocate may communicate privately and confidentially with children in the facility, individually or in groups, or the advocate may inspect the physical plant. To the extent possible, entry and investigation provided by this Code section shall be conducted in a manner which will not significantly disrupt the provision of services to children;

(4) To apply to the Governor to bring legal action in the nature of a writ of mandamus or application for injunction pursuant to Code Section 45–15–18 to require an agency to take or refrain from taking any action required or prohibited by law involving the protection of children;

(5) To apply for and accept grants, gifts, and bequests of funds from other states, federal and interstate agencies, independent authorities, private firms, individuals, and foundations for the purpose of carrying out the lawful responsibilities of the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children;

(6) When less formal means of resolution do not achieve appropriate results, to pursue remedies provided by this article on behalf of children for the purpose of effectively carrying out the provisions of this article; and

(7) To engage in programs of public education and legislative advocacy concerning the needs of children requiring the intervention, protection, and supervision of courts and state and county agencies.

(b)(1) Upon issuance by the advocate of a subpoena in accordance with this article for law enforcement investigative records concerning an ongoing investigation, the subpoenaed party may move a court with appropriate jurisdiction to quash said subpoena.

(2) The court shall order a hearing on the motion to quash within five days of the filing of the motion to quash, which hearing may be continued for good cause shown by any party or by the court on its own motion. Subject to any right to an open hearing in contempt proceedings, such hearing shall be closed to the extent necessary to prevent disclosure of the identity of a confidential source; disclosure of confidential investigative or prosecution material which would endanger the life or physical safety of any person or persons; or disclosure of the existence of confidential surveillance, investigation, or grand jury materials or testimony in an ongoing criminal investigation or prosecution. Records, motions, and orders relating to a motion to quash shall be kept sealed by the court to the extent and for the time necessary to prevent public disclosure of such matters, materials, evidence, or testimony.

(c) The court shall, at or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance therewith, enter an order:

(1) Enforcing the subpoena as issued;

(2) Quashing or modifying the subpoena if it is unreasonable and oppressive; or

(3) Conditioning enforcement of the subpoena on the advocate maintaining confidential any evidence, testimony, or other information obtained from law enforcement or prosecution sources pursuant to the subpoena until the time the criminal investigation and prosecution are concluded. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, an investigation or prosecution shall be deemed to be concluded when the information becomes subject to public inspection pursuant to Code Section 50–18–72. The court shall include in its order written findings of fact and conclusions of law.

Laws 2000, p. 243, § 1; Laws 2001, p. 859, § 1; Laws 2002, p. 415, § 15; Laws 2007, Act 248, § 1, eff. May 24, 2007.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2001 amendment designated the existing section as subsec. (a) and added subsecs. (b) and (c).

The 2002 amendment was a correction bill.

The 2007 amendment by Act 248, in par. (2) of subsec. (a), substituted a period for the semicolon following "such individuals" and added "The Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children is bound by all confidentiality safeguards provided in Code Sections 49–5–40 and 49–5–44. Anyone wishing to obtain records held by the Office of the Child Advocate shall petition the original agency of record where such records exist;".

§ 15–11–175. Discrimination or retaliation prohibited against persons making complaints or providing information

(a) No person shall discriminate or retaliate in any manner against any child, parent or guardian of a child, employee of a facility, agency, institution or other type of provider, or any other person because of the making of a complaint or providing of information in good faith to the advocate, or willfully interfere with the advocate in the performance of his or her official duties.

(b) Any person violating subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Laws 2000, p. 243, § 1.

§ 15–11–176. Investigation of complaints

The advocate shall be authorized to request an investigation by the Georgia Bureau of Investigation of any complaint of criminal misconduct involving a child.

Laws 2000, p. 243, § 1.

§ 15–11–177. Child Advocate Advisory Committee

(a) There is established a Child Advocate Advisory Committee. The advisory committee shall consist of:

(1) One representative of a not for profit children's agency appointed by the Governor;

(2) One representative of a for profit children's agency appointed by the President of the Senate;

(3) One pediatrician appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(4) One social worker with experience and knowledge of child protective services who is not employed by the state appointed by the Governor;

(5) One psychologist appointed by the President of the Senate;

(6) One attorney appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives from the Children and the Courts Committee of the State Bar of Georgia; and

(7) One juvenile court judge appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

Each member of the advisory committee shall serve a two-year term and until the appointment and qualification of such member's successor. Appointments to fill vacancies in such offices shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment.

(b) The advisory committee shall meet a minimum of three times a year with the advocate and his or her staff to review and assess the following:

(1) Patterns of treatment and service for children;

(2) Policy implications; and

(3) Necessary systemic improvements.

The advisory committee shall also provide for an annual evaluation of the effectiveness of the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children.

Laws 2000, p. 243, § 1.

Article 6

Emancipation of Minors

§ 15–11–200. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Emancipation" means termination of the rights of the parents to the custody, control, services, and earnings of a minor.

(2) "Minor" means a person who is at least 16 but less than 18 years of age.

(3) "Parents" has the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 15–11–2.

Laws 2006, Act 466, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

§ 15–11–201. Conditions under which emancipation may occur

(a) Emancipation may occur by operation of law or pursuant to a petition filed by a minor with the juvenile court as provided in this article.

(b) An emancipation occurs by operation of law:

(1) When a minor is validly married;

(2) When a person reaches the age of 18 years; or

(3) During the period when the minor is on active duty with the armed forces of the United States.

(c) An emancipation occurs by court order pursuant to a petition filed by a minor with the juvenile court as provided in Code Sections 15–11–202 through 15–11–207.

Laws 2006, Act 466, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

§ 15–11–202. Petition

A minor seeking emancipation shall file a petition for emancipation in the juvenile court in the county where the minor resides. The petition shall be signed and verified by the minor, and shall include:

(1) The minor's full name and birth date, and the county and state where the minor was born;

(2) A certified copy of the minor's birth certificate;

(3) The name and last known address of the minor's parents or guardian, and if no parent or guardian can be found, the name and address of the minor's nearest living relative residing within this state;

(4) The minor's present address and length of residency at that address;

(5) A declaration by the minor indicating that he or she has demonstrated the ability to manage his or her financial affairs; the minor may include any information he or she considers necessary to support the declaration;

(6) A declaration by the minor indicating that he or she has the ability to manage his or her personal and social affairs; the minor may include any information he or she considers necessary to support the declaration; and

(7) The names of adults who have personal knowledge of the minor's circumstances and believe that under those circumstances emancipation is in the best interest of the minor. Such individuals may include any of the following:

(A) Physician or osteopath licensed pursuant to Chapter 34 of Title 43;

(B) Registered professional nurse or licensed practical nurse licensed pursuant to Chapter 26 of Title 43;

(C) Psychologist licensed pursuant to Chapter 39 of Title 43;

(D) Professional counselor, social worker, or marriage and family therapist licensed pursuant to Chapter 10A of Title 43;

(E) School guidance counselor, school social worker, or school psychologist;

(F) School administrator, school principal, or school teacher;

(G) Member of the clergy;

(H) Law enforcement officer; or

(I) Attorney.

Laws 2006, Act 466, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

§ 15–11–203. Summons and time for answer

(a) Upon filing the petition, a copy of the petition for emancipation and a summons to appear at the hearing shall be served on the minor's parents or guardian, if applicable, upon any individual who provided an affidavit as set forth in paragraph (7) of Code Section 15–11–202, and any other individual named in the petition.

(b) Any individual served with the petition for emancipation may file an answer to such petition in the juvenile court within 30 days of being served.

Laws 2006, Act 466, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

§ 15–11–204. Appointment of counsel and guardian ad litem; affidavits of adults supporting emancipation

(a) After a petition for emancipation is filed, the court may:

(1) Assign an employee of the court or appoint a guardian ad litem to investigate the allegations of the petition and to file a report containing the results of the investigation with the court, including a recommendation as to whether it is in the best interest of the minor that the petition for emancipation be granted;

(2) Appoint an attorney for the minor; and

(3) Appoint an attorney for the minor's parents or guardian if they are indigent and if they oppose the petition.

(b) After a petition for emancipation is filed, the court shall seek an affidavit from each individual identified in the petition pursuant to paragraph (7) of Code Section 15–11–202 which describes why the individual believes the minor should be emancipated.

Laws 2006, Act 466, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

§ 15–11–205. Hearing; burden of proof; required findings

(a) The hearing on the petition for emancipation shall be before a judge; and the court shall issue an emancipation order if it determines that emancipation is in the best interest of the minor and the minor establishes:

(1) That the minor's parent or guardian does not object to the petition; or if a parent or guardian objects to the petition, that the best interest of the child is served by allowing the emancipation to occur by court order;

(2) That the minor is a resident of this state;

(3) That the minor has demonstrated the ability to manage his or her financial affairs, including proof of employment or other means of support; the term "other means of support" does not include general assistance or aid received from means-tested public assistance programs such as Temporary Assistance for Needy Families or similar programs under Title IV–A of the federal Social Security Act;

(4) That the minor has the ability to manage his or her personal and social affairs, including, but not limited to, proof of housing; and

(5) That the minor understands his or her rights and responsibilities under this article as an emancipated minor.

(b) A minor who petitions the court for emancipation shall have the burden of showing by a preponderance of evidence that emancipation should be ordered.

(c) If the court issues an emancipation order, the court shall retain a copy of the order until the emancipated minor becomes 25 years of age.

(d) An emancipation obtained by fraud is voidable. Voiding an emancipation order does not affect an obligation, responsibility, right, or interest that arose during the period of time the order was in effect.

(e) The minor or a parent or guardian of the minor may appeal the court's grant or denial of an emancipation petition. The appeal shall be filed in the Court of Appeals.

Laws 2006, Act 466, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006; Laws 2008, Act 471, § 15, eff. May 12, 2008.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2008 amendment by Act 471 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

§ 15–11–206. Rescission of emancipation order; effects

(a) A minor emancipated by court order may petition the juvenile court that issued the emancipation order to rescind such order.

(b) A copy of the petition for rescission and a summons shall be served on the minor's parents or guardian.

(c) The court shall grant the petition and rescind the order of emancipation if it finds:

(1) That the minor is indigent and has no means of support;

(2) That the minor and the minor's parents or guardian agree that the order should be rescinded; or

(3) That there is a resumption of family relations inconsistent with the existing emancipation order.

(d) If a petition for rescission is granted, the court shall issue an order rescinding the emancipation order and retain a copy of the order until the minor becomes 25 years of age.

(e) Rescission of an emancipation order does not alter any contractual obligations or rights or any property rights or interests that arose during the period of time that the emancipation order was in effect.

(f) The minor or a parent or guardian of the minor may appeal the court's grant or denial of a petition for rescission of an emancipation order. The appeal shall be filed in the Court of Appeals.

Laws 2006, Act 466, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006; Laws 2007, Act 18, § 15, eff. May 11, 2007.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2007 amendment by Act 18 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

§ 15–11–207. Rights of emancipated minor; limitations; parents or guardians not liable for debts

(a) A minor emancipated by operation of law or by court order shall be considered to have the rights and responsibilities of an adult, except for those specific constitutional and statutory age requirements regarding voting, use of alcoholic beverages, and other health and safety regulations relevant to the minor because of his or her age. The rights of a minor to receive any transfer of property or money pursuant to "The Georgia Transfers to Minors Act" under Article 5 of Chapter 5 of Title 44; under the Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, the Uniform Gift to Minors Act, or other substantially similar act of another state; or pursuant to a trust agreement shall not be affected by a declaration of an emancipation under this article.

(b) A minor shall be considered emancipated for the purposes of, but not limited to:

(1) The right to enter into enforceable contracts, including apartment leases;

(2) The right to sue or be sued in his or her own name;

(3) The right to retain his or her own earnings;

(4) The right to establish a separate domicile;

(5) The right to act autonomously, and with the rights and responsibilities of an adult, in all business relationships, including, but not limited to, property transactions and obtaining accounts for utilities, except for those estate or property matters that the court determines may require a conservator or guardian ad litem;

(6) The right to earn a living, subject only to the health and safety regulations designed to protect those under the age of 18 regardless of their legal status;

(7) The right to authorize his or her own preventive health care, medical care, dental care, and mental health care, without parental knowledge or liability;

(8) The right to apply for a driver's license or other state licenses for which he or she might be eligible;

(9) The right to register for school;

(10) The right to apply for medical assistance programs and for other welfare assistance, if needed;

(11) The right, if a parent, to make decisions and give authority in caring for his or her own minor child; and

(12) The right to make a will.

(c) The parents or guardian of a minor emancipated by court order are not liable for any debts incurred by the minor during the period of emancipation.

Laws 2006, Act 466, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

§ 15–11–208. Emancipated minor not a deprived child; duty to support; ability to marry

(a) The duty to provide support for a minor child shall continue until an emancipation order is granted.

(b) A minor emancipated under this article shall not be considered a "deprived child" for purposes of Part 6 of Article 1 of this chapter.

(c) The provisions set forth in Code Section 19–3–2 regarding age limitations to contract for marriage shall apply to a minor who has become emancipated under this article.

Laws 2006, Act 466, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006; Laws 2008, Act 471, § 15, eff. May 12, 2008.

§ 15–13–4. Rules nisi against officers

The judges of the superior courts, judges of the probate courts, and magistrates, respectively, upon application, may grant rules nisi against all officers subject thereto, which rules nisi shall contain a full statement of the case in which the officer is called upon to show cause and also of the time and place of hearing. The officer called on by the rule nisi shall be served with a copy thereof within a reasonable time before the hearing.

§ 15–13–5. Answer to rule nisi; subsequent proceedings

The officer called on by rule nisi, as provided in Code Section 15–13–4, shall fully respond in writing to the rule, which answer shall be under oath taken at the time the answer is filed. If the answer is not denied, the rule shall be discharged or shall be made absolute, depending on whether the court deems the answer sufficient. The movant of the rule may traverse the truth of the answer, in which case an issue shall be made and tried by a jury at the same term unless good cause for continuance is shown, which may be done only once by each party. Upon the trial of such issue the court shall discharge the rule or shall make the rule absolute, depending on whether the verdict of the jury is for or against the officer.

§ 15–13–6. When officer may be ruled without notice

If a sheriff or other officer designedly absents himself from his court, the presiding judge or justice, when required by plaintiffs in execution or their attorneys, shall grant a rule absolute against the sheriff or other officer without the notice provided for in Code Section 15–13–4 unless it is proved at such term of the court that the sheriff or other officer, from sickness, is not able to attend the court.

§ 15–13–11. Lien of rule absolute

When a rule absolute has been obtained against any officer for the payment of money, as provided in Code Sections 15–13–4 and 15–13–5, the rule shall constitute the same lien upon the property, both real and personal, of the officer as an ordinary judgment at law; and, if not punctually paid, the demand shall thereafter draw interest at the rate of 20 percent per annum. § 15–13–13. Practice on money rules

(a) Where money is in the hands of an officer, he may pay it over to the plaintiff by whose process it was raised, unless other claimants deposit their liens with him. Notice to retain is insufficient unless accompanied by a lien.

(b) Money raised by legal process not being subject to levy and sale, the court in making distribution shall proceed upon equitable principles.

(c) All parties intervening shall, by appropriate pleading, set forth the ground of their claim to the fund.

(d) All persons interested who are notified in writing by the sheriff or movant of the pendency of the rule shall be bound by the judgment of distribution.

Article 1

General Provisions

§ 15–16–1. Qualification, term of office, training, etc.

(a) Intent. The General Assembly declares it to be in the best interests of the citizens of this state that qualifications and standards for the office of sheriff be determined and set so as to improve both the capabilities and training of those persons who hold the office of sheriff. With the increase of crime continuing as a major social problem in this state and with the understanding that the sheriff is the basic law enforcement officer of the several counties of this state, it is declared to be the intent of the General Assembly that proper qualifications and standards be required of the person holding the office of sheriff so as to increase the effectiveness and capabilities of the several sheriffs of this state as law enforcement officers to combat crime.

(b) General requirements. Except as otherwise provided in this Code section, sheriffs are elected, qualified, commissioned, hold their offices for the same term, and are subject to the same disabilities as the clerks of the superior courts.

(c) Qualifications.

(1) No person shall be eligible to hold the office of sheriff unless such person:

(A) At the time of qualifying as a candidate for the office of sheriff is a citizen of the United States;

(B) Has been a resident of the county in which he or she seeks the office of sheriff for at least two years immediately preceding the date of qualifying for election to the office;

(C) At the time of qualifying as a candidate for the office of sheriff is a registered voter;

(D) At the time of qualifying as a candidate for the office of sheriff has attained the age of at least 25 years;

(E) At the time of qualifying as a candidate for the office of sheriff has obtained a high school diploma or its recognized equivalent in educational training as established by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council;

(F) Has not been convicted of a felony offense or any offense involving moral turpitude contrary to the laws of this state, any other state, or the United States; provided, however, that a plea of nolo contendere to a felony offense or any offense involving moral turpitude contrary to the laws of this state shall have the same effect as a plea of guilty, thereby disqualifying such a person from holding the office of sheriff;

(G) Is fingerprinted and a search made of local, state, and national fingerprint files to disclose any criminal record, which fingerprints are to be taken under the direction of the judge of the probate court and must be taken on or before, but no later than, the close of qualification for election to the office of sheriff;

(H) At the time of qualifying as a candidate for the office of sheriff gives a complete written history of his or her places of residence for a period of six years immediately preceding his or her qualification date, giving the house number or RFD number, street, city, county, and state;

(I) At the time of qualifying as a candidate for the office of sheriff gives a complete written history of his or her places of employment for a period of six years immediately preceding his or her qualification date, giving the period of time employed and the name and address of his or her employer; and

(J) Is a registered peace officer as provided in Code Section 35–8–10 or is a certified peace officer as defined in Chapter 8 of Title 35. Any person who is not a registered or certified peace officer at the time such person assumes the office of sheriff shall be required to complete satisfactorily the requirements for certification as a peace officer as provided in Chapter 8 of Title 35 within six months after such person takes office; provided, however, that an extension of the time to complete such requirements may be granted by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council upon the presentation of evidence by a sheriff that he or she was unable to complete the basic training course and certification requirements due to illness, injury, military service, or other reasons deemed sufficient by such council. The Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council shall make every effort to ensure that space is available for newly elected sheriffs who are not certified or registered peace officers to attend the course as soon as possible after such persons take office. Such council shall notify the appropriate judge of the probate court whenever a newly elected sheriff who is not certified fails to become certified as a peace officer pursuant to the requirements of this subparagraph.

(2) Each person offering his or her candidacy for the office of sheriff shall, within 60 days prior to or at the time such person qualifies:

(A) File with the officer before whom such person has qualified to seek the office of sheriff a certified copy of his or her birth certificate and a certified copy of his or her high school diploma or certified proof of its recognized equivalent in education training as established by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council; and

(B) Swear or affirm before the officer before whom such person has qualified to seek the office of sheriff that he or she meets all of the qualifications required by this subsection, except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (J) of paragraph (1) of this subsection, and that he or she has complied with the requirements of subparagraph (G) of paragraph (1) of this subsection no later than the close of qualification for election to the office of sheriff.

(3) Each person offering to run for the office of sheriff and who is otherwise qualified shall be allowed, six months prior to qualifying and at his or her own expense, to attend the basic mandate course for peace officers. The Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council shall work to ensure that space is available for such individuals to attend the course.

(d) Exemption. The requirements of subparagraphs (c)(1)(D), (c)(1)(E), (c)(1)(F), (c)(1)(H), (c)(1)(I), and (c)(1)(J) of this Code section shall be deemed to have been met by any person who is currently serving as a duly qualified and elected sheriff of one of the several counties of this state.

§ 15–16–3. Training course for newly elected sheriffs; intent of law; compensation for attendance; cost of course of training

(a) Intent. The General Assembly declares it to be the purpose of this Code section to promote the orderly transfer of the law enforcement power of the several counties of this state in connection with the expiration of the term of office of the sheriff and the taking of office of the newly elected sheriff. The interest of the State of Georgia requires that such transitions in the office of the sheriff be accomplished so as to assure continuity in the conduct of the peace-keeping functions of the several counties of this state. Any disruption occasioned by the transfer of the law enforcement power to a person not properly versed and trained in law enforcement and the operations of the office of sheriff is declared to be detrimental to the safety and well-being of the citizens of the several counties of this state and of the entire state. Accordingly, it is the intent of the General Assembly that appropriate training be required of sheriffs who are newly elected so as to avoid or minimize any disruption in the performance of the duties and responsibilities or the authority of the sheriffs of the several counties of this state. This training shall be generally devoted to contemporary law enforcement, investigation, judicial process, and correction practices and specifically shall be germane to the duties and operational functions of the office of sheriff in the several counties of this state. Further, the purpose of this Code section is to promote professionalism within the office of sheriff by ensuring the highest possible quality of law enforcement training is offered to each sheriff on an annual basis. Accordingly, it is the intent of the General Assembly that appropriate ongoing training be required of all sheriffs. This training shall be generally devoted to contemporary law enforcement, investigation, judicial process, and corrections practices and specifically shall be germane to the duties and operational functions of the office of sheriff in the several counties of this state.

(b) Sheriffs-elect specialized training. Any person elected to the office of sheriff in a county of this state who was not serving as a duly elected or appointed sheriff on or before July 1, 1976, shall enroll in, attend, and successfully complete a course of sheriffs-elect specialized training and instruction established and provided by the Georgia Sheriffs' Association with the assistance of the Georgia Public Safety Training Center. Such course of instruction shall be held every four years at a time to be designated by the Georgia Sheriffs' Association. Any newly elected sheriff who is unable to attend such training course when it is offered because of medical disability or providential cause shall, within one year from the date such disability or cause terminates, complete a course of instruction as determined by the Georgia Sheriffs' Association and approved by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council. Any newly elected sheriff who does not fulfill the obligations of this subsection shall lose his or her power of arrest.

(c) Compensation. A newly elected sheriff who enrolls in and attends a course of training and instruction as described in subsection (b) of this Code section shall be paid compensation for his or her attendance on a weekly basis at the successful completion of each week's training. The compensation shall be paid by the Georgia Sheriffs' Association using funds appropriated by the state for such purpose or from federal funds available for such purpose. The compensation shall be in an amount equal to a proportionate part of the annual salary to be received by the new sheriff of the least populated county in this state for each week spent in attendance at the course of training and instruction. For the purposes of this Code section, five days of training and instruction shall be considered one week.

(d) Costs. The cost of training, housing, travel, and meals appropriate to the course of training and instruction shall be paid by the Georgia Sheriffs' Association from state funds appropriated for such purpose or from federal funds available for such purpose.

(1) From and after July 1, 1997, no person shall be eligible to hold the office of sheriff unless he or she attends a minimum of 20 hours' training annually as may be selected by the Georgia Sheriffs' Association.

(2) The basis for the minimum annual requirement of in-service training shall be the calendar year. Sheriffs who satisfactorily complete the sheriffs-elect specialized training in accordance with the provisions of this Code section after April 1 in any calendar year shall be excused from the minimum annual training requirement for the calendar year during which the sheriffs-elect specialized training course is completed.

(3) A waiver of the requirement of minimum annual in-service training may be granted by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council, in its discretion, upon the presentation of evidence by a sheriff that he or she was unable to complete such training due to medical disability, providential cause, or other reason deemed sufficient by the council.

(4) Any person who fails to complete the minimum annual in-service training required under this Code section and who has not received a waiver of such requirement pursuant to paragraph (3) of this subsection shall not perform any of the duties of sheriff involving the power of arrest until such training shall have been successfully completed. In addition, the Governor may suspend from office without pay for a period of 90 days any sheriff who fails to complete the minimum annual in-service training required under this Code section. The probate judge of the county of the sheriff's residence shall appoint a person who meets the qualifications for sheriff pursuant to this Code section to assume the duties and responsibilities of the office of sheriff during any such period of suspension.

§ 15–16–10. Duties; defaulting sheriffs or deputies; contempt of court; removal

(a) It is the duty of the sheriff:

(1) To execute and return the processes and orders of the courts and of officers of competent authority, if not void, with due diligence, when delivered to him for that purpose, according to this Code;

(2) To attend, by himself or his deputy, upon all sessions of the superior court of the county and also upon sessions of the probate court whenever required by the judge thereof and, while the courts are in session, never to leave same without the presence of himself or his deputy, or both, if required;

(3) To attend, in the same manner specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection, at the place or places of holding an election at the county site, on the day of an election, from the opening to the closing of the polls, and to take under his charge all subordinate officers present, as police to preserve order;

(4) To publish sales, citations, and other proceedings as required by law and to keep a file of all newspapers in which his official advertisements appear, in the manner required of clerks of the superior courts;

(5) To keep an execution docket wherein he must enter a full description of all executions delivered to him and the dates of their delivery, together with all his actions thereon, and to have the same ready for use in any court of his county;

(6) To keep a book in which shall be entered a record of all sales made by process of court or by agreement of the parties under the sanction of the court, describing accurately the property and the process under which sold, the date of the levy and sale, the purchaser, and the price;

(7) To receive from the preceding sheriff all unexecuted writs and processes and proceed to execute the same; to carry into effect any levy or arrest made by a predecessor; to put purchasers into possession, and to make titles to purchasers at his or her predecessor's sales, when not done by his or her predecessor;

(8) To perform such other duties as are or may be imposed by law or which necessarily appertain to his or her office;

(9) To exercise the same duties, powers, and arrest authority within municipalities which such officer exercises in the unincorporated areas of counties; and

(10) To develop and implement a comprehensive plan for the security of the county courthouse and any courthouse annex. Prior to the implementation of any security plan, the plan shall be submitted to the chief judge of the superior court of the circuit wherein the courthouse or courthouse annex is located for review. The chief judge shall have 30 days to review the original or any subsequent security plan. The chief judge may make modifications to the original or any subsequent security plan. The sheriff shall provide to the county governing authority the estimated cost of any security plan and a schedule for implementation 30 days prior to adoption of any security plan. A comprehensive plan for courthouse security shall be considered a confidential matter of public security. Review of a proposed security plan by the governing authority shall be excluded from the requirements of Code Section 50–14–1 and any such review shall take place as provided in Code Section 50–14–3. Such security plan shall also be excluded from public disclosure pursuant to paragraph (15) of subsection (a) of Code Section 50–18–72. The sheriff shall be the official custodian of the comprehensive courthouse security plan and shall determine who has access to such plan and any such access and review shall occur in the sheriff's office or at a meeting of the county governing authority held as provided in paragraph (9) of Code Section 50–14–3; provided, however, that the sheriff shall make the original security plan available upon request for temporary, exclusive review by any judge whose courtroom or chambers is located within the courthouse or courthouse annex or by any commissioner of the county in which the courthouse or courthouse annex is located. The sheriff shall be responsible to conduct a formal review of the security plan not less than every four years.

(b) If any sheriff or deputy fails to comply with any provision of subsection (a) of this Code section, he shall be fined for a contempt as the clerk of the superior court is fined in similar cases. Code Section 15–6–82, as to removal, shall also apply to sheriffs.

(c) In all counties of this state having a population of not less than 625,000 nor more than 725,000 according to the United States decennial census of 2000 or any future such census, it shall be the duty of the sheriffs of such counties to receive, confine, feed, and care for all persons charged with the violation of any ordinances of such counties in the same manner as persons charged with an indictable offense, whether such person charged with the violation of an ordinance is being held pending a hearing before the recorder's courts of such counties or has been sentenced by the recorder's courts to imprisonment in the county jail.

(d) Nothing in this Code section shall restrict or otherwise prohibit a sheriff or a deputy sheriff or clerk acting under the authority of a sheriff from electing to store for computer retrieval any or all records, dockets, books, indices, or files; nor shall a sheriff or a deputy sheriff or clerk acting under the authority of a sheriff be prohibited from combining or consolidating any records, dockets, books, indices, or files in connection with the maintenance of any records of the kind specified or required in this Code section or any other law, provided that any automated or computerized record-keeping method or system shall provide for the systematic and safe preservation and retrieval of all such records, dockets, books, indices, or files. When the sheriff or a deputy sheriff or clerk acting under the authority of the sheriff elects to store for computer retrieval any or all records, the same data elements used in a manual system shall be used, and the same integrity and security maintained.

§ 15–16–13. Contract for law enforcement services to municipality

(a) The sheriffs of the various counties of this state are authorized to contract with the governing body of any municipal corporation located within their respective counties, with the written consent of the governing authority of the county, for the purpose of providing law enforcement services to the municipal corporation. Such contracts may include undertakings by the sheriff to perform any police function, to exercise any police power, or to render any police service on behalf of the contracting municipal corporation. Upon the execution of any such contract and within the limitations contained in the contract, the sheriff and his deputies may exercise the same powers as possessed by the contracting municipal corporation with respect to police services and all powers necessary or incidental thereto.

(b) Any contract authorized by this Code section shall not affect, impair, or limit the authority or powers of the municipal corporation or of the sheriff except as otherwise specified in the contract. Sheriffs shall have the same duties, powers, and arrest authority within municipalities which such officers have in unincorporated areas of counties. The duties, powers, and arrest authority of sheriffs shall not be limited, impaired, or affected in any way upon a sheriff and a municipality entering into a contract for the sheriff to provide additional duties or services to a municipality. Nothing in this Code section shall be construed so as to limit, affect, diminish, or impair the rights, powers, or duties of any county or municipal police department as set forth in Code Section 36–8–5 or any law creating or authorizing the creation of a municipal police department.

(c) Such contracts shall provide for the reimbursement of the county for the costs incurred by the sheriff in providing contract services, including, but not limited to, the compensation of deputy sheriffs and other personnel, the costs of funding retirement benefits, insurance, workers' compensation and other fringe benefits for deputies and personnel, the costs of training deputies and other personnel, and the costs of equipment, materials, supplies, and utilities to the extent that such equipment, materials, supplies, and utilities are not furnished by the contracting municipal corporation. Each contract shall provide for the ascertainment of the cost of providing contract services and shall be of such duration as may be agreed upon, unless in conflict with any other general law or the Constitution of this state.

(d) All payments made by a municipal corporation under the terms of any contract authorized by this Code section shall be made to the general fund of the county. Any funds paid into the general fund of the county pursuant to such a contract shall be used for the purposes provided for in this Code section and in the contract and shall be paid by the governing authority of the county.

(e) Any other law to the contrary notwithstanding, the sheriff is authorized to employ such additional deputies and personnel as may be provided for in any contract authorized by this Code section and to purchase such automobiles, equipment, materials, supplies, and utilities as may be provided for in any such contract, the compensation, benefits, expenses, and costs of which shall be paid or funded by the governing authority of the county in an amount or amounts not exceeding the contract payments made by the municipal corporation into the general fund of the county.

(f) This Code section shall not apply to any county of 800,000 population or more according to the United States decennial census of 2000 or any future such census.

§ 15–16–14. Administration of oaths

Sheriffs and their legal deputies may administer oaths in all cases where, in discharge of the duties of the office of sheriff, it is legal for them to take bond and security or any affidavit which by law suspends the further execution of process in their hands. Such oaths, when so taken, shall be as legal and binding and subject to the same penalty as to perjury as are oaths when administered by any other officer.

§ 15–16–24. Liability for misconduct of jailer

Sheriffs are liable for the misconduct of their jailers as they are liable for their deputies; and persons injured by a jailer have the same option in bringing an action on the jailer's bond that they have in bringing an action on the deputy's bond, provided that the sheriff shall not be liable for such misconduct and no claim or cause of action against the sheriff for such misconduct shall exist unless one of the following conditions exists:

(1) The sheriff personally benefited financially from the act complained of;

(2) The sheriff was personally aware of and had actual knowledge of the act complained of and had actual knowledge that the act was illegal, was contrary to law, or was the breach of a duty imposed by law and either acted to cause or failed to prevent the act complained of; or

(3) The sheriff failed to exercise ordinary care and diligence to prevent the condition or act which proximately caused the injury complained of.

CHAPTER 24

SEXUAL ASSAULT PROTOCOL

Section

15–24–1 Definitions
15–24–2 Sexual assault protocol; committee

§ 15–24–1. Definitions

As used in this chapter, the term:

(1) "Protocol committee" or "committee" means a multidisciplinary, multiagency sexual assault committee established for a county pursuant to Code Section 15–24–2. The protocol committee is charged with developing local protocols to investigate and prosecute alleged cases of sexual assault.

(2) "Sexual assault" means rape, sodomy, aggravated sodomy, incest, sexual battery, and aggravated sexual battery as those terms are defined in Chapter 6 of Title 16.

Laws 2004, Act 519, § 3, eff. July 1, 2004.

(4) Any person who fails to complete the minimum annual in-service training required under this Code section and who has not received a waiver of such requirement pursuant to paragraph (3) of this subsection shall not perform any of the duties of sheriff involving the power of arrest until such training shall have been successfully completed. In addition, the Governor may suspend from office without pay for a period of 90 days any sheriff who fails to complete the minimum annual in-service training required under this Code section. The probate judge of the county of the sheriff's residence shall appoint a person who meets the qualifications for sheriff pursuant to this Code section to assume the duties and responsibilities of the office of sheriff during any such period of suspension.

Laws 1976, p. 423, §§ 1, 2; Laws 1982, p. 3, § 15; Laws 1984, p. 22, § 15; Laws 1997, p. 952, § 2.

§ 15–16–10. Duties; defaulting sheriffs or deputies; contempt of court; removal

(a) It is the duty of the sheriff:

(1) To execute and return the processes and orders of the courts and of officers of competent authority, if not void, with due diligence, when delivered to him for that purpose, according to this Code;

(2) To attend, by himself or his deputy, upon all sessions of the superior court of the county and also upon sessions of the probate court whenever required by the judge thereof and, while the courts are in session, never to leave same without the presence of himself or his deputy, or both, if required;

(3) To attend, in the same manner specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection, at the place or places of holding an election at the county site, on the day of an election, from the opening to the closing of the polls, and to take under his charge all subordinate officers present, as police to preserve order;

(4) To publish sales, citations, and other proceedings as required by law and to keep a file of all newspapers in which his official advertisements appear, in the manner required of clerks of the superior courts;

(5) To keep an execution docket wherein he must enter a full description of all executions delivered to him and the dates of their delivery, together with all his actions thereon, and to have the same ready for use in any court of his county;

(6) To keep a book in which shall be entered a record of all sales made by process of court or by agreement of the parties under the sanction of the court, describing accurately the property and the process under which sold, the date of the levy and sale, the purchaser, and the price;

(7) To receive from the preceding sheriff all unexecuted writs and processes and proceed to execute the same; to carry into effect any levy or arrest made by a predecessor; to put purchasers into possession, and to make titles to purchasers at his or her predecessor's sales, when not done by his or her predecessor;

(8) To perform such other duties as are or may be imposed by law or which necessarily appertain to his or her office;

(9) To exercise the same duties, powers, and arrest authority within municipalities which such officer exercises in the unincorporated areas of counties; and

(10) To develop and implement a comprehensive plan for the security of the county courthouse and any courthouse annex. Prior to the implementation of any security plan, the plan shall be submitted to the chief judge of the superior court of the circuit wherein the courthouse or courthouse annex is located for review. The chief judge shall have 30 days to review the original or any subsequent security plan. The chief judge may make modifications to the original or any subsequent security plan. The sheriff shall provide to the county governing authority the estimated cost of any security plan and a schedule for implementation 30 days prior to adoption of any security plan. A comprehensive plan for courthouse security shall be considered a confidential matter of public security. Review of a proposed security plan by the governing authority shall be excluded from the requirements of Code Section 50–14–1 and any such review shall take place as provided in Code Section 50–14–3. Such security plan shall also be excluded from public disclosure pursuant to paragraph (15) of subsection (a) of Code Section 50–18–72. The sheriff shall be the official custodian of the comprehensive courthouse security plan and shall determine who has access to such plan and any such access and review shall occur in the sheriff's office or at a meeting of the county governing authority held as provided in paragraph (9) of Code Section 50–14–3; provided, however, that the sheriff shall make the original security plan available upon request for temporary, exclusive review by any judge whose courtroom or chambers is located within the courthouse or courthouse annex or by any commissioner of the county in which the courthouse or courthouse annex is located. The sheriff shall be responsible to conduct a formal review of the security plan not less than every four years.

(b) If any sheriff or deputy fails to comply with any provision of subsection (a) of this Code section, he shall be fined for a contempt as the clerk of the superior court is fined in similar cases. Code Section 15–6–82, as to removal, shall also apply to sheriffs.

(c) In all counties of this state having a population of not less than 625,000 nor more than 725,000 according to the United States decennial census of 2000 or any future such census, it shall be the duty of the sheriffs of such counties to receive, confine, feed, and care for all persons charged with the violation of any ordinances of such counties in the same manner as persons charged with an indictable offense, whether such person charged with the violation of an ordinance is being held pending a hearing before the recorder's courts of such counties or has been sentenced by the recorder's courts to imprisonment in the county jail.

(d) Nothing in this Code section shall restrict or otherwise prohibit a sheriff or a deputy sheriff or clerk acting under the authority of a sheriff from electing to store for computer retrieval any or all records, dockets, books, indices, or files; nor shall a sheriff or a deputy sheriff or clerk acting under the authority of a sheriff be prohibited from combining or consolidating any records, dockets, books, indices, or files in connection with the maintenance of any records of the kind specified or required in this Code section or any other law, provided that any automated or computerized record-keeping method or system shall provide for the systematic and safe preservation and retrieval of all such records, dockets, books, indices, or files. When the sheriff or a deputy sheriff or clerk acting under the authority of the sheriff elects to store for computer retrieval any or all records, the same data elements used in a manual system shall be used, and the same integrity and security maintained.

§ 15–16–13. Contract for law enforcement services to municipality

(a) The sheriffs of the various counties of this state are authorized to contract with the governing body of any municipal corporation located within their respective counties, with the written consent of the governing authority of the county, for the purpose of providing law enforcement services to the municipal corporation. Such contracts may include undertakings by the sheriff to perform any police function, to exercise any police power, or to render any police service on behalf of the contracting municipal corporation. Upon the execution of any such contract and within the limitations contained in the contract, the sheriff and his deputies may exercise the same powers as possessed by the contracting municipal corporation with respect to police services and all powers necessary or incidental thereto.

(b) Any contract authorized by this Code section shall not affect, impair, or limit the authority or powers of the municipal corporation or of the sheriff except as otherwise specified in the contract. Sheriffs shall have the same duties, powers, and arrest authority within municipalities which such officers have in unincorporated areas of counties. The duties, powers, and arrest authority of sheriffs shall not be limited, impaired, or affected in any way upon a sheriff and a municipality entering into a contract for the sheriff to provide additional duties or services to a municipality. Nothing in this Code section shall be construed so as to limit, affect, diminish, or impair the rights, powers, or duties of any county or municipal police department as set forth in Code Section 36–8–5 or any law creating or authorizing the creation of a municipal police department.

(c) Such contracts shall provide for the reimbursement of the county for the costs incurred by the sheriff in providing contract services, including, but not limited to, the compensation of deputy sheriffs and other personnel, the costs of funding retirement benefits, insurance, workers' compensation and other fringe benefits for deputies and personnel, the costs of training deputies and other personnel, and the costs of equipment, materials, supplies, and utilities to the extent that such equipment, materials, supplies, and utilities are not furnished by the contracting municipal corporation. Each contract shall provide for the ascertainment of the cost of providing contract services and shall be of such duration as may be agreed upon, unless in conflict with any other general law or the Constitution of this state.

(d) All payments made by a municipal corporation under the terms of any contract authorized by this Code section shall be made to the general fund of the county. Any funds paid into the general fund of the county pursuant to such a contract shall be used for the purposes provided for in this Code section and in the contract and shall be paid by the governing authority of the county.

(e) Any other law to the contrary notwithstanding, the sheriff is authorized to employ such additional deputies and personnel as may be provided for in any contract authorized by this Code section and to purchase such automobiles, equipment, materials, supplies, and utilities as may be provided for in any such contract, the compensation, benefits, expenses, and costs of which shall be paid or funded by the governing authority of the county in an amount or amounts not exceeding the contract payments made by the municipal corporation into the general fund of the county.

(f) This Code section shall not apply to any county of 800,000 population or more according to the United States decennial census of 2000 or any future such census.

§ 15–16–14. Administration of oaths

Sheriffs and their legal deputies may administer oaths in all cases where, in discharge of the duties of the office of sheriff, it is legal for them to take bond and security or any affidavit which by law suspends the further execution of process in their hands. Such oaths, when so taken, shall be as legal and binding and subject to the same penalty as to perjury as are oaths when administered by any other officer.

§ 15–16–24. Liability for misconduct of jailer

Sheriffs are liable for the misconduct of their jailers as they are liable for their deputies; and persons injured by a jailer have the same option in bringing an action on the jailer's bond that they have in bringing an action on the deputy's bond, provided that the sheriff shall not be liable for such misconduct and no claim or cause of action against the sheriff for such misconduct shall exist unless one of the following conditions exists:

(1) The sheriff personally benefited financially from the act complained of;

(2) The sheriff was personally aware of and had actual knowledge of the act complained of and had actual knowledge that the act was illegal, was contrary to law, or was the breach of a duty imposed by law and either acted to cause or failed to prevent the act complained of; or

(3) The sheriff failed to exercise ordinary care and diligence to prevent the condition or act which proximately caused the injury complained of.

SEXUAL ASSAULT PROTOCOL

Section

15–24–1 Definitions
15–24–2 Sexual assault protocol; committee

§ 15–24–1. Definitions

As used in this chapter, the term:

(1) "Protocol committee" or "committee" means a multidisciplinary, multiagency sexual assault committee established for a county pursuant to Code Section 15–24–2. The protocol committee is charged with developing local protocols to investigate and prosecute alleged cases of sexual assault.

(2) "Sexual assault" means rape, sodomy, aggravated sodomy, incest, sexual battery, and aggravated sexual battery as those terms are defined in Chapter 6 of Title 16.

Laws 2004, Act 519, § 3, eff. July 1, 2004.

§ 15–24–2. Sexual assault protocol; committee

(a) Each judicial circuit shall be required to establish a sexual assault protocol as provided in this Code section.

(b) The chief superior court judge of each judicial circuit shall establish a sexual assault protocol committee as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section and shall appoint an interim chairperson who shall preside over the first meeting. The chief superior court judge shall appoint persons to fill any vacancies on the committee. Thus established, the committee shall thereafter elect a chairperson from its membership.

(c)(1) Each of the following agencies of the judicial circuit shall designate a representative to serve on the committee:

(A) The office of the sheriff of each sheriff's office in the judicial circuit;

(B) The office of the district attorney;

(C) The magistrate court;

(D) The office of the chief of police of a county of each county within the judicial circuit in counties which have a county police department;

(E) The office of the chief of police of the largest municipality in the county of each county within the judicial circuit; and

(F) The county board of health of each county within the judicial circuit.

(2) In addition to the representatives serving on the committee as provided for in paragraph (1) of this subsection, the chief superior court judge shall designate:

(A) A local citizen of the judicial circuit;

(B) A representative of a sexual assault or rape crisis center serving the judicial circuit or, if no such center exists, then a local citizen; and

(C) A health care professional who performs sexual assault examinations within the judicial circuit or, if no such person exists, then a local citizen.

(3) If any designated agency fails to carry out its duties relating to participation on the committee, the chief superior court judge of the circuit may issue an order requiring the participation of such agency. Failure to comply with such order shall be cause for punishment as for contempt of court.

(d) The protocol committee shall adopt a written sexual assault protocol, a copy of which shall be furnished to each agency in the judicial circuit that handles cases of sexual assault. The protocol shall be a written document outlining in detail the procedures to be used in investigating, collecting evidence, paying for expenses related to evidence collection, and prosecuting cases arising from alleged sexual assault and shall take into consideration the provisions of Article 4 of Chapter 5 of Title 17. The protocol may provide for different procedures to be used within particular municipalities or counties within the judicial circuit. The protocol committee shall adopt a written sexual assault protocol no later than December 31, 2004. The protocol committee may incorporate sexual assault protocols used in the judicial circuit as they existed on or before July 1, 2004.

(e) The purpose of the protocol shall be to ensure coordination and cooperation between all agencies involved in sexual assault cases so as to increase the efficiency of all agencies handling such cases and to minimize the stress created for the alleged sexual assault victim by the legal and investigatory process; provided, however, that a failure by an agency to follow the protocol shall not constitute an affirmative or other defense to prosecution of a sexual assault, preclude the admissibility of evidence, nor shall a failure by an agency to follow the protocol give rise to a civil cause of action.

(f) Upon completion of the writing of the sexual assault protocol, the protocol committee shall continue in existence and shall meet at least annually for the purpose of evaluating the effectiveness of the protocol and appropriately modifying and updating same.

This title shall be known and may be cited as the "Criminal Code of Georgia."

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–101.

§ 16–1–2. General purposes

The general purposes of this title are:

(1) To forbid and prevent conduct which unjustifiably and inexcusably causes or threatens substantial harm to individual or public interests;

(2) To give fair warning of the nature of the conduct forbidden and the sentence authorized upon conviction;

(3) To define that which constitutes each crime; and

(4) To prescribe penalties which are proportionate to the seriousness of crimes and which permit recognition of differences in rehabilitation possibilities among individual criminals.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–102.

§ 16–1–3. Definitions

As used in this title, the term:

(1) "Affirmative defense" means, with respect to any affirmative defense authorized in this title, unless the state's evidence raises the issue invoking the alleged defense, the defendant must present evidence thereon to raise the issue. The enumeration in this title of some affirmative defenses shall not be construed as excluding the existence of others.

(2) "Agency" means:

(A) When used with respect to the state government, any department, commission, committee, authority, board, or bureau thereof; and

(B) When used with respect to any political subdivision of the state government, any department, commission, committee, authority, board, or bureau thereof.

(3) "Another" means a person or persons other than the accused.

(4) "Conviction" includes a final judgment of conviction entered upon a verdict or finding of guilty of a crime or upon a plea of guilty.

(5) "Felony" means a crime punishable by death, by imprisonment for life, or by imprisonment for more than 12 months.

(6) "Forcible felony" means any felony which involves the use or threat of physical force or violence against any person.

(7) "Forcible misdemeanor" means any misdemeanor which involves the use or threat of physical force or violence against any person.

(8) "Government" means the United States, the state, any political subdivision thereof, or any agency of the foregoing.

(9) "Misdemeanor" and "misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature" mean any crime other than a felony.

(10) "Owner" means a person who has a right to possession of property which is superior to that of a person who takes, uses, obtains, or withholds it from him and which the person taking, using, obtaining, or withholding is not privileged to infringe.

(11) "Peace officer" means any person who by virtue of his office or public employment is vested by law with a duty to maintain public order or to make arrests for offenses, whether that duty extends to all crimes or is limited to specific offenses.

(12) "Person" means an individual, a public or private corporation, an incorporated association, government, government agency, partnership, or unincorporated association.

(13) "Property" means anything of value, including but not limited to real estate, tangible and intangible personal property, contract rights, services, choses in action, and other interests in or claims to wealth, admission or transportation tickets, captured or domestic animals, food and drink, and electric or other power.

(14) "Prosecution" means all legal proceedings by which a person's liability for a crime is determined, commencing with the return of the indictment or the filing of the accusation, and including the final disposition of the case upon appeal.

(15) "Public place" means any place where the conduct involved may reasonably be expected to be viewed by people other than members of the actor's family or household.

(16) "Reasonable belief" means that the person concerned, acting as a reasonable man, believes that the described facts exist.

(17) "State" means the State of Georgia, all land and water in respect to which this state has either exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction, and the airspace above such land and water.

(18) "Without authority" means without legal right or privilege or without permission of a person legally entitled to withhold the right.

(19) "Without his consent" means that a person whose concurrence is required has not, with knowledge of the essential facts, voluntarily yielded to the proposal of the accused or of another.

§ 16–1–4. Code governs crimes

No conduct constitutes a crime unless it is described as a crime in this title or in another statute of this state. However, this Code section does not affect the power of a court to punish for contempt or to employ any sanction authorized by law for the enforcement of an order, civil judgment, or decree.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–201.

§ 16–1–5. Presumption of innocence and proof beyond reasonable doubt

Every person is presumed innocent until proved guilty. No person shall be convicted of a crime unless each element of such crime is proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–501.

§ 16–1–6. Included crime

An accused may be convicted of a crime included in a crime charged in the indictment or accusation. A crime is so included when:

(1) It is established by proof of the same or less than all the facts or a less culpable mental state than is required to establish the commission of the crime charged; or

(2) It differs from the crime charged only in the respect that a less serious injury or risk of injury to the same person, property, or public interest or a lesser kind of culpability suffices to establish its commission.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–505.

§ 16–1–7. Multiple prosecutions for same conduct

(a) When the same conduct of an accused may establish the commission of more than one crime, the accused may be prosecuted for each crime. He may not, however, be convicted of more than one crime if:

(1) One crime is included in the other; or

(2) The crimes differ only in that one is defined to prohibit a designated kind of conduct generally and the other to prohibit a specific instance of such conduct.

(b) If the several crimes arising from the same conduct are known to the proper prosecuting officer at the time of commencing the prosecution and are within the jurisdiction of a single court, they must be prosecuted in a single prosecution except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section.

(c) When two or more crimes are charged as required by subsection (b) of this Code section, the court in the interest of justice may order that one or more of such charges be tried separately.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1982, p. 3, § 16.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–506.

§ 16–1–8. Effect of former prosecution

(a) A prosecution is barred if the accused was formerly prosecuted for the same crime based upon the same material facts, if such former prosecution:

(1) Resulted in either a conviction or an acquittal; or

(2) Was terminated improperly after the jury was impaneled and sworn or, in a trial before a court without a jury, after the first witness was sworn but before findings were rendered by the trier of facts or after a plea of guilty was accepted by the court.

(b) A prosecution is barred if the accused was formerly prosecuted for a different crime or for the same crime based upon different facts, if such former prosecution:

(1) Resulted in either a conviction or an acquittal and the subsequent prosecution is for a crime of which the accused could have been convicted on the former prosecution, is for a crime with which the accused should have been charged on the former prosecution (unless the court ordered a separate trial of such charge), or is for a crime which involves the same conduct, unless each prosecution requires proof of a fact not required on the other prosecution or unless the crime was not consummated when the former trial began; or

(2) Was terminated improperly and the subsequent prosecution is for a crime of which the accused could have been convicted if the former prosecution had not been terminated improperly.

(c) A prosecution is barred if the accused was formerly prosecuted in a district court of the United States for a crime which is within the concurrent jurisdiction of this state if such former prosecution resulted in either a conviction or an acquittal and the subsequent prosecution is for the same conduct, unless each prosecution requires proof of a fact not required in the other prosecution or unless the crime was not consummated when the former trial began.

(d) A prosecution is not barred within the meaning of this Code section if:

(1) The former prosecution was before a court which lacked jurisdiction over the accused or the crime; or

(2) Subsequent proceedings resulted in the invalidation, setting aside, reversal, or vacating of the conviction, unless the accused was thereby adjudged not guilty or unless there was a finding that the evidence did not authorize the verdict.

(e) Termination under any of the following circumstances is not improper:

(1) The accused consents to the termination or waives by motion to dismiss or other affirmative action his right to object to the termination; or

(2) The trial court finds that the termination is necessary because:

(A) It is physically impossible to proceed with the trial;

(B) Prejudicial conduct in or out of the courtroom makes it impossible to proceed with the trial without injustice to the defendant;

(C) The jury is unable to agree upon a verdict; or

(D) False statements of a juror on voir dire prevent a fair trial.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–507.

§ 16–1–9. Application of title to crimes committed before and after enactment

This title shall govern the construction and punishment of any crime defined in this title committed on and after July 1, 1969, as well as the construction and application of any defense. This title does not apply to or govern the construction or punishment of any crime committed prior to July 1, 1969, or the construction or application of any defense. Such a crime must be construed and punished according to the law existing at the time of the commission thereof in the same manner as if this title had not been enacted.

Culpability

§ 16–2–1. Definition of crime

(a) A "crime" is a violation of a statute of this state in which there is a joint operation of an act or omission to act and intention or criminal negligence.

(b) Criminal negligence is an act or failure to act which demonstrates a willful, wanton, or reckless disregard for the safety of others who might reasonably be expected to be injured thereby.

Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 779; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 2004, Act 439, § 2, eff. July 1, 2004.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2004 amendment by Act 439 designated the existing text as subsec. (a) and added subsec. (b).

Laws 2004, Act 439, § 6, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004, and shall apply to all crimes which occur on or after that date."

§ 16–2–2. Misfortune or accident not a crime

A person shall not be found guilty of any crime committed by misfortune or accident where it satisfactorily appears there was no criminal scheme or undertaking, intention, or criminal negligence.

§ 16–2–3. Presumption of sound mind and discretion

Every person is presumed to be of sound mind and discretion but the presumption may be rebutted.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–606.

§ 16–2–4. Acts presumed to be wilful

The acts of a person of sound mind and discretion are presumed to be the product of the person's will but the presumption may be rebutted.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–603.

§ 16–2–5. Consequences presumed intended

A person of sound mind and discretion is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts but the presumption may be rebutted.

Article 2

Parties to Crimes

§ 16–2–20. Parties to crime; punishment

(a) Every person concerned in the commission of a crime is a party thereto and may be charged with and convicted of commission of the crime.

(b) A person is concerned in the commission of a crime only if he:

(1) Directly commits the crime;

(2) Intentionally causes some other person to commit the crime under such circumstances that the other person is not guilty of any crime either in fact or because of legal incapacity;

(3) Intentionally aids or abets in the commission of the crime; or

(4) Intentionally advises, encourages, hires, counsels, or procures another to commit the crime.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–801.

§ 16–2–21. Trial and conviction of parties who did not directly commit the crime

Any party to a crime who did not directly commit the crime may be indicted, tried, convicted, and punished for commission of the crime upon proof that the crime was committed and that he was a party thereto, although the person claimed to have directly committed the crime has not been prosecuted or convicted, has been convicted of a different crime or degree of crime, or is not amenable to justice or has been acquitted.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–802.

§ 16–2–22. Criminal responsibility of corporations

(a) A corporation may be prosecuted for the act or omission constituting a crime only if:

(1) The crime is defined by a statute which clearly indicates a legislative purpose to impose liability on a corporation, and an agent of the corporation performs the conduct which is an element of the crime while acting within the scope of his office or employment and in behalf of the corporation; or

(2) The commission of the crime is authorized, requested, commanded, performed, or recklessly tolerated by the board of directors or by a managerial official who is acting within the scope of his employment in behalf of the corporation.

(b) For the purposes of this Code section, the term:

(1) "Agent" means any director, officer, servant, employee, or other person who is authorized to act in behalf of the corporation.

(2) "Managerial official" means an officer of the corporation or any other agent who has a position of comparable authority for the formulation of corporate policy or the supervision of subordinate employees.

Article 1

Responsibility

§ 16–3–1. Minimum age

A person shall not be considered or found guilty of a crime unless he has attained the age of 13 years at the time of the act, omission, or negligence constituting the crime.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–701.

§ 16–3–2. Mental capacity; insanity

A person shall not be found guilty of a crime if, at the time of the act, omission, or negligence constituting the crime, the person did not have mental capacity to distinguish between right and wrong in relation to such act, omission, or negligence.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–702.

§ 16–3–3. Delusional compulsion

A person shall not be found guilty of a crime when, at the time of the act, omission, or negligence constituting the crime, the person, because of mental disease, injury, or congenital deficiency, acted as he did because of a delusional compulsion as to such act which overmastered his will to resist committing the crime.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–703.

§ 16–3–4. Intoxication

(a) A person shall not be found guilty of a crime when, at the time of the act, omission, or negligence constituting the crime, the person, because of involuntary intoxication, did not have sufficient mental capacity to distinguish between right and wrong in relation to such act.

(b) Involuntary intoxication means intoxication caused by:

(1) Consumption of a substance through excusable ignorance; or

(2) The coercion, fraud, artifice, or contrivance of another person.

(c) Voluntary intoxication shall not be an excuse for any criminal act or omission.

Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 779; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

§ 16–3–5. Mistake of fact

A person shall not be found guilty of a crime if the act or omission to act constituting the crime was induced by a misapprehension of fact which, if true, would have justified the act or omission.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1969, p. 857, § 3.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–705.

Article 2

Justification and Excuse

§ 16–3–20. Justification as a defense

The fact that a person's conduct is justified is a defense to prosecution for any crime based on that conduct. The defense of justification can be claimed:

(1) When the person's conduct is justified under Code Section 16–3–21, 16–3–23, 16–3–24, 16–3–25, or 16–3–26;

(2) When the person's conduct is in reasonable fulfillment of his duties as a government officer or employee;

(3) When the person's conduct is the reasonable discipline of a minor by his parent or a person in loco parentis;

(4) When the person's conduct is reasonable and is performed in the course of making a lawful arrest;

(5) When the person's conduct is justified for any other reason under the laws of this state; or

(6) In all other instances which stand upon the same footing of reason and justice as those enumerated in this article.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1999, p. 81, § 16.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–901.

§ 16–3–21. Use of force in defense of self or others, including justifiable homicide; conflicting rules

(a) A person is justified in threatening or using force against another when and to the extent that he or she reasonably believes that such threat or force is necessary to defend himself or herself or a third person against such other's imminent use of unlawful force; however, except as provided in Code Section 16–3–23, a person is justified in using force which is intended or likely to cause death or great bodily harm only if he or she reasonably believes that such force is necessary to prevent death or great bodily injury to himself or herself or a third person or to prevent the commission of a forcible felony.

(b) A person is not justified in using force under the circumstances specified in subsection (a) of this Code section if he:

(1) Initially provokes the use of force against himself with the intent to use such force as an excuse to inflict bodily harm upon the assailant;

(2) Is attempting to commit, committing, or fleeing after the commission or attempted commission of a felony; or

(3) Was the aggressor or was engaged in a combat by agreement unless he withdraws from the encounter and effectively communicates to such other person his intent to do so and the other, notwithstanding, continues or threatens to continue the use of unlawful force.

(c) Any rule, regulation, or policy of any agency of the state or any ordinance, resolution, rule, regulation, or policy of any county, municipality, or other political subdivision of the state which is in conflict with this Code section shall be null, void, and of no force and effect.

(d) In a prosecution for murder or manslaughter, if a defendant raises as a defense a justification provided by subsection (a) of this Code section, the defendant, in order to establish the defendant's reasonable belief that the use of force or deadly force was immediately necessary, may be permitted to offer:

(1) Relevant evidence that the defendant had been the victim of acts of family violence or child abuse committed by the deceased, as such acts are described in Code Sections 19–13–1 and 19–15–1, respectively; and

(2) Relevant expert testimony regarding the condition of the mind of the defendant at the time of the offense, including those relevant facts and circumstances relating to the family violence or child abuse that are the bases of the expert's opinion.

Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 785; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1975, p. 1209, § 1; Laws 1993, p. 1716, § 2; Laws 2001, p. 1247, § 1.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2001 amendment to subsec. (a) inserted gender neutral language and the words "except as provided in Code Section 16–3–23,".

§ 16–3–22. Persons rendering assistance to law enforcement officers

(a) Any person who renders assistance reasonably and in good faith to any law enforcement officer who is being hindered in the performance of his official duties or whose life is being endangered by the conduct of any other person or persons while performing his official duties shall be immune to the same extent as the law enforcement officer from any criminal liability that might otherwise be incurred or imposed as a result of rendering assistance to the law enforcement officer.

(b) The official report of the law enforcement agency shall create a rebuttable presumption of good faith and reasonableness on the part of the person who assists the law enforcement officer.

(c) The purpose of this Code section is to provide for those persons who act in good faith to assist law enforcement officers whose health and safety is being adversely affected and threatened by the conduct of any other person or persons. This Code section shall be liberally construed so as to carry out the purposes thereof.

Laws 1967, p. 745, §§ 1, 2.

Formerly Code 1933, § 27–219.

§ 16–3–23. Use of force in defense of habitation

A person is justified in threatening or using force against another when and to the extent that he or she reasonably believes that such threat or force is necessary to prevent or terminate such other's unlawful entry into or attack upon a habitation; however, such person is justified in the use of force which is intended or likely to cause death or great bodily harm only if:

(1) The entry is made or attempted in a violent and tumultuous manner and he or she reasonably believes that the entry is attempted or made for the purpose of assaulting or offering personal violence to any person dwelling or being therein and that such force is necessary to prevent the assault or offer of personal violence;

(2) That force is used against another person who is not a member of the family or household and who unlawfully and forcibly enters or has unlawfully and forcibly entered the residence and the person using such force knew or had reason to believe that an unlawful and forcible entry occurred; or

(3) The person using such force reasonably believes that the entry is made or attempted for the purpose of committing a felony therein and that such force is necessary to prevent the commission of the felony.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2001 amendment inserted gender neutral language and the provisions comprising par. (2), and redesignated former par. (2) as par. (3).

§ 16–3–23.1. Use of force in defense of habitation, property, self, or others; no duty to retreat

A person who uses threats or force in accordance with Code Section 16–3–21, relating to the use of force in defense of self or others, Code Section 16–3–23, relating to the use of force in defense of a habitation, or Code Section 16–3–24, relating to the use of force in defense of property other than a habitation, has no duty to retreat and has the right to stand his or her ground and use force as provided in said Code sections, including deadly force.

Laws 2006, Act 599, § 1, eff. July 1, 2006.

§ 16–3–24. Use of force in defense of property

(a) A person is justified in threatening or using force against another when and to the extent that he reasonably believes that such threat or force is necessary to prevent or terminate such other's trespass on or other tortious or criminal interference with real property other than a habitation or personal property:

(1) Lawfully in his possession;

(2) Lawfully in the possession of a member of his immediate family; or

(3) Belonging to a person whose property he has a legal duty to protect.

(b) The use of force which is intended or likely to cause death or great bodily harm to prevent trespass on or other tortious or criminal interference with real property other than a habitation or personal property is not justified unless the person using such force reasonably believes that it is necessary to prevent the commission of a forcible felony.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–904.

§ 16–3–24.1. "Habitation" and "personal property" defined

As used in Code Sections 16–3–23 and 16–3–24, the term "habitation" means any dwelling, motor vehicle, or place of business, and "personal property" means personal property other than a motor vehicle.

Laws 1998, p. 1153, § 1.1.

§ 16–3–24.2. Immunity from criminal prosecution where use of threats or force is justified

A person who uses threats or force in accordance with Code Section 16–3–21, 16–3–23, 16–3–23.1, or 16–3–24 shall be immune from criminal prosecution therefor unless in the use of deadly force, such person utilizes a weapon the carrying or possession of which is unlawful by such person under Part 2 or 3 of Article 4 of Chapter 11 of this title.

Laws 1998, p. 1153, § 1.2; Laws 1999, p. 81, § 16; Laws 2006, Act 599, § 2, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 599 substituted "Code Section 16-3-21, 16-3-23, 16-3-23.1," for "Code Section 16-3-23" and substituted "in the use of deadly force," for "any deadly force used by".

§ 16–3–25. Entrapment as a defense

A person is not guilty of a crime if, by entrapment, his conduct is induced or solicited by a government officer or employee, or agent of either, for the purpose of obtaining evidence to be used in prosecuting the person for commission of the crime. Entrapment exists where the idea and intention of the commission of the crime originated with a government officer or employee, or with an agent of either, and he, by undue persuasion, incitement, or deceitful means, induced the accused to commit the act which the accused would not have committed except for the conduct of such officer.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–905.

§ 16–3–26. Coercion as a defense

A person is not guilty of a crime, except murder, if the act upon which the supposed criminal liability is based is performed under such coercion that the person reasonably believes that performing the act is the only way to prevent his imminent death or great bodily injury.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–907.

Article 3

Alibi

§ 16–3–40. Alibi as a defense

The defense of alibi involves the impossibility of the accused's presence at the scene of the offense at the time of its commission. The range of the evidence in respect to time and place must be such as reasonably to exclude the possibility of presence.

16–4–8.1 Conviction of conspiracy to commit a crime where crime actually committed
16–4–9 Withdrawal of co-conspirator
16–4–10 Domestic terrorism

§ 16–4–1. Criminal attempt

A person commits the offense of criminal attempt when, with intent to commit a specific crime, he performs any act which constitutes a substantial step toward the commission of that crime.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1001.

§ 16–4–2. Criminal attempt conviction lawful though crime was committed

A person may be convicted of the offense of criminal attempt if the crime attempted was actually committed in pursuance of the attempt but may not be convicted of both the criminal attempt and the completed crime.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1004.

§ 16–4–3. Charge of crime includes criminal attempt

A person charged with commission of a crime may be convicted of the offense of criminal attempt as to that crime without being specifically charged with the criminal attempt in the accusation, indictment, or presentment.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1005.

§ 16–4–4. Impossibility no defense

It is no defense to a charge of criminal attempt that the crime the accused is charged with attempting was, under the attendant circumstances, factually or legally impossible of commission if such crime could have been committed had the attendant circumstances been as the accused believed them to be.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1002.

§ 16–4–5. Abandonment of effort as defense

(a) When a person's conduct would otherwise constitute an attempt to commit a crime under Code Section 16–4–1, it is an affirmative defense that he abandoned his effort to commit the crime or in any other manner prevented its commission under circumstances manifesting a voluntary and complete renunciation of his criminal purpose.

(b) A renunciation of criminal purpose is not voluntary and complete if it results from:

(1) A belief that circumstances exist which increase the probability of detection or apprehension of the person or which render more difficult the accomplishment of the criminal purpose; or

(2) A decision to postpone the criminal conduct until another time.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1003.

§ 16–4–6. Punishment

(a) A person convicted of the offense of criminal attempt to commit a crime punishable by death or by life imprisonment shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than 30 years.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of criminal attempt to commit a felony, other than a felony punishable by death or life imprisonment, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than one-half the maximum period of time for which he or she could have been sentenced if he or she had been convicted of the crime attempted, by one-half the maximum fine to which he or she could have been subjected if he or she had been convicted of the crime attempted, or both.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of criminal attempt to commit a misdemeanor shall be punished as for a misdemeanor.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 2007, Act 255, § 1, eff. July 1, 2007.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2007 amendment by Act 255, in subsec. (a), substituted "30" for "ten"; and in subsec. (b), added ", other than a felony punishable by death or life imprisonment," and made the subsection gender neutral.

Laws 2007, Act 255, § 2, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2007, and shall apply to all crimes committed on and after that date."

§ 16–4–7. Criminal solicitation

(a) A person commits the offense of criminal solicitation when, with intent that another person engage in conduct constituting a felony, he solicits, requests, commands, importunes, or otherwise attempts to cause the other person to engage in such conduct.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of criminal solicitation to commit a felony shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than three years. A person convicted of the offense of criminal solicitation to commit a crime punishable by death or by life imprisonment shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years.

(c) It is no defense to a prosecution for criminal solicitation that the person solicited could not be guilty of the crime solicited.

(d) The provisions of subsections (a) through (c) of this Code section are cumulative and shall not supersede any other penal law of this state.

Laws 1978, p. 903, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, §§ 26–1007, 26–1008, 26–1009.

§ 16–4–8. Conspiracy to commit a crime

A person commits the offense of conspiracy to commit a crime when he together with one or more persons conspires to commit any crime and any one or more of such persons does any overt act to effect the object of the conspiracy. A person convicted of the offense of criminal conspiracy to commit a felony shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than one-half the maximum period of time for which he could have been sentenced if he had been convicted of the crime conspired to have been committed, by one-half the maximum fine to which he could have been subjected if he had been convicted of such crime, or both. A person convicted of the offense of criminal conspiracy to commit a misdemeanor shall be punished as for a misdemeanor. A person convicted of the offense of criminal conspiracy to commit a crime punishable by death or by life imprisonment shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years.

§ 16–4–8.1. Conviction of conspiracy to commit a crime where crime actually committed

A person may be convicted of the offense of conspiracy to commit a crime, as defined in Code Section 16–4–8, even if the crime which was the objective of the conspiracy was actually committed or completed in pursuance of the conspiracy, but such person may not be convicted of both conspiracy to commit a crime and the completed crime.

Laws 1996, p. 679, § 1.

§ 16–4–9. Withdrawal of co-conspirator

A coconspirator may be relieved from the effects of Code Section 16–4–8 if he can show that before the overt act occurred he withdrew his agreement to commit a crime.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1969, p. 857, § 14.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–3202.

§ 16–4–10. Domestic terrorism

(a) As used in this Code section, "domestic terrorism" means any violation of, or attempt to violate, the laws of this state or of the United States which:

(1) Is intended or reasonably likely to injure or kill not less than ten individuals as part of a single unlawful act or a series of unlawful acts which are interrelated by distinguishing characteristics; and

(2)(A) Is intended to intimidate the civilian population of this state, any of its political subdivisions, or of the United States;

(B) Is intended to alter, change, or coerce the policy of the government of this state or any of its political subdivisions by intimidation or coercion; or

(C) Is intended to affect the conduct of the government of this state or any of its political subdivisions by use of destructive devices, assassination, or kidnapping.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any person who commits, attempts to commit, conspires to commit, or solicits, coerces, or intimidates another to commit a violation of the laws of this state or of the United States for the purpose of domestic terrorism shall, except in cases for which the death penalty may be imposed and the state has served notice of its intention to seek the death penalty, be sentenced to the maximum term of imprisonment and a fine not to exceed the amount prescribed by Code Section 17–10–8, which penalty shall not be suspended, stayed, probated, or withheld.

(c) In addition to any other provision of law, evidence that a person committed an offense for which the death penalty may be imposed under the laws of this state for the purpose of domestic terrorism shall be admissible during the sentencing phase as a statutory aggravating circumstance. It shall be the duty of the judge to consider, or to instruct the jury to consider, in addition to the statutory aggravating circumstances provided in Code Section 17–10–30, that the offense was committed for the purpose of domestic terrorism.

Homicide

§ 16–5–1. Murder

(a) A person commits the offense of murder when he unlawfully and with malice aforethought, either express or implied, causes the death of another human being.

(b) Express malice is that deliberate intention unlawfully to take the life of another human being which is manifested by external circumstances capable of proof. Malice shall be implied where no considerable provocation appears and where all the circumstances of the killing show an abandoned and malignant heart.

(c) A person also commits the offense of murder when, in the commission of a felony, he causes the death of another human being irrespective of malice.

(d) A person convicted of the offense of murder shall be punished by death, by imprisonment for life without parole, or by imprisonment for life.

Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 783; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 2009, Act 62, § 1, eff. April 29, 2009.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2009 amendment by Act 62, in subsec. (d), inserted ", by imprisonment for life without parole,".

Laws 2009, Act 62, §§ 8 to 11, provide:

"SECTION 8. Except as provided in this section, the provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed after the effective date of this Act. With express written consent of the state, an accused whose offense was committed prior to the effective date of this Act may elect in writing to be sentenced under the provisions of this Act, provided that: (1) jeopardy for the offense charged has not attached or (2) the accused has been sentenced to death but the conviction or sentence has been reversed on appeal and the state is not barred from seeking prosecution after the remand.

"SECTION 9. Except as provided in Section 8 of this Act, the amendment or repeal of a Code section by this Act shall not affect any sentence imposed by any court of this state prior to the effective date of this Act.

"SECTION 10. A person may be sentenced to life without parole without the prosecutor seeking the death penalty under the laws of this state.

"SECTION 11.(a) This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor or upon its becoming law without such approval and shall apply to all crimes committed on and after such date, and except as provided in Section 8 of this Act, the law as set forth in Section 2 and in Sections 3 through 7 of this Act as it existed prior to the effective date of this Act shall apply to all offenses committed on and before such date.

"(b) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

§ 16–5–2. Voluntary manslaughter

(a) A person commits the offense of voluntary manslaughter when he causes the death of another human being under circumstances which would otherwise be murder and if he acts solely as the result of a sudden, violent, and irresistible passion resulting from serious provocation sufficient to excite such passion in a reasonable person; however, if there should have been an interval between the provocation and the killing sufficient for the voice of reason and humanity to be heard, of which the jury in all cases shall be the judge, the killing shall be attributed to deliberate revenge and be punished as murder.

(b) A person who commits the offense of voluntary manslaughter, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years.

Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, pp. 783, 784; Laws 1858, p. 99, § 1; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

§ 16–5–3. Involuntary manslaughter

(a) A person commits the offense of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of an unlawful act when he causes the death of another human being without any intention to do so by the commission of an unlawful act other than a felony. A person who commits the offense of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of an unlawful act, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years.

(b) A person commits the offense of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of a lawful act in an unlawful manner when he causes the death of another human being without any intention to do so, by the commission of a lawful act in an unlawful manner likely to cause death or great bodily harm. A person who commits the offense of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of a lawful act in an unlawful manner, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished as for a misdemeanor.

§ 16–5–4. Death not have to occur within certain time to be homicide

In order to be a homicide punishable under this article, death need not have occurred within a year and a day from the date of the injury alleged to have caused such death.

Laws 1991, p. 719, § 1.

§ 16–5–5. Assisting suicide

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Intentionally and actively assisting suicide" means direct and physical involvement, intervention, or participation in the act of suicide which is carried out free of any threat, force, duress, or deception and with understanding of the consequences of such conduct.

(2) "Suicide" means the intentional and willful termination of one's own life.

(b) Any person who publicly advertises, offers, or holds himself or herself out as offering that he or she will intentionally and actively assist another person in the commission of suicide and commits any overt act to further that purpose is guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years.

(c) Any person who knowingly and willfully commits any act which destroys the volition of another, such as fraudulent practices upon such person's fears, affections, or sympathies; duress; or any undue influence whereby the will of one person is substituted for the wishes of another, and thereby intentionally causes or induces such other person to commit or attempt to commit suicide shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

(d) The provisions of this Code section shall not be deemed to affect any of the laws, in whole or in part, that may be applicable to the withholding or withdrawal of medical or health care treatment, including, but not limited to, laws related to a living will, a durable power of attorney for health care, an advance directive for health care, or a written order not to resuscitate.

Laws 1994, p. 1370, § 1; Laws 2007, Act 48, § 5, eff. July 1, 2007.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2007 amendment by Act 48, in subsec. (d), inserted "an advance directive for health care," near the end of the subsection.

Article 2

Assault and Battery

§ 16–5–20. Simple assault

(a) A person commits the offense of simple assault when he or she either:

(1) Attempts to commit a violent injury to the person of another; or

(2) Commits an act which places another in reasonable apprehension of immediately receiving a violent injury.

(b) Except as provided in subsections (c) through (h) of this Code section, a person who commits the offense of simple assault shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(c) Any person who commits the offense of simple assault in a public transit vehicle or station shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. For purposes of this Code section, "public transit vehicle" means a bus, van, or rail car used for the transportation of passengers within a system which receives a subsidy from tax revenues or is operated under a franchise contract with a county or municipality of this state.

(d) If the offense of simple assault is committed between past or present spouses, persons who are parents of the same child, parents and children, stepparents and stepchildren, foster parents and foster children, or other persons excluding siblings living or formerly living in the same household, the defendant shall be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. In no event shall this subsection be applicable to corporal punishment administered by a parent or guardian to a child or administered by a person acting in loco parentis.

(e) Any person who commits the offense of simple assault against a person who is 65 years of age or older shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(f) Any person who commits the offense of simple assault against an employee of a public school system of this state while such employee is engaged in official duties or on school property shall, upon conviction of such offense, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. For purposes of this Code section, "school property" shall include public school buses and stops for public school buses as designated by local school boards of education.

(g) Any person who commits the offense of simple assault against a female who is pregnant at the time of the offense shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(h) Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to permit the prosecution of:

(1) Any person for conduct relating to an abortion for which the consent of the pregnant woman, or person authorized by law to act on her behalf, has been obtained or for which such consent is implied by law;

(2) Any person for any medical treatment of the pregnant woman or her unborn child; or

(3) Any woman with respect to her unborn child.

For the purposes of this subsection, the term "unborn child" means a member of the species homo sapiens at any stage of development who is carried in the womb.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2004 amendment by Act 560 added subsec. (f).

Laws 2004, Act 560, § 9(b), provides:

"Part I of this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004, and shall apply to offenses committed on or after such date."

The 2005 amendment by Act 19 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

The 2006 amendment by Act 654, in subsec. (b), substituted "through (h)" for "through (f)"; and added new subsecs. (g) and (h).

Laws 2006, Act 654, § 5, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006, and shall apply to all offenses committed on or after such date."

§ 16–5–21. Aggravated assault

(a) A person commits the offense of aggravated assault when he or she assaults:

(1) With intent to murder, to rape, or to rob;

(2) With a deadly weapon or with any object, device, or instrument which, when used offensively against a person, is likely to or actually does result in serious bodily injury; or

(3) A person or persons without legal justification by discharging a firearm from within a motor vehicle toward a person or persons.

(b) Except as provided in subsections (c) through (k) of this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of aggravated assault shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years.

(c) A person who knowingly commits the offense of aggravated assault upon a peace officer while the peace officer is engaged in, or on account of the performance of, his or her official duties shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

(d) Any person who commits the offense of aggravated assault against a person who is 65 years of age or older shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than three nor more than 20 years.

(e)(1) As used in this subsection, the term "correctional officer" shall include superintendents, wardens, deputy wardens, guards, and correctional officers of state, county, and municipal penal institutions who are certified by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council pursuant to Chapter 8 of Title 35 and employees of the Department of Juvenile Justice who are known to be employees of the department or who have given reasonable identification of their employment. The term "correctional officer" shall also include county jail officers who are certified or registered by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council pursuant to Chapter 8 of Title 35.

(2) A person who knowingly commits the offense of aggravated assault upon a correctional officer while the correctional officer is engaged in, or on account of the performance of, his or her official duties shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

(f) Any person who commits the offense of aggravated assault in a public transit vehicle or station shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than three nor more than 20 years. For purposes of this Code section, "public transit vehicle" has the same meaning as in subsection (c) of Code Section 16–5–20.

(g) Any person who commits the offense of aggravated assault upon a person in the course of violating Code Section 16–8–2 where the property that was the subject of the theft was a vehicle engaged in commercial transportation of cargo or any appurtenance thereto, including without limitation any such trailer, semi-trailer, container, or other associated equipment, or the cargo being transported therein or thereon, shall upon conviction be punished by imprisonment for not less than five years nor more than 20 years, a fine not less than $50,000.00 nor more than $200,000.00, or both such fine and imprisonment. For purposes of this subsection, the term "vehicle" includes without limitation any railcar.

(h) A person convicted of an offense described in paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

(i) Any person who commits the offense of aggravated assault involving the use of a firearm upon a student or teacher or other school personnel within a school safety zone as defined in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 16–11–127.1 shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

(j) If the offense of aggravated assault is committed between past or present spouses, persons who are parents of the same child, parents and children, stepparents and stepchildren, foster parents and foster children, or other persons excluding siblings living or formerly living in the same household, the defendant shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than three nor more than 20 years.

(k) Any person who commits the offense of aggravated assault with intent to rape against a child under the age of 14 years shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 25 nor more than 50 years. Any person convicted under this subsection shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

(l) A person who knowingly commits the offense of aggravated assault upon an officer of the court while such officer is engaged in, or on account of the performance of, his or her official duties shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years. As used in this subsection, the term "officer of the court" means a judge, attorney, clerk of court, deputy clerk of court, court reporter, court interpreter or probation officer.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment added the second sentence to subsec. (e)(1).

The 2003 amendment by Act 9, in subsec. (b), substituted "(c) through (i)" for "(c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), and (i)".

The 2004 amendment by Act 793 inserted subsec. (f.1).

The 2006 amendment by Act 571, in subsec. (b), substituted "through (k)" for "through (i)"; redesignated subsecs. (f.1) through (i) as subsecs. (g) through (j); and added new par. (k).

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

"SECTION 30. (a) This Act shall become effective July 1, 2006.

"(b) Any person required to register pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 42–1–12, relating to the state sexual offender registry, and any person required not to reside within areas where minors congregate, as prohibited by Code Section 42–1–13 [see § 42–1–15], shall not be relieved of the obligation to comply with the provisions of said Code sections by the repeal and reenactment of said Code sections.

"(c) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

The 2010 amendment by Act 646 added subsec. (l).

§ 16–5–22. Assault conviction lawful though intended crime was committed

A person may be convicted of the offense of assault with intent to commit a crime if the crime intended was actually committed as a result of the assault but may not be convicted of both the assault and completed crime.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1303.

§ 16–5–23. Simple battery

(a) A person commits the offense of simple battery when he or she either:

(1) Intentionally makes physical contact of an insulting or provoking nature with the person of another; or

(2) Intentionally causes physical harm to another.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (c) through (i) of this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of simple battery shall be punished as for a misdemeanor.

(c) Any person who commits the offense of simple battery against a person who is 65 years of age or older or against a female who is pregnant at the time of the offense shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(d) Any person who commits the offense of simple battery in a public transit vehicle or station shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. For purposes of this Code section, "public transit vehicle" has the same meaning as in subsection (c) of Code Section 16–5–20.

(e) Any person who commits the offense of simple battery against a police officer, law enforcement dog, correction officer, or detention officer engaged in carrying out official duties shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(f) If the offense of simple battery is committed between past or present spouses, persons who are parents of the same child, parents and children, stepparents and stepchildren, foster parents and foster children, or other persons excluding siblings living or formerly living in the same household, the defendant shall be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. In no event shall this subsection be applicable to corporal punishment administered by a parent or guardian to a child or administered by a person acting in loco parentis.

(g) A person who is an employee, agent, or volunteer at any facility licensed or required to be licensed under Code Section 31–7–3, relating to long-term care facilities, or Code Section 31–7–12, relating to personal care homes, or who is required to be licensed pursuant to Code Section 31–7–151 or 31–7–173, relating to home health care and hospices, who commits the offense of simple battery against a person who is admitted to or receiving services from such facility, person, or entity shall be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(h) Any person who commits the offense of simple battery against a sports official while such sports official is officiating an amateur contest or while such sports official is on or exiting the property where he or she will officiate or has completed officiating an amateur contest shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. For the purposes of this Code section, the term "sports official" means any person who officiates, umpires, or referees an amateur contest at the collegiate, elementary or secondary school, or recreational level.

(i) Any person who commits the offense of simple battery against an employee of a public school system of this state while such employee is engaged in official duties or on school property shall, upon conviction of such offense, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. For purposes of this Code section, "school property" shall include public school buses and stops for public school buses as designated by local school boards of education.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment substituted reference to subsec. (h) for (g) near the beginning of subsec. (b), and added subsec. (h).

The 2004 amendment by Act 560 added subsec. (i).

Laws 2004, Act 560, § 9(b), provides:

"Part I of this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004, and shall apply to offenses committed on or after such date."

The 2005 amendment by Act 19 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

§ 16–5–23.1. Battery

(a) A person commits the offense of battery when he or she intentionally causes substantial physical harm or visible bodily harm to another.

(b) As used in this Code section, the term "visible bodily harm" means bodily harm capable of being perceived by a person other than the victim and may include, but is not limited to, substantially blackened eyes, substantially swollen lips or other facial or body parts, or substantial bruises to body parts.

(c) Except as provided in subsections (d) through (l) of this Code section, a person who commits the offense of battery is guilty of a misdemeanor.

(d) Upon the second conviction for battery against the same victim, the defendant shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten days nor more than 12 months, by a fine not to exceed $ 1,000.00, or both. The minimum sentence of ten days for a second offense shall not be suspended, probated, deferred, stayed, or withheld; provided, however, that it is within the authority and discretion of the sentencing judge to:

(1) Allow the sentence to be served on weekends by weekend confinement or during the nonworking hours of the defendant. A weekend shall commence and shall end in the discretion of the sentencing judge, and the nonworking hours of the defendant shall be determined in the discretion of the sentencing judge; or

(2) Suspend, probate, defer, stay, or withhold the minimum sentence where there exists clear and convincing evidence that imposition of the minimum sentence would either create an undue hardship upon the defendant or result in a failure of justice.

(e) Upon a third or subsequent conviction for battery against the same victim, the defendant shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years. The minimum sentence provisions contained in subsection (d) of this Code section shall apply to sentences imposed pursuant to this subsection.

(f) If the offense of battery is committed between past or present spouses, persons who are parents of the same child, parents and children, stepparents and stepchildren, foster parents and foster children, or other persons living or formerly living in the same household, then such offense shall constitute the offense of family violence battery and shall be punished as follows:

(1) Upon a first conviction of family violence battery, the defendant shall be guilty of and punished for a misdemeanor; and

(2) Upon a second or subsequent conviction of family violence battery against the same or another victim, the defendant shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years. In no event shall this subsection be applicable to reasonable corporal punishment administered by parent to child.

(g) Any person who commits the offense of battery in a public transit vehicle or station shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. For purposes of this Code section, "public transit vehicle" has the same meaning as in subsection (c) of Code Section 16–5–20.

(h) Any person who commits the offense of battery against a female who is pregnant at the time of the offense shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(i) Any person who commits the offense of battery against a teacher or other school personnel engaged in the performance of official duties or while on school property shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years or a fine of not more than $10,000.00, or both. For purposes of this Code section, "school property" shall include public school buses and public school bus stops as designated by local school boards of education.

(j) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (e) and paragraph (2) of subsection (f) of this Code section, any person who commits the offense of battery against a person who is 65 years of age or older shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(k) A person who is an employee, agent, or volunteer at any facility licensed or required to be licensed under Code Section 31–7–3, relating to long-term care facilities, or Code Section 31–7–12, relating to personal care homes, or who is required to be licensed pursuant to Code Section 31–7–151 or 31–7–173, relating to home health care and hospices, who commits the offense of battery against a person who is admitted to or receiving services from such facility, person, or entity shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years, or a fine of not more than $ 2,000.00, or both.

(l) Any person who commits the offense of battery against a sports official while such sports official is officiating an amateur contest or while such sports official is on or exiting the property where he or she will officiate or has completed officiating an amateur contest shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. For purposes of this Code section, the term "sports official" means any person who officiates, umpires, or referees an amateur contest at the collegiate, elementary or secondary school, or recreational level.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment substituted reference to subsec. (l) for (k) near the beginning of subsec. (c), and added subsec. (l).

The 2004 amendment by Act 560, in subsec. (i), deleted the comma following "school personnel" and added the second sentence beginning with "For purposes of this Code section".

Laws 2004, Act 560, § 9(b), provides:

"Part I of this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004, and shall apply to offenses committed on or after such date."

§ 16–5–24. Aggravated battery

(a) A person commits the offense of aggravated battery when he or she maliciously causes bodily harm to another by depriving him or her of a member of his or her body, by rendering a member of his or her body useless, or by seriously disfiguring his or her body or a member thereof.

(b) Except as provided in subsections (c) through (h) of this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of aggravated battery shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years.

(c) A person who knowingly commits the offense of aggravated battery upon a peace officer while the officer is engaged in, or on account of the performance of, his or her official duties shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years.

(d) Any person who commits the offense of aggravated battery against a person who is 65 years of age or older shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

(e)(1) As used in this subsection, the term "correctional officer" shall include superintendents, wardens, deputy wardens, guards, and correctional officers of state, county, and municipal penal institutions who are certified by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council pursuant to Chapter 8 of Title 35 and employees of the Department of Juvenile Justice who are known to be employees of the department or who have given reasonable identification of their employment. The term "correctional officer" shall also include county jail officers who are certified or registered by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council pursuant to Chapter 8 of Title 35.

(2) A person who knowingly commits the offense of aggravated battery upon a correctional officer while the correctional officer is engaged in, or on account of the performance of, his or her official duties shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years.

(f) Any person who commits the offense of aggravated battery in a public transit vehicle or station shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years. For purposes of this Code section, "public transit vehicle" has the same meaning as in subsection (c) of Code Section 16–5–20.

(g) Any person who commits the offense of aggravated battery upon a student or teacher or other school personnel within a school safety zone as defined in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 16–11–127.1 shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

(h) If the offense of aggravated battery is committed between past or present spouses, persons who are parents of the same child, parents and children, stepparents and stepchildren, foster parents and foster children, or other persons excluding siblings living or formerly living in the same household, the defendant shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than three nor more than 20 years.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment added the second sentence to subsec. (e)(1).

The 2003 amendment by Act 9, in subsec. (b), substituted "(c) through (h)" for "(c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h)".

§ 16–5–25. Opprobrious or abusive language may be justification

A person charged with the offense of simple assault or simple battery may introduce in evidence any opprobrious or abusive language used by the person against whom force was threatened or used; and the trier of facts may, in its discretion, find that the words used were justification for simple assault or simple battery.

§ 16–5–26. Notice of conviction; publication

(a) The clerk of the court in which a person is convicted of a second or subsequent violation of Code Section 16–5–20 and is sentenced pursuant to subsection (d) of such Code section, Code Section 16–5–23 and is sentenced pursuant to subsection (f) of such Code section, or Code Section 16–5–23.1 shall cause to be published a notice of conviction for such person. Such notice of conviction shall be published in the manner of legal notices in the legal organ of the county in which such person resides or, in the case of nonresidents, in the legal organ of the county in which the person was convicted. Such notice of conviction shall be one column wide by two inches long and shall contain the photograph taken by the arresting law enforcement agency at the time of arrest; the name and address of the convicted person; the date, time, and place of arrest; and the disposition of the case and shall be published once in the legal organ of the appropriate county in the second week following such conviction or as soon thereafter as publication may be made.

(b) The convicted person for which a notice of conviction is published pursuant to this Code section shall be assessed $25.00 for the cost of publication of such notice and such assessment shall be imposed at the time of conviction in addition to any other fine imposed.

(c) The clerk of the court, the publisher of any legal organ which publishes a notice of conviction, and any other person involved in the publication of an erroneous notice of conviction shall be immune from civil or criminal liability for such erroneous publication, provided that such publication was made in good faith.

§ 16–5–27. Female genital mutilation

(a) Any person:

(1) Who knowingly circumcises, excises, or infibulates, in whole or in part, the labia majora, labia minora, or clitoris of a female under 18 years of age;

(2) Who is a parent, guardian, or has immediate custody or control of a female under 18 years of age and knowingly consents to or permits the circumcision, excision, or infibulation, in whole or in part, of the labia majora, labia minora, or clitoris of such female; or

(3) Who knowingly removes or causes or permits the removal of a female under 18 years of age from this state for the purpose of circumcising, excising, or infibulating, in whole or in part, the labia majora, labia minora, or clitoris of such female shall be guilty of female genital mutilation.

(b) A person convicted of female genital mutilation shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

(c) This Code section shall not apply to procedures performed by or under the direction of a physician, a registered professional nurse, a certified nurse midwife, or a licensed practical nurse licensed pursuant to Chapter 34 or 26, respectively, of Title 43 when necessary to preserve the physical health of the female. This Code section shall also not apply to any autopsy or limited dissection as defined by Code Section 45–16–21 which is conducted in accordance with Article 2 of Chapter 16 of Title 45.

(d) Consent of the female under 18 years of age or the parent, guardian, or custodian of the female under 18 years of age shall not be a defense to the offense of female genital mutilation. Religion, ritual, custom, or standard practice shall not be a defense to the offense of female genital mutilation.

(e) The statutory privileges provided by Chapter 9 of Title 24 shall not apply to proceedings in which one of the parties to the privilege is charged with a crime against a female under 18 years of age, but such person shall be compellable to give evidence only on the specific act for which the defendant is charged.

§ 16–5–28. Assault of unborn child

(a) For the purposes of this Code section, the term "unborn child" means a member of the species homo sapiens at any stage of development who is carried in the womb.

(b) A person commits the offense of assault of an unborn child when such person, without legal justification, attempts to inflict violent injury to an unborn child.

(c) Any person convicted of the offense of assault of an unborn child shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(d) Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to permit the prosecution of:

(1) Any person for conduct relating to an abortion for which the consent of the pregnant woman, or person authorized by law to act on her behalf, has been obtained or for which such consent is implied by law;

(2) Any person for any medical treatment of the pregnant woman or her unborn child; or

(3) Any woman with respect to her unborn child.

§ 16–5–29. Battery of an unborn child

(a) For the purposes of this Code section, the term "unborn child" means a member of the species homo sapiens at any stage of development who is carried in the womb.

(b) A person commits the offense of battery of an unborn child when such person, without legal justification, intentionally inflicts physical harm upon an unborn child.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of battery of an unborn child shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(d) Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to permit the prosecution of:

(1) Any person for conduct relating to an abortion for which the consent of the pregnant woman, or person authorized by law to act on her behalf, has been obtained or for which such consent is implied by law;

(2) Any person for any medical treatment of the pregnant woman or her unborn child; or

(3) Any woman with respect to her unborn child.

Article 3

Kidnapping, False Imprisonment, and Related Offenses

§ 16–5–40. Kidnapping

(a) A person commits the offense of kidnapping when such person abducts or steals away another person without lawful authority or warrant and holds such other person against his or her will.

(b)(1) For the offense of kidnapping to occur, slight movement shall be sufficient; provided, however, that any such slight movement of another person which occurs while in the commission of any other offense shall not constitute the offense of kidnapping if such movement is merely incidental to such other offense.

(2) Movement shall not be considered merely incidental to another offense if it:

(A) Conceals or isolates the victim;

(B) Makes the commission of the other offense substantially easier;

(C) Lessens the risk of detection; or

(D) Is for the purpose of avoiding apprehension.

(c) The offense of kidnapping shall be considered a separate offense and shall not merge with any other offense.

(d) A person convicted of the offense of kidnapping shall be punished by:

(1) Imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years if the kidnapping involved a victim who was 14 years of age or older;

(2) Imprisonment for life or by a split sentence that is a term of imprisonment for not less than 25 years and not exceeding life imprisonment, followed by probation for life, if the kidnapping involved a victim who is less than 14 years of age;

(3) Life imprisonment or death if the kidnapping was for ransom; or

(4) Life imprisonment or death if the person kidnapped received bodily injury.

(e) Any person convicted under this Code section shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7.

(f) The offense of kidnapping is declared to be a continuous offense, and venue may be in any county where the accused exercises dominion or control over the person of another.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 571 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a) A person commits the offense of kidnapping when he abducts or steals away any person without lawful authority or warrant and holds such person against his will.

"(b) A person convicted of the offense of kidnapping shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years, provided that a person convicted of the offense of kidnapping for ransom shall be punished by life imprisonment or by death and provided, further, that, if the person kidnapped shall have received bodily injury, the person convicted shall be punished by life imprisonment or by death. Any person convicted under this Code section shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7."

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

"SECTION 30. (a) This Act shall become effective July 1, 2006.

"(b) Any person required to register pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 42–1–12, relating to the state sexual offender registry, and any person required not to reside within areas where minors congregate, as prohibited by Code Section 42–1–13 [see § 42–1–15], shall not be relieved of the obligation to comply with the provisions of said Code sections by the repeal and reenactment of said Code sections.

"(c) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

The 2009 amendment by Act 60, in subsec. (a), substituted "such person abducts or steals away another" for "he abducts or steals away any" and inserted "other" and "or her"; redesignated subsec. (b) and (c) as subsecs. (d) and (e) and added new subsecs. (b), (c), and (f).

The 2009 amendment by Act 88 duplicated the amendment by Act 60.

§ 16–5–41. False imprisonment

(a) A person commits the offense of false imprisonment when, in violation of the personal liberty of another, he arrests, confines, or detains such person without legal authority.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of false imprisonment shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

(c) Any person convicted under this Code section wherein the victim is not the child of the defendant and the victim is less than 14 years of age shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 571 added subsec. (c).

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

"SECTION 30. (a) This Act shall become effective July 1, 2006.

"(b) Any person required to register pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 42–1–12, relating to the state sexual offender registry, and any person required not to reside within areas where minors congregate, as prohibited by Code Section 42–1–13 [see § 42–1–15], shall not be relieved of the obligation to comply with the provisions of said Code sections by the repeal and reenactment of said Code sections.

"(c) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

§ 16–5–42. False imprisonment under color of legal process

When the arrest, confinement, or detention of a person by warrant, mandate, or process is manifestly illegal and shows malice and oppression, an officer issuing or knowingly and maliciously executing the same shall, upon conviction thereof, be removed from office and punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

§ 16–5–44. Aircraft hijacking

(a) A person commits the offense of hijacking an aircraft when he (1) by use of force or (2) by intimidation by the use of threats or coercion places the pilot of an aircraft in fear of immediate serious bodily injury to himself or to another and causes the diverting of an aircraft from its intended destination to a destination dictated by such person.

(b) The offense of hijacking is declared to be a continuing offense from the point of beginning, and jurisdiction to try a person accused of the offense of hijacking shall be in any county of this state over which the aircraft is operated.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of hijacking an aircraft shall be punished by death or life imprisonment.

Laws 1969, p. 741, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–3301.

§ 16–5–44.1. Motor vehicle hijacking

(a) As used in this Code section:

(1) "Firearm" means any handgun, rifle, shotgun, or similar device or weapon which will or can be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive or electrical charge and includes stun guns and tasers as defined by subsection (a) of Code Section 16–11–106, as amended, and any replica, article, or device having the appearance of a firearm.

(2) "Motor vehicle" means any vehicle which is self-propelled.

(3) "Weapon" means an object, device, or instrument which when used against a person is likely to or actually does result in serious bodily injury or death or any replica, article, or device having the appearance of such a weapon including, but not limited to, any object defined as a weapon by Code Section 16–11–127.1 or as a dangerous weapon by Code Section 16–11–121.

(b) A person commits the offense of hijacking a motor vehicle when such person while in possession of a firearm or weapon obtains a motor vehicle from the person or presence of another by force and violence or intimidation or attempts or conspires to do so.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of hijacking a motor vehicle shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years and a fine of not less than $10,000.00 nor more than $100,000.00, provided that any person who has previously committed an offense under the laws of the United States or of Georgia or of any of the several states or of any foreign nation recognized by the United States which if committed in Georgia would have constituted the offense of hijacking a motor vehicle shall be punished by imprisonment for life and a fine of not less than $100,000.00 nor more than $500,000.00. For purposes of this subsection, "state" shall include the District of Columbia and any territory, possession, or dominion of the United States.

(d) The offense of hijacking a motor vehicle shall be considered a separate offense and shall not merge with any other offense; and the punishment prescribed by subsection (c) of this Code section shall not be deferred, suspended, or probated.

(e) Any property which is used, intended for use, derived, or realized, directly or indirectly, from a violation of this Code section is forfeited to the state and no property interest shall exist therein. Any action declaring such forfeiture shall be governed by the provisions of Code Section 16–13–49.

Laws 1994, p. 1625, § 3.

§ 16–5–45. Interference with custody

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Child" means any individual who is under the age of 17 years or any individual who is under the age of 18 years who is alleged to be a deprived child as such is defined in Code Section 15–11–2, relating to juvenile proceedings.

(2) "Committed person" means any child or other person whose custody is entrusted to another individual by authority of law.

(3) "Lawful custody" means that custody inherent in the natural parents, that custody awarded by proper authority as provided in Code Section 15–11–45, or that custody awarded to a parent, guardian, or other person by a court of competent jurisdiction.

(b)(1) A person commits the offense of interference with custody when without lawful authority to do so the person:

(A) Knowingly or recklessly takes or entices any child or committed person away from the individual who has lawful custody of such child or committed person;

(B) Knowingly harbors any child or committed person who has absconded; or

(C) Intentionally and willfully retains possession within this state of the child or committed person upon the expiration of a lawful period of visitation with the child or committed person.

(2) A person convicted of the offense of interference with custody shall be punished as follows:

(A) Upon conviction of the first offense, the defendant shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than $ 200.00 nor more than $ 500.00 or shall be imprisoned for not less than one month nor more than five months, or both fined and imprisoned;

(B) Upon conviction of the second offense, the defendant shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than $ 400.00 nor more than $ 1,000.00 or shall be imprisoned for not less than three months nor more than 12 months, or both fined and imprisoned; and

(C) Upon the conviction of the third or subsequent offense, the defendant shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years.

(c)(1) A person commits the offense of interstate interference with custody when without lawful authority to do so the person knowingly or recklessly takes or entices any minor or committed person away from the individual who has lawful custody of such minor or committed person and in so doing brings such minor or committed person into this state or removes such minor or committed person from this state.

(2) A person also commits the offense of interstate interference with custody when the person removes a minor or committed person from this state in the lawful exercise of a visitation right and, upon the expiration of the period of lawful visitation, intentionally retains possession of the minor or committed person in another state for the purpose of keeping the minor or committed person away from the individual having lawful custody of the minor or committed person. The offense is deemed to be committed in the county to which the minor or committed person was to have been returned upon expiration of the period of lawful visitation.

(3) A person convicted of the offense of interstate interference with custody shall be guilty of a felony and shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than five years.

§ 16–5–46. Trafficking a person for labor or sexual servitude

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Coercion" means:

(A) Causing or threatening to cause bodily harm to any person, physically restraining or confining any person, or threatening to physically restrain or confine any person;

(B) Exposing or threatening to expose any fact or information that if revealed would tend to subject a person to criminal or immigration proceedings, hatred, contempt, or ridicule;

(C) Destroying, concealing, removing, confiscating, or possessing any actual or purported passport or other immigration document, or any other actual or purported government identification document, of any person; or

(D) Providing a controlled substance, as such term is defined by Code Section 16–13–21, to such person.

(2) "Deception" means:

(A) Creating or confirming another's impression of an existing fact or past event which is false and which the accused knows or believes to be false;

(B) Maintaining the status or condition of a person arising from a pledge by that person of his or her personal services as security for a debt, if the value of those services as reasonably assessed is not applied toward the liquidation of the debt or the length and nature of those services are not respectively limited and defined, or preventing a person from acquiring information pertinent to the disposition of such debt; or

(C) Promising benefits or the performance of services which the accused does not intend to deliver or perform or knows will not be delivered or performed. Evidence of failure to deliver benefits or perform services standing alone shall not be sufficient to authorize a conviction under this Code section.

(3) "Labor servitude" means work or service of economic or financial value which is performed or provided by another person and is induced or obtained by coercion or deception.

(4) "Sexual servitude" means:

(A) Any sexually explicit conduct as defined in paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of Code Section 16–12–100 for which anything of value is directly or indirectly given, promised to, or received by any person, which conduct is induced or obtained by coercion or deception or which conduct is induced or obtained from a person under the age of 18 years; or

(B) Any sexually explicit conduct as defined in paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of Code Section 16–12–100 which is performed or provided by any person, which conduct is induced or obtained by coercion or deception or which conduct is induced or obtained from a person under the age of 18 years.

(b) A person commits the offense of trafficking a person for labor servitude when that person knowingly subjects or maintains another in labor servitude or knowingly recruits, entices, harbors, transports, provides, or obtains by any means another person for the purpose of labor servitude.

(c) A person commits the offense of trafficking a person for sexual servitude when that person knowingly subjects or maintains another in sexual servitude or knowingly recruits, entices, harbors, transports, provides, or obtains by any means another person for the purpose of sexual servitude.

(d) Any person who commits the offense of trafficking a person for labor or sexual servitude shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years. Any person who commits the offense of trafficking a person for labor or sexual servitude against a person who is under the age of 18 years shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years.

(e) Prosecuting attorneys and the Attorney General shall have concurrent authority to prosecute any criminal cases arising under the provisions of this Code section and to perform any duty that necessarily appertains thereto.

(f) Each violation of this Code section shall constitute a separate offense and shall not merge with any other offense.

(g) A corporation may be prosecuted under this Code section for an act or omission constituting a crime under this Code section only if an agent of the corporation performs the conduct which is an element of the crime while acting within the scope of his or her office or employment and on behalf of the corporation and the commission of the crime was either authorized, requested, commanded, performed, or within the scope of his or her employment on behalf of the corporation or constituted a pattern of illegal activity that an agent of the company knew or should have known was occurring.

Article 5

Cruelty to Children

§ 16–5–70. Cruelty to children

(a) A parent, guardian, or other person supervising the welfare of or having immediate charge or custody of a child under the age of 18 commits the offense of cruelty to children in the first degree when such person willfully deprives the child of necessary sustenance to the extent that the child's health or well-being is jeopardized.

(b) Any person commits the offense of cruelty to children in the first degree when such person maliciously causes a child under the age of 18 cruel or excessive physical or mental pain.

(c) Any person commits the offense of cruelty to children in the second degree when such person with criminal negligence causes a child under the age of 18 cruel or excessive physical or mental pain.

(d) Any person commits the offense of cruelty to children in the third degree when:

(1) Such person, who is the primary aggressor, intentionally allows a child under the age of 18 to witness the commission of a forcible felony, battery, or family violence battery; or

(2) Such person, who is the primary aggressor, having knowledge that a child under the age of 18 is present and sees or hears the act, commits a forcible felony, battery, or family violence battery.

(e)(1) A person convicted of the offense of cruelty to children in the first degree as provided in this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

(2) A person convicted of the offense of cruelty to children in the second degree shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

(3) A person convicted of the offense of cruelty to children in the third degree shall be punished as for a misdemeanor upon the first or second conviction. Upon conviction of a third or subsequent offense of cruelty to children in the third degree, the defendant shall be guilty of a felony and shall be sentenced to a fine not less than $1,000.00 nor more than $5,000.00 or imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than three years or shall be sentenced to both fine and imprisonment.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2004 amendment by Act 439 rewrote subsecs. (c), (d), and (e) which had read:

"(c) Any person commits the offense of cruelty to children in the second degree when:

"(1) Such person, who is the primary aggressor, intentionally allows a child under the age of 18 to witness the commission of a forcible felony, battery, or family violence battery; or

"(2) Such person, who is the primary aggressor, having knowledge that a child under the age of 18 is present and sees or hears the act, commits a forcible felony, battery, or family violence battery.

"(d) A person convicted of the offense of cruelty to children in the first degree as provided in this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

"(e) A person convicted of the offense of cruelty to children in the second degree shall be punished as for a misdemeanor upon the first or second conviction. Upon conviction of a third or subsequent offense of cruelty to children in the second degree, the defendant shall be guilty of a felony and shall be sentenced to a fine not less than $1,000.00 nor more than $5,000.00 or imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than three years or shall be sentenced to both fine and imprisonment."

Laws 2004, Act 439, § 6, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004, and shall apply to all crimes which occur on or after that date."

§ 16–5–71. Tattooing the body of any person under the age of 18

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to tattoo the body of any person under the age of 18, except that a physician or osteopath licensed under Chapter 34 of Title 43, or a technician acting under the direct supervision of such licensed physician or osteopath, and in compliance with Chapter 9 of Title 31 shall be authorized to mark or color the skin of any person under the age of 18 by pricking in coloring matter or by producing scars for medical or cosmetic purposes.

(b) Any person violating the provisions of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Laws 1987, p. 443, § 1; Laws 1994, p. 446, § 1.

§ 16–5–71.1. Piercing the body of any person under the age of 18

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to pierce the body, with the exception of the ear lobes, of any person under the age of 18 for the purpose of allowing the insertion of earrings, jewelry, or similar objects into the body, unless the prior written consent of a custodial parent or guardian of such minor is obtained; provided, however, that the prohibition contained in this subsection shall not apply if:

(1) Such person has been furnished with proper identification showing that the individual is 18 years of age or older; and

(2) The person reasonably believes such minor to be 18 years of age or older.

(b) Any person violating the provisions of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Laws 1996, p. 645, § 1.

§ 16–5–72. Reckless abandonment of a child

(a) A parent, guardian, or other person supervising the welfare of or having immediate charge or custody of a child under the age of one year commits the offense of reckless abandonment of a child when the person willfully and voluntarily physically abandons such child with the intention of severing all parental or custodial duties and responsibilities to such child and leaving such child in a condition which results in the death of said child.

(b) Any person who violates subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a felony and shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 25 years.

Laws 1989, p. 1605, § 1.

§ 16–5–73. Definitions

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Chemical substance" means anhydrous ammonia, as defined in Code Section 16–11–111; ephedrine, pseudoephedrine, or phenylpropanolamine, as those terms are defined in Code Section 16–13–30.3; or any other chemical used in the manufacture of methamphetamine.

(2) "Child" means any individual who is under the age of 18 years.

(3) "Intent to manufacture" means but is not limited to the intent to manufacture methamphetamine, which may be demonstrated by a chemical substance's usage, quantity, or manner or method of storage, including but not limited to storing it in proximity to another chemical substance or equipment used to manufacture methamphetamine.

(4) "Methamphetamine" means methamphetamine, amphetamine, or any mixture containing either methamphetamine or amphetamine, as described in Code Section 16–13–26.

(5) "Serious injury" means an injury involving a broken bone, the loss of a member of the body, the loss of use of a member of the body, the substantial disfigurement of the body or of a member of the body, or an injury which is life threatening.

(b)(1) Any person who intentionally causes or permits a child to be present where any person is manufacturing methamphetamine or possessing a chemical substance with the intent to manufacture methamphetamine shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than two nor more than 15 years.

(2) Any person who violates paragraph (1) of this subsection wherein a child receives serious injury as a result of such violation shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2004, Act 439, § 6, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004, and shall apply to all crimes which occur on or after that date."

The 2005 amendment by Act 19 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

Article 6

Feticide

§ 16–5–80. Feticide

(a) For the purposes of this Code section, the term "unborn child" means a member of the species homo sapiens at any stage of development who is carried in the womb.

(b) A person commits the offense of feticide if he or she willfully and without legal justification causes the death of an unborn child by any injury to the mother of such child, which would be murder if it resulted in the death of such mother, or if he or she, when in the commission of a felony, causes the death of an unborn child.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of feticide shall be punished by imprisonment for life.

(d) A person commits the offense of voluntary manslaughter of an unborn child when such person causes the death of an unborn child under circumstances which would otherwise be feticide and if such person acts solely as the result of a sudden, violent, and irresistible passion resulting from serious provocation sufficient to excite such passion in a reasonable person; provided, however, that, if there should have been an interval between the provocation and the killing sufficient for the voice of reason and humanity to be heard, of which the jury in all cases shall be the judge, the killing shall be attributed to deliberate revenge and be punished as feticide.

(e) A person convicted of the offense of voluntary manslaughter of an unborn child shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years.

(f) Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to permit the prosecution of:

(1) Any person for conduct relating to an abortion for which the consent of the pregnant woman, or person authorized by law to act on her behalf, has been obtained or for which such consent is implied by law;

(2) Any person for any medical treatment of the pregnant woman or her unborn child; or

(3) Any woman with respect to her unborn child.

Laws 1982, p. 2499, § 1; Laws 2006, Act 654, § 2, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 654 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a) A person commits the offense of feticide if he willfully kills an unborn child so far developed as to be ordinarily called 'quick' by any injury to the mother of such child, which would be murder if it resulted in the death of such mother.

"(b) A person convicted of the offense of feticide shall be punished by imprisonment for life."

Laws 2006, Act 654, § 5, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006, and shall apply to all offenses committed on or after such date."

Article 7

Stalking

§ 16–5–90. Stalking

(a)(1) A person commits the offense of stalking when he or she follows, places under surveillance, or contacts another person at or about a place or places without the consent of the other person for the purpose of harassing and intimidating the other person. For the purpose of this article, the terms "computer" and "computer network" shall have the same meanings as set out in Code Section 16–9–92; the term "contact" shall mean any communication including without being limited to communication in person, by telephone, by mail, by broadcast, by computer, by computer network, or by any other electronic device; and the place or places that contact by telephone, mail, broadcast, computer, computer network, or any other electronic device is deemed to occur shall be the place or places where such communication is received. For the purpose of this article, the term "place or places" shall include any public or private property occupied by the victim other than the residence of the defendant. For the purposes of this article, the term "harassing and intimidating" means a knowing and willful course of conduct directed at a specific person which causes emotional distress by placing such person in reasonable fear for such person's safety or the safety of a member of his or her immediate family, by establishing a pattern of harassing and intimidating behavior, and which serves no legitimate purpose. This Code section shall not be construed to require that an overt threat of death or bodily injury has been made.

(2) A person commits the offense of stalking when such person, in violation of a bond to keep the peace posted pursuant to Code Section 17–6–110, standing order issued under Code Section 19–1–1, temporary restraining order, temporary protective order, permanent restraining order, permanent protective order, preliminary injunction, or permanent injunction or condition of pretrial release, condition of probation, or condition of parole in effect prohibiting the harassment or intimidation of another person, broadcasts or publishes, including electronic publication, the picture, name, address, or phone number of a person for whose benefit the bond, order, or condition was made and without such person's consent in such a manner that causes other persons to harass or intimidate such person and the person making the broadcast or publication knew or had reason to believe that such broadcast or publication would cause such person to be harassed or intimidated by others.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, a person who commits the offense of stalking is guilty of a misdemeanor.

(c) Upon the second conviction, and all subsequent convictions, for stalking, the defendant shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years.

(d) Before sentencing a defendant for any conviction of stalking under this Code section or aggravated stalking under Code Section 16–5–91, the sentencing judge may require psychological evaluation of the offender and shall consider the entire criminal record of the offender. At the time of sentencing, the judge is authorized to issue a permanent restraining order against the offender to protect the person stalked and the members of such person's immediate family, and the judge is authorized to require psychological treatment of the offender as a part of the sentence, or as a condition for suspension or stay of sentence, or for probation.

Laws 1993, p. 1534, § 1; Laws 1998, p. 885, § 1; Laws 2000, p. 1283, § 1.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment to subsec. (a) designated par. (1), inserted therein "terms 'computer' and 'computer network' shall have the same meanings as set out in Code Section 16–9–92; the term 'contact' shall mean any communication including without being limited to communication in person, by telephone, by mail, by broadcast, by computer, by computer network, or by any other electronic device; and the place or places that contact by telephone, mail, broadcast, computer, computer network, or any other electronic device is deemed to occur shall be the place or places where such communication is received. For the purpose of this article, the", and added par. (2).

§ 16–5–91. Aggravated stalking

(a) A person commits the offense of aggravated stalking when such person, in violation of a bond to keep the peace posted pursuant to Code Section 17–6–110, temporary restraining order, temporary protective order, permanent restraining order, permanent protective order, preliminary injunction, good behavior bond, or permanent injunction or condition of pretrial release, condition of probation, or condition of parole in effect prohibiting the behavior described in this subsection, follows, places under surveillance, or contacts another person at or about a place or places without the consent of the other person for the purpose of harassing and intimidating the other person.

(b) Any person convicted of a violation of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years and by a fine of not more than $ 10,000.00. The provisions of subsection (d) of Code Section 16–5–90 apply to sentencing for conviction of aggravated stalking.

Laws 1993, p. 1534, § 1; Laws 1995, p. 911, § 1; Laws 1998, p. 885, § 2; Laws 2002, p. 862, § 1.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2002 amendment inserted in subsec. (a) "good behavior bond,".

§ 16–5–92. Exceptions

The provisions of Code Sections 16–5–90 and 16–5–91 shall not apply to persons engaged in activities protected by the Constitution of the United States or of this state or to persons or employees of such persons lawfully engaged in bona fide business activity or lawfully engaged in the practice of a profession.

Laws 1993, p. 1534, § 1.

§ 16–5–93. Victims entitled to notice of release from custody of person arrested for and charged with stalking or aggravated stalking

(a) The victim of stalking or aggravated stalking shall be entitled to notice of the release from custody of the person arrested for and charged with the offense of stalking or aggravated stalking and to notice of any hearing on the issue of bail for such person. No such notice shall be required unless the victim provides a landline telephone number other than a pocket pager or electronic communication device number to which such notice can be directed.

(b) The law enforcement agency, prosecutor, or court directly involved with the victim at the outset of a criminal prosecution for the offense of stalking or aggravated stalking shall advise the victim of his or her right to notice and of the requirement of the victim's providing a landline telephone number other than a pocket pager or electronic communication device number to which the notice of custodial release or bail hearing can be directed. Such victim shall transmit the telephone number described in this subsection to the court and custodian of the person charged with stalking or aggravated stalking.

(c) Upon receipt of the telephone number, the custodian of the person charged with stalking or aggravated stalking shall take reasonable and necessary steps under the circumstances to notify the victim of the person's release from custody. Such notice shall, at a minimum, include:

(1) Prior to the person's release, placing a telephone call to the number provided by the victim and giving notice to the victim or any person answering the telephone who appears to be sui juris or by leaving an appropriate message on a telephone answering machine; and

(2) Following the person's release, if the custodian is unable to notify the victim by the method provided in paragraph (1) of this subsection, telephoning the number provided by the victim no less than two times in no less than 15 minute intervals within one hour of custodial release and giving notice to the victim or to any person answering the telephone who appears to be sui juris or by leaving an appropriate message on a telephone answering machine.

(d) Upon receipt of the telephone number, the court conducting a hearing on the issue of bail shall take reasonable and necessary steps under the circumstances to notify the victim of any scheduled hearing on the issue of bail. Such notice shall, at a minimum, include placing a telephone call to the number provided by the victim prior to any scheduled hearing on the issue of bail.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Code section, a scheduled bail hearing or the release of the person charged with stalking or aggravated stalking shall not be delayed solely for the purpose of effectuating notice pursuant to this Code section for a period of more than 30 minutes.

(f) Upon the person's release or escape from custody after conviction and service of all or a portion of a sentence, notification to the victim shall be provided by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles as set forth in Code Sections 42–9–46 and 42–9–47.

(g) This Code section shall not apply to a custodian who is transferring a person charged with stalking or aggravated stalking to another custodian in this state.

(h) As used in this Code section, the term "custodian" means a warden, sheriff, jailer, deputy sheriff, police officer, officer or employee of the Department of Juvenile Justice, or any other law enforcement officer having actual custody of an inmate.

(i) A custodian or his or her employing agency shall not be liable in damages for a failure to provide the notice required by this Code section, but the custodian shall be subject to appropriate disciplinary action including termination for such failure.

Laws 1993, p. 1534, § 1; Laws 1997, p. 1453, § 1.

§ 16–5–94. Restraining orders, protective orders, and approval of consent orders to prevent recurrence of stalking

(a) A person who is not a minor who alleges stalking by another person may seek a restraining order by filing a petition alleging conduct constituting stalking as defined in Code Section 16–5–90. A person who is not a minor may also seek relief on behalf of a minor by filing such a petition.

(b) Jurisdiction for such a petition shall be the same as for family violence petitions as set out in Code Section 19–13–2.

(c) Upon the filing of a verified petition in which the petitioner alleges with specific facts that probable cause exists to establish that stalking by the respondent has occurred in the past and may occur in the future, the court may order such temporary relief ex parte as it deems necessary to protect the petitioner or a minor of the household from stalking. If the court issues an ex parte order, a copy of the order shall be immediately furnished to the petitioner.

(d) The court may grant a protective order or approve a consent agreement to bring about a cessation of conduct constituting stalking. Orders or agreements may:

(1) Direct a party to refrain from such conduct;

(2) Order a party to refrain from harassing or interfering with the other;

(3) Award costs and attorney's fees to either party; and

(4) Order either or all parties to receive appropriate psychiatric or psychological services as a further measure to prevent the recurrence of stalking.

(e) The provisions of subsections (c) and (d) of Code Section 19–13–3, subsections (b), (c), and (d) of Code Section 19–13–4, and Code Section 19–13–5, relating to family violence petitions, shall apply to petitions filed pursuant to this Code section, except that the clerk of court may provide forms for petitions and pleadings to persons alleging conduct constituting stalking and to any other person designated by the superior court pursuant to this Code section as authorized to advise persons alleging conduct constituting stalking on filling out and filing such petitions and pleadings.

Laws 1998, p. 885, § 3; Laws 1999, p. 81, § 16.

§ 16–5–95. Violation of family violence order

(a) A person commits the offense of violating a family violence order when the person knowingly and in a nonviolent manner violates the terms of a family violence temporary restraining order, temporary protective order, permanent restraining order, or permanent protective order issued against that person pursuant to Article 1 of Chapter 13 of Title 19, which:

(1) Excludes, evicts, or excludes and evicts the person from a residence or household;

(2) Directs the person to stay away from a residence, workplace, or school;

(3) Restrains the person from approaching within a specified distance of another person; or

(4) Restricts the person from having any contact, direct or indirect, by telephone, pager, facsimile, e-mail, or any other means of communication with another person, except as specified in the order.

(b) Any person convicted of a violation of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(c) Nothing contained in this Code section shall prohibit a prosecution for the offense of stalking or aggravated stalking that arose out of the same course of conduct; provided, however, that, for purposes of sentencing, a violation of this Code section shall be merged with a violation of any provision of Code Section 16–5–90 or 16–5–91 that arose out of the same course of conduct.

Laws 2003, Act 298, § 1, eff. July 1, 2003.

§ 16–5–96. Notice of conviction; publication

(a) The clerk of the court in which a person is convicted of a second or subsequent violation of Code Section 16–5–90 or 16–5–91 shall cause to be published a notice of conviction for such person. Such notice of conviction shall be published in the manner of legal notices in the legal organ of the county in which such person resides or, in the case of nonresidents, in the legal organ of the county in which the person was convicted. Such notice of conviction shall be one column wide by two inches long and shall contain the photograph taken by the arresting law enforcement agency at the time of arrest; the name and address of the convicted person; the date, time, and place of arrest; and the disposition of the case and shall be published once in the legal organ of the appropriate county in the second week following such conviction or as soon thereafter as publication may be made.

(b) The convicted person for which a notice of conviction is published pursuant to this Code section shall be assessed $25.00 for the cost of publication of such notice and such assessment shall be imposed at the time of conviction in addition to any other fine imposed.

(c) The clerk of the court, the publisher of any legal organ which publishes a notice of conviction, and any other person involved in the publication of an erroneous notice of conviction shall be immune from civil or criminal liability for such erroneous publication, provided that such publication was made in good faith.

Laws 2004, Act 560, § 3B, eff. July 1, 2004; Laws 2005, Act 19, § 16, eff. April 7, 2005.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2004, Act 560, § 9(b), provides:

"Part I of this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004, and shall apply to offenses committed on or after such date."

The 2005 amendment by Act 19 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

Article 8

Protection of Elder Persons

§ 16–5–100. Cruelty to a person who is 65 years of age or older

(a) A guardian or other person supervising the welfare of or having immediate charge or custody of a person who is 65 years of age or older commits the offense of cruelty to a person who is 65 years of age or older when the person willfully deprives a person who is 65 years of age or older of health care, shelter, or necessary sustenance to the extent that the health or well-being of a person who is 65 years of age or older is jeopardized.

(b) The provisions of this Code section shall not apply to a physician nor any person acting under a physician's direction nor to a hospital, skilled nursing facility, hospice, nor any agent or employee thereof who is in good faith following a course of treatment developed in accordance with accepted medical standards or who is acting in good faith in accordance with a living will, a durable power of attorney for health care, an advance directive for health care, an order not to resuscitate, or the instructions of the patient or the patient's lawful surrogate decision maker, nor shall the provisions of this Code section require any physician, any institution licensed in accordance with Chapter 7 of Title 31 or any employee or agent thereof to provide health care services or shelter to any person in the absence of another legal obligation to do so.

(b.1) The provisions of this Code section shall not apply to a guardian or other person supervising the welfare of or having immediate charge or control of a person who is 65 years of age or older who in good faith provides treatment by spiritual means alone through prayer for the person's physical or mental condition, in lieu of medical treatment, in accordance with the practices of and written notarized consent of the person.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of cruelty to a person who is 65 years of age or older as provided in this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years.

Laws 2000, p. 1085, § 2; Laws 2002, p. 648, § 1; Laws 2007, Act 48, § 6, eff. July 1, 2007.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2002 amendment inserted in subsec. (a) reference to health care and shelter, inserted a new subsec. (c), and rewrote subsec. (b) which as enacted in 2000 provided:

"The provisions of this Code section shall not apply to a physician nor any person acting under his or her direction nor to a hospital, skilled nursing facility, nor any agent or employee thereof who is acting in good faith in accordance with a living will as provided in Chapter 32 of Title 31, a durable power of attorney for health care as provided in Chapter 36 of Title 31, or the instructions of the patient or the patient's lawful surrogate decision maker."

In 2002, the Code Commission redesignated subsec. (c), which was added by Laws 2002, p. 648, § 1, as subsec. (b.1). See § 28–9–5.

The 2007 amendment by Act 48, in subsec. (b), substituted "a physician's" for "his or her" preceding "direction nor to a hospital", deleted "as provided in Chapter 32 of Title 31" following "living will", "power of attorney for health care", and "not to resuscitate"; and inserted "an advance directive for health care," preceding "an order not to resuscitate".

Article 9

Publishing of Notice of Conviction and Release

§ 16–5–110. Notice of conviction and release published in legal organ

(a) When a person who has been convicted of a crime for which that person is required to register under Code Section 42–1–12 makes his or her first report to a sheriff after such person's release from confinement, placement on probation, or upon establishing residency in the county, the sheriff shall cause to be published a notice of conviction and release from confinement of such person. Such notice shall be one column wide by two inches long and shall contain the photograph taken by the arresting law enforcement agency at the time of arrest; the name and address of the convicted person; if available, the date, time, and place of arrest; and the disposition of the case. The notice shall be published at or near the time the person registers with the sheriff at least once, and, at the sheriff's option, may be published more than once, in the legal organ of the appropriate county. The notice shall include the address of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation website for additional information regarding the sexual offender registry.

(b) The convicted person for which a notice of conviction and release from confinement is published pursuant to subsection (a) of this Code section shall be assessed $25.00 for the cost of publication of such notice, and such assessment shall be imposed at the time of reporting to the sheriff's office.

(c) The sheriff, the publisher of any legal organ which publishes a notice of conviction and release from confinement, and any other person involved in the publication of an erroneous notice of conviction and release from confinement shall be immune from civil or criminal liability for such erroneous publication, provided that such publication was made in good faith.

Laws 2005, Act 74, § 1, eff. July 1, 2005; Laws 2006, Act 453, § 16, eff. April 14, 2006; Laws 2006, Act 571, § 7, eff. July 1, 2006; Laws 2007, Act 18, § 16, eff. May 11, 2007.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 453 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

The 2006 amendment by Act 571 rewrote subsec. (a) which had read:

"(a) When a person who has been convicted of a crime for which that person is required to register under Code Section 42–1–12 makes his or her first report to a sheriff after such person's release from confinement, the sheriff shall cause to be published a notice of conviction and release from confinement of such person. Such notice shall be published in the manner of legal notices in the legal organ of the county in which person resides. Such notice shall be one column wide by two inches long and shall contain the photograph taken by the arresting law enforcement agency at the time of arrest or a subsequent photograph, the name and address of the convicted person, and the date, time, place of arrest, and disposition of the case and shall be published once in the legal organ of the appropriate county in the second week following such person's release from confinement or as soon thereafter as publication may be made. The notice shall include the address of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation website for additional information regarding the sexual offender registry."

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

"SECTION 30. (a) This Act shall become effective July 1, 2006.

"(b) Any person required to register pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 42–1–12, relating to the state sexual offender registry, and any person required not to reside within areas where minors congregate, as prohibited by Code Section 42–1–13 [see § 42–1–15], shall not be relieved of the obligation to comply with the provisions of said Code sections by the repeal and reenactment of said Code sections.

"(c) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

In 2006, the Code Commission, due to irreconcilable conflicts, treated the amendment of this section by Laws 2006, Act 453, § 16, as superseded by Laws 2006, Act 571, § 7. See Butts County v. Strahan, 107 S.E. 163, 151 Ga. 417 (1921).

The 2007 amendment by Act 18 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

§ 16–6–1. Rape

(a) A person commits the offense of rape when he has carnal knowledge of:

(1) A female forcibly and against her will; or

(2) A female who is less than ten years of age.

Carnal knowledge in rape occurs when there is any penetration of the female sex organ by the male sex organ. The fact that the person allegedly raped is the wife of the defendant shall not be a defense to a charge of rape.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of rape shall be punished by death, by imprisonment for life without parole, by imprisonment for life, or by a split sentence that is a term of imprisonment for not less than 25 years and not exceeding life imprisonment, followed by probation for life. Any person convicted under this Code section shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7.

(c) When evidence relating to an allegation of rape is collected in the course of a medical examination of the person who is the victim of the alleged crime, the law enforcement agency investigating the alleged crime shall be responsible for the cost of the medical examination to the extent that expense is incurred for the limited purpose of collecting evidence.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 571, in subsec. (b), substituted "a split sentence that is a term of imprisonment for not less than 25 years and not exceeding life imprisonment, followed by probation for life" for "imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years".

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. "(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

"SECTION 30. (a) This Act shall become effective July 1, 2006.

"(b) Any person required to register pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 42–1–12, relating to the state sexual offender registry, and any person required not to reside within areas where minors congregate, as prohibited by Code Section 42–1–13 [see § 42–1–15], shall not be relieved of the obligation to comply with the provisions of said Code sections by the repeal and reenactment of said Code sections.

"(c) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

§ 16–6–2. Sodomy; aggravated sodomy

(a)(1) A person commits the offense of sodomy when he or she performs or submits to any sexual act involving the sex organs of one person and the mouth or anus of another.

(2) A person commits the offense of aggravated sodomy when he or she commits sodomy with force and against the will of the other person or when he or she commits sodomy with a person who is less than ten years of age. The fact that the person allegedly sodomized is the spouse of a defendant shall not be a defense to a charge of aggravated sodomy.

(b)(1) Except as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of sodomy shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years and shall be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

(2) A person convicted of the offense of aggravated sodomy shall be punished by imprisonment for life or by a split sentence that is a term of imprisonment for not less than 25 years and not exceeding life imprisonment, followed by probation for life. Any person convicted under this Code section of the offense of aggravated sodomy shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7.

(c) When evidence relating to an allegation of aggravated sodomy is collected in the course of a medical examination of the person who is the victim of the alleged crime, the law enforcement agency investigating the alleged crime shall be financially responsible for the cost of the medical examination to the extent that expense is incurred for the limited purpose of collecting evidence.

(d) If the victim is at least 13 but less than 16 years of age and the person convicted of sodomy is 18 years of age or younger and is no more than four years older than the victim, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall not be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

Validity

This section has been held unconstitutional in the case of Powell v. State, 1998, 270 Ga. 327, 510 S.E.2d 18.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment inserted in the second sentence of subsec. (a) "or when he or she commits sodomy with a person who is less than ten years of age", and substituted "30" for "20" years at the end of the second sentence to subsec. (b).

The 2006 amendment by Act 571, in subsec. (a), added paragraph designations; rewrote subsec. (b); and added subsec. (d). Prior to amendment subsec. (b) had read:

"(b) A person convicted of the offense of sodomy shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years. A person convicted of the offense of aggravated sodomy shall be punished by imprisonment for life or by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years. Any person convicted under this Code section of the offense of aggravated sodomy shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7."

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. "SECTION 30. (a) This Act shall become effective July 1, 2006.

"(b) Any person required to register pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 42–1–12, relating to the state sexual offender registry, and any person required not to reside within areas where minors congregate, as prohibited by Code Section 42–1–13 [see § 42–1–15], shall not be relieved of the obligation to comply with the provisions of said Code sections by the repeal and reenactment of said Code sections.

§ 16–6–3. Statutory rape

(a) A person commits the offense of statutory rape when he or she engages in sexual intercourse with any person under the age of 16 years and not his or her spouse, provided that no conviction shall be had for this offense on the unsupported testimony of the victim.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of statutory rape shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years; provided, however, that if the person so convicted is 21 years of age or older, such person shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years. Any person convicted under this subsection of the offense of statutory rape shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

(c) If the victim is at least 14 but less than 16 years of age and the person convicted of statutory rape is 18 years of age or younger and is no more than four years older than the victim, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

"(a) A person commits the offense of statutory rape when he or she engages in sexual intercourse with any person under the age of 16 years and not his or her spouse, provided that no conviction shall be had for this offense on the unsupported testimony of the victim.

"(b) A person convicted of the offense of statutory rape shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years; provided, however, that if the person so convicted is 21 years of age or older, such person shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years; provided, further, that if the victim is 14 or 15 years of age and the person so convicted is no more than three years older than the victim, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. § 16–6–4. Child molestation; aggravated child molestation

(a) A person commits the offense of child molestation when such person:

(1) Does any immoral or indecent act to or in the presence of or with any child under the age of 16 years with the intent to arouse or satisfy the sexual desires of either the child or the person; or

(2) By means of an electronic device, transmits images of a person engaging in, inducing, or otherwise participating in any immoral or indecent act to a child under the age of 16 years with the intent to arouse or satisfy the sexual desires of either the child or the person.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, a person convicted of a first offense of child molestation shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years and shall be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6. 2 and 17–10–7. Upon a defendant being incarcerated on a conviction for a first offense, the Department of Corrections shall provide counseling to such defendant. Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, upon a second or subsequent conviction of an offense of child molestation, the defendant shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten years nor more than 30 years or by imprisonment for life and shall be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.2 and 17–10–7; provided, however, that prior to trial, a defendant shall be given notice, in writing, that the state intends to seek a punishment of life imprisonment.

(2) If the victim is at least 14 but less than 16 years of age and the person convicted of child molestation is 18 years of age or younger and is no more than four years older than the victim, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall not be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

(c) A person commits the offense of aggravated child molestation when such person commits an offense of child molestation which act physically injures the child or involves an act of sodomy.

(d)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, a person convicted of the offense of aggravated child molestation shall be punished by imprisonment for life or by a split sentence that is a term of imprisonment for not less than 25 years and not exceeding life imprisonment, followed by probation for life, and shall be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7.

(2) A person convicted of the offense of aggravated child molestation when:

(A) The victim is at least 13 but less than 16 years of age;

(B) The person convicted of aggravated child molestation is 18 years of age or younger and is no more than four years older than the victim; and

(C) The basis of the charge of aggravated child molestation involves an act of sodomy shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall not be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.1.

(e) A person shall be subject to prosecution in this state pursuant to Code Section 17–2–1 for any conduct made unlawful by paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section which the person engages in while:

(1) Either within or outside of this state if, by such conduct, the person commits a violation of paragraph (2) of subsection

(a) of this Code section which involves a child who resides in this state; or

(2) Within this state if, by such conduct, the person commits a violation of paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section which involves a child who resides within or outside this state.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 571 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a) A person commits the offense of child molestation when he or she does any immoral or indecent act to or in the presence of or with any child under the age of 16 years with the intent to arouse or satisfy the sexual desires of either the child or the person.

"(b) A person convicted of a first offense of child molestation shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years. Upon such first conviction of the offense of child molestation, the judge may probate the sentence; and such probation may be upon the special condition that the defendant undergo a mandatory period of counseling administered by a licensed psychiatrist or a licensed psychologist. However, if the judge finds that such probation should not be imposed, he or she shall sentence the defendant to imprisonment; provided, further, that upon a defendant's being incarcerated on a conviction for such first offense, the Department of Corrections shall provide counseling to such defendant. Upon a second or subsequent conviction of an offense of child molestation, the defendant shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten years nor more than 30 years or by imprisonment for life; provided, however, that prior to trial, a defendant shall be given notice, in writing, that the state intends to seek a punishment of life imprisonment. Adjudication of guilt or imposition of sentence for a conviction of a second or subsequent offense of child molestation, including a plea of nolo contendere, shall not be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld.

"(c) A person commits the offense of aggravated child molestation when such person commits an offense of child molestation which act physically injures the child or involves an act of sodomy.

"(d)(1) A person convicted of the offense of aggravated child molestation shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years. Any person convicted under this Code section of the offense of aggravated child molestation shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7.

"(2) The court sentencing a person who has been convicted of a first offense of aggravated child molestation when the victim is 16 years of age or younger at the time of the offense is authorized to require, before sentencing, that the defendant undergo a psychiatric evaluation to ascertain whether or not medroxyprogesterone acetate chemical treatment or its equivalent would be effective in changing the defendant's behavior. If it is determined by a qualified mental health professional that such treatment would be effective, the court may require, as a condition of probation and upon provisions arranged between the court and the defendant, the defendant to undergo medroxyprogesterone acetate treatment or its chemical equivalent which must be coupled with treatment by a qualified mental health professional. In case of a person sentenced to probation who is required to undergo such treatment or its chemical equivalent and is in the custody of a law enforcement agency or confined in a jail at the time of sentencing, when he or she becomes eligible for probation, such person shall begin medroxyprogesterone acetate treatment and counseling prior to his or her release from custody or confinement. A person sentenced to probation who is required to undergo such treatment and who is not in the custody of a law enforcement agency or confined in a jail at the time of sentencing shall be taken into custody or confined until treatment can begin. Additional treatment may continue after such defendant's release from custody or confinement until the defendant demonstrates to the court that such treatment is no longer necessary. No such treatment shall be administered until such person has been fully informed of the side effects of hormonal chemical treatment and has consented to the treatment in writing. The administration of the treatment shall conform to the procedures and conditions set out in subsection (c) of Code Section 42–9–44.2.

"(3) Any physician or qualified mental health professional who acts in good faith in compliance with the provisions of this Code section and subsection (c) of Code Section 42–9–44.2 in the administration of treatment or provision of counseling provided for in this Code section shall be immune from civil or criminal liability for his or her actions in connection with such treatment or counseling."

The 2009 amendment by Act 149, in subsec. (a), substituted "such person" for "he or she does", designated par. (1), in new par. (1), inserted "Does" and "; or", inserted par. (2); and added subsec. (e).

§ 16–6–5. Enticing a child for indecent purposes

(a) A person commits the offense of enticing a child for indecent purposes when he or she solicits, entices, or takes any child under the age of 16 years to any place whatsoever for the purpose of child molestation or indecent acts.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of enticing a child for indecent purposes shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years. Any person convicted under this Code section of the offense of enticing a child for indecent purposes shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

(c) If the victim is at least 14 but less than 16 years of age and the person convicted of enticing a child for indecent purposes is 18 years of age or younger and is no more than four years older than the victim, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall not be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

"(c) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

§ 16–6–5.1. Sexual assault

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Actor" means a person accused of sexual assault.

(2) "Intimate parts" means the genital area, groin, inner thighs, buttocks, or breasts of a person.

(3) "Psychotherapy" means the professional treatment or counseling of a mental or emotional illness, symptom, or condition.

(4) "Sexual contact" means any contact between the actor and a person not married to the actor involving the intimate parts of either person for the purpose of sexual gratification of the actor.

(5) "School" means any educational program or institution instructing children at any level, pre-kindergarten through twelfth grade, or the equivalent thereof if grade divisions are not used.

(b) A person who has supervisory or disciplinary authority over another individual commits sexual assault when that person:

(1) Is a teacher, principal, assistant principal, or other administrator of any school and engages in sexual contact with such other individual who the actor knew or should have known is enrolled at the same school; provided, however, that such contact shall not be prohibited when the actor is married to such other individual;

(2) Is an employee or agent of any probation or parole office and engages in sexual contact with such other individual who the actor knew or should have known is a probationer or parolee under the supervision of the same probation or parole office;

(3) Is an employee or agent of a law enforcement agency and engages in sexual contact with such other individual who the actor knew or should have known is being detained by or is in the custody of any law enforcement agency;

(4) Is an employee or agent of a hospital and engages in sexual contact with such other individual who the actor knew or should have known is a patient or is being detained in the same hospital; or

(5) Is an employee or agent of a correctional facility, juvenile detention facility, facility providing services to a person with a disability, as such term is defined in Code Section 37–1–1, or a facility providing child welfare and youth services, as such term is defined in Code Section 49–5–3, who engages in sexual contact with such other individual who the actor knew or should have known is in the custody of such facility.

(c) A person who is an actual or purported practitioner of psychotherapy commits sexual assault when he or she engages in sexual contact with another individual who the actor knew or should have known is the subject of the actor's actual or purported treatment or counseling or the actor uses the treatment or counseling relationship to facilitate sexual contact between the actor and such individual.

(d) A person who is an employee, agent, or volunteer at any facility licensed or required to be licensed under Code Section 31–7–3 or 31–7–12 or who is required to be licensed pursuant to

Code Section 31–7–151 or 31–7–173 commits sexual assault when he or she engages in sexual contact with another individual who the actor knew or should have known had been admitted to or is receiving services from such facility or the actor.

(e) Consent of the victim shall not be a defense to a prosecution under this Code section.

(f) A person convicted of sexual assault shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 25 years or by a fine not to exceed $100,000.00, or both; provided, however, that:

(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, any person convicted of the offense of sexual assault of a child under the age of 16 years shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 25 nor more than 50 years and shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2; and

(2) If at the time of the offense the victim of the offense is at least 14 years of age but less than 16 years of age and the actor is 18 years of age or younger and is no more than four years older than the victim, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall not be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 571, in subsec. (a), par. (4), substituted "between the actor and a person not married to the actor involving the intimate parts of either person for the purpose of sexual gratification of the actor" for "for the purpose of sexual gratification of the actor with the intimate parts of a person not married to the actor"; in subsec. (b), added "or she" preceding "engages in sexual contact" in the first sentence, substituted "ten nor more that 30 years" for "one nor more than three years" in the second sentence, and added "; provided, however, that any person convicted of the offense of sexual assault under this subsection of a child under the age of 14 years shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 25 years nor more than 50 years. Any person convicted under this subsection of the offense of sexual assault shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2."; in subsec. (c), par. (4), substituted "ten nor more than 30 years" for "one nor more than three years", and added "; provided, however, that any person convicted of the offense of sexual assault under this subsection of a child under the age of 14 years shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 25 nor more than 50 years. Any person convicted under this subsection of the offense of sexual assault shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2."; and in subsec. (d), substituted "ten nor more than 30 years" for "one nor more than five years" and added "Any person convicted under this subsection of the offense of sexual assault shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2."

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

"SECTION 30. (a) This Act shall become effective July 1, 2006.

"(b) Any person required to register pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 42–1–12, relating to the state sexual offender registry, and any person required not to reside within areas where minors congregate, as prohibited by Code Section 42–1–13 [see § 42–1–15], shall not be relieved of the obligation to comply with the provisions of said Code sections by the repeal and reenactment of said Code sections.

"(c) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

The 2010 amendment by Act 389 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

"(1) 'Actor' means a person accused of sexual assault.

"(2) 'Intimate parts' means the genital area, groin, inner thighs, buttocks, or breasts of a person.

"(3) 'Psychotherapy' means the professional treatment or counseling of a mental or emotional illness, symptom, or condition.

"(4) 'Sexual contact' means any contact between the actor and a person not married to the actor involving the intimate parts of either person for the purpose of sexual gratification of the actor.

"(b) A probation or parole officer or other custodian or supervisor of another person referred to in this Code section commits sexual assault when he or she engages in sexual contact with another person who is a probationer or parolee under the supervision of said probation or parole officer or who is in the custody of law or who is enrolled in a school or who is detained in or is a patient in a hospital or other institution and such actor has supervisory or disciplinary authority over such other person. A person convicted of sexual assault shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years; provided, however, that any person convicted of the offense of sexual assault under this subsection of a child under the age of 14 years shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 25 nor more than 50 years. Any person convicted under this subsection of the offense of sexual assault shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

"(c)(1) A person commits sexual assault when such person has supervisory or disciplinary authority over another person and such person engages in sexual contact with that other person who is:

"(A) In the custody of law; or

"(B) Detained in or is a patient in a hospital or other institution.

"(2) A person commits sexual assault when, as an actual or purported practitioner of psychotherapy, he or she engages in sexual contact with another person who the actor knew or should have known is the subject of the actor's actual or purported treatment or counseling, or, if the treatment or counseling relationship was used to facilitate sexual contact between the actor and said person.

"(3) Consent of the victim shall not be a defense to a prosecution under this subsection.

"(4) A person convicted of sexual assault under this subsection shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years; provided, however, that any person convicted of the offense of sexual assault under this subsection of a child under the age of 14 years shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 25 nor more than 50 years. Any person convicted under this subsection of the offense of sexual assault shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

"(d) A person who is an employee, agent, or volunteer at any facility licensed or required to be licensed under Code Section 31–7–3, relating to long-term care facilities, or Code Section 31–7–12, relating to personal care homes, or who is required to be licensed pursuant to Code Section 31–7–151 or 31–7–173, relating to home health care and hospices, commits sexual assault when such person engages in sexual contact with another person who has been admitted to or is receiving services from such facility, person, or entity. A person convicted of sexual assault pursuant to this subsection shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years, or a fine of not more than $5,000.00, or both. Any violation of this subsection shall constitute a separate offense. Any person convicted under this subsection of the offense of sexual assault shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2."

§ 16–6–6. Bestiality

(a) A person commits the offense of bestiality when he performs or submits to any sexual act with an animal involving the sex organs of the one and the mouth, anus, penis, or vagina of the other.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of bestiality shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years.

§ 16–6–7. Necrophilia

(a) A person commits the offense of necrophilia when he performs any sexual act with a dead human body involving the sex organs of the one and the mouth, anus, penis, or vagina of the other.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of necrophilia shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

Laws 1977, p. 315, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2022.

§ 16–6–8. Public indecency

(a) A person commits the offense of public indecency when he or she performs any of the following acts in a public place:

(1) An act of sexual intercourse;

(2) A lewd exposure of the sexual organs;

(3) A lewd appearance in a state of partial or complete nudity; or

(4) A lewd caress or indecent fondling of the body of another person.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of public indecency as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section shall be punished as for a misdemeanor except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section.

(c) Upon a third or subsequent conviction for public indecency for the violation of paragraph (2), (3), or (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section, a person shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years.

(d) For the purposes of this Code section only, "public place" shall include jails and penal and correctional institutions of the state and its political subdivisions.

(e) This Code section shall be cumulative to and shall not prohibit the enactment of any other general and local laws, rules, and regulations of state and local authorities or agencies and local ordinances prohibiting such activities which are more restrictive than this Code section.

§ 16–6–9. Prostitution

A person commits the offense of prostitution when he or she performs or offers or consents to perform a sexual act, including but not limited to sexual intercourse or sodomy, for money or other items of value.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 2001, p. 92, § 3.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2012.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2001 amendment rewrote this section which formerly provided:

"A person commits the offense of prostitution when he performs or offers or consents to perform an act of sexual intercourse for money."

§ 16–6–10. Keeping a place of prostitution

A person having or exercising control over the use of any place or conveyance which would offer seclusion or shelter for the practice of prostitution commits the offense of keeping a place of prostitution when he knowingly grants or permits the use of such place for the purpose of prostitution.

Laws 1943, p. 568, § 1; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1970, p. 236, § 3.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2014.

§ 16–6–11. Pimping

A person commits the offense of pimping when he or she performs any of the following acts:

(1) Offers or agrees to procure a prostitute for another;

(2) Offers or agrees to arrange a meeting of persons for the purpose of prostitution;

(3) Directs or transports another person to a place when he or she knows or should know that the direction or transportation is for the purpose of prostitution;

(4) Receives money or other thing of value from a prostitute, without lawful consideration, knowing it was earned in whole or in part from prostitution; or

(5) Aids or abets, counsels, or commands another in the commission of prostitution or aids or assists in prostitution where the proceeds or profits derived therefrom are to be divided on a pro rata basis.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–6201; Code 1933, § 26–2013.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2003 amendment by Act 216, inserted "or she" in the first sentence; and in par. (3), substituted "Directs or transports another person to a place when he or she knows or should know that the direction or transportation is for the purpose of prostitution" for "Directs another to a place knowing such direction is for the purpose of prostitution"

§ 16–6–12. Pandering

A person commits the offense of pandering when he or she solicits a person to perform an act of prostitution in his or her own behalf or in behalf of a third person or when he or she knowingly assembles persons at a fixed place for the purpose of being solicited by others to perform an act of prostitution.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1970, p. 236, § 5; Laws 1988, p. 1797, § 1; Laws 1998, p. 1301, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2016.

§ 16–6–13. Punishment for keeping a place of prostitution, pimping or pandering

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, a person convicted of any of the offenses enumerated in Code Sections 16–6–10 through 16–6–12 shall be punished as for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. A person convicted of the offense enumerated in Code Section 16–6–9 shall be punished as for a misdemeanor.

(b) A person convicted of keeping a place of prostitution, pimping, or pandering when such offense involves keeping a place of prostitution for, the pimping for, or the solicitation of a person under the age of 18 years to perform an act of prostitution or the assembly of two or more persons under the age of 18 years at a fixed place for the purpose of being solicited by others to perform an act of prostitution shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for a period of not less than five nor more than 20 years and such convicted person shall be fined not less than $2,500.00 nor more than $10,000.00. Adjudication of guilt or imposition of a sentence for a conviction of a second or subsequent offense when such offense involves keeping a place of prostitution for, the pimping for, or pandering of a person under the age of 18 years pursuant to this subsection, including a plea of nolo contendere, shall not be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld.

(c)(1) The clerk of the court in which a person is convicted of pandering shall cause to be published a notice of conviction for each such person convicted. Such notices of conviction shall be published in the manner of legal notices in the legal organ of the county in which such person resides or, in the case of nonresidents, in the legal organ of the county in which the person was convicted. Such notice of conviction shall be one column wide by two inches long and shall contain the photograph taken by the arresting law enforcement agency at the time of arrest, name, and address of the convicted person and the date, time, place of arrest, and disposition of the case and shall be published once in the legal organ of the appropriate county in the second week following such conviction or as soon thereafter as publication may be made.

(2) The convicted person for which a notice of conviction is published pursuant to this subsection shall be assessed the cost of publication of such notice and such assessment shall be imposed at the time of conviction in addition to any other fine imposed pursuant to this Code section.

(3) The clerk of the court, the publisher of any legal organ which publishes a notice of conviction, and any other person involved in the publication of an erroneous notice of conviction shall be immune from civil or criminal liability for such erroneous publication, provided such publication was made in good faith.

(d) In addition to any other penalty authorized under subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section, a person convicted of an offense enumerated in Code Sections 16–6–9 through 16–6–12 shall be fined $ 2,500.00 if such offense was committed within 1,000 feet of any school building, school grounds, public place of worship, or playground or recreation center which is used primarily by persons under the age of 17 years.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1970, p. 236, § 4; Laws 1988, p. 1797, § 2; Laws 1992, p. 6, § 16; Laws 1998, p. 1301, § 2; Laws 2001, p. 92, § 4; Laws 2003, Act 382, § 1.1, eff. June 4, 2003.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2015.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2001 amendment rewrote subsec. (b) which formerly provided:

"(b) A person convicted of pandering when such offense involves the solicitation of a person under the age of 17 years to perform an act of prostitution or the assembly of two or more persons under the age of 17 years at a fixed place for the purpose of being solicited by others to perform an act of prostitution shall be guilty of a felony and shall be fined not less than $2,500.00 nor more than $10,000.00 or shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than five years, or both fined and imprisoned. Adjudication of guilt or imposition of sentence for a conviction of a second or subsequent offense of pandering involving a person under the age of 17years pursuant to this subsection, including a plea of nolo contendere, shall not be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld."

The 2003 amendment by Act 382, in subsec. (b), substituted "convicted of keeping a place of prostitution, pimping, or pandering when such offense involves keeping a place of prostitution for, the pimping for, or the solicitation" for "convicted of pimping or pandering when such offense involves the pimping for or the solicitation", deleted "of pimping or pandering involving" following "second or subsequent offense", and inserted "when such offense involves keeping a place of prostitution for, the pimping for, or pandering of".

§ 16–6–13.1. Testing for sexually transmitted diseases of persons convicted of pandering

(a) Any term used in this Code section and defined in Code Section 31–22–9.1 shall have the meaning provided for such term in Code Section 31–22–9.1.

(b) Upon a verdict or plea of guilty or a plea of nolo contendere to the offense of pandering, the court in which that verdict is returned or plea entered shall as a condition of probation or a suspended sentence require the defendant in such case to submit to testing for sexually transmitted diseases within 45 days following the date of the verdict or plea and to consent to release of the test results to the defendant's spouse if the defendant is married; provided, however, that a defendant who is not a resident of this state shall, upon a verdict or plea of guilty or a plea of nolo contendere, be ordered by the court to undergo immediate testing for sexually transmitted diseases and shall remain in the custody of the court until such testing is completed. The clerk of the court, in the case of a defendant who is a resident of this state, shall mail, within three days following the date of that verdict or plea, a copy of that verdict or plea to the Department of Community Health. The tests for sexually transmitted diseases required under this subsection shall be limited to the eight most common sexually transmitted diseases as determined by the Department of Community Health.

(c) The Department of Community Health, within 30 days following the notification under subsection (b) of this Code section, shall arrange for the tests for the person required to submit thereto. Such person shall bear the costs of such tests.

(d) Any person required under this Code section to submit to testing for sexually transmitted diseases who fails or refuses to submit to the tests arranged pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section shall be subject to such measures deemed necessary by the court in which the verdict was returned or plea entered to require voluntary submission to the tests.

Laws 1998, p. 1301, § 3; Laws 2009, Act 102, § 1–4, eff. July 1, 2009.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Community Health" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

§ 16–6–13.2. Forfeiture of motor vehicles operated by persons convicted of pimping or pandering; exceptions

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Costs" means, but is not limited to:

(A) All expenses associated with the seizure, towing, storage, maintenance, custody, preservation, operation, or sale of the motor vehicle; and

(B) Satisfaction of any security interest or lien not subject to forfeiture under this Code section.

(2) "Court costs" means, but is not limited to:

(A) All court costs, including the costs of advertisement, transcripts, and court reporter fees; and

(B) Payment of receivers, conservators, appraisers, accountants, or trustees appointed by the court pursuant to this Code section.

(3) "Governmental agency" means any department, office, council, commission, committee, authority, board, bureau, or division of the executive, judicial, or legislative branch of a state, the United States, or any political subdivision thereof.

(4) "Interest holder" means a secured party within the meaning of Code Section 11–9–102 or the beneficiary of a perfected encumbrance pertaining to an interest in a motor vehicle.

(5) "Motor vehicle" or "vehicle" means any motor vehicle as defined in Code Section 40–1–1.

(6) "Owner" means a person, other than an interest holder, who has an interest in a motor vehicle and is in compliance with any statute requiring its recordation or reflection in public records in order to perfect the interest against a bona fide purchaser for value.

(7) "Proceeds" means property derived directly or indirectly from, maintained by, or realized through an act or omission and includes any benefit, interest, or property of any kind without reduction for expenses incurred for acquisition, maintenance, or any other purpose.

(b)(1) An action filed pursuant to this Code section shall be filed in the name of the State of Georgia and may be brought by the prosecuting attorney having jurisdiction over any offense which arose out of the same conduct which made the motor vehicle subject to forfeiture. Such prosecuting attorney may bring an action pursuant to this Code section in the superior court in the county where the motor vehicle was seized or in the county where conduct occurred which made the motor vehicle subject to forfeiture.

(2) Any action brought pursuant to this Code section may be compromised or settled in the same manner as other civil actions.

(c)(1) Any motor vehicle operated by a person to facilitate a violation of Code Section 16–6–11 where the offense involved the pimping of a person under the age of 18 years to perform an act of prostitution and involved a motor vehicle or operated by a person who has been convicted of or pleaded nolo contendere for two previous violations of Code Section 16–6–11 or 16–6–12 involving a motor vehicle within a five-year period and who is convicted or pleads nolo contendere to a third violation of Code Section 16–6–11 or 16–6–12 involving a motor vehicle within the same five-year period is declared to be contraband and subject to forfeiture to the state, as provided in this Code section.

(2) For the purpose of this subsection, a violation of Code Section 16–6–11 or 16–6–12 involving a motor vehicle shall mean a violation of Code Section 16–6–11 or 16–6–12 in which a motor vehicle is used to violate said Code section or in which the violation occurred.

(d) A property interest shall not be subject to forfeiture under this Code section if the owner of such interest or interest holder establishes that such owner or interest holder:

(1) Is not legally accountable for the conduct giving rise to its forfeiture, did not consent to it, and did not know of the conduct;

(2) Holds the motor vehicle jointly or in common with a person whose conduct gave rise to its forfeiture and such owner did not consent to such conduct and did not know of the conduct;

(3) Does not hold the motor vehicle for the benefit of or as nominee for any person whose conduct gave rise to its forfeiture, and, if the owner or interest holder acquired the interest through any such person, the owner or interest holder acquired it as a bona fide purchaser for value without knowingly taking part in an illegal transaction; or

(4) Acquired the interest:

(A) Before the conduct giving rise to its forfeiture, and the person whose conduct gave rise to its forfeiture did not have the authority to convey the interest to a bona fide purchaser for value at the time of the conduct; or

(B) After the completion of the conduct giving rise to its forfeiture:

(i) As a bona fide purchaser for value without knowingly taking part in an illegal transaction; and

(ii) At the time the interest was acquired, was reasonably without cause to believe that the motor vehicle was subject to forfeiture or likely to become subject to forfeiture under this Code section.

(e)(1) Upon learning of the address or phone number of the company which owns any rented or leased vehicle which is present at the scene of an arrest or other action taken pursuant to this Code section, the seizing law enforcement agency shall immediately contact the company to inform it that the vehicle is available for the company to take possession.

(2) In any case where a vehicle which is the only family vehicle is determined to be subject to forfeiture, the court may, if it determines that the financial hardship to the family as a result of the forfeiture and sale outweighs the benefit to the state from such forfeiture, order the title to the vehicle transferred to such other family member who is a duly licensed operator and who requires the use of such vehicle for employment or family transportation purposes. Such transfer shall be subject to any valid liens and shall be granted only once.

(f)(1) A motor vehicle which is subject to forfeiture under this Code section may be seized by any law enforcement officer of this state or of any political subdivision thereof who has power to make arrests or execute process or a search warrant issued by any court having jurisdiction over the motor vehicle. A search warrant authorizing seizure of a motor vehicle which is subject to forfeiture pursuant to this Code section may be issued on an affidavit demonstrating that probable cause exists for its forfeiture or that the motor vehicle has been the subject of a previous final judgment of forfeiture in the courts of this state. The court may order that the motor vehicle be seized on such terms and conditions as are reasonable.

(2) A motor vehicle which is subject to forfeiture under this Code section may be seized without process if there is probable cause to believe that the motor vehicle is subject to forfeiture under this Code section or the seizure is incident to an arrest or search pursuant to a search warrant or to an inspection under an inspection warrant.

(g)(1) When a motor vehicle is seized pursuant to this Code section, the sheriff or law enforcement officer seizing the same shall report the fact of seizure, in writing, within 20 days thereof to the prosecuting attorney of the county where the seizure was made.

(2) Within 30 days from the date of seizure, a complaint for forfeiture shall be initiated as provided for in subsection (1) or (m) of this Code section.

(3) If the state fails to initiate forfeiture proceedings against a motor vehicle seized for forfeiture by notice of pending forfeiture within the time limits specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, the motor vehicle must be released on the request of an owner or interest holder, pending further proceedings pursuant to this Code section, unless the motor vehicle is being held as evidence.

(h)(1) Seizure of a motor vehicle by a law enforcement officer constitutes notice of such seizure to any person who was present at the time of seizure who may assert an interest in the motor vehicle.

(2) When a motor vehicle is seized pursuant to this Code section, the prosecuting attorney, sheriff, or law enforcement officer seizing the same shall give notice of the seizure to any owner or interest holder who is not present at the time of seizure by personal service, publication, or the mailing of written notice:

(A) If the owner's or interest holder's name and current address are known, by either personal service or mailing a copy of the notice by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery to that address;

(B) If the owner's or interest holder's name and address are required by law to be on record with a government agency to perfect an interest in the motor vehicle but the owner's or interest holder's current address is not known, by mailing a copy of the notice by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested, to any address on the record; or

(C) If the owner's or interest holder's address is not known and is not on record as provided in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph or the owner's or interest holder's interest is not known, by publication in two consecutive issues of a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the seizure occurs.

(3) Notice of seizure must include a description of the motor vehicle, the date and place of seizure, the conduct giving rise to forfeiture, and the violation of law alleged.

(i) A motor vehicle taken or detained under this Code section is not subject to replevin, conveyance, sequestration, or attachment. The seizing law enforcement agency or the prosecuting attorney may authorize the release of the motor vehicle if the forfeiture or retention is unnecessary or may transfer the action to another agency or prosecuting attorney by discontinuing forfeiture proceedings in favor of forfeiture proceedings initiated by the other law enforcement agency or prosecuting attorney. An action under this Code section may be consolidated with any other action or proceeding under this title relating to the same motor vehicle on motion by an interest holder and must be so consolidated on motion by the prosecuting attorney in either proceeding or action. The motor vehicle is deemed to be in the custody of the State of Georgia subject only to the orders and decrees of the superior court having jurisdiction over the forfeiture proceedings.

(j) If a motor vehicle is seized under this Code section, the prosecuting attorney may:

(1) Remove the motor vehicle to a place designated by the superior court having jurisdiction over the forfeiture proceeding;

(2) Remove the motor vehicle to a storage area, within the jurisdiction of the court, for safekeeping;

(3) Provide for another governmental agency, a receiver appointed by the court pursuant to Chapter 8 of Title 9, an owner, or an interest holder to take custody of the motor vehicle and remove it to an appropriate location within the county where the motor vehicle was seized; or

(4) Require the sheriff or chief of police of the political subdivision where the motor vehicle was seized to take custody of the motor vehicle and remove it to an appropriate location for disposition in accordance with law.

(k) As soon as possible, but not more than 30 days after the seizure of a motor vehicle, the seizing law enforcement agency shall estimate the value of the motor vehicle seized.

(l) If the estimated value of the motor vehicle seized is $ 25,000.00 or less, the prosecuting attorney may elect to proceed under the provisions of this subsection in the following manner:

(1) Notice of the seizure of such motor vehicle shall be posted in a prominent location in the courthouse of the county in which the motor vehicle was seized. Such notice shall include a description of the motor vehicle, the date and place of seizure, the conduct giving rise to forfeiture, a statement that the owner of such motor vehicle has 30 days within which a claim must be filed, and the violation of law alleged;

(2) A copy of the notice, which shall include a statement that the owner of such motor vehicle has 30 days within which a claim must be filed, shall be served upon an owner, interest holder, or person in possession of the motor vehicle at the time of seizure as provided in subsection (h) of this Code section and shall be published for at least three successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the county where the seizure was made;

(3) The owner or interest holder may file a claim within 30 days after the second publication of the notice of forfeiture by sending the claim to the seizing law enforcement agency and to the prosecuting attorney by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested;

(4) The claim must be signed by the owner or interest holder under penalty of perjury and must set forth:

(A) The caption of the proceedings as set forth on the notice of pending forfeiture and the name of the claimant;

(B) The address at which the claimant will accept mail;

(C) The nature and extent of the claimant's interest in the motor vehicle;

(D) The date, identity of the transferor, and circumstances of the claimant's acquisition of the interest in the motor vehicle;

(E) The specific provision of this Code section relied on in asserting that the motor vehicle is not subject to forfeiture;

(F) All essential facts supporting each assertion; and

(G) The precise relief sought;

(5) If a claim is filed, the prosecuting attorney shall file a complaint for forfeiture as provided in subsection (m) of this Code section within 30 days of the actual receipt of the claim. A person who files a claim shall be joined as a party; and

(6) If no claim is filed within 30 days after the second publication of the notice of forfeiture, all right, title, and interest in the motor vehicle is forfeited to the state and the prosecuting attorney shall dispose of the motor vehicle as provided in subsection (s) of this Code section.

(m)(1) When a complaint is filed pursuant to this Code section, the motor vehicle which is the subject of the action shall be named as the defendant and the action shall be in rem. The complaint shall be verified on oath or affirmation by a duly authorized agent of the state in a manner required by the laws of this state. Such complaint shall describe the motor vehicle with reasonable particularity; state that it is located within the county or will be located within the county during the pendency of the action; state its present custodian; state the name of the owner or interest holder, if known; allege the essential elements of the violation which is claimed to exist; state the place of seizure, if the motor vehicle was seized; and conclude with a prayer of due process to enforce the forfeiture.

(2) A copy of the complaint and summons shall be served on any person known to be an owner or interest holder and any person who was in possession of the motor vehicle at the time of seizure:

(A) Service of the complaint and summons shall be as provided in subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d) of Code Section 9–11–4;

(B) If the owner, interest holder, or person who was in possession of the motor vehicle at the time of seizure is unknown or resides out of the state or departs the state or cannot after due diligence be found within the state or conceals himself or herself so as to avoid service, notice of the proceeding shall be published once a week for two successive weeks in the newspaper in which the sheriff's advertisements are published. Such publication shall be deemed notice to any and all persons having an interest in or right affected by such proceeding and from any sale of the motor vehicle resulting therefrom, but shall not constitute notice to an interest holder unless that person is unknown or resides out of the state or departs the state or cannot after due diligence be found within the state or conceals himself or herself to avoid service; and

(C) If a motor vehicle which has not been seized is the subject of the action, the court may order the sheriff or another law enforcement officer to take possession of the motor vehicle.

(3) An owner of or interest holder in the motor vehicle may file an answer asserting a claim against the motor vehicle in the action in rem. Any such answer shall be filed within 30 days after the service of the summons and complaint. Where service is made by publication and personal service has not been made, an owner or interest holder shall file an answer within 30 days of the date of final publication. An answer must be verified by the owner or interest holder under penalty of perjury. In addition to complying with the general rules applicable to an answer in civil actions, the answer must set forth:

(A) The caption of the proceedings as set forth in the complaint and the name of the claimant;

(B) The address at which the claimant will accept mail;

(C) The nature and extent of the claimant's interest in the motor vehicle;

(D) The date, identity of transferor, and circumstances of the claimant's acquisition of the interest in the motor vehicle;

(E) The specific provision of this Code section relied on in asserting that the motor vehicle is not subject to forfeiture;

(F) All essential facts supporting each assertion; and

(G) The precise relief sought.

(4) If at the expiration of the period set forth in paragraph (3) of this subsection no answer has been filed, the court shall order the disposition of the seized motor vehicle as provided for in this Code section.

(5) If an answer is filed, a hearing must be scheduled by the court to be held within 60 days after service of the complaint unless continued for good cause and must be held by the court without a jury.

(n) No person claiming an interest in a motor vehicle subject to forfeiture under this Code section may intervene in a trial or appeal of a criminal action.

(o) In conjunction with any civil or criminal action brought pursuant to this Code section:

(1) The court, on application of the prosecuting attorney, may enter any restraining order or injunction; require the execution of satisfactory performance bonds; appoint receivers, conservators, appraisers, accountants, or trustees; or take any action to seize, secure, maintain, or preserve the availability of a motor vehicle subject to forfeiture under this Code section, including issuing a warrant for its seizure and writ of attachment, whether before or after the filing of a complaint for forfeiture;

(2) A temporary restraining order under this Code section may be entered on application of the prosecuting attorney, without notice or an opportunity for a hearing, if the prosecuting attorney demonstrates that:

(A) There is probable cause to believe that the motor vehicle with respect to which the order is sought, in the event of final judgment or conviction, would be subject to forfeiture under this Code section; and

(B) Provision of notice would jeopardize the availability of the motor vehicle for forfeiture;

(3) Notice of the entry of a restraining order and an opportunity for a hearing must be afforded to persons known to have an interest in the motor vehicle. The hearing must be held at the earliest possible date consistent with the date set in subsection (b) of Code Section 9–11–65 and is limited to the issues of whether:

(A) There is a probability that the state will prevail on the issue of forfeiture and that failure to enter the order will result in the motor vehicle's being destroyed, conveyed, encumbered, removed from the jurisdiction of the court, concealed, or otherwise made unavailable for forfeiture; and

(B) The need to preserve the availability of the motor vehicle through the entry of the requested order outweighs the hardship on any owner or interest holder against whom the order is to be entered;

(4) If a motor vehicle is seized for forfeiture without a previous judicial determination of probable cause or order of forfeiture or a hearing under paragraph (2) of this subsection, the court, on an application filed by an owner of or interest holder in the motor vehicle within 30 days after notice of its seizure or actual knowledge of such seizure, whichever is earlier, and complying with the requirements for an answer to an in rem complaint, and after five days' notice to the prosecuting attorney where the motor vehicle was seized, may issue an order to show cause to the seizing law enforcement agency for a hearing on the sole issue of whether probable cause for forfeiture of the motor vehicle then exists. The hearing must be held within 30 days unless continued for good cause on motion of either party. If the court finds that there is no probable cause for forfeiture of the motor vehicle, the motor vehicle must be released pending the outcome of a judicial proceeding which may be filed pursuant to this Code section; and

(5) The court may order a motor vehicle that has been seized for forfeiture to be sold to satisfy a specified interest of any interest holder, on motion of any party, and after notice and a hearing, on the conditions that:

(A) The interest holder has filed a proper claim and:

(i) Is authorized to do business in this state and is under the jurisdiction of a governmental agency of this state or of the United States which regulates financial institutions, securities, insurance, or real estate; or

(ii) Has an interest that the prosecuting attorney has stipulated is exempt from forfeiture;

(B) The interest holder must dispose of the motor vehicle by commercially reasonable public sale and apply the proceeds first to its interest and then to its reasonable expenses incurred in connection with the sale or disposal; and

(C) The balance of the proceeds, if any, must be returned to the actual or constructive custody of the court, in an interest-bearing account, subject to further proceedings under this Code section.

(p) A defendant convicted in any criminal proceeding is precluded from later denying the essential allegations of the criminal offense of which the defendant was convicted in any proceeding pursuant to this Code section, regardless of the pendency of an appeal from that conviction; however, evidence of the pendency of an appeal is admissible. For the purposes of this Code section, a conviction results from a verdict or plea of guilty, including a plea of nolo contendere.

(q) In hearings and determinations pursuant to this Code section:

(1) The court may receive and consider, in making any determination of probable cause or reasonable cause, all evidence admissible in determining probable cause at a preliminary hearing together with inferences therefrom;

(2) There is a rebuttable presumption that any motor vehicle of a person is subject to forfeiture under this Code section if the state establishes probable cause to believe that the person has engaged in conduct giving rise to forfeiture while using or operating said motor vehicle;

(3) In any contested proceeding to determine if a motor vehicle should be forfeited as provided in this Code section, the prosecuting attorney on behalf of the state must prove that the vehicle is subject to forfeiture pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section by a preponderance of the evidence; and

(4) In any contested proceeding to determine if a motor vehicle should be forfeited as provided in this Code section, an owner of a property interest or interest holder must prove that the property is exempted from forfeiture pursuant to subsection (d) of this Code section by a preponderance of the evidence.

(r)(1) Any motor vehicle declared to be forfeited under this Code section vests in this state at the time of commission of the conduct giving rise to forfeiture together with the proceeds of the motor vehicle after that time. Any motor vehicle or proceeds transferred later to any person remain subject to forfeiture and thereafter must be ordered to be forfeited unless the transferee claims and establishes in a hearing under this Code section that the transferee is a bona fide purchaser for value and the transferee's interest is exempt under subsection (d) of this Code section.

(2) On entry of judgment for a person claiming an interest in the motor vehicle that is subject to proceedings to forfeit a motor vehicle under this Code section, the court shall order that the motor vehicle or interest in the motor vehicle be released or delivered promptly to that person.

(s)(1) When a motor vehicle is forfeited under this Code section, the court may:

(A) Order the motor vehicle to be sold, and the proceeds of such sale shall be used for payment of all expenses of the forfeiture and sale including, but not limited to, the expenses of seizure, towing, maintenance of custody, advertising, and court costs. The remainder of the proceeds of a sale of a forfeited motor vehicle, after payment of the expenses, shall be expended by the local governing authority for drug treatment, rehabilitation, prevention, or education or any other program which responds to problems created by drug or substance abuse; or

(B) Upon application of the seizing law enforcement agency or any other law enforcement agency of state, county, or municipal government permit the agency to retain the motor vehicle for official use in law enforcement work.

(2) Where a motor vehicle is to be sold pursuant to this subsection, the court may direct that such motor vehicle be sold by:

(A) Judicial sale as provided in Article 7 of Chapter 13 of Title 9; provided, however, that the court may establish a minimum acceptable price for such motor vehicle; or

(B) Any commercially feasible means.

(t) An acquittal or dismissal in a criminal proceeding shall preclude civil proceedings under this Code section.

(u) For good cause shown, the court may stay civil forfeiture proceedings during the pendency of a related criminal action resulting from a violation of this chapter.

(v) This Code section must be liberally construed to effectuate its remedial purposes.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment substituted "certified mail or statutory overnight delivery" for "certified mail" in three instances.

The 2001 amendment by Act 20 rewrote subsec. (c) which formerly provided:

"(c)(1) Any motor vehicle operated by a person who has been convicted of or pleaded nolo contendere for two previous violations of code Section 16–6–12 involving a motor vehicle within a five-year period and who is convicted or pleads nolo contendere to a third violation of Code Section 16–6–12 involving a motor vehicle within the same five-year period is declared to be contraband and subject to forfeiture to the state, as provided in this Code section, provided that said forfeiture shall not be absolute unless the defendant is convicted of said offense.

"(2) For the purpose of this subsection a violation of Code Section 16–6–12 involving a motor vehicle shall mean a violation of Code Section 16–6–12 in which a motor vehicle is used to violate said Code section or in which the violation occurred."

The 2001 amendment by Act 191 in subsec. (a)(4) substituted reference to section "11–9–102" for "11–9–105".

§ 16–6–13.3. Forfeiture of proceeds or money used for or derived from pimping involving minors

(a) Any proceeds or money which is used, intended for use, used in any manner to facilitate, or derived from a violation of Code Section 16–6–11, wherein any of the persons involved in performing an act of prostitution is under the age of 18, is contraband and forfeited to the state and no person shall have a property interest in it. Such proceeds or money may be seized or detained in the same manner as provided in Code Section 16–13–49 and shall not be subject to replevin, conveyance, sequestration, or attachment.

(b) Within 60 days of the date of the seizure of proceeds or money pursuant to this Code section, the district attorney shall initiate forfeiture or other proceedings as provided in Code Section 16–13–49. An owner or interest holder, as defined by subsection (a) of Code Section 16–13–49, may establish as a defense to the forfeiture of proceeds or money which is subject to forfeiture under this Code section the applicable provisions of subsection (e) or (f) of Code Section 16–13–49. Proceeds or money which is forfeited pursuant to this Code section shall be disposed of and distributed as provided in Code Section 16–13–49, provided that no less than 50 percent of the money and proceeds forfeited under this Code section shall be distributed to the local governing authority to be distributed to local or statewide programs serving the child victims of the crime which are funded or operated by state or local governmental agencies.

(c) If the proceeds or money subject to forfeiture cannot be located; has been transferred or conveyed to, sold to, or deposited with a third party; is beyond the jurisdiction of the court; has been substantially diminished in value while not in the actual physical custody of a receiver or governmental agency directed to maintain custody of the proceeds or money; or has been commingled with other property that cannot be divided without difficulty, the court shall order the forfeiture of any proceeds or money of a claimant or defendant up to the value of proceeds or money found by the court to be subject to forfeiture under this Code section in accordance with the procedures set forth in subsection (x) of Code Section 16–13–49.

(d) The provisions of paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) of subsection (x) and subsection (z) of Code Section 16–13–49 shall be applicable to any proceedings brought pursuant to this Code section.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2003 amendment by Act 9, in subsec. (a), substituted "or derived" for "or is derived".

§ 16–6–14. Pandering by compulsion

A person commits the offense of pandering by compulsion when he or she by duress or coercion causes a person to perform an act of prostitution and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 2001, p. 92, § 5.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2017.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2001 amendment inserted gender neutral language.

§ 16–6–15. Solicitation of sodomy

(a) A person commits the offense of solicitation of sodomy when he solicits another to perform or submit to an act of sodomy. Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, a person convicted of solicitation of sodomy shall be punished as for a misdemeanor.

(b) A person convicted of solicitation of sodomy when such offense involves the solicitation of a person or persons under the age of 18 years to perform or submit to an act of sodomy for money shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for a period of not less than five nor more than 20 years and shall be fined not less than $ 2,500.00 nor more than $ 10,000.00.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1988, p. 1797, § 3; Laws 2001, p. 92, § 6.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2003.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2001 amendment rewrote subsec. (b) which formerly provided:

"(b) A person convicted of solicitation of sodomy when such offense involves the solicitation of a person under the age of 17 years to perform or submit to an act of sodomy for money shall be guilty of a felony and shall be fined not less than $1,000.00 nor more than $5,000.00 or shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than five years, or both fined and imprisoned."

§ 16–6–16. Masturbation for hire

(a) A person, including a masseur or masseuse, commits the offense of masturbation for hire when he erotically stimulates the genital organs of another, whether resulting in orgasm or not, by manual or other bodily contact exclusive of sexual intercourse or by instrumental manipulation for money or the substantial equivalent thereof.

(b) A person committing the offense of masturbation for hire shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Laws 1975, p. 402, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2021.

§ 16–6–17. Unlawful for masseur or masseuse to massage any person in certain buildings, structures or places; definitions

(a) It shall be unlawful for any masseur or masseuse to massage any person in any building, structure, or place used for the purpose of lewdness, assignation, prostitution, or masturbation for hire.

(b) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Masseur" means a male who practices massage or physiotherapy, or both.

(2) "Masseuse" means a female who practices massage or physiotherapy, or both.

(c) Any person who violates this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Laws 1975, p. 402, § 3.

§ 16–6–18. Fornication

An unmarried person commits the offense of fornication when he voluntarily has sexual intercourse with another person and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished as for a misdemeanor.

Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, pp. 814, 815; Laws 1865–66, p. 233, § 2; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

§ 16–6–20. Bigamy

(a) A person commits the offense of bigamy when he, being married and knowing that his lawful spouse is living, marries another person or carries on a bigamous cohabitation with another person.

(b) It shall be an affirmative defense that the prior spouse has been continually absent for a period of seven years, during which time the accused did not know the prior spouse to be alive, or that the accused reasonably believed he was eligible to remarry.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of bigamy shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

§ 16–6–22. Incest

(a) A person commits the offense of incest when such person engages in sexual intercourse or sodomy, as such term is defined in Code Section 16–6–2, with a person whom he or she knows he or she is related to either by blood or by marriage as follows:

(1) Father and child or stepchild;

(2) Mother and child or stepchild;

(3) Siblings of the whole blood or of the half blood;

(4) Grandparent and grandchild;

(5) Aunt and niece or nephew; or

(6) Uncle and niece or nephew.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of incest shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 30 years; provided, however, that any person convicted of the offense of incest under this subsection with a child under the age of 14 years shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 25 nor more than 50 years. Any person convicted under this Code section of the offense of incest shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 571, made the section gender neutral; in subsec. (b), substituted "ten nor more than 30 years" for "one nor more than 20 years" and added "; provided, however, that any person convicted of the offense of incest under this subsection with a child under the age of 14 years shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 25 nor more than 50 years. Any person convicted under this Code section of the offense of incest shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2."

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

"SECTION 30. (a) This Act shall become effective July 1, 2006.

"(b) Any person required to register pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 42–1–12, relating to the state sexual offender registry, and any person required not to reside within areas where minors congregate, as prohibited by Code Section 42–1–13 [see § 42–1–15], shall not be relieved of the obligation to comply with the provisions of said Code sections by the repeal and reenactment of said Code sections.

"(c) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

The 2010 amendment by Act 389, in subsec. (a), added "or sodomy, as such term is defined in Code Section 16–6–2," following "sexual intercourse" and substituted "such person" for "the person" in the introductory paragraph, made subsection gender neutral, and made other nominal changes.

§ 16–6–22.1. Sexual battery

(a) For the purposes of this Code section, the term "intimate parts" means the primary genital area, anus, groin, inner thighs, or buttocks of a male or female and the breasts of a female.

(b) A person commits the offense of sexual battery when he or she intentionally makes physical contact with the intimate parts of the body of another person without the consent of that person.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of sexual battery shall be punished as for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(d) A person convicted of the offense of sexual battery against any child under the age of 16 years shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years.

(e) Upon a second or subsequent conviction under subsection (b) of this Code section, a person shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be imprisoned for not less than one nor more than five years and, in addition, shall be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Section 17–10–6.2.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2003 amendment by Act 216, in subsec. (c), substituted "Except as otherwise provided in this Code section, a person convicted" for "A person convicted"; and inserted new subsec. (d).

The 2006 amendment by Act 571 made the section gender neutral and rewrote subsec. (c) which had read:

"(c) Except as otherwise provided in this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of sexual battery shall be punished as for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature."

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

"SECTION 30. (a) This Act shall become effective July 1, 2006.

"(b) Any person required to register pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 42–1–12, relating to the state sexual offender registry, and any person required not to reside within areas where minors congregate, as prohibited by Code Section 42–1–13 [see § 42–1–15], shall not be relieved of the obligation to comply with the provisions of said Code sections by the repeal and reenactment of said Code sections.

"(c) The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

§ 16–6–22.2. Aggravated sexual battery

(a) For the purposes of this Code section, the term "foreign object" means any article or instrument other than the sexual organ of a person.

(b) A person commits the offense of aggravated sexual battery when he or she intentionally penetrates with a foreign object the sexual organ or anus of another person without the consent of that person.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of aggravated sexual battery shall be punished by imprisonment for life or by a split sentence that is a term of imprisonment for not less than 25 years and not exceeding life imprisonment, followed by probation for life, and shall be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7.

Laws 1990, p. 1003, § 2; Laws 1994, p. 1959, § 8; Laws 2006, Act 571, § 16, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 571 made the section gender neutral and rewrote subsec. (c) which had read:

"(c) A person convicted of the offense of aggravated sexual battery shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years. Any person convicted under this Code section shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7."

Laws 2006, Act 571, §§ 1 and 30, provide:

"SECTION 1. § 16–6–23. Publication of name or identity of female raped or assaulted; punishment

(a) It shall be unlawful for any news media or any other person to print and publish, broadcast, televise, or disseminate through any other medium of public dissemination or cause to be printed and published, broadcast, televised, or disseminated in any newspaper, magazine, periodical, or other publication published in this state or through any radio or television broadcast originating in the state the name or identity of any female who may have been raped or upon whom an assault with intent to commit the offense of rape may have been made.

(b) This Code section does not apply to truthful information disclosed in public court documents open to public inspection.

(c) Any person or corporation violating this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Validity

This section has been held unconstitutional in the case of Dye v. Wallace, 2001, 274 Ga. 257, 553 S.E.2d 561.

§ 16–6–24. Ordinances proscribing loitering for purpose of procuring others to engage in sexual acts for hire

Nothing contained in this chapter shall prevent any county or municipality from adopting ordinances which proscribe loitering or related activities in public for the purpose of procuring others to engage in any sexual acts for hire.

Laws 1979, p. 131, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2023.

§ 16–6–25. Assisting sexual offender in eluding law

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "law enforcement unit" means any agency, organ, or department of this state, or a subdivision or municipality thereof, whose primary functions include the enforcement of criminal or traffic laws; the preservation of public order; the protection of life and property; or the prevention, detection, or investigation of crime. Such term shall also include the Department of Corrections and the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

(b) Any person who knows or reasonably believes that a sexual offender, as defined in Code Section 42–1–12, is not complying, or has not complied, with the requirements of Code Section 42–1–12 and who, with the intent to assist such sexual offender in eluding a law enforcement unit that is seeking such sexual offender to question him or her about, or to arrest him or her for, his or her noncompliance with the requirements of Code Section 42–1–12:

(1) Harbors, attempts to harbor, or assists another person in harboring or attempting to harbor such sexual offender;

(2) Conceals, attempts to conceal, or assists another person in concealing or attempting to conceal such sexual offender; or

(3) Provides information to the law enforcement unit regarding such sexual offender which the person knows to be false information commits a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

Article 1

Burglary

§ 16–7–1. Burglary

(a) A person commits the offense of burglary when, without authority and with the intent to commit a felony or theft therein, he enters or remains within the dwelling house of another or any building, vehicle, railroad car, watercraft, or other such structure designed for use as the dwelling of another or enters or remains within any other building, railroad car, aircraft, or any room or any part thereof. A person convicted of the offense of burglary, for the first such offense, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years. For the purposes of this Code section, the term "railroad car" shall also include trailers on flatcars, containers on flatcars, trailers on railroad property, or containers on railroad property.

(b) Upon a second conviction for a crime of burglary occurring after the first conviction, a person shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than two nor more than 20 years. Upon a third conviction for the crime of burglary occurring after the first conviction, a person shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years. Adjudication of guilt or imposition of sentence shall not be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld for any offense punishable under this subsection.

§ 16–7–2. Smash and grab burglary

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "retail establishment" means an establishment that sells goods or merchandise from a fixed location for direct consumption by a purchaser and includes establishments that prepare and sell meals or other edible products either for carry out or service within the establishment.

(b) A person commits the offense of smash and grab burglary when he or she intentionally and without authority enters a retail establishment with the intent to commit a theft and causes damage in excess of $500.00 to such establishment without the owner's consent.

(c) A person convicted of smash and grab burglary shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than two nor more than 20 years, by a fine of not more than $100,000.00, or both; provided, however, that upon a second or subsequent conviction, he or she shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years, by a fine of not more than $100,000.00, or both.

Article 2

Criminal Trespass and Damage to Property

Part 1

General Provisions

§ 16–7–20. Possession of tools for the commission of crime

(a) A person commits the offense of possession of tools for the commission of crime when he has in his possession any tool, explosive, or other device commonly used in the commission of burglary, theft, or other crime with the intent to make use thereof in the commission of a crime.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of possession of tools for the commission of crime shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years.

Laws 1910, p. 135, §§ 1, 2; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2701; Code 1933, § 26–1602.

§ 16–7–21. Criminal trespass

(a) A person commits the offense of criminal trespass when he or she intentionally damages any property of another without consent of that other person and the damage thereto is $ 500.00 or less or knowingly and maliciously interferes with the possession or use of the property of another person without consent of that person.

(b) A person commits the offense of criminal trespass when he or she knowingly and without authority:

(1) Enters upon the land or premises of another person or into any part of any vehicle, railroad car, aircraft, or watercraft of another person for an unlawful purpose;

(2) Enters upon the land or premises of another person or into any part of any vehicle, railroad car, aircraft, or watercraft of another person after receiving, prior to such entry, notice from the owner, rightful occupant, or, upon proper identification, an authorized representative of the owner or rightful occupant that such entry is forbidden; or

(3) Remains upon the land or premises of another person or within the vehicle, railroad car, aircraft, or watercraft of another person after receiving notice from the owner, rightful occupant, or, upon proper identification, an authorized representative of the owner or rightful occupant to depart.

(c) For the purposes of subsection (b) of this Code section, permission to enter or invitation to enter given by a minor who is or is not present on or in the property of the minor's parent or guardian is not sufficient to allow lawful entry of another person upon the land, premises, vehicle, railroad car, aircraft, or watercraft owned or rightfully occupied by such minor's parent or guardian if such parent or guardian has previously given notice that such entry is forbidden or notice to depart.

(d) A person who commits the offense of criminal trespass shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(e) A person commits the offense of criminal trespass when he or she intentionally defaces, mutilates, or defiles any grave marker, monument, or memorial to one or more deceased persons who served in the military service of this state, the United States of America or any of the states thereof, or the Confederate States of America or any of the states thereof, or a monument, plaque, marker, or memorial which is dedicated to, honors, or recounts the military service of any past or present military personnel of this state, the United States of America or any of the states thereof, or the Confederate States of America or any of the states thereof if such grave marker, monument, memorial, plaque, or marker is privately owned or located on land which is privately owned.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2004, Act 587, § 1, provides:

"The General Assembly finds that the safety of the public is a paramount concern and that prison and jail overcrowding and the high cost of incarceration demand a cost effective and innovative approach to protecting communities from dangerous offenders while at the same time providing alternatives to, or bridges to and from incarceration. Under appropriate conditions and limitations, electronic monitoring devices provide the criminal justice system with a tool that should be considered under proper circumstances. Electronic monitoring devices offer effective means to track individuals and may reduce criminal recidivism as well as provide the state with monetary savings since the cost of an electronic monitoring device is far less than the cost of incarcerating an individual and an individual may be able to pay for the device. The criminal penalties provided by this Act are designed to encourage the use of electronic monitoring devices while at the same time discourage interference with these devices."

Laws 2004, Act 587, § 4, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on January 1, 2005."

The 2005 amendment by Act 19, designated subsecs. (a), (b), and (c) as (b), (c), and (a) respectively; in newly designated subsec. (b), substituted "electronic monitoring device" for "electronic monitor"; and in subsec. (d), substituted "five" for "5".

The 2006 amendment by Act 453 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

Former § 16–7–29 was repealed by Laws 1990, p. 2048, § 5a, eff. January 1, 1991.

The 2010 amendment by Act 389, in subsec. (b), added par. (5).

Part 2
Littering Public and Private Property

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2006, Act 538, §§ 1–1 and 5–1, provide:

"SECTION 1–1. This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Comprehensive Litter Prevention and Abatement Act of 2006.'"

"SECTION 5–1. This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–40. Repealed by Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–1, eff. July 1, 2006

Historical and Statutory Notes

The repealed section, relating to the short title of the part, was derived from Laws 1970, p. 494, § 1; Laws 1990, p. 8, § 16. The repealing law also reserved the section designation.

§ 16–7–41. Repealed by Laws 1981, p. 1758, § 1, eff. April 17, 1981

Historical and Statutory Notes

The repealed section designation was reserved by Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–1.

§ 16–7–42. Definitions

As used in this part, the term:

(1) "Litter" means any discarded or abandoned:

(A) Refuse, rubbish, junk, or other waste material; or

(B) Dead animals that are not subject to the provisions of Code Section 4–5–4.

(2) "Public or private property" means the right of way of any road or highway; any body of water or watercourse or the shores or beaches thereof; any park, playground, building, refuge, or conservation or recreation area; residential or farm properties, timberlands, or forests; or any commercial or industrial property.

Laws 1970, p. 494, § 3; Laws 1990, p. 8, § 16; Laws 1993, p. 496, § 1; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 rewrote the section which had read:

"As used in this part, the term:

"(1) 'Litter' means all discarded sand, gravel, slag, brickbats, rubbish, waste material, tin cans, refuse, garbage, trash, debris, dead animals, or other discarded materials of every kind and description which are not waste as such term is defined in paragraph (6) of Code Section 16–7–51.

"(2) 'Public or private property' means the right of way of any road or highway; any body of water or watercourse or the shores or beaches thereof; any park, playground, building, refuge, or conservation or recreation area; and residential or farm properties, timberlands, or forests."

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–43. Unlawful activities

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to dump, deposit, throw, or leave or to cause or permit the dumping, depositing, placing, throwing, or leaving of litter on any public or private property in this state or any waters in this state, unless:

(1) The area is designated by the state or by any of its agencies or political subdivisions for the disposal of litter and the person is authorized by the proper public authority to so use such area;

(2) The litter is placed into a nondisposable litter receptacle or container designed for the temporary storage of litter and located in an area designated by the owner or tenant in lawful possession of the property; or

(3) The person is the owner or tenant in lawful possession of such property or has first obtained consent of the owner or tenant in lawful possession or unless the act is done under the personal direction of the owner or tenant, all in a manner consistent with the public welfare.

(b)(1) Any person who violates subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(2) In addition to the punishment provided under paragraph (1) of this subsection:

(A) In the sound discretion of the court, the person may be directed to pick up and remove from any public street or highway or public right of way for a distance not to exceed one mile any litter the person has deposited and any and all litter deposited thereon by anyone else prior to the date of execution of sentence; or

(B) In the sound discretion of the judge of the court, the person may be directed to pick up and remove from any public beach, public park, private right of way, or, with the prior permission of the legal owner or tenant in lawful possession of such property, any private property upon which it can be established by competent evidence that the person has deposited litter, any and all litter deposited thereon by anyone prior to the date of execution of sentence.

(c) The court may publish the names of persons convicted of violating subsection (a) of this Code section.

(d) Any county, municipality, consolidated government, or law enforcement agency thereof of this state which is empowered by Code Section 16–7–45 or other law to enforce the provisions of this Code section or local littering ordinances may, in its discretion, appoint any person who is a citizen of the United States, is of good moral character, and has not previously been convicted of a felony to enforce the provisions of this Code section or local littering ordinances within the county, municipality, or consolidated government in which the appointing agency exercises jurisdiction. Each person appointed pursuant to this Code section shall take and subscribe an oath of office as prescribed by the appointing authority. Any person appointed and sworn pursuant to this subsection shall be authorized to enforce the provisions of this Code section or local littering ordinances in the same manner as any employee or law enforcement officer of this state or any county, municipality, or consolidated government of this state subject to the limitations provided in subsections (e) and (f) of this Code section.

(e) No person appointed pursuant to subsection (d) of this Code section shall be deemed a peace officer under the laws of this state or:

(1) Be deemed to be an employee of or receive any compensation from the state, county, municipality, consolidated government, or appointing law enforcement agency;

(2) Be required to complete any training or be certified pursuant to the requirements of Chapter 8 of Title 35;

(3) Have the power or duty to enforce any traffic or other criminal laws of the state, county, municipality, or consolidated government;

(4) Have the power to possess and carry firearms and other weapons for the purpose of enforcing the littering laws; or

(5) Be entitled to any indemnification from the state, county, municipality, or consolidated government for any injury or property damage sustained by such person as a result of attempting to enforce the littering laws of this state or any local government.

(f) Notwithstanding any law to the contrary, neither the state nor any county, municipality, or consolidated government of this state or any department, agency, board, or officer of this state or any county, municipality, or consolidated government of this state shall be liable or accountable for or on account of any act or omission of any person appointed pursuant to this Code section in connection with such person's enforcement of the provisions of this Code section or local littering ordinances.

(g) It shall be unlawful for any person willfully to obstruct, resist, impede, or interfere with any person appointed pursuant to this Code section in connection with such person's enforcement of this Code section or local littering ordinances or to retaliate or discriminate in any manner against such person as a reprisal for any act or omission of such person. Any violation of this subsection shall be punishable as a misdemeanor.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2002 amendment increased fines in subsec. (b), modified the subdivision designations therein and substituted "court" for "court in which the conviction is obtained" in subsec. (b)(2)(B), and added subsecs. (d) to (g).

The 2006 amendment by Act 538, in subsec. (a), substituted "area" for "property" twice in par. (1), inserted "so" following "public authority to", and substituted "a nondisposable litter receptacle or container designed for the temporary storage of litter and located in an area designated by the owner or tenant in lawful possession of the property" for "a litter receptacle or container installed on such property" in par. (2); in subsec. (b), designated the introductory paragraph as par (1), in newly designated par. (1) deleted "and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished as follows:" and inserted a period in its place, deleted former par. (1) which had read "By a fine of not less than $200.00 nor more than $1,200.00; and", and inserted the introductory phrase of par. (2) beginning "In addition to the punishment"; in subsec. (d), inserted the reference to consolidated government three times, and inserted "by Code Section 16–7–45 or other law"; in subsec. (e), inserted the reference to consolidated government three times, and substituted "traffic or other criminal laws" for "other traffic or criminal laws"; in subsec. (f), substituted the reference to consolidated government for the reference to political subdivision twice; and made nonsubstantive changes.

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–44. Litter dumped from vehicle or other conveyance; trier of fact; discretion

(a) Whenever litter is thrown, deposited, dropped, or dumped from any motor vehicle, boat, airplane, or other conveyance in violation of Code Section 16–7–43, the trier of fact may in its discretion and in consideration of the totality of the circumstances infer that the operator of the conveyance has violated this part.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, whenever any litter which is dumped, deposited, thrown, or left on public or private property in violation of Code Section 16–7–43 is discovered to contain any article or articles, including but not limited to letters, bills, publications, or other writings which display the name of a person thereon in such a manner as to indicate that the article belongs or belonged to such person, the trier of fact may in its discretion and in consideration of the totality of the circumstances infer that such person has violated this part.

Laws 1970, p. 494, § 6; Laws 1984, p. 1489, § 1; Laws 1990, p. 8, § 16; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 substituted "the trier of fact may in its discretion and in consideration of the totality of the circumstances infer" for "it shall be prime–facie evidence" in subsec. (a); and substituted "the trier of fact may in its discretion and in consideration of the totality of the circumstances infer" for "it shall be a rebuttable presumption" in subsec. (b).

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–45. Enforcement

All law enforcement agencies, officers, and officials of this state or any political subdivision thereof or any enforcement agency, officer, or any official of any commission or authority of this state or any political subdivision thereof is authorized, empowered, and directed to enforce compliance with this part.

Laws 1970, p. 494, § 7; Laws 1985, p. 149, § 16; Laws 1990, p. 8, § 16; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 inserted "or authority" following "any commission".

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–46. Receptacles to be provided

All public authorities and agencies having supervision of properties of this state are authorized, empowered, and instructed to establish and maintain receptacles for the deposit of litter at appropriate locations where the property is frequented by the public, to post signs directing persons to the receptacles and serving notice of the provisions of this part, and to otherwise publicize the availability of litter receptacles and requirements of this part.

Laws 1970, p. 494, § 8; Laws 1990, p. 8, § 16; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 amended the section without change.

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–47. Containers provided by local government; designation as suitable for dumping household garbage; vandalizing containers; violations

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "household garbage" means animal, vegetable, and fruit refuse matter and other refuse matter ordinarily generated as by-products of a household or restaurant, such as tin cans, bottles, paper, cardboard, plastics, and wrapping or packaging materials.

(b) The governing authority of each county, municipality, or consolidated government of this state which provides containers for the dumping of trash or garbage therein shall be authorized to designate any or all such containers as being suitable for the dumping therein of household garbage only. If a container is clearly marked "household garbage only," it shall be unlawful for any person to dump any refuse or other material into the container other than household garbage.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any person to set fire to the contents of, indiscriminately scatter or disperse the contents of, or otherwise vandalize any containers provided by any county, municipality, or consolidated government for the dumping of trash or garbage.

(d) Any person who violates subsection (b) or (c) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Laws 1979, p. 831, §§ 1–3; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 inserted ", municipality, or consolidated government" in subsecs. (b) and (c).

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–48. Enforcement of local laws, rules, or regulations; adoption and violation of local ordinances

(a) Nothing in this part shall limit the authority of any state agency, county, municipality, or consolidated government to enforce any other laws, rules, or regulations relating to litter.

(b) Nothing within this part shall be construed to prohibit the adoption of local ordinances regulating and controlling litter within the jurisdiction of any county, municipality, or consolidated government. Violation of such ordinances shall be punished as provided in the municipal charter or local ordinances.

Laws 1981, p. 1758, § 1; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–1, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 rewrote the section which had read:

"Nothing within this part shall be construed to prohibit the adoption of local ordinances regulating and controlling litter within the corporate limits of a municipality. Violation of such ordinances shall be punished as provided in the municipal charter."

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

Part 3

Egregious Litter Control

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2006, Act 538, §§ 1–1 and 5–1, provide:

"SECTION 1–1. This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Comprehensive Litter Prevention and Abatement Act of 2006.' "

"SECTION 5–1. This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–50. Repealed by Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–2, eff. July 1, 2006

Historical and Statutory Notes

The repealed section, relating to the short title of the part, was derived from Laws 1993, p. 496, § 2. The repealing law also reserved the section designation.

§ 16–7–51. Definitions

As used in this part, the term:

(1) "Biomedical waste" means that term as defined in paragraph (1.1) of Code Section 12–8–22.

(2) "Commercial purpose" means for the purpose of economic gain.

(3) "Dump" means to throw, discard, place, deposit, discharge, burn, or dispose of a substance.

(4) "Egregious litter" means all litter, as such term is defined in paragraph (1) of Code Section 16–7–42, exceeding ten pounds in weight or 15 cubic feet in volume; any discarded or abandoned substance in any weight or volume if biomedical waste, hazardous waste, or a hazardous substance; or any substance or material dumped for commercial purposes.

(5) "Hazardous substance" means that term as defined in paragraph (4) of Code Section 12–8–92.

(6) "Hazardous waste" means that term as defined in paragraph (10) of Code Section 12–8–62.

Laws 1993, p. 496, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–2, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 rewrote the section which had read:

"As used in this part, the term:

"(1) 'Biomedical waste' means that term as defined in paragraph (1.1) of Code Section 12–8–22 on January 1, 1993.

"(2) 'Commercial purpose' means for the purpose of economic gain.

"(3) 'Dump' means to throw, discard, place, deposit, discharge, burn, or dispose of a substance.

"(4) 'Hazardous substance' means that term as defined in paragraph (4) of Code Section 12–8–92 on January 1, 1993.

"(5) 'Hazardous waste' means that term as defined in paragraph (10) of Code Section 12–8–62 on January 1, 1993.

"(6) 'Waste' means all discarded substances and materials whatsoever exceeding ten pounds in weight or 15 cubic feet in volume, or any such substance in any weight or volume if biomedical waste, hazardous waste, a hazardous substance, or any such substance or material dumped for commercial purposes. Such term includes, without limitation, sand; gravel; slag; brickbats; rubbish; waste material; tin cans; refuse; garbage; trash; debris; dead animals; bottles; boxes; containers; papers; tobacco products; tires; appliances; mechanical equipment or parts; building or construction materials; tools; machinery; wood; motor vehicles and motor vehicle parts; vessels; aircraft equipment; waste oil; batteries; antifreeze; sludge from a waste-water treatment facility, water supply treatment plant, or air pollution control facility; air contaminants from any source or facility; and any other discarded material or substance of every kind and description resulting from domestic, industrial, commercial, mining, or governmental operations."

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–52. Unlawful activities

It shall be unlawful for any person to intentionally dump egregious litter unless authorized to do so by law or by a duly issued permit:

(1) In or on any public highway, road, street, alley, or thoroughfare, including any portion of the right of way thereof, or on any other public lands except in containers or areas lawfully provided for such dumping;

(2) In or on any fresh-water lake, river, canal, or stream or tidal or coastal water of the state; or

(3) In or on any private property, unless prior consent of the owner has been given and unless such dumping will not adversely affect the public health and is not in violation of any other state law, rule, or regulation.

Laws 1993, p. 496, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–2, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 substituted "intentionally dump egregious litter" for "dump waste" in the introductory paragraph.

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–53. Dumping egregious litter; violations

(a) Any person who intentionally dumps egregious litter in violation of Code Section 16–7–52 in an amount not exceeding 500 pounds in weight or 100 cubic feet in volume which is not biomedical waste, hazardous waste, or a hazardous substance and not for commercial purposes shall be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. For purposes of this subsection, each day a continuing violation occurs shall constitute a separate violation.

(b) Any person who intentionally dumps egregious litter in violation of Code Section 16–7–52 in an amount exceeding 500 pounds in weight or 100 cubic feet in volume which is not biomedical waste, hazardous waste, or a hazardous substance and not for commercial purposes shall upon the first offense be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. Upon the second and each subsequent offense such person shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $25,000.00 for each violation or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both; provided, however, that the portion of any term of imprisonment exceeding two years shall be probated conditioned upon payment of a fine imposed under this subsection. For purposes of this subsection, each day a continuing violation occurs shall constitute a separate violation.

(c) Any person who intentionally dumps egregious litter in violation of Code Section 16–7–52 in any quantity if the substance is biomedical waste, hazardous waste, or a hazardous substance or if the dumping is for commercial purposes shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $25,000.00 for each violation or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both; provided, however, that the portion of any term of imprisonment exceeding two years shall be probated conditioned upon payment of a fine imposed under this subsection. For purposes of this subsection, each day a continuing violation occurs shall constitute a separate violation.

(d) In addition to the penalties provided in subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section, the court may order the violator to remove or render harmless any egregious litter dumped in violation of Code Section 16–7–52, repair or restore property damaged by or pay damages resulting from such dumping, or perform public service related to the removal of illegally dumped egregious litter or to the restoration of an area polluted by such substance.

(e)(1) The court shall cause to be published a notice of conviction for each person convicted of violating any provision of this Code section. Such notices of conviction shall be published in the manner of legal notices in the legal organ of the county in which such person resides or, in the case of a nonresident, in the legal organ of the county in which the person was convicted. Such notice of conviction shall contain the name and address of the convicted person; date, time, and place of arrest; and disposition of the case and shall be published once in the legal organ of the appropriate county in the second week following such conviction or as soon thereafter as publication may be made.

(2) The convicted person for which a notice of conviction is published pursuant to this subsection shall be assessed the cost of publication of such notice, and such assessment shall be imposed at the time of conviction in addition to any other fine imposed pursuant to this Code section.

(3) The clerk of the court, the publisher of any legal organ which publishes a notice of conviction, and any other person involved in the publication of an erroneous notice of conviction shall be immune from civil or criminal liability for such erroneous publication, provided such publication was made in good faith.

Laws 1993, p. 496, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–2, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 rewrote the section which had read:

"(a) Any person who dumps waste in violation of Code Section 16–7–52 in an amount not exceeding 500 pounds in weight or 100 cubic feet in volume which is not biomedical waste, hazardous waste, or a hazardous substance and not for commercial purposes shall be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. For purposes of this subsection, each day a continuing violation occurs shall constitute a separate violation.

"(b) Any person who dumps waste in violation of Code Section 16–7–52 in an amount exceeding 500 pounds in weight or 100 cubic feet in volume shall upon the first offense be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature and shall upon the second and each subsequent offense be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $25,000.00 for each violation or imprisoned for not more than two years, or both. For purposes of this subsection, each day a continuing violation occurs shall constitute a separate violation.

"(c) Any person who dumps waste in violation of Code Section 16–7–52 in any quantity if the waste is biomedical waste, hazardous waste, or a hazardous substance or if the dumping is for commercial purposes shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $25,000.00 for each violation or imprisoned for not more than two years, or both. For purposes of this subsection, each day a continuing violation occurs shall constitute a separate violation.

"(d) In addition to the penalties provided in subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section, the court may order the violator to remove or render harmless any waste dumped in violation of Code Section 16–7–52, repair or restore property damaged by or pay damages resulting from such dumping, or perform public service related to the removal of illegally dumped waste or to the restoration of an area polluted by such waste."

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–53.1. Violations while driving, moving, or operating a vehicle; vehicle impound

(a) Whenever a person has been arrested for a violation of Code Section 16–7–52 committed while driving, moving, or operating a vehicle, the arresting law enforcement agency may impound the vehicle that the person was driving, moving, or operating at the time of arrest until such time as the arrestee claiming the vehicle meets the conditions for release in subsection (b) of this Code section or a person other than the arrestee meets the conditions for release in subsection (c) of this Code section.

(b) A vehicle impounded pursuant to this Code section shall not be released unless the person claiming the vehicle:

(1) Presents a valid driver's license, proof of ownership or lawful authority to operate the motor vehicle, and proof of valid motor vehicle insurance for that vehicle; and

(2) Is able to operate the vehicle in a safe manner and would not be in violation of Title 40.

(c) A vehicle impounded pursuant to this Code section may be released to a person other than the arrestee only if:

(1) The vehicle is not owned or leased by the person under arrest and the person who owns or leases the vehicle claims the vehicle and meets the conditions for release in subsection (b) of this Code section; or

(2) The vehicle is owned or leased by the arrestee, the arrestee gives written permission to another person to operate the vehicle, and the conditions for release in subsection (b) of this Code section are met.

(d) A law enforcement agency impounding a vehicle pursuant to this Code section may charge a reasonable fee for towing and storage of the vehicle. The law enforcement agency may retain custody of the vehicle until that fee is paid.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–54. Litter containing articles displaying person's name; trier of fact; discretion

Whenever any egregious litter which is dumped in violation of Code Section 16–7–52 is discovered to contain any article or articles, including but not limited to letters, bills, publications, or other writings which display the name of a person thereon, addressed to such person or in any other manner indicating that the article belongs or belonged to such person, the trier of fact may in its discretion and in consideration of the totality of the circumstances infer that such person has violated this part.

Laws 1993, p. 496, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–2, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 substituted "egregious litter" for "waste" and substituted "the trier of fact may in its discretion and in consideration of the totality of the circumstances infer" for "it shall be a rebuttable presumption".

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–55. Enforcement of local laws, rules, or regulations; adoption and violation of local ordinances

(a) Nothing in this part shall limit the authority of any state agency, county, municipality, or consolidated government to enforce any other laws, rules, or regulations relating to egregious litter or the management of solid, biomedical, or hazardous waste.

(b) Nothing within this part shall be construed to prohibit the adoption of local ordinances regulating and controlling egregious litter within the jurisdiction of any county, municipality, or consolidated government. Violation of such ordinances shall be punished as provided in the municipal charter or local ordinances.

Laws 1993, p. 496, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–2, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 rewrote the section which had read:

"Nothing in this part shall limit the authority of any state agency to enforce any other laws, rules, or regulations relating to waste or the management of solid, biomedical, or hazardous waste."

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–56. Construction

Nothing in this part shall be construed so as to repeal, supersede, amend, or modify any provision of Title 12.

Laws 1993, p. 496, § 2; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–2, eff. July 1, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 538 amended this section without change.

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

Part 3A

Placement of Posters, Signs and Advertisements

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2006, Act 538, §§ 1–1 and 5–1, provide:

"SECTION 1–1. This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Comprehensive Litter Prevention and Abatement Act of 2006.'"

"SECTION 5–1. This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

§ 16–7–58. Placement of posters, signs and advertisements on public or private property; permission and limitations; violations

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to place posters, signs, or advertisements:

(1) On any public property or building, unless the owner thereof or the occupier as authorized by such owner has given permission to place such posters, signs, or advertisements on such property; provided, however, that signs within the rights of way of public roads shall be governed by Code Section 32–6–51;

(2) On any private property unless the owner thereof or the occupier as authorized by such owner has given permission to place such posters, signs, or advertisements on such property; and, provided, further that no municipal, county, or consolidated government may restrict by regulation or other means the length of time a political campaign sign may be displayed or the number of signs which may be displayed on private property for which permission has been granted; or

(3) On any property zoned for commercial or industrial uses if the placement of such posters, signs, or advertisements conflicts with any zoning laws or ordinances.

(b) Any poster, sign, or advertisement placed in violation of paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section is declared to be a public nuisance, and the officials having jurisdiction of the public property or building, including without limitation law enforcement officers, may remove or direct the removal of the same.

(c) Each poster, sign, or advertisement placed in violation of this Code section shall constitute a separate offense.

(d) Any person who violates this Code section shall be punished the same as for littering under Code Section 16–7–43.

Laws 1971, p. 624, §§ 1, 3; Laws 1983, p. 471, § 1; Laws 2001, Ex. Sess., p. 335, § 4; Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–3, eff. July 1, 2006; Laws 2006, Act 727, § 1, eff. May 3, 2006.

Formerly Code 1981, §§ 21–1–1, 21–2–3.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 2–3, renumbered former § 21–2–3 as § 16–7–58 and amended the section. The amendment, in subsec. (a), in the introductory paragraph, substituted "place posters, signs, or advertisements" for "place campaign posters, signs, and advertisements", deleted former par. (1), redesignated former pars. (2) and (3) as pars. (1) and (2), in new par. (1), inserted ", unless the owner thereof or the occupier as authorized by such owner has given permission to place such posters, signs, or advertisements on such property; provided, however, that signs within the rights of way of public roads shall be governed by Code Section 32–6–51", in new par. (2), inserted "or the occupier as authorized by such owner" following "owner thereof", and substituted "such posters, signs, or advertisements" for "such campaign posters, signs, and advertisements", deleted former par. (4) which had been reserved, redesignated former par. (5) as par. (3), and in new par. (3), substituted "such posters, signs, or advertisements" for "such campaign posters, signs, and advertisements"; inserted new subsecs. (b) and (c); redesignated former subsec. (b) as subsec. (d); and in new subsec. (d), substituted "shall be punished the same as for littering under Code Section 16–7–43" for "shall be guilty of a misdemeanor". Prior to deletion, former par. (a)(1) had read:

"(1) Within the right of way of any public streets, roads, or highways;".

Laws 2006, Act 538, § 5–1, provides:

"This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor [April 21, 2006] or upon its becoming law without such approval for purposes of adopting local ordinances to become effective on or after July 1, 2006; and for all other purposes, this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2006."

Laws 2006, Act 727, § 1, effective May 3, 2006, amended § 21–2–3 (renumbered as this section by Act 538, effective July 1, 2006). The amendment, in subsec. (a), in the introductory paragraph, substituted "place posters, signs, or advertisements" for "place campaign posters, signs, and advertisements", deleted former par. (1), redesignated former pars. (2) and (3) as pars. (1) and (2), in new par. (1), inserted ", unless the owner thereof or the occupier as authorized by such owner has given permission to place such posters, signs, or advertisements on such property; provided, however, that signs within the rights of way of public roads shall be governed by Code Section 32–6–51", in new par. (2), inserted "or the occupier as authorized by such owner" following "owner thereof", substituted "such posters, signs, or advertisements" for "such campaign posters, signs, and advertisements", and inserted "; and, provided, further that no municipal, county, or consolidated government may restrict by regulation or other means the length of time a political campaign sign may be displayed or the number of signs which may be displayed on private property for which permission has been granted" following "on such property", deleted former par. (4) which had been reserved, redesignated former par. (5) as par. (3), and in new par. (3), substituted "such posters, signs, or advertisements" for "such campaign posters, signs, and advertisements". Prior to deletion, former par. (a)(1) had read:

"(1) Within the right of way of any public streets, roads, or highways;".

Laws 2006, Act 727, § 7, effective May 3, 2006, provides:

"In the event any section, subsection, sentence, clause, or phrase of this Act shall be declared or adjudged invalid or unconstitutional, such declaration or adjudication shall affect and invalidate the whole of the section in which such matter appears herein, but shall in no manner affect the other sections, subsections, sentences, clauses, or phrases of this Act, which shall remain of full force and effect as if the section, subsection, sentence, clause, or phrase so declared or adjudged invalid or unconstitutional were not originally a part hereof. The General Assembly declares that it would have passed the remaining parts of this Act if it had known that such part or parts hereof would be declared or adjudged invalid or unconstitutional, but would not have passed any section of this Act containing or constituting an invalid or unconstitutional provision."

Article 3

Arson and Explosives

§ 16–7–60. Arson in the first degree

(a) A person commits the offense of arson in the first degree when, by means of fire or explosive, he or she knowingly damages or knowingly causes, aids, abets, advises, encourages, hires, counsels, or procures another to damage:

(1) Any dwelling house of another without his or her consent or in which another has a security interest, including but not limited to a mortgage, a lien, or a conveyance to secure debt, without the consent of both, whether it is occupied, unoccupied, or vacant;

(2) Any building, vehicle, railroad car, watercraft, or other structure of another without his or her consent or in which another has a security interest, including but not limited to a mortgage, a lien, or a conveyance to secure debt, without the consent of both, if such structure is designed for use as a dwelling, whether it is occupied, unoccupied, or vacant;

(3) Any dwelling house, building, vehicle, railroad car, watercraft, aircraft, or other structure whether it is occupied, unoccupied, or vacant and when such is insured against loss or damage by fire or explosive and such loss or damage is accomplished without the consent of both the insurer and the insured;

(4) Any dwelling house, building, vehicle, railroad car, watercraft, aircraft, or other structure whether it is occupied, unoccupied, or vacant with the intent to defeat, prejudice, or defraud the rights of a spouse or co-owner; or

(5) Any building, vehicle, railroad car, watercraft, aircraft, or other structure under such circumstances that it is reasonably foreseeable that human life might be endangered.

(b) A person also commits the offense of arson in the first degree when, in the commission of a felony, by means of fire or explosive, he or she knowingly damages or knowingly causes, aids, abets, advises, encourages, hires, counsels, or procures another to damage anything included or described in subsection (a) of this Code section.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of arson in the first degree shall be punished by a fine of not more than $50,000.00 or by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years, or both.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2208; Code 1933, § 26–1401.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2004 amendment by Act 576, made the section gender neutral; redesignated former subsec. (b) as subsec. (c); and inserted new subsec. (b).

Laws 2004, Act 576, § 4, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004. This Act shall not apply to any offense committed prior to July 1, 2004. Any such offense shall be punishable as provided by the statue [so in original] in effect at the time the offense was committed."

§ 16–7–61. Arson in the second degree

(a) A person commits the offense of arson in the second degree as to any building, vehicle, railroad car, watercraft, aircraft, or other structure not included or described in Code Section 16–7–60 when, by means of fire or explosive, he or she knowingly damages or knowingly causes, aids, abets, advises, encourages, hires, counsels, or procures another to damage any building, vehicle, railroad car, watercraft, aircraft, or other structure of another without his or her consent or in which another has a security interest, including but not limited to a mortgage, a lien, or a conveyance to secure debt, without the consent of both.

(b) A person also commits the offense of arson in the second degree as to any building, vehicle, railroad car, watercraft, aircraft, or other structure not included or described in Code Section 16–7–60 when, in the commission of a felony, by means of fire or explosive, he or she knowingly damages or knowingly causes, aids, abets, advises, encourages, hires, counsels, or procures another to damage any building, vehicle, railroad car, watercraft, aircraft, or other structure of another without his or her consent or in which another has a security interest, including but not limited to a mortgage, a lien, or a conveyance to secure debt, without the consent of both.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of arson in the second degree shall be punished by a fine of not more than $25,000.00 or by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years, or both.

Laws 2004, Act 576, § 4, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004. This Act shall not apply to any offense committed prior to July 1, 2004. Any such offense shall be punishable as provided by the statue [so in original] in effect at the time the offense was committed."

§ 16–7–62. Arson in the third degree

(a) A person commits the offense of arson in the third degree when, by means of fire or explosive, he or she knowingly damages or knowingly causes, aids, abets, advises, encourages, hires, counsels, or procures another to damage:

(1) Any personal property of another without his or her consent or in which another has a security interest, including but not limited to a lien, without the consent of both and the value of the property is $25.00 or more;

(2) Any personal property when such is insured against loss or damage by fire or explosive and the loss or damage is accomplished without the consent of both the insurer and insured and the value of the property is $25.00 or more; or

(3) Any personal property with the intent to defeat, prejudice, or defraud the rights of a spouse or co-owner and the value of the property is $25.00 or more.

(b) A person also commits the offense of arson in the third degree when, in the commission of a felony, by means of fire or explosive, he or she knowingly damages or knowingly causes, aids, abets, advises, encourages, hires, counsels, or procures another to damage anything included or described in subsection (a) of this Code section.

(c) A person convicted of the offense of arson in the third degree shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $10,000.00 or by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years, or both.

Laws 2004, Act 576, § 4, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2004. This Act shall not apply to any offense committed prior to July 1, 2004. Any such offense shall be punishable as provided by the statue [so in original] in effect at the time the offense was committed."

§ 16–7–63. Engaging in certain activities relating to use of fires and ignited objects

(a) It shall be unlawful:

(1) To, with intent to damage, start, cause, or procure another to start or cause a fire in any woodlands, brush, field, or other lands that are not one's own and without the permission of the owner or the lessee having control of such property;

(2) To burn any brush, field, forest land, campfire, or debris, whether on one's own land or the lands of another, without taking the necessary precautions before, during, and after the fire to prevent the escape of such fire onto the lands of another. The escape of such fire shall be prima-facie evidence that necessary precautions were not taken;

(3) For any person to cause a fire by discarding any lighted cigarette, cigar, debris, or any other flaming or smoldering material that may cause a forest fire; or

(4) To destroy or damage any material or device used in the detection or suppression of wildfires.

(b) This Code section shall not apply to fire resulting from the operation of transportation machinery or equipment used in its normal or accustomed manner.

(c)(1) Any person who violates paragraph (2), (3), or (4) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(2) Any person who violates paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of arson of lands in the third degree and shall be punished the same as provided by subsection (c) of Code Section 16–7–62 for arson in the third degree.

(3) Any person whose violation of paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section results in a fire that burns more than five acres that are not one's own shall be guilty of arson of lands in the second degree and shall be punished the same as provided by subsection (c) of Code Section 16–7–61 for arson in the second degree.

(4) Any person who violates paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section under such circumstances that it was reasonably foreseeable that human life might be endangered shall be guilty of arson of lands in the first degree and shall be punished the same as provided by subsection (c) of Code Section 16–7–60 for arson in the first degree.

Article 4

Bombs, Explosives, and Chemical and Biological Weapons

§ 16–7–80. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Bacteriological weapon" or "biological weapon" means any device which is designed in such a manner as to permit the intentional release into the population or environment of microbial or other biological agents or toxins whatever their origin or method of production in a manner not otherwise authorized by law or any device the development, production, or stockpiling of which is prohibited pursuant to the "Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and Their Destruction," 26 U.S.T. 583, TIAS 8063.

(2) "Commissioner" means the Safety Fire Commissioner.

(3) "Conviction" means an adjudication of guilt of or a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to the commission of an offense against the laws of this state, any other state or territory, the United States, or a foreign nation recognized by the United States. Such term includes any such conviction or plea notwithstanding the fact that sentence was imposed pursuant to Article 3 of Chapter 8 of Title 42. Such term also includes the adjudication or plea of a juvenile to the commission of an act which if committed by an adult would constitute a crime under the laws of this state.

(4) "Destructive device" means:

(A) Any explosive, incendiary, or over-pressure device or poison gas which has been configured as a bomb; a grenade; a rocket with a propellant charge of more than four ounces; a missile having an explosive or incendiary charge of more than one-quarter ounce; a poison gas; a mine; a Molotov cocktail; or any other device which is substantially similar to such devices;

(B) Any type of weapon by whatever name known which will or may be readily converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive or other propellant, through a barrel which has a bore diameter of more than one-half inch in diameter; provided, however, that such term shall not include a pistol, rifle, or shotgun suitable for sporting or personal safety purposes or ammunition; a device which is neither designed or redesigned for use as a weapon; a device which, although originally designed for use as a weapon, is redesigned for use as a signaling, pyrotechnic, line throwing, safety, or similar device; or surplus military ordnance sold, loaned, or given by authority of the appropriate official of the United States Department of Defense;

(C) A weapon of mass destruction;

(D) A bacteriological weapon or biological weapon; or

(E) Any combination of parts either designed or intended for use in converting any device into a destructive device as otherwise defined in this paragraph.

(5) "Detonator" means a device containing a detonating charge that is used to initiate detonation in an explosive, including but not limited to electric blasting caps, blasting caps for use with safety fuses, and detonating cord delay connectors.

(6) "Director" means the director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

(7) "Distribute" means the actual, constructive, or attempted transfer from one person to another.

(8) "Explosive" means any chemical compound or other substance or mechanical system intended for the purpose of producing an explosion capable of causing injury to persons or damage to property or containing oxidizing and combustible units or other ingredients in such proportions or quantities that ignition, fire, friction, concussion, percussion, or detonator may produce an explosion capable of causing injury to persons or damage to property, including but not limited to the substances designated in Code Section 16–7–81; provided, however, that the term explosive shall not include common fireworks as defined by Code Section 25–10–1, model rockets and model rocket engines designed, sold, and used for the purpose of propelling recoverable aero models, or toy pistol paper caps in which the explosive content does not average more than 0.25 grains of explosive mixture per paper cap for toy pistols, toy cannons, toy canes, toy guns, or other devices using such paper caps unless such devices are used as a component of a destructive device.

(9) "Explosive ordnance disposal technician" or "EOD technician" means:

(A) A law enforcement officer, fire official, emergency management official, or an employee of this state or its political subdivisions or an authority of the state or a political subdivision who is certified in accordance with Code Section 35–8–13 and members of the Georgia National Guard who are qualified as explosive ordnance disposal technicians under the appropriate laws and regulations when acting in the performance of their official duties; and

(B) An official or employee of the United States, including but not limited to a member of the armed forces of the United States, who is qualified as an explosive ordnance disposal technician under the appropriate laws and regulations when acting in the performance of his or her official duties.

(10) "Felony" means any offense punishable by imprisonment for a term of one year or more, and includes conviction by a court-martial under the Uniform Code of Military Justice for an offense which would constitute a felony under the laws of the United States. A conviction of an offense under the laws of a foreign nation shall be considered a felony for the purposes of this article if the conduct giving rise to such conviction would have constituted a felony under the laws of this state or of the United States if committed within the jurisdiction of this state or the United States at the time of such conduct.

(11) "Hoax device" or "replica" means a device or article which has the appearance of a destructive device.

(12) "Incendiary" means a flammable liquid or compound with a flash point of 150 degrees Fahrenheit or less as determined by Tagliabue or equivalent closed-cup device, including but not limited to, gasoline, kerosene, fuel oil, or a derivative of such substances.

(13) "Over-pressure device" means a frangible container filled with an explosive gas or expanding gas which is designed or constructed so as to cause the container to break or fracture in a manner which is capable of causing death, bodily harm, or property damage.

(14) "Poison gas" means any toxic chemical or its precursors that through its chemical action or properties on life processes causes death or permanent injury to human beings; provided, however, that such term shall not include:

(A) Riot control agents, smoke, and obscuration materials or medical products which are manufactured, possessed, transported, or used in accordance with the laws of the United States and of this state;

(B) Tear gas devices designed to be carried on or about the person which contain not more than one-half ounce of the chemical;

(C) Pesticides, as provided in paragraph (12) of Code Section 16–7–93.

(15) "Property" means any real or personal property of any kind including money, choses in action, and other similar interests in property.

(16) "Public building" means any structure which is generally open to members of the public with or without the payment of an admission fee or membership dues including, but not limited to structures owned, operated, or leased by the state, the United States, any of the several states, or any foreign nation or any political subdivision or authority thereof; any religious organization; any medical facility; any college, school, or university; or any corporation, partnership, or association.

(17) "Weapon of mass destruction" means any device which is designed in such a way as to release radiation or radioactivity at a level which will result in internal or external bodily injury or death to any person.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–81. List of explosive materials

The following materials are explosives within the meaning of this article:

(1) Acetylides of heavy metals;

(2) Aluminum containing polymeric propellant;

(3) Aluminum ophorite explosive;

(4) Amatex;

(5) Amatol;

(6) Ammonal;

(7) Ammonium nitrate explosive mixtures, cap sensitive;

(8) Ammonium nitrate explosive mixtures, noncap sensitive;

(9) Aromatic nitro-compound explosive mixtures;

(10) Ammonium perchlorate explosive mixtures;

(11) Ammonium perchlorate composite propellant;

(12) Ammonium picrate (picrate of ammonia, Explosive D);

(13) Ammonium salt lattice with isomorphously substituted inorganic salts;

(14) Ammonium tri-iodide;

(15) ANFO (ammonium nitrate-fuel oil);

(16) Baratol;

(17) Baronol;

(18) BEAF (1,2–bis (2,2–difluoro–2–nitroacetoxyethane));

(19) Black powder;

(20) Black powder based explosive mixtures;

(21) Blasting agents, nitro-carbo-nitrates, including noncap sensitive slurry and water-gel explosives;

(22) Blasting caps;

(23) Blasting gelatin;

(24) Blasting powder;

(25) BTNEC (bis (trinitroethyl) carbonate);

(26) Bulk salutes;

(27) BTNEN (bis (trinitroethyl) nitramine);

(28) BTTN (1,2,4 butanetriol trinitrate);

(29) Butyl tetryl;

(30) Calcium nitrate explosive mixture;

(31) Cellulose hexanitrate explosive mixture;

(32) Chlorate explosive mixtures;

(33) Composition A and variations;

(34) Composition B and variations;

(35) Composition C and variations;

(36) Copper acetylide;

(37) Cyanuric triazide;

(38) Cyclotrimethylenetrinitramine (RDX);

(39) Cyclotetramethylenetetranitramine (HMX);

(40) Cyclonite (RDX);

(41) Cyclotol;

(42) DATB (diaminotrinitrobenzene);

(43) DDNP (diazodinitrophenol);

(44) DEGDN (diethyleneglycol dinitrate);

(45) Detonating cord;

(46) Detonators;

(47) Dimethylol dimethyl methane dinitrate composition;

(48) Dinitroethyleneurea;

(49) Dinitroglycerine (glycerol dinitrate);

(50) Dinitrophenol;

(51) Dinitrophenolates;

(52) Dinitrophenyl hydrazine;

(53) Dinitroresorcinol;

(54) Dinitrotoluene-sodium nitrate explosive mixtures;

(55) DIPAM;

(56) Dipicryl sulfone;

(57) Dipicrylamine;

(58) Display fireworks;

(59) DNDP (dinitropentano nitrile);

(60) DNPA (2,2–dinitropropyl acrylate);

(61) Dynamite;

(62) EDDN (ethylene diamine dinitrate);

(63) EDNA;

(64) Ednatol;

(65) EDNP (ethyl 4,4–dinitropentanoate);

(66) Erythritol tetranitrate explosives;

(67) Esters of nitro-substituted alcohols;

(68) EGDN (ethylene glycol dinitrate);

(69) Ethyl-tetryl;

(70) Explosive conitrates;

(71) Explosive gelatins;

(72) Explosive mixtures containing oxygen-releasing inorganic salts and hydrocarbons;

(73) Explosive mixtures containing oxygen-releasing inorganic salts and nitro bodies;

(74) Explosive mixtures containing oxygen-releasing inorganic salts and water insoluble fuels;

(75) Explosive mixtures containing oxygen-releasing inorganic salts and water soluble fuels;

(76) Explosive mixtures containing sensitized nitromethane;

(77) Explosive mixtures containing tetranitromethane (nitroform);

(78) Explosive nitro compounds of aromatic hydrocarbons;

(79) Explosive organic nitrate mixtures;

(80) Explosive liquids;

(81) Explosive powders;

(82) Flash powder;

(83) Fulminate of mercury;

(84) Fulminate of silver;

(85) Fulminating gold;

(86) Fulminating mercury;

(87) Fulminating platinum;

(88) Fulminating silver;

(89) Gelatinized nitrocellulose;

(90) Gem-dinitro aliphatic explosive mixtures;

(91) Guanyl nitrosamino guanyl tetrazene;

(92) Guanyl nitrosamino guanylidene hydrazine;

(92.1) Guncotton;

(92.2) Heavy metal azides;

(92.3) Hexamitrostrilbene;

(92.4) Hexanite;

(92.5) Hexanitrodiphenylamine;

(92.6) Hexogen;

(93) Hexogene or octogene and a nitrated N-methylaniline;

(94) Hexolites;

(95) HMX (cyclo–1,3,5,7–tetramethylene–2,4,6,8–tetranitramine; Octogen);

(96) Hydrazinium nitrate/hydrazine/aluminum explosive system;

(97) Hydrazoic acid;

(98) Igniter cord;

(99) Igniters;

(100) Initiating tube systems;

(101) KDNBF (potassium dinitrobenzo-furoxane);

(102) Lead azide;

(103) Lead mannite;

(104) Lead mononitroresorcinate;

(105) Lead picrate;

(106) Lead salts, explosive;

(107) Lead styphnate (styphnate of lead, lead trinitroresorcinate);

(108) Liquid nitrated polyol and trimethylolethane;

(109) Liquid oxygen explosives;

(110) Magnesium ophorite explosives;

(111) Mannitol hexanitrate;

(112) MDNP (methyl 4,4–dinitropentanoate);

(113) MEAN (monoethanolamine nitrate);

(114) Mercuric fulminate;

(115) Mercury oxalate;

(116) Mercury tartrate;

(117) Metriol trinitrate;

(118) Minol–2 (40% TNT, 40% ammonium nitrate, 20% aluminum);

(119) MMAN (monomethylamine nitrate); methylamine nitrate;

(120) Mononitrotoluene-nitroglycerin mixture;

(121) Monopropellants;

(122) NIBTN (nitroisobutametriol trinitrate);

(123) Nitrate sensitized with gelled nitroparaffin;

(124) Nitrated carbohydrate explosive;

(125) Nitrated glucoside explosive;

(126) Nitrated polyhydric alcohol explosives;

(127) Nitrates of soda explosive mixtures;

(128) Nitric acid and a nitro aromatic compound explosive;

(129) Nitric acid and carboxylic fuel explosive;

(130) Nitric acid explosive mixtures;

(131) Nitro aromatic explosive mixtures;

(132) Nitro compounds of furane explosive mixtures;

(133) Nitrocellulose explosive;

(134) Nitroderivative of urea explosive mixture;

(135) Nitrogelatin explosive;

(136) Nitrogen trichloride;

(137) Nitrogen tri-iodide;

(138) Nitroglycerine (NG, RNG, nitro, glyceryl trinitrate, trinitroglycerine);

(139) Nitroglycide;

(140) Nitroglycol (ethylene glycol dinitrate, EGDN);

(141) Nitroguanidine explosives;

(142) Nitroparaffins Explosive Grade and ammonium nitrate mixtures;

(143) Nitronium perchlorate propellant mixtures;

(144) Nitrostarch;

(145) Nitro-substituted carboxylic acids;

(146) Nitrourea;

(147) Octogen (HMX);

(148) Octol (75% HMX, 25% TNT);

(149) Organic amine nitrates;

(150) Organic nitramines;

(151) PBX (RDX and plasticizer);

(152) Pellet powder;

(153) Penthrinite composition;

(154) Pentolite;

(155) Perchlorate explosive mixtures;

(156) Peroxide based explosive mixtures;

(157) PETN (nitropentaerythrite, pentaerythrite tetranitrate, pentaerythritol tetranitrate);

(158) Picramic acid and its salts;

(159) Picramide;

(160) Picrate of potassium explosive mixtures;

(161) Picratol;

(162) Picric acid (manufactured as an explosive);

(163) Picryl chloride;

(164) Picryl fluoride;

(165) PLX (95% nitromethane, 5% ethylenediamine);

(166) Polynitro aliphatic compounds;

(167) Polyolpolynitrate-nitrocellulose explosive gels;

(168) Potassium chlorate and lead sulfocyanate explosive;

(169) Potassium nitrate explosive mixtures;

(170) Potassium nitroaminotetrazole;

(171) Pyrotechnic compositions;

(172) PYX (2,6–bis(picrylamino)–3,5–dinitropyridine);

(173) RDX (cyclonite, hexogen, T4,cyclo–1,3, 5,-trimethylene–2,4,6,-rinitramine; hexahydro–1,3,5–trinitro-S-triazine);

(174) Safety fuse;

(175) Salutes, (bulk);

(176) Salts of organic amino sulfonic acid explosive mixture;

(177) Silver acetylide;

(178) Silver azide;

(179) Silver fulminate;

(180) Silver oxalate explosive mixtures;

(181) Silver styphnate;

(182) Silver tartrate explosive mixtures;

(183) Silver tetrazene;

(184) Slurried explosive mixtures of water, inorganic oxidizing salt, gelling agent, fuel, and sensitizer, cap sensitive;

(185) Smokeless powder;

(186) Sodatol;

(187) Sodium amatol;

(188) Sodium azide explosive mixture;

(189) Sodium dinitro-ortho-cresolate;

(190) Sodium nitrate-potassium nitrate explosive mixture;

(191) Sodium picramate;

(192) Special fireworks;

(193) Squibs;

(194) Styphnic acid explosives;

(195) Tacot (tetranitro–2,3,5,6–dibenzo–1,3a,4,6a tetrazapentalene);

(196) TATB (triaminotrinitrobenzene);

(197) TATP (triacetone triperoxide);

(198) TEGDN (triethylene glycol dinitrate);

(199) Tetrazene (tetracene, tetrazine, l(5–tetrazolyl)–4–guanyl tetrazene hydrate);

(200) Tetranitrocarbazole;

(201) Tetryl (2,4,6 tetranitro-N-methylaniline);

(202) Tetrytol;

(203) Thickened inorganic oxidizer salt slurried explosive mixture;

(204) TMETN (trimethylolethane trinitrate);

(205) TNEF (trinitroethyl formal);

(206) TNEOC (trinitroethylorthocarbonate);

(207) TNEOF (trinitroethylorthoformate);

(208) TNT (trinitrotoluene, trotyl, trilite, triton);

(209) Torpex;

(210) Tridite;

(211) Trimethylol ethyl methane trinitrate composition;

(212) Trimethylolthane trinitrate-nitrocellulose;

(213) Trimonite;

(214) Trinitroanisole;

(215) Trinitrobenzene;

(216) Trinitrobenzoic acid;

(217) Trinitrocresol;

(218) Trinitro-meta-cresol;

(219) Trinitronaphthalene;

(220) Trinitrophenetol;

(221) Trinitrophloroglucinol;

(222) Trinitroresorcinol;

(223) Tritonal;

(224) Urea nitrate;

(225) Water bearing explosives having salts of oxidizing acids and nitrogen bases, sulfates, or sulfamates, cap sensitive;

(226) Water-in-oil emulsion explosive compositions;

(227) Xanthamonas hydrophilic colloid explosive mixture.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3; Laws 2000, p. 1562, § 1.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment inserted pars. (92.1) through (92.6).

§ 16–7–82. Possession, manufacture, etc., of destructive devices except as provided in this law

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to possess, manufacture, transport, distribute, possess with the intent to distribute, or offer to distribute a destructive device except as provided in this article.

(b) Any person convicted of a violation of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than three nor more than 20 years or, by a fine of not more than $25,000.00 or both or, if the defendant is a corporation, by a fine of not less than $25,000.00 nor more than $100,000.00 or not fewer than 5,000 nor more than 10,000 hours of community service or both.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–83. Possession, manufacture, etc., of destructive devices except as provided in this law

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person who is under indictment for or who has been convicted of a felony by a court of this state, any other state, the United States including its territories, possessions, and dominions, or a foreign nation to possess, manufacture, transport, distribute, possess with the intent to distribute, or offer to distribute a destructive device, detonator, explosive, poison gas, or hoax device.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to distribute a destructive device, detonator, explosive, poison gas, or hoax device to any person:

(1) Who he or she knows or should know is under indictment for or has been convicted of a felony by a court of this state, any other state, the United States including its territories, possessions, and dominions, or a foreign nation; or

(2) Who he or she knows or should know has been adjudicated to be mentally incompetent or mentally ill by a court of this state, any other state, or the United States including its territories, possessions, and dominions.

(c) Any person convicted of a violation of this Code section shall be punished, in the case of an individual, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 15 years or by a fine of not more than $25,000.00 or both or, if the defendant is a corporation, by a fine of not less than $10,000.00 nor more than $75,000.00 or not fewer than 1,000 nor more than 5,000 hours of community service or both.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities shall make available to any law enforcement agency or district attorney of this state such information as may be necessary to establish that a person has been adjudicated by any court to be mentally incompetent or mentally ill.

(e) The provisions of this Code section shall not apply to:

(1) Any person who has been pardoned for a felony by the President of the United States, the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, or the person or agency empowered to grant pardons under the constitution or laws of any other state or of a foreign nation and, by the terms of the pardon, has expressly been authorized to receive, possess, distribute, or transport a destructive device, explosive, poison gas, or detonator; or

(2) A person who has been convicted of a felony, but who has been granted relief from the disabilities imposed by the laws of the United States with respect to the acquisition, receipt, transfer, shipment, or possession of explosives by the secretary of the United States Department of the Treasury pursuant to 18 U.S.C. 845, may apply to the Board of Public Safety for relief from the disabilities imposed by this Code section in the same manner as is provided in subsection (d) of Code Section 16–11–131. The board may grant such relief under the same standards and conditions as apply to firearms.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3; Laws 2009, Act 102, § 3–2, eff. July 1, 2009.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2009 amendment by Act 102 substituted "Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities" for "Department of Human Resources" throughout the section.

§ 16–7–84. Distribution of destructive device, explosive, poison gas, or detonator to person under 21 years of age

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to distribute or to offer to distribute a destructive device, explosive, poison gas, or detonator to any person who is under 21 years of age.

(b) Any person convicted of a violation of this Code section shall be punished, in the case of an individual, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than three years or by a fine of not more than $10,000.00 or both or, if the defendant is a corporation, by a fine of not more than $20,000.00 or not fewer than 3,000 hours of community service or both.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–85. Manufacture, possession, etc., of hoax device or replica of destructive device or detonator

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture, possess, transport, distribute, or use a hoax device or replica of a destructive device or detonator with the intent to cause another to believe that such hoax device or replica is a destructive device or detonator.

(b) Any person convicted of a violation of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $10,000.00 or both or, if the defendant is a corporation, a fine of not less than $1,000.00 or not fewer than 500 hours of community service or both for each such hoax device or replica; provided, however, that if such person communicates or transmits to another that such hoax device or replica is a destructive device or detonator with the intent to obtain the property of another person or to interfere with the ability of another person to conduct or carry on the ordinary course of business, trade, education, or government, such violation shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years or by a fine of not more than $25,000.00 or both or, if the defendant is a corporation, a fine of not less than $50,000.00 or not fewer than 1,000 nor more than 10,000 hours of community service or both for each such hoax device or replica.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–86. Conspiracy

It shall be unlawful for any person to attempt or conspire to commit any offense prohibited by this article. Any person convicted of a violation of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment or community service; by a fine; or by both such punishments not to exceed the maximum punishment prescribed for the offense the commission of which was the object of the attempt or conspiracy.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–87. Obstruction of law enforcement officers

It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to hinder or obstruct any explosive ordnance technician, law enforcement officer, fire official, emergency management official, animal trained to detect destructive devices, or any robot or mechanical device designed or utilized by a law enforcement officer, fire official, or emergency management official of this state or of the United States in the detection, disarming, or destruction of a destructive device. Any person convicted of a violation of this Code section shall be punished as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–10–24.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–88. Possession, transportation, receipt, or use of destructive device or explosive with intent to kill, injure or intimidate or to destroy any public building

(a) Any person who possesses, transports, or receives or attempts to possess, transport, or receive any destructive device or explosive with the knowledge or intent that it will be used to kill, injure, or intimidate any individual or to destroy any public building shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years or by a fine of not more than $125,000.00 or both or, if the defendant is a corporation, by a fine of not less than $125,000.00 nor more than $200,000.00 or sentenced to perform not fewer than 10,000 nor more than 20,000 hours of community service or both.

(b) In addition to any other penalty imposed under the laws of this state or of the United States, any person who shall use or attempt to use any destructive device or explosive to kill or injure any individual, including any public safety officer performing duties as a direct or proximate result of a violation of this subsection, or to destroy any public building shall be imprisoned for not less than 20 nor more than 40 years or fined the greater of the cost of replacing any property that is destroyed or $250,000.00 or both or, if the defendant is a corporation, fined the greater of the cost of replacing any property which is destroyed or $1 million or sentenced to perform not fewer than 20,000 nor more than 40,000 hours of community service or both.

(c) Any other provision of law to the contrary notwithstanding, no part of any sentence imposed pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section shall be probated, deferred, suspended, or withheld and no person sentenced pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section shall be eligible for early release, leave, work release, earned time, good time, or any other program administered by any agency of the executive or judicial branches of this state which would have the effect of reducing or mitigating such sentence until the defendant has completed the minimum sentence as provided by subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3; Laws 1997, p. 512, § 1.

§ 16–7–89. Each violation a separate offense

Each violation of the provisions of this article shall be considered a separate offense.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–90. Records and reports

It shall be the duty of any person authorized by paragraph (1) or (2) of Code Section 16–7–93 to manufacture, possess, transport, distribute, or use a destructive device, detonator, explosive, or hoax device within the state:

(1) To maintain such records as may be required pursuant to Title 25. Such records may be inspected by the Commissioner or the director or such officers' designees or any law enforcement officer or fire official during normal business hours; and

(2) To report promptly the loss or theft of any destructive device, detonator, explosive, or hoax device to the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–91. Searches and inspections

The Commissioner or director or such officers' designees or any law enforcement officer or fire official may obtain an inspection warrant as provided in Code Section 25–2–22.1 to conduct a search or inspection of:

(1) Any person licensed pursuant to Title 25 to manufacture, possess, transport, sell, distribute, or use a destructive device or detonator within the state;

(2) Any person licensed pursuant to Chapter 7 of Title 2 to manufacture, possess, transport, sell, or distribute or use pesticides; or

(3) Any property where such pesticide, destructive device, or detonator is manufactured, possessed, transported, distributed, or used.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–92. Power to compel attendance of witnesses and production of documents

In any case where there is reason to believe that a destructive device, detonator, explosive, or hoax device has been manufactured, possessed, transported, distributed, or used in violation of this article or Title 25 or that there has been an attempt or a conspiracy to commit such a violation, the Attorney General, any district attorney, the director, or such persons as may be designated in writing by such officials shall have the same power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of evidence before such official in the same manner as the state fire marshal as provided in Code Sections 25–2–27, 25–2–28, and 25–2–29.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–93. Exceptions

The provisions of Code Sections 16–7–82, 16–7–84, 16–7–85, and 16–7–86 shall not apply to:

(1) Any person authorized to manufacture, possess, transport, distribute, or use a destructive device or detonator pursuant to the laws of the United States, as amended, or pursuant to Title 25 when such person is acting in accordance with such laws and any regulations issued pursuant thereto;

(2) Any person licensed as a blaster by the Commissioner pursuant to Chapter 8 of Title 25, when such blaster is acting in accordance with the laws of the state and any regulations promulgated thereunder and any ordinances and regulations of the political subdivision or authority of the state where blasting operations are being performed;

(3) Fireworks, as defined by Code Section 25–10–1 and any person authorized by the laws of this state and of the United States to manufacture, possess, distribute, transport, store, exhibit, display, or use fireworks;

(4) A law enforcement, fire service, or emergency management agency of this state, any agency or authority of a political subdivision of this state, or the United States and any employee or authorized agent thereof while in performance of official duties and any law enforcement officer, fire official, or emergency management official of the United States or any other state while attending training in this state;

(5) The armed forces of the United States or of this state;

(6) Research or educational programs conducted by or on behalf of a college, university, or secondary school which have been authorized by the chief executive officer of such educational institution or his or her designee and which is conducted in accordance with the laws of the United States and of this state;

(7) The use of explosive materials in medicines and medicinal agents in forms prescribed by the most recent published edition of the official United States Pharmacopoeia or the National Formulary;

(8) Small arms ammunition and reloading components thereof;

(9) Commercially manufactured black powder in quantities not to exceed 50 pounds, percussion caps, safety and pyrotechnic fuses, quills, quick and slow matches, and friction primers intended to be used solely for sporting, recreational, or cultural purposes in antique firearms or antique devices; or

(10) An explosive which is lawfully possessed in accordance with the rules adopted pursuant to Code Section 16–7–94.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–94. Exception as to agricultural activities

After consultation with the Commissioner of Agriculture or his or her designee, the Board of Public Safety may except by rule any explosive or quantity of explosive for use in legitimate agricultural activities. A copy of any such rule shall be furnished to the Commissioner of Agriculture.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–95. Seizure and forfeiture of property

(a) All property which is subject to forfeiture pursuant to Code Section 16–13–49 which is, directly or indirectly, used or intended for use in any manner to facilitate a violation of this article or any proceeds derived or realized therefrom shall be considered contraband. Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, such property may be seized and shall be forfeited to the state as provided in Code Section 16–13–49. A property interest shall not be subject to forfeiture under this Code section if the owner of such interest or interest holder establishes any of the provisions of subsection (e) of Code Section 16–13–49.

(b) On application of the seizing law enforcement agency, the superior court may authorize the seizing law enforcement agency to destroy or transfer to any agency of this state or of the United States which can safely store or render harmless any destructive device, explosive, poison gas, or detonator which is subject to forfeiture pursuant to this Code section if the court finds that it is impractical or unsafe for the seizing law enforcement agency to store such destructive device, explosive, poison gas, or detonator. Such application may be made at any time after seizure. Any destruction authorized pursuant to this subsection shall be made in the presence of at least one credible witness or shall be recorded on film, videotape, or other electronic imaging method. Any such film, videotape, or other electronic imaging method shall be admissible as evidence in lieu of such destructive device, explosive, poison gas, or detonator. The court may also direct the seizing agency or an agency to which such destructive device, explosive, poison gas, or detonator is transferred to make a report of the destruction, take samples, or both.

(c) The provisions of subsection (b) of this Code section shall not prohibit an explosive ordnance technician, other law enforcement officer, or fire service personnel from taking action which will render safe an explosive, destructive device, poison gas, or detonator or any object which is suspected of being an explosive, destructive device, poison gas, or detonator without the prior approval of a court when such action is intended to protect lives or property.

§ 16–7–96. Evidence; photographs, videotapes, or other identification

(a) Photographs, videotapes, or other identification or analysis of a destructive device, explosive, poison gas, or detonator duly identified by an explosive ordnance disposal technician or a person qualified as a forensic expert in the area of destructive devices shall be admissible in any civil or criminal trial in lieu of the destructive device or detonator.

(b) If a destructive device, explosive, poison gas, or detonator which has been rendered safe is introduced into evidence in any criminal or civil action, it shall be the duty of the clerk of court immediately to photograph the same and to transfer custody of the destructive device or detonator to the director or his or her designee or an explosive ordnance disposal technician.

Laws 1996, p. 416, § 3.

§ 16–7–97. Exception as to fertilizers, propellant actuated devices or tools, and pesticides

The provisions of this article shall not apply to:

(1) Fertilizers, propellant actuated devices, or propellant activated industrial tools manufactured, imported, distributed, or used for their intended purposes; or

(2) A pesticide which is manufactured, stored, transported, distributed, possessed, or used in accordance with Chapter 7 of Title 2, the federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act, 61 Stat. 163, as amended, and the federal Environmental Pesticide Control Act of 1972, Pub. L. 92–516, as amended.[1]

Article 1

Theft

§ 16–8–1. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Deprive" means, without justification:

(A) To withhold property of another permanently or temporarily; or

(B) To dispose of the property so as to make it unlikely that the owner will recover it.

(2) "Financial institution" means a bank, insurance company, credit union, building and loan association, investment trust, or other organization held out to the public as a place of deposit of funds or medium of savings or collective investment.

(3) "Property of another" includes property in which any person other than the accused has an interest but does not include property belonging to the spouse of an accused or to them jointly.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1801.

§ 16–8–2. Theft by taking

A person commits the offense of theft by taking when he unlawfully takes or, being in lawful possession thereof, unlawfully appropriates any property of another with the intention of depriving him of the property, regardless of the manner in which the property is taken or appropriated.

Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 791; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1974, p. 468, § 1; Laws 1975, p. 876, § 1; Laws 1978, p. 2257, § 1.

Formerly Code 1863, § 4290; Code 1868, § 4327; Code 1873, § 4393; Code 1882, § 4393; Penal Code 1895, § 155; Penal Code 1910, § 152; Code 1933, § 26–2602; Code 1933, § 26–1802.

§ 16–8–3. Theft by deception

(a) A person commits the offense of theft by deception when he obtains property by any deceitful means or artful practice with the intention of depriving the owner of the property.

(b) A person deceives if he intentionally:

(1) Creates or confirms another's impression of an existing fact or past event which is false and which the accused knows or believes to be false;

(2) Fails to correct a false impression of an existing fact or past event which he has previously created or confirmed;

(3) Prevents another from acquiring information pertinent to the disposition of the property involved;

(4) Sells or otherwise transfers or encumbers property intentionally failing to disclose a substantial and valid known lien, adverse claim, or other legal impediment to the enjoyment of the property, whether such impediment is or is not a matter of official record; or

(5) Promises performance of services which he does not intend to perform or knows will not be performed. Evidence of failure to perform standing alone shall not be sufficient to authorize a conviction under this subsection.

(c) "Deceitful means" and "artful practice" do not, however, include falsity as to matters having no pecuniary significance, or exaggeration by statements unlikely to deceive ordinary persons in the group addressed.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1803.

§ 16–8–4. Theft by conversion

(a) A person commits the offense of theft by conversion when, having lawfully obtained funds or other property of another including, but not limited to, leased or rented personal property, under an agreement or other known legal obligation to make a specified application of such funds or a specified disposition of such property, he knowingly converts the funds or property to his own use in violation of the agreement or legal obligation. This Code section applies whether the application or disposition is to be made from the funds or property of another or from the accused's own funds or property in equivalent amount when the agreement contemplates that the accused may deal with the funds or property of another as his own.

(b) When, under subsection (a) of this Code section, an officer or employee of a government or of a financial institution fails to pay on an account, upon lawful demand, from the funds or property of another held by him, he is presumed to have intended to convert the funds or property to his own use.

(c)(1) As used in this subsection, the term "personal property" means personal property having a replacement cost value greater than $ 100.00, excluding any late fees and penalties, and includes heavy equipment as defined in paragraph (2) of Code Section 10–1–731 and tractors and farm equipment primarily designed for use in agriculture.

(2) Any person having any personal property in such person's possession or under such person's control by virtue of a lease or rental agreement who fails to return the personal property within five days, Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays excluded, after a letter demanding return of the personal property has been mailed to such person by certified or registered mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested, at such person's last known address by the owner of the personal property or by the owner's agent shall be presumed to have knowingly converted such personal property to such person's own use in violation of such lease or agreement.

(3) In the event that any personal property is not returned as provided for in the lease or rental agreement and the court orders the lessor or renter to pay replacement costs, replacement costs shall include but not be limited to:

(A) The market value of the personal property. The market value shall be established by the owner of the property by providing from a supplier of such or reasonably similar personal property a current quotation of the value of the personal property which is of like quality, make, and model of the personal property being replaced. The value to be awarded shall be the higher of:

(i) The value on the date when the conversion occurred; or

(ii) The value on the date of the trial;

(B) All rental charges from the date the rental agreement was executed until the date of the trial or the date that the property was recovered, if recovered; and

(C) Interest on the unpaid balance each month at the current legal rate from the date the court orders the lessor or renter to pay replacement costs until the date the judgment is satisfied in full.

(4) If as a part of the order of the court the lessor or renter is placed on probation, supervision of said probation shall not be terminated until all replacement costs, fees, charges, penalties, interest, and other charges are paid in full. All payments relative to this Code section shall be made to the appropriate court of jurisdiction and the court shall make distribution to the owner within 30 days of receipt thereof.

(5) In the event that the owner incurs any expenses in the process of locating a lessor or renter who did not return any personal property according to the lease or rental agreement, the court shall provide that the lessor or renter reimburse the owner for those expenses which may include, but not be limited to, credit reports, private detective fees, investigation fees, fees charged by a law enforcement agency for such services as police reports, background checks, fees involved with swearing out a warrant for incarceration, and any other bona fide expenses.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1808.

Validity

This section has been held unconstitutional, in part, in the case of Sherrod v. State, 2006, 280 Ga. 275, 627 S.E.2d 36.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment amendment substituted in subsec. (c)(2) "certified mail or statutory overnight delivery" for "certified mail".

§ 16–8–5. Theft of services

A person commits the offense of theft of services when by deception and with the intent to avoid payment he knowingly obtains services, accommodations, entertainment, or the use of personal property which is available only for compensation.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1807.

§ 16–8–5.1. Avoiding payment due for rental or lease of personal property; intent; agreements to delay payment

The trier of fact may infer that the accused intended to avoid payment due for the rental or lease of any personal property in any prosecution pursuant to Code Section 16–8–2, relating to theft by taking; 16–8–3, relating to theft by deception; 16–8–4, relating to theft by conversion; or 16–8–5, relating to theft of services; if a person knowingly:

(1) Used false identification;

(2) Provided false information on a written contract;

(3) Made, drew, uttered, executed, or delivered an instrument for the payment of money on any bank or other depository in exchange for present consideration, knowing that it would not be honored by the drawee;

(4) Abandoned any property at a location that is not the location agreed upon for return and that would not be reasonably known to the owner;

(5) Returned any property to a location that would not reasonably be known to the owner without notifying the owner; or

(6) Returned any property at a time beyond posted business hours of the owner.

No person shall be convicted under Code Section 16–8–2, relating to theft by taking; 16–8–3, relating to theft by deception; 16–8–4, relating to theft by conversion; or 16–8–5, relating to theft of services; where there was an agreement to delay payment for such property or services or the accused makes payment in full within two business days after returning the property or obtaining the services.

Laws 2005, Act 318, § 1, eff. July 1, 2005; Laws 2006, Act 453, § 16, eff. April 14, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 453 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

§ 16–8–5.2. Retail property fencing; forfeiture of property

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Retail property" means any new article, product, commodity, item, or component intended to be sold in retail commerce.

(2) "Retail property fence" means a person or entity that buys, sells, transfers, or possesses with the intent to sell or transfer retail property that such person knows or should have known was stolen.

(3) "Value" means the retail value of the item as stated or advertised by the affected retail establishment, to include applicable taxes.

(b) A person commits the offense of retail property fencing when such persons receives, disposes of, or retains retail property which was unlawfully taken or shoplifted over a period not to exceed 180 days with the intent to:

(1) Transfer, sell, or distribute such retail property to a retail property fence; or

(2) Attempt or cause such retail property to be offered for sale, transfer, or distribution for money or other things of value.

(c) Whoever knowingly receives, possesses, conceals, stores, barters, sells, or disposes of retail property with the intent to distribute any retail property which is known or should be known to have been taken or stolen in violation of this subsection with the intent to distribute the proceeds, or to otherwise promote, manage, carry on, or facilitate an offense described in this subsection, shall have committed the offense of retail property fencing.

(d)(1) It shall not be necessary in any prosecution under this Code section for the state to prove that any intended profit was actually realized. The trier of fact may infer that a particular scheme or course of conduct was undertaken for profit from all of the attending circumstances.

(2) It shall not be a defense to violating this Code section that the property was obtained by means other than through the commission of a theft offense if the property was explicitly represented to the accused as being obtained through the commission of a theft.

(e) Any property constituting proceeds derived from or realized through a violation of this Code section shall be subject to forfeiture to the State of Georgia except that no property of any owner shall be forfeited under this subsection, to the extent of the interest of such owner, by reason of an act or omission established by such owner to have been committed or omitted without knowledge or consent of such owner. The procedure for forfeiture and disposition of forfeited property under this subsection shall be as provided for under Code Section 16–13–49.

(f) Each violation of this Code section shall constitute a separate offense.

Laws 2008, Act 581, § 1, eff. July 1, 2008.

§ 16–8–6. Theft of lost or mislaid property

A person commits the offense of theft of lost or mislaid property when he comes into control of property that he knows or learns to have been lost or mislaid and appropriates the property to his own use without first taking reasonable measures to restore the property to the owner.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1805.

§ 16–8–7. Theft by receiving stolen property

(a) A person commits the offense of theft by receiving stolen property when he receives, disposes of, or retains stolen property which he knows or should know was stolen unless the property is received, disposed of, or retained with intent to restore it to the owner. "Receiving" means acquiring possession or control or lending on the security of the property.

(b) In any prosecution under this Code section it shall not be necessary to show a conviction of the principal thief.

Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, pp. 807, 808; Laws 1961, p. 118, § 1; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1969, p. 857, § 4.

§ 16–8–8. Theft by receiving property stolen in another State

A person commits the offense of theft by receiving property stolen in another state when he receives, disposes of, or retains stolen property which he knows or should know was stolen in another state, unless the property is received, disposed of, or retained with intent to restore it to the owner.

Laws 1918, p. 272, § 1; Laws 1972, p. 841, § 2.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2623; Code 1933, § 26–1816.

§ 16–8–9. Theft by bringing stolen property into this State

A person commits the offense of theft by bringing stolen property into this state when he brings into this state any property which he knows or should know has been stolen in another state.

Laws 1918, p. 272, § 2; Laws 1972, p. 841, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–2622; Code 1933, § 26–1815.

§ 16–8–10. Claim of right

It is an affirmative defense to a prosecution for violation of Code Sections 16–8–2 through 16–8–7 that the person:

(1) Was unaware that the property or service was that of another;

(2) Acted under an honest claim of right to the property or service involved or under a right to acquire or dispose of it as he did; or

(3) Took property or service exposed for sale intending to purchase and pay for it promptly or reasonably believing that the owner, if present, would have consented.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1810.

§ 16–8–11. Venue

In a prosecution under Code Sections 16–8–2 through 16–8–9 and 16–8–13 through 16–8–15, the crime shall be considered as having been committed in any county in which the accused exercised control over the property which was the subject of the theft. In addition, in any prosecution under Code Section 16–8–4 in which there is a written rental agreement for personal property, the crime shall also be considered to have been committed in the county in which the accused signed the rental agreement.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1972, p. 841, § 3; Laws 1994, p. 650, § 2.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1811.

§ 16–8–12. Punishment

(a) A person convicted of a violation of Code Sections 16–8–2 through 16–8–9 shall be punished as for a misdemeanor except:

(1) If the property which was the subject of the theft exceeded $500.00 in value, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years or, in the discretion of the trial judge, as for a misdemeanor;

(2) If the property was any amount of anhydrous ammonia, as defined in Code Section 16–11–111, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years, a fine not to exceed the amount provided by Code Section 17–10–8, or both;

(3) If the property was taken by a fiduciary in breach of a fiduciary obligation or by an officer or employee of a government or a financial institution in breach of his or her duties as such officer or employee, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 15 years, a fine not to exceed the amount provided by Code Section 17–10–8, or both;

(4) If the crime committed was a violation of Code Section 16–8–2 and if the property which was the subject of the theft was a memorial to the dead or any ornamentation, flower, tree, or shrub placed on, adjacent to, or within any enclosure of a memorial to the dead, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than three years. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed as to cause action taken by a cemetery, cemetery owner, lessee, trustee, church, religious or fraternal organization, corporation, civic organization, or club legitimately attempting to clean, maintain, care for, upgrade, or beautify a grave, gravesite, tomb, monument, gravestone, or other structure or thing placed or designed for a memorial of the dead to be a criminal act;

(5)(A) The provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection notwithstanding, if the property which was the subject of the theft was a motor vehicle or was a motor vehicle part or component which exceeded $100.00 in value or if the theft or unlawful activity was committed in violation of subsection (b) of Code Section 10–1–393.5 or in violation of subsection (b) of Code Section 10–1–393.6 or while engaged in telemarketing conduct in violation of Chapter 5B of Title 10, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years or, in the discretion of the trial judge, as for a misdemeanor; provided, however, that any person who is convicted of a second or subsequent offense under this paragraph shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than 20 years.

(B) Subsequent offenses committed under this paragraph, including those which may have been committed after prior felony convictions unrelated to this paragraph, shall be punished as provided in Code Section 17–10–7;

(6)(A) As used in this paragraph, the term:

(i) "Destructive device" means a destructive device as such term is defined by Code Section 16–7–80.

(ii) "Explosive" means an explosive as such term is defined by Code Section 16–7–80.

(iii) "Firearm" means any rifle, shotgun, pistol, or similar device which propels a projectile or projectiles through the energy of an explosive.

(B) If the property which was the subject of the theft offense was a destructive device, explosive, or firearm, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years;

(7) If the property which was the subject of the theft is a grave marker, monument, or memorial to one or more deceased persons who served in the military service of this state, the United States of America or any of the states thereof, or the Confederate States of America or any of the states thereof, or a monument, plaque, marker, or memorial which is dedicated to, honors, or recounts the military service of any past or present military personnel of this state, the United States of America or any of the states thereof, or the Confederate States of America or any of the states thereof, and if such grave marker, monument, memorial, plaque, or marker is privately owned or located on privately owned land, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than three years if the value of the property which was the subject of the theft is $300.00 or less, and by imprisonment for not less than three years and not more than five years if the value of the property which was the subject of the theft is more than $300.00;

(8) If the property that was the subject of the theft was a vehicle engaged in commercial transportation of cargo or any appurtenance thereto, including without limitation any such trailer, semitrailer, container, or other associated equipment, or the cargo being transported therein or thereon, by imprisonment for not less than three years nor more than ten years, a fine not less than $5,000.00 nor more than $50,000.00, and, if applicable, the revocation of the defendant's commercial driver's license in accordance with Code Section 40–5–151, or any combination of such penalties. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "vehicle" includes without limitation any railcar; or

(9) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection, if the property of the theft was ferrous metals or regulated metal property, as such terms are defined in Code Section 10–1–350, and the sum of the aggregate amount of such property, in its original and undamaged condition, plus any reasonable costs which are or would be incurred in the repair or the attempt to recover any property damaged in the theft or removal of such regulated metal property, exceeds $500.00, by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years, a fine of not more than $5,000.00, or both.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (5) of subsection (a) of this Code section, any person who commits the offense of theft by deception when the property which was the subject of the theft exceeded $500.00 in value and the offense was committed against a person who is 65 years of age or older shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than ten years.

(c) Where a violation of Code Sections 16–8–2 through 16–8–9 involves the theft of a growing or otherwise unharvested commercial agricultural product which is being grown or produced as a crop, such offense shall be punished by a fine of not less than $500.00 and not more than the maximum fine otherwise authorized by law. This minimum fine shall not in any such case be subject to suspension, stay, or probation. This minimum fine shall not be required in any case in which a sentence of confinement is imposed and such sentence of confinement is not suspended, stayed, or probated; but this subsection shall not prohibit imposition of any otherwise authorized fine in such a case.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment to subsec. (a)(2) made the provision gender neutral and inserted at the end ", a fine not to exceed the amount provided by Code Section 17–10–8, or both".

The 2001 amendment added subsec. (a)(6).

The 2003 amendment by Act 29, in subsec. (a), substituted "16–8–2 through 16–8–9" for "16–8–2 to 16–8–9" in the introductory paragraph, inserted a new par. (2), and redesignated former pars. (2) through (6) as pars. (3) through (7); in subsec. (b), substituted a reference to paragraph (5) for a reference to paragraph (4); and in subsec. (c) substituted "16–8–2 through 16–8–9" for "16–8–2 to 16–8–9".

The 2004 amendment by Act 793, in subsec. (a), added par. (8).

The 2006 amendment by Act 545, in subsec. (a), par. (8), substituted "and, if applicable, the revocation of the defendant's commercial driver's license in accordance with Code Section 40–5–151, or any combination of such penalties" for "or both such fine and imprisonment".

The 2007 amendment by Act 345, in subsec. (a), added par. (9).

The 2009 amendment by Act 150, in subsec. (a), par. (9), inserted "sum of the" preceding "aggregate amount" and inserted ", plus any reasonable costs which are or would be incurred in the repair or the attempt to recover any property damaged in the theft or removal of such regulated metal property" preceding "exceeds $500.00".

§ 16–8–13. Theft of a trade secret

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Article" means any object, material, device, substance, or copy thereof, including any writing, record, recording, drawing, sample, specimen, prototype, model, photograph, microorganism, blueprint, or map.

(2) "Copy" means any facsimile, replica, photograph, or other reproduction of an article and any note, drawing, or sketch made of or from an article.

(3) "Representing" means describing, depicting, containing, constituting, reflecting, or recording.

(4) "Trade secret" means information, without regard to form, including, but not limited to, technical or nontechnical data, a formula, a pattern, a compilation, a program, a device, a method, a technique, a drawing, a process, financial data, financial plans, product plans, or a list of actual or potential customers or suppliers which is not commonly known by or available to the public and which information:

(A) Derives economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to, and not being readily ascertainable by proper means by, other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use; and

(B) Is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.

(b) Any person who, with the intent to deprive or withhold from the owner thereof the exclusive use of a trade secret, or with an intent to appropriate a trade secret to his or her own use or to the use of another, does any of the following:

(1) Takes, uses, or discloses such trade secret to an unauthorized person;

(2) Acquires knowledge of such trade secret by deceitful means or artful practice; or

(3) Without authority, makes or causes to be made a copy of an article representing such trade secret commits the offense of theft of a trade secret and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years and by a fine of not more than $50,000.00, provided that, if the value of such trade secret, and any article representing such trade secret that is taken, is not more than $100.00 such person shall be punished as for a misdemeanor.

(c) In a prosecution for any violation of this Code section, a court shall preserve the secrecy of an alleged trade secret by reasonable means, which may include granting protective orders in connection with discovery proceedings, holding in camera hearings, sealing the records of the action, and ordering any person involved in the litigation not to disclose an alleged trade secret without prior court approval.

(d) For the purposes of this Code section, a continuing theft by any person constitutes a single claim against that person, but this Code section shall be applied separately to the claim against each person who receives a trade secret from another person who committed the theft.

(e) This Code section shall not affect:

(1) Contractual duties or remedies, whether or not based on theft of a trade secret; or

(2) The provisions of Code Sections 10–1–761 through 10–1–767, pertaining to civil offenses and remedies involving the misappropriation of a trade secret, or other civil or criminal laws that presently apply or in the future may apply to any transaction or course of conduct that violates this Code section.

§ 16–8–14. Theft by shoplifting

(a) A person commits the offense of theft by shoplifting when he alone or in concert with another person, with the intent of appropriating merchandise to his own use without paying for the same or to deprive the owner of possession thereof or of the value thereof, in whole or in part, does any of the following:

(1) Conceals or takes possession of the goods or merchandise of any store or retail establishment;

(2) Alters the price tag or other price marking on goods or merchandise of any store or retail establishment;

(3) Transfers the goods or merchandise of any store or retail establishment from one container to another;

(4) Interchanges the label or price tag from one item of merchandise with a label or price tag for another item of merchandise; or

(5) Wrongfully causes the amount paid to be less than the merchant's stated price for the merchandise.

(b)(1) A person convicted of the offense of theft by shoplifting, as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, when the property which was the subject of the theft is $ 300.00 or less in value shall be punished as for a misdemeanor; provided, however, that:

(A) Upon conviction of a second offense for shoplifting, where the first offense is either a felony or a misdemeanor, as defined by this Code section, in addition to or in lieu of any imprisonment which might be imposed, the defendant shall be fined not less than $ 250.00 and the fine shall not be suspended or probated;

(B) Upon conviction of a third offense for shoplifting, where the first two offenses are either felonies or misdemeanors, or a combination of a felony and a misdemeanor, as defined by this Code section, in addition to or in lieu of any fine which might be imposed, the defendant shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 30 days or confinement in a "special alternative incarceration-probation boot camp," probation detention center, diversion center, or other community correctional facility of the Department of Corrections for a period of 120 days or shall be sentenced to monitored house arrest for a period of 120 days and, in addition to either such types of confinement, may be required to undergo psychological evaluation and treatment to be paid for by the defendant; and such sentence of imprisonment or confinement shall not be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld; and

(C) Upon conviction of a fourth or subsequent offense for shoplifting, where the prior convictions are either felonies or misdemeanors, or any combination of felonies and misdemeanors, as defined by this Code section, the defendant commits a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years; and the first year of such sentence shall not be suspended, probated, deferred, or withheld.

(2) A person convicted of the offense of theft by shoplifting, as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, when the property which was the subject of the theft exceeds $ 300.00 in value commits a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

(3) A person convicted of the offense of theft by shoplifting, as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, when the property which was the subject of the theft is taken from three separate stores or retail establishments within one county during a period of seven days or less and when the property which was the subject of each theft exceeds $ 100.00 in value, commits a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

(c) In all cases involving theft by shoplifting, the term "value" means the actual retail price of the property at the time and place of the offense. The unaltered price tag or other marking on property, or duly identified photographs thereof, shall be prima-facie evidence of value and ownership of the property.

(d) Subsection (b) of this Code section shall in no way affect the authority of a sentencing judge to provide for a sentence to be served on weekends or during the nonworking hours of the defendant as provided in Code Section 17–10–3, relative to punishment for misdemeanors.

§ 16–8–16. Theft by extortion

(a) A person commits the offense of theft by extortion when he unlawfully obtains property of or from another person by threatening to:

(1) Inflict bodily injury on anyone or commit any other criminal offense;

(2) Accuse anyone of a criminal offense;

(3) Disseminate any information tending to subject any person to hatred, contempt, or ridicule or to impair his credit or business repute;

(4) Take or withhold action as a public official or cause an official to take or withhold action;

(5) Bring about or continue a strike, boycott, or other collective unofficial action if the property is not demanded or received for the benefit of the group in whose interest the actor purports to act; or

(6) Testify or provide information or withhold testimony or information with respect to another's legal claim or defense.

(b) In a prosecution under this Code section, the crime shall be considered as having been committed in the county in which the threat was made or received or in the county in which the property was unlawfully obtained.

(c) It is an affirmative defense to prosecution based on paragraph (2), (3), (4), or (6) of subsection (a) of this Code section that the property obtained by threat of accusation, exposure, legal action, or other invocation of official action was honestly claimed as restitution or indemnification for harm done in the circumstance to which such accusation, exposure, legal action, or other official action relates or as compensation for property or lawful services.

(d) A person convicted of the offense of theft by extortion shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

§ 16–8–20. Livestock theft

(a) A person commits the offense of livestock theft when he unlawfully takes or, being in lawful possession thereof, unlawfully appropriates any livestock of another with the intention of depriving the owner of such livestock.

(b) For the purposes of this Code section, the term "livestock" means horses, cattle, swine, sheep, goats, rabbits, and any domestic animal produced as food for human consumption.

(c) Any person committing the offense of livestock theft commits a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years and by a fine of $1,000.00; provided, however, that, if the fair market value of the livestock taken or appropriated is $100.00 or less, the person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(d) For the purposes of this Code section, if any livestock is killed or mutilated and a portion thereof taken, the value of the whole animal while alive or his entire carcass, whichever is greater, shall be considered for the purpose of distinguishing between a misdemeanor offense and a felony offense.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2008, Act 534, § 7, in subsec. (b), removed ratites from the scope of the subsection.

§ 16–8–21. Removal, larceny, or abandonment of shopping carts; penalties

(a) As used in this Code section, "shopping cart" means those pushcarts of the type which are commonly provided by grocery stores, drugstores, or other merchant stores or markets for the use of the public in transporting commodities in stores and markets and incidentally from the store to a place outside the store.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person to remove a shopping cart from the premises, posted as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section, of the owner of such shopping cart without the consent, given at the time of such removal, of the owner or of his agent, servant, or employee. For the purpose of this Code section, the premises shall include all the parking area set aside by the owner or on behalf of the owner for the parking of cars for the convenience of the patrons of the owner.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any person to abandon a shopping cart upon any public street, sidewalk, way, or parking lot other than a parking lot on the premises of the owner.

(d) The owner of the store in which the shopping cart is used shall post in at least three prominent places in his store and at each exit therefrom a printed copy of this Code section, which copy shall be printed in type no smaller than 12 points.

(e) Any person who violates subsection (b) or (c) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Article 2

Robbery

§ 16–8–40. Robbery

(a) A person commits the offense of robbery when, with intent to commit theft, he takes property of another from the person or the immediate presence of another:

(1) By use of force;

(2) By intimidation, by the use of threat or coercion, or by placing such person in fear of immediate serious bodily injury to himself or to another; or

(3) By sudden snatching.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of robbery shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 20 years.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Code section, any person who commits the offense of robbery against a person who is 65 years of age or older shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than 20 years.

§ 16–8–41. Armed robbery; robbery by intimidation

(a) A person commits the offense of armed robbery when, with intent to commit theft, he or she takes property of another from the person or the immediate presence of another by use of an offensive weapon, or any replica, article, or device having the appearance of such weapon. The offense of robbery by intimidation shall be a lesser included offense in the offense of armed robbery.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of armed robbery shall be punished by death or imprisonment for life or by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than 20 years.

(c)(1) The preceding provisions of this Code section notwithstanding, in any case in which the defendant commits armed robbery and in the course of the commission of the offense such person unlawfully takes a controlled substance from a pharmacy or a wholesale druggist and intentionally inflicts bodily injury upon any person, such facts shall be charged in the indictment or accusation and, if found to be true by the court or if admitted by the defendant, the defendant shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than 15 years.

(2) As used in this subsection, the term:

(A) "Controlled substance" means a drug, substance, or immediate precursor in Schedules I through V of Code Sections 16–13–25 through 16–13–29.

(B) "Pharmacy" means any place licensed in accordance with Chapter 4 of Title 26 wherein the possessing, displaying, compounding, dispensing, or retailing of drugs may be conducted, including any and all portions of any building or structure leased, used, or controlled by the licensee in the conduct of the business licensed by the State Board of Pharmacy at the address for which the license was issued. The term pharmacy shall also include any building, warehouse, physician's office, or hospital used in whole or in part for the sale, storage, or dispensing of any controlled substance.

(C) "Wholesale druggist" means an individual, partnership, corporation, or association registered with the State Board of Pharmacy under Chapter 4 of Title 26.

(d) Any person convicted under this Code section shall, in addition, be subject to the sentencing and punishment provisions of Code Sections 17–10–6.1 and 17–10–7.

Article 3

Criminal Reproduction and Sale of Recorded Material

§ 16–8–60. Recorded material; unauthorized reproductions, manufacture, distribution and sale

(a) It is unlawful for any person, firm, partnership, corporation, or association knowingly to:

(1) Transfer or cause to be transferred any sounds or visual images recorded on a phonograph record, disc, wire, tape, videotape, film, or other article on which sounds or visual images are recorded onto any other phonograph record, disc, wire, tape, videotape, film, or article without the consent of the person who owns the master phonograph record, master disc, master tape, master videotape, master film, or other device or article from which the sounds or visual images are derived; or

(2) Sell; distribute; circulate; offer for sale, distribution, or circulation; possess for the purpose of sale, distribution, or circulation; cause to be sold, distributed, or circulated; cause to be offered for sale, distribution, or circulation; or cause to be possessed for sale, distribution, or circulation any article or device on which sounds or visual images have been transferred, knowing it to have been made without the consent of the person who owns the master phonograph record, master disc, master tape, master videotape, master film, or other device or article from which the sounds or visual images are derived.

(b) It is unlawful for any person, firm, partnership, corporation, or association to sell; distribute; circulate; offer for sale, distribution, or circulation; or possess for the purposes of sale, distribution, or circulation any phonograph record, disc, wire, tape, videotape, film, or other article on which sounds or visual images have been transferred unless such phonograph record, disc, wire, tape, videotape, film, or other article bears the actual name and address of the transferor of the sounds or visual images in a prominent place on its outside face or package.

(c) This Code section shall not apply to any person who transfers or causes to be transferred any such sounds or visual images:

(1) Intended for or in connection with radio or television broadcast transmission or related uses;

(2) For archival purposes; or

(3) Solely for the personal use of the person transferring or causing the transfer and without any profit being derived by the person from the transfer.

(d) Every person convicted of violating this Code section shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished as follows:

(1) Upon the first conviction of violating this Code section, by a fine of not less than $500.00 nor more than $25,000.00, by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than two years, or both such fine and imprisonment;

(2) Upon the second conviction of violating this Code section, by a fine of not less than $1,000.00 nor more than $100,000.00, by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than three years and the judge may suspend, stay, or probate all but 48 hours of any term of imprisonment, or both such fine and imprisonment; or

(3) Upon the third or subsequent conviction of violating this Code section, by a fine of not less than $2,000.00 nor more than $250,000.00, by imprisonment for not less than two nor more than five years and the judge may suspend, stay, or probate all but six days of any term of imprisonment, or both such fine and imprisonment.

(e) This Code section shall neither enlarge nor diminish the right of parties to enter into a private contract.

(f)(1) Any phonograph record, disc, wire, tape, videotape, film, or other article onto which sounds or visual images have been transferred shall be subject to forfeiture to the State of Georgia except that no property of any owner shall be forfeited under this paragraph, to the extent of the interest of such owner, by reason of an act or omission established by such owner to have been committed or omitted without knowledge or consent of such owner.

(2) The procedure for forfeiture and disposition of forfeited property under this subsection shall be as provided for under Code Section 16–13–49.

(g) For purposes of imposing restitution pursuant to Chapter 14 of Title 17 when a person is convicted pursuant to this Code section, the court shall consider damages to any owner or lawful producer of a master phonograph record, master disc, master tape, master videotape, master film, or other device or article from which sounds or visual images are derived. Restitution shall be based upon the aggregate wholesale value of lawfully manufactured and authorized recorded devices corresponding to the nonconforming recorded devices involved in the violation of this Code section and shall also include reasonable investigative costs related to the detection of the violation of this Code section.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2008 amendment by Act 448, in subsec. (c), substituted "shall not" for "does not"; rewrote subsec. (d); and added subsecs. (f) and (g). Prior to revision subsec. (d) read:

"(d) Violation of this Code section is a felony and is punishable upon conviction by a fine of not more than $25,000.00 or by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than two years, or both fine and imprisonment; second or subsequent violations of this Code section shall be punishable upon conviction by a fine of not more than $100,000.00 or by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than three years, or both fine and imprisonment."

§ 16–8–61. Sale, rental, loan, etc. of video movies unlawful unless official rating prominently displayed on covering

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Official rating" means the official rating of a motion picture by the Classification and Rating Administration of the Motion Picture Association of America.

(2) "Video movie" means a videotape, video cassette, video disc, any prerecorded video display or visual depiction, any prerecorded device that can be converted to a visual depiction, or other reproduction or reconstruction of a motion picture.

(b) No person may sell, rent, loan, or otherwise disseminate or distribute for monetary consideration a video movie unless the official rating of the motion picture from which the video movie is copied is clearly and prominently displayed in boldface type on the outside of the cassette, case, jacket, or other covering containing the video movie. Such video movie shall be clearly and prominently marked as "not rated" if:

(1) The motion picture from which the video movie is copied has no official rating;

(2) The official rating of the motion picture from which the video movie is copied is not readily available to such person; or

(3) The video movie has been altered so that its content materially differs from the motion picture.

(c) Any person who violates subsection (b) of this Code section shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $100.00.

Laws 1987, p. 1384, § 1.

§ 16–8–62. Film piracy; violations and penalties

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Audiovisual recording device" means any device capable of recording or transmitting a motion picture, or any part thereof, using any technology now known or later developed.

(2) "Facility" shall not include a personal residence.

(b) Any person who knowingly operates the recording function of an audiovisual recording device while a motion picture is being exhibited, without the consent of the owner, operator, or lessee of the exhibition facility and of the licensor of the motion picture being exhibited, shall be guilty of film piracy.

(c) The provisions of this Code section shall not be construed to prevent any lawfully authorized investigative, law enforcement, or intelligence personnel of the state or federal government from operating any audiovisual recording device in a facility where a motion picture is being exhibited as part of their official duties or activities.

(d) This Code section is not applicable to a person who operates an audiovisual recording device in a retail establishment solely to demonstrate the use of the device for sales purposes.

(e) A prosecution under this Code section shall not preclude obtaining any other civil or criminal remedy under any other provision of law.

(f) Violation of this Code section is a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature and punishable upon conviction as provided in Code Section 17–10–4. A second or subsequent conviction for violation of this Code section shall be punishable as a felony.

Laws 2004, Act 663, § 1, eff. July 1, 2004.

Article 4

Motor Vehicle Chop Shops and Stolen and Altered Property

§ 16–8–80. Short title

This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Motor Vehicle Chop Shop and Stolen and Altered Property Act."

Laws 1991, p. 1805, § 1.

§ 16–8–81. Legislative intent

(a) The General Assembly finds and declares the following:

(1) The annual number of reported motor vehicle thefts has exceeded 1 million. Approximately 50 percent of all larcenies reported to law enforcement authorities in the United States are directed against motor vehicles. The recovery rate of stolen motor vehicles has decreased significantly during the most recent decade;

(2) Thefts of motor vehicles and the disposition of stolen motor vehicles and motor vehicle parts are becoming more professional in nature. Such theft and disposition activities have attracted criminal elements which have used intimidation and violence as a means of obtaining increased control of such activities;

(3) The theft of motor vehicles has brought increased and unnecessary burdens to motor vehicle users and taxpayers, as the national financial cost of motor vehicle related theft offenses currently approaches $5 billion annually;

(4) Prosecutors should give increased emphasis to the prosecution of persons committing motor vehicle thefts, with particular emphasis given to professional motor vehicle theft operations and to persons engaged in the dismantling of stolen motor vehicles for the purpose of trafficking in stolen motor vehicle parts; and

(5) Traditional law enforcement strategies and techniques that concentrate on bringing criminal penalties to bear on motor vehicle thieves, but do not focus on chop shops that are heavily involved in the dismantling of stolen motor vehicles or the distribution of motor vehicle parts and that do not enlist the assistance of private enforcement and use civil sanctions, are inadequate to control motor vehicle theft, as well as related offenses. Comprehensive strategies must be formulated; more effective law enforcement techniques must be developed; evidentiary, procedural, and substantive laws must be strengthened; and criminal penalties and civil sanctions must be enhanced.

(b) The General Assembly, therefore, concludes that for the protection of the general public interest, the "Motor Vehicle Chop Shop and Stolen and Altered Property Act" shall be enacted.

Laws 1991, p. 1805, § 1.

§ 16–8–82. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Chop shop" means any building, lot, or other premise where one or more persons knowingly engage in altering, destroying, disassembling, dismantling, reassembling, or storing any motor vehicle or motor vehicle part known to be illegally obtained by theft, fraud, or conspiracy to defraud in order to either:

(A) Alter, counterfeit, deface, destroy, disguise, falsify, forge, obliterate, or remove the identification, including the vehicle identification number of such motor vehicle or motor vehicle part, in order to misrepresent the identity of such motor vehicle or motor vehicle part or to prevent the identification of such motor vehicle or motor vehicle part; or

(B) Sell or dispose of such motor vehicle or motor vehicle part.

(2) "Motor vehicle" includes every device in, upon, or by which any person or property is or may be transported or drawn upon a highway which is self-propelled or which may be connected to and towed by a self-propelled device and also includes any and all other land based devices which are self-propelled but which are not designed for use upon a highway, including, but not limited to, farm machinery and construction equipment.

(3) "Person" includes a natural person, company, corporation, unincorporated association, partnership, professional corporation, and any other legal entity.

(4) "Unidentifiable" means that the uniqueness of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle part cannot be established by either expert law enforcement investigative personnel specially trained and experienced in motor vehicle theft investigative procedures and motor vehicle identification examination techniques or by expert employees of not for profit motor vehicle theft prevention agencies specially trained and experienced in motor vehicle theft investigation procedures and motor vehicle identification examination techniques.

(5) "Vehicle identification number" includes, but is not limited to, a number or numbers, a letter or letters, a character or characters, a datum or data, a derivative or derivatives, or a combination or combinations thereof, used by the manufacturer or the Department of Revenue for the purpose of uniquely identifying a motor vehicle or motor vehicle part.

Laws 1991, p. 1805, § 1; Laws 2002, p. 415, § 16; Laws 2003, Act 9, § 16, eff. May 14, 2003; Laws 2005, Act 68, § 6–1, eff. July 1, 2005.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2002 amendment to par. (5) substituted for "Revenue" the words "Motor Vehicle Safety".

The 2003 amendment by Act 9, in par. (4), substituted "not for profit" for "not–for–profit".

The 2005 amendment by Act 68, in par. (5), substituted "Department of Revenue" for "Department of Motor Vehicle Safety".

§ 16–8–83. Offenses and penalties

(a) Any person who knowingly and with intent:

(1) Owns, operates, or conducts a chop shop;

(2) Transports any motor vehicle or motor vehicle part to or from a location knowing it to be a chop shop; or

(3) Sells, transfers, purchases, or receives any motor vehicle or motor vehicle part either to or from a location knowing it to be a chop shop shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than three years nor more than ten years, by a fine of not more than $100,000.00, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(b) Any person who knowingly alters, counterfeits, defaces, destroys, disguises, falsifies, forges, obliterates, or removes a vehicle identification number with the intent to misrepresent the identity or prevent the identification of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle part shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years, by a fine of not more than $50,000.00, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(c)(1) Any person who buys, disposes, sells, transfers, or possesses a motor vehicle or motor vehicle part with knowledge that the vehicle identification number of the motor vehicle or motor vehicle part has been altered, counterfeited, defaced, destroyed, disguised, falsified, forged, obliterated, or removed shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years, by a fine of not more than $50,000.00, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(2) The provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not apply to a motor vehicle scrap processor who, in the normal legal course of business and in good faith, processes a motor vehicle or motor vehicle part by crushing, compacting, or other similar methods, provided that any vehicle identification number is not removed from the motor vehicle or motor vehicle part prior to or during any such processing.

(3) The provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not apply to any owner or authorized possessor of a motor vehicle recovered by law enforcement authorities after having been stolen or where the condition of the vehicle identification number of the motor vehicle or motor vehicle part is known to or has been reported to law enforcement authorities. It shall be presumed that law enforcement authorities have knowledge of all vehicle identification numbers on a motor vehicle or motor vehicle part which are altered, counterfeited, defaced, disguised, falsified, forged, obliterated, or removed when law enforcement authorities deliver or return the motor vehicle or motor vehicle part to its owner or authorized possessor after it has been recovered by law enforcement authorities after having been reported stolen.

(d) A person commits the offense of attempted operation of a chop shop when, with the intent to commit a violation proscribed by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Code section, the person does any act which constitutes a substantial step toward the commission of a violation proscribed by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Code section; and such person shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years, by a fine of not more than $25,000.00, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(e) A person commits the offense of conspiracy when, with the intent that a violation proscribed by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Code section be committed, the person agrees with another to the commission of a violation proscribed by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Code section; and such person shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years, by a fine of not more than $25,000.00, or by both such fine and imprisonment. No person may be convicted of conspiracy under this subsection unless an act in furtherance of such agreement is alleged and proved to have been committed by that person or a coconspirator.

(f) A person commits the offense of solicitation when, with the intent that a violation proscribed by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Code section be committed, the person commands, encourages, or requests another to commit a violation proscribed by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Code section; and such person shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years, by a fine of not more than $25,000.00, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(g) A person commits the offense of aiding and abetting when, either before or during the commission of a violation proscribed by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Code section and with the intent to promote or facilitate such commission, the person aids, abets, agrees, or attempts to aid another in the planning or commission of a violation proscribed by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Code section; and such person shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years, by a fine of not more than $25,000.00, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(h) A person is an accessory after the fact who maintains, assists, or gives any other aid to an offender while knowing or having reasonable grounds to believe the offender has committed a violation under subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Code section; and such person shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years, by a fine of not more than $25,000.00, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(i) No prosecution shall be brought and no person shall be convicted of any violation under this Code section where the acts of such person otherwise constituting a violation were done in good faith in order to comply with the laws or regulations of any state or territory of the United States or of the United States government.

(j) The sentence imposed upon a person convicted of any violation of this Code section shall not be reduced to less than one year of imprisonment for a second conviction or less than five years for a third or subsequent conviction, and no sentence imposed upon a person for a second or subsequent conviction of any violation of this Code section shall be suspended or reduced until such person shall have served the minimum period of imprisonment provided for in this Code section. A person convicted of a second or subsequent violation of this Code section shall not be eligible for probation, parole, furlough, or work release.

(k)(1) In addition to any other punishment, a person who violates this Code section shall be ordered to make restitution to the lawful owner or owners of the stolen motor vehicle or vehicles or the stolen motor vehicle part or parts, to the owner's insurer to the extent that the owner has been compensated by the insurer, and to any other person for any financial loss sustained as a result of a violation of this Code section.

(2) For purposes of this Code section, the term:

(A) "Financial loss" shall include, but not be limited to, loss of earnings, out-of-pocket and other expenses, repair and replacement costs, and claims payments.

(B) "Lawful owner" shall include an innocent bona fide purchaser for value of a stolen motor vehicle or motor vehicle part who does not know that the motor vehicle or part is stolen or an insurer to the extent that such insurer has compensated a bona fide purchaser for value.

(3) The court shall determine the extent and method of restitution required under this subsection. In an extraordinary case, the court may determine that the best interests of the victim and justice would not be served by ordering restitution. In any such case, the court shall make and enter specific written findings on the record concerning the extraordinary circumstances presented which mitigated against restitution.

Laws 1991, p. 1805, § 1; Laws 1992, p. 6, § 16.

§ 16–8–84. Seizure of motor vehicle, motor vehicle part, tool, implement, or instrumentality used or possessed in violation of law

(a) Any tool, implement, or instrumentality, including, but not limited to, a motor vehicle or motor vehicle part, used or possessed in connection with any violation of Code Section 16–8–83 may be seized by a member of a state or local law enforcement agency upon process issued by any court of competent jurisdiction.

(b) Seizure of property described in subsection (a) of this Code section may be made by a member of a state or local law enforcement agency without process if:

(1) The seizure is made in accordance with any applicable law or regulation;

(2) The seizure is incident to inspection under an administrative inspection warrant;

(3) The seizure is incident to a search made under a search warrant;

(4) The seizure is incident to a lawful arrest;

(5) The seizure is made pursuant to a valid consent to search;

(6) The property seized has been the subject of a prior judgment in favor of the state in a criminal proceeding or in an injunction or forfeiture proceeding under Code Section 16–8–86; or

(7) There are reasonable grounds to believe that the property is directly or indirectly dangerous to the health or safety of the public.

(c) When property is seized pursuant to this Code section, the seizing agency may:

(1) Place the property under seal; or

(2) Remove the property to a place selected and designated by the seizing agency.

Laws 1991, p. 1805, § 1.

§ 16–8–85. What is subject to forfeiture; forfeiture proceedings

(a) The following are subject to forfeiture unless obtained by theft, fraud, or conspiracy to defraud and the rightful owner is known or can be identified and located:

(1) Any tool;

(2) Any implement; or

(3) Any instrumentality, including, but not limited to, any motor vehicle or motor vehicle part, whether or not owned by the person from whose possession or control it was seized, which is used or possessed either in violation of Code Section 16–8–83 or to promote or facilitate a violation of Code Section 16–8–83.

(b) Any motor vehicle, other conveyance, or motor vehicle part used by any person as a common carrier is subject to forfeiture under this Code section where the owner or other person in charge of the motor vehicle, other conveyance, or motor vehicle part is a consenting party to a violation of Code Section 16–8–83.

(c)(1) Any motor vehicle, motor vehicle part, other conveyance, tool, implement, or instrumentality is not subject to forfeiture under this Code section by reason of any act or omission which the owner proves to have been committed or omitted without the owner's knowledge or consent.

(2) Seizing agencies shall utilize their best efforts to identify any seized motor vehicle or motor vehicle part to determine ownership or the identity of any other person having a right or interest in a seized motor vehicle or motor vehicle part. In its reasonable identification and owner location attempts, the seizing agency shall cause the stolen motor vehicle files of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation to be searched for stolen or wanted information on motor vehicles similar to the seized motor vehicle or consistent with the seized motor vehicle part.

(3) Where a motor vehicle part has an apparent value in excess of $ 1,000.00:

(A) The seizing agency shall consult with an expert of the type specified in paragraph (4) of Code Section 16–8–82; and

(B) The seizing agency shall also request searches of the on-line and off-line files of the National Crime Information Center and the National Automobile Theft Bureau when the Georgia Bureau of Investigation and Georgia Crime Information Center files have been searched with negative results.

(d) A forfeiture of a motor vehicle, motor vehicle part, or other conveyance encumbered by a bona fide security interest is subject to the interest of the secured party where the secured party neither had knowledge of nor consented to the act or omission forming the ground for the forfeiture.

(e) Property, as described in subsection (a) of this Code section, which is seized and held for forfeiture shall not be subject to replevin and is subject only to the order and judgments of a court of competent jurisdiction hearing the forfeiture proceedings.

(f)(1) A prosecutor in the county where the seizure occurs shall bring an action for forfeiture in a court of competent jurisdiction. The forfeiture action shall be brought within 60 days from the date of seizure except where the prosecutor in the sound exercise of discretion determines that no forfeiture action should be brought because of the rights of property owners, lienholders, or secured creditors or because of exculpatory, exonerating, or mitigating facts and circumstances.

(2) The prosecutor shall give notice of the forfeiture proceeding by mailing a copy of the complaint in the forfeiture proceeding to each person whose right, title, or interest is of record in the Department of Revenue, the Department of Transportation, the Federal Aviation Agency, or any other department or agency of this state, any other state or territory of the United States, or of the federal government if such property is required to be registered with any such department or agency.

(3) Notice of the forfeiture proceeding shall be given to any other such person as may appear, from the facts and circumstances, to have any right, title, or interest in or to the property.

(4) The owner of the property or any person having or claiming right, title, or interest in the property may within 60 days after the mailing of such notice file a verified answer to the complaint and may appear at the hearing on the action for forfeiture.

(5) The prosecutor shall show at a forfeiture hearing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that such property was used in the commission of a violation of Code Section 16–8–83 or was used or possessed to facilitate such violation.

(6) The owner of such property may show by a preponderance of the evidence that the owner did not know, and did not have reason to know, that the property was to be used or possessed in the commission of any violation or that any of the exceptions to forfeiture are applicable.

(7) Unless the prosecutor shall make the showing required of it, the court shall order the property released to the owner. Where the prosecutor has made such a showing, the court may order that:

(A) The property be destroyed by the agency which seized it or some other agency designated by the court;

(B) The property be delivered and retained for use by the agency which seized it or some other agency designated by the court; or

(C) The property be sold at public sale.

(g) A copy of a forfeiture order shall be filed with the sheriff of the county in which the forfeiture occurs and with each federal or state department or agency with which such property is required to be registered. Such order, when filed, constitutes authority for the issuance to the agency to whom the property is delivered and retained for use or to any purchaser of the property of a certificate of title, registration certificate, or other special certificate as may be required by law in consideration of the condition of the property.

(h) Proceeds from sale at public auction, after payment of all reasonable charges and expenses incurred by the agency designated by the court to conduct the sale in storing and selling the property, shall be paid into the general fund of the county of seizure.

(i) No motor vehicle, either seized under Code Section 16–8–84 or forfeited under this Code section, shall be released by the seizing agency or used or sold by an agency designated by the court unless any altered, counterfeited, defaced, destroyed, disguised, falsified, forged, obliterated, or removed vehicle identification number is corrected by the issuance and affixing of either an assigned or replacement vehicle identification number plate as may be appropriate under laws or regulations of this state.

(j) No motor vehicle part having any altered, counterfeited, defaced, destroyed, disguised, falsified, forged, obliterated, or removed vehicle identification number may be disposed of upon forfeiture except by destruction thereof, except that this subsection shall not apply to any such motor vehicle part which is assembled with and constitutes part of a motor vehicle.

(k) No motor vehicle or motor vehicle part shall be forfeited under this Code section solely on the basis that it is unidentifiable. Instead of forfeiture, any seized motor vehicle or motor vehicle part which is unidentifiable shall be the subject of a written report sent by the seizing agency to the Department of Revenue, which report shall include a description of the motor vehicle or motor vehicle part, including its color, if any; the date, time, and place of its seizure; the name of the person from whose possession or control it was seized; the grounds for its seizure; and the location where the same is held or stored.

(l) When a seized unidentifiable motor vehicle or motor vehicle part has been held for 60 days or more after the notice to the Department of Revenue specified in subsection (k) of this Code section has been given, the seizing agency, or its agent, shall cause the motor vehicle or motor vehicle part to be sold at a public sale to the highest bidder. Notice of the time and place of sale shall be posted in a conspicuous place for at least 30 days prior to the sale on the premises where the motor vehicle or motor vehicle part has been stored.

(m) When a seized unidentifiable motor vehicle or motor vehicle part has an apparent value of $ 1,000.00 or less, the seizing agency shall authorize the disposal of the motor vehicle or motor vehicle part, provided that no such disposition shall be made sooner than 60 days after the date of seizure.

(n) The proceeds of the public sale of an unidentifiable motor vehicle or motor vehicle part shall be deposited into the general fund of the state, county, or municipal corporation employing the seizing agency after deduction of any reasonable and necessary towing and storage charges.

(o) Seizing agencies shall utilize their best efforts to arrange for the towing and storing of motor vehicles and motor vehicle parts in the most economical manner possible. In no event shall the owner of a motor vehicle or a motor vehicle part be required to pay more than the minimum reasonable costs of towing and storage.

(p) A seized motor vehicle or motor vehicle part that is neither forfeited nor unidentifiable shall be held subject to the order of the court in which the criminal action is pending or, if a request for its release from such custody is made, until the prosecutor has notified the defendant or the defendant's attorney of such request and both the prosecution and defense have been afforded a reasonable opportunity for an examination of the property to determine its true value and to produce or reproduce, by photographs or other identifying techniques, legally sufficient evidence for introduction at trial or other criminal proceedings. Upon expiration of a reasonable time for the completion of the examination, which in no event shall exceed 14 days from the date of service upon the defense of the notice of request for return of property as provided in this subsection, the property shall be released to the person making such request after satisfactory proof of such person's entitlement to the possession thereof. Notwithstanding the foregoing, upon application by either party with notice to the other, the court may order retention of the property if it determines that retention is necessary in the furtherance of justice.

(q) When a seized vehicle is forfeited, restored to its owner, or disposed of as unidentifiable, the seizing agency shall retain a report of the transaction for a period of at least one year from the date of the transaction.

(r) When an applicant for a certificate of title or salvage certificate of title presents to the Department of Revenue proof that the applicant purchased or acquired a motor vehicle at public sale conducted pursuant to this Code section and such fact is attested to by the seizing agency, the Department of Revenue shall issue a certificate of title or a salvage certificate of title, as determined by the state revenue commissioner, for such motor vehicle upon receipt of the statutory fee, a properly executed application for a certificate of title or other certificate of ownership, and the affidavit of the seizing agency that a state assigned number was applied for and affixed to the motor vehicle prior to the time that the motor vehicle was released by the seizing agency to the purchaser.

Laws 1991, p. 1805, § 1; Laws 1992, p. 6, § 16; Laws 2000, p. 951, § 12–2; Laws 2005, Act 68, § 6–2, eff. July 1, 2005.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment, effective July 1, 2001, throughout the section substituted for "Revenue" the words "Motor Vehicle Safety".

The 2005 amendment by Act 68, in subsecs. (f)(2), (k), and (l), substituted "Department of Revenue" for "Department of Motor Vehicle Safety"; and, in subsec. (r), substituted "Department of Revenue" for "Department of Motor Vehicle Safety" twice and substituted "state revenue commissioner" for "commissioner of motor vehicle safety".

§ 16–8–86. Civil actions

(a) The Attorney General, any prosecutor, or any aggrieved person may institute a civil action against any person in a court of competent jurisdiction seeking relief from conduct constituting a violation of any provision of this article. If the plaintiff in such action proves the alleged violation, or its threat, by a preponderance of the evidence, any court of competent jurisdiction after due provision for the rights of innocent persons shall grant relief by entering any appropriate order or judgment, including, but not limited to:

(1) Ordering any defendant to be divested of any interest in any property;

(2) Imposing reasonable restrictions upon the future activities or investments of any defendant, including prohibiting any defendant from engaging in the same type of endeavor as the defendant was engaged in previously;

(3) Ordering the suspension or revocation of a license, permit, or prior approval granted by any public agency or any other public authority; or

(4) Ordering the surrender of the charter of a corporation organized under the laws of this state or the revocation of a certificate authorizing a foreign corporation to conduct business within this state upon a finding that the board of directors or a managerial agent acting on behalf of the corporation, in conducting the affairs of the corporation, has authorized or engaged in conduct made unlawful by this article and that, for the prevention of future criminal conduct, the public interest requires the charter of the corporation be surrendered and the corporation dissolved or the certificate to conduct business in this state revoked.

(b) In a proceeding under this Code section, injunctive relief shall be granted in conformity with the principles that govern the granting of relief from injury or threatened injury in other cases, but no showing of special or irreparable injury shall have to be made. Pending final determination of a proceeding under this Code section, a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction may be issued upon a showing of immediate danger of significant injury, including the possibility that any judgment for money damages might be difficult to execute, and, in a proceeding initiated by an aggrieved person, upon the execution of proper bond against injury for an injunction improvidently granted.

(c) Any person injured, directly or indirectly, by conduct constituting a violation by any person of Code Section 16–8–83 shall, in addition to any other relief, have a cause of action for threefold the actual damages sustained by the person.

(d) A final judgment or decree rendered against the defendant in any civil or criminal proceeding shall estop the defendant in any subsequent civil action or proceeding brought by any person as to all matters to which the judgment or decree would be an estoppel as between the parties to the civil or criminal proceeding.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of law providing for a shorter period of limitations, a civil action under this Code section may be commenced at any time within five years after the conduct made unlawful under Code Section 16–8–83 terminates or the cause of action accrues or within any longer statutory period that may be applicable. If any action is brought by a prosecutor to punish, prevent, or restrain any activity made unlawful under Code Section 16–8–83, the running of the period of limitations shall be suspended during the pendency of such action and for two years following its termination.

(f) Personal service of any process in an action under this Code section may be made upon any person outside the state if the person has engaged in any conduct constituting a violation of Code Section 16–8–83 in this state. The person shall be deemed to have thereby submitted to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state for the purposes of this subsection.

(g) Obtaining any civil remedy under this Code section shall not preclude obtaining any other civil or criminal remedy under this article or any other provision of law. Civil remedies under this Code section are supplemental and not exclusive.

Article 5

Residential Mortgage Fraud

§ 16–8–100. Short title

This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Georgia Residential Mortgage Fraud Act."

Laws 2005, Act 162, § 2, eff. May 5, 2005.

Historical and Statutory Notes

Laws 2005, Act 162, § 1, provides:

"The General Assembly finds and declares that fraud involving residential mortgages is at an all-time high in the United States and in Georgia. Mortgage lending institutions and borrowers have suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in losses due to residential mortgage fraud. Homeowners in neighborhoods plagued by mortgage fraud have witnessed the deterioration of their neighborhoods. Fraudulently inflated property values in their neighborhoods have resulted in substantial increases in property taxes. The General Assembly therefore concludes that for the protection of the general public, and particularly for the protection of borrowers, homeowners, lending institutions, and the integrity of the mortgage lending process, the "Georgia Residential Mortgage Fraud Act" shall be enacted."

§ 16–8–101. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Mortgage lending process" means the process through which a person seeks or obtains a residential mortgage loan including, but not limited to, solicitation, application, or origination, negotiation of terms, third-party provider services, underwriting, signing and closing, and funding of the loan. Documents involved in the mortgage lending process include, but are not limited to, uniform residential loan applications or other loan applications; appraisal reports; HUD–1 settlement statements; supporting personal documentation for loan applications such as W–2 forms, verifications of income and employment, bank statements, tax returns, and payroll stubs; and any required disclosures.

(2) "Pattern of residential mortgage fraud" means one or more misstatements, misrepresentations, or omissions made during the mortgage lending process that involve two or more residential properties, which have the same or similar intents, results, accomplices, victims, or methods of commission or otherwise are interrelated by distinguishing characteristics.

(3) "Person" means a natural person, corporation, company, limited liability company, partnership, trustee, association, or any other entity.

(4) "Residential mortgage loan" means a loan or agreement to extend credit made to a person, which loan is secured by a deed to secure debt, security deed, mortgage, security interest, deed of trust, or other document representing a security interest or lien upon any interest in one-to-four family residential property located in Georgia including the renewal or refinancing of any such loan.

Laws 2005, Act 162, § 2, eff. May 5, 2005; Laws 2006, Act 453, § 16, eff. April 14, 2006.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2006 amendment by Act 453 was a provision contained in a correction bill.

§ 16–8–102. Residential mortgage fraud; elements

A person commits the offense of residential mortgage fraud when, with the intent to defraud, such person:

(1) Knowingly makes any deliberate misstatement, misrepresentation, or omission during the mortgage lending process with the intention that it be relied on by a mortgage lender, borrower, or any other party to the mortgage lending process;

(2) Knowingly uses or facilitates the use of any deliberate misstatement, misrepresentation, or omission, knowing the same to contain a misstatement, misrepresentation, or omission, during the mortgage lending process with the intention that it be relied on by a mortgage lender, borrower, or any other party to the mortgage lending process;

(3) Receives any proceeds or any other funds in connection with a residential mortgage closing that such person knew resulted from a violation of paragraph (1) or (2) of this Code section;

(4) Conspires to violate any of the provisions of paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of this Code section; or

(5) Files or causes to be filed with the official registrar of deeds of any county of this state any document such person knows to contain a deliberate misstatement, misrepresentation, or omission.

An offense of residential mortgage fraud shall not be predicated solely upon information lawfully disclosed under federal disclosure laws, regulations, and interpretations related to the mortgage lending process.

Laws 2005, Act 162, § 2, eff. May 5, 2005.

§ 16–8–103. Venue

For the purpose of venue under this article, any violation of this article shall be considered to have been committed:

(1) In the county in which the residential property for which a mortgage loan is being sought is located;

(2) In any county in which any act was performed in furtherance of the violation;

(3) In any county in which any person alleged to have violated this article had control or possession of any proceeds of the violation;

(4) If a closing occurred, in any county in which the closing occurred; or

(5) In any county in which a document containing a deliberate misstatement, misrepresentation, or omission is filed with the official registrar of deeds.

Laws 2005, Act 162, § 2, eff. May 5, 2005.

§ 16–8–104. Authority of Attorney General and district attorneys

District attorneys and the Attorney General shall have the authority to conduct the criminal investigation and prosecution of all cases of residential mortgage fraud under this article or under any other provision of this title. Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to preclude otherwise authorized law enforcement agencies from conducting investigations of offenses related to residential mortgage fraud.

Laws 2005, Act 162, § 2, eff. May 5, 2005; Laws 2010, Act 678, § 1, eff. July 1, 2010.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2010 amendment by Act 678 added the second sentence.

§ 16–8–105. Violation is a felony; penalties

(a) Any person violating this article shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years, by a fine not to exceed $5,000.00, or both.

(b) If a violation of this article involves engaging or participating in a pattern of residential mortgage fraud or a conspiracy or endeavor to engage or participate in a pattern of residential mortgage fraud, said violation shall be punishable by imprisonment for not less than three years nor more than 20 years, by a fine not to exceed $100,000.00, or both.

(c) Each residential property transaction subject to a violation of this article shall constitute a separate offense and shall not merge with any other crimes set forth in this title.

Laws 2005, Act 162, § 2, eff. May 5, 2005.

§ 16–8–106. Forfeiture of property

All real and personal property of every kind used or intended for use in the course of, derived from, or realized through a violation of this article shall be subject to forfeiture to the state. Forfeiture shall be had by the same procedure set forth in Code Section 16–14–7. District attorneys and the Attorney General may commence forfeiture proceedings under this article.

Forgery and Related Offenses

§ 16–9–1. Forgery in the first degree

(a) A person commits the offense of forgery in the first degree when with intent to defraud he knowingly makes, alters, or possesses any writing in a fictitious name or in such manner that the writing as made or altered purports to have been made by another person, at another time, with different provisions, or by authority of one who did not give such authority and utters or delivers such writing.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of forgery in the first degree shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1969, p. 857, § 6.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1701.

§ 16–9–2. Forgery in the second degree

(a) A person commits the offense of forgery in the second degree when with the intent to defraud he knowingly makes, alters, or possesses any writing in a fictitious name or in such manner that the writing as made or altered purports to have been made by another person, at another time, with different provisions, or by authority of one who did not give such authority.

(b) A person convicted of the offense of forgery in the second degree shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1969, p. 857, § 6; Laws 1982, p. 3, § 16.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1702.

§ 16–9–3. Definition of writing

For purposes of Code Sections 16–9–1 and 16–9–2, the word "writing" includes, but is not limited to, printing or any other method of recording information, money, coins, tokens, stamps, seals, credit cards, badges, trademarks, and other symbols of value, right, privilege, or identification.

Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1703.

§ 16–9–4. Possession, display, use, manufacture, alteration, sale, or distribution of false, fictitious, fraudulent, or altered identification document

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Access device" means a unique electronic identification number, address, description, or routing code or a device containing a unique electronic identification number, address, description, or routing code issued to an individual which permits or facilitates entry into a facility or computer or provides access to the financial resources, including, but not limited, to the credit resources of the individual to whom the device or card is issued.

(2) "Description" means any identifying information about a person, including, but not limited to, date of birth, place of birth, address, social security number, height, weight, hair or eye color, or unique biometric data such as fingerprint, voice print, retina or iris image, DNA profile, or other unique physical representation.

(3) "Government agency" means any agency of the executive, legislative, or judicial branch of government or political subdivision or authority thereof of this state, any other state, the United States, or any foreign government or international governmental or quasi-governmental agency recognized by the United States or by any of the several states.

(4) "Identification document" means:

(A) Any document or card issued to an individual by a government agency or by the authority of a government agency containing the name of a person and a description of the person or such person's photograph, or both, and includes, without being limited to, a passport, visa, military identification card, driver's license, or an identification card;

(B) Any document issued to an individual for the purpose of identification by or with the authority of the holder of a trademark or trade name of another, as these terms are defined in Code Section 10–1–371, that contains the trademark or trade name and the name of the person to whom the document is issued and a description of the person or the person's photograph, or both; or

(C) Any access device.

(b)(1) It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly possess, display, or use any false, fictitious, fraudulent, or altered identification document.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly manufacture, alter, sell, distribute, deliver, possess with intent to sell, deliver, or distribute, or offer for sale, delivery, or distribution a false, fraudulent, or fictitious identification document or any identification document which contains any false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or entry.

(3) It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly manufacture, alter, sell, distribute, deliver, possess with the intent to sell, deliver, or distribute, or offer for sale, delivery, or distribution any identification document containing the trademark or trade name of another without the written consent of the owner of the trademark or trade name.

(4) It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly possess, display, or use any false, fictitious, fraudulent, or altered identification document containing the logo or legal or official seal of a government agency or any colorable imitation thereof in furtherance of a conspiracy or attempt to commit a violation of the criminal laws of this state or of the United States or any of the several states which is punishable by imprisonment for one year or more.

(5) It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly manufacture, alter, sell, distribute, deliver, possess with the intent to sell, deliver, or distribute, or offer for sale or distribution any other identification document containing the logo or legal or official seal of a government agency or any colorable imitation thereof without the written consent of the government agency.

(6) It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly possess, display, or use an identification document issued to or on behalf of another person without the permission or consent of the other person for a lawful purpose, unless the identification document is possessed, displayed, or used with the intent to restore it to the other person or government agency or other entity that issued the identification document to the person.

(c)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) or (3) of this subsection, any person who violates the provisions of paragraph

(1), (3), or (6) of subsection (b) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, any person who violates the provisions of paragraph (1), (3), or (6) of subsection (b) of this Code section for the second or any subsequent offense shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $25,000.00 or by imprisonment for not more than three years, or both.

(3) Except as provided in paragraph (5) of this subsection, any person who manufactures, alters, sells, distributes, delivers, receives, possesses, or offers for sale or distribution three or more identification documents in violation of the provisions of subsection (b) of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than three nor more than ten years, a fine not to exceed $100,000.00, or both.

(4) Except as provided in paragraph (3) or (5) of this subsection, any person who violates the provisions of paragraph (2), (4), or (5) of subsection (b) of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years, a fine not to exceed $100,000.00, or both.

(5) Any person who is under 21 years of age and violates the provisions of subsection (b) of this Code section for the purpose of the identification being used to obtain entry into an age restricted facility or being used to purchase a consumable good that is age restricted, shall, upon a first conviction thereof, be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon a second or subsequent conviction shall be punished as for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(6) Any person convicted of an attempt or conspiracy to violate the provisions of subsection (b) of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment, by a fine, or by both such punishments not to exceed the maximum punishment prescribed for the offense the commission of which was the object of the attempt or conspiracy.

(d) Each violation of this Code section shall constitute a separate offense.

(e) Any violation of this Code section shall be considered to have been committed in any county of this state in which the evidence shows that the identification document was manufactured, altered, sold, displayed, distributed, delivered, received, offered for sale or distribution, or possessed.

(f) The provisions of this Code section shall not apply to any lawfully authorized investigative, protective, or intelligence activity of an agency of the United States, this state, or any of the several states or their political subdivisions or any activity authorized under Chapter 224 of Title 18 of the United States Code or any similar such law relating to witness protection.

(g) It shall not be a defense to a violation of this Code section that a false, fictitious, fraudulent, or altered identification document contained words indicating that it is not an identification document.

(h)(1) Any property which is used, intended for use, or used in any manner to facilitate a violation of this Code section is contraband and forfeited to the state and no person shall have a property interest in it. Such property may be seized or detained in the same manner as provided in Code Section 16–13–49 and shall not be subject to replevin, conveyance, sequestration, or attachment.

(2) Within 60 days of the date of the seizure of contraband pursuant to this Code section, the district attorney shall initiate forfeiture or other proceedings as provided in Code Section 16–13–49. An owner or interest holder, as defined by subsection (a) of Code Section 16–13–49, may establish as a defense to the forfeiture of property which is subject to forfeiture under this Code section the applicable provisions of subsection (e) or (f) of Code Section 16–13–49. Property which is forfeited pursuant to this Code section shall be disposed of and distributed as provided in Code Section 16–13–49.

(3) If property subject to forfeiture cannot be located; has been transferred or conveyed to, sold to, or deposited with a third party; is beyond the jurisdiction of the court; has been substantially diminished in value while not in the actual physical custody of a receiver or governmental agency directed to maintain custody of the property; or has been commingled with other property that cannot be divided without difficulty, the court shall order the forfeiture of any property of a claimant or defendant up to the value of property found by the court to be subject to forfeiture under this subsection in accordance with the procedures set forth in subsection (x) of Code Section 16–13–49.

(4) The provisions of paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) of subsection (x) and subsection (z) of Code Section 16–13–49 shall be applicable to any proceedings brought pursuant to this subsection.

(i) It shall be an affirmative defense to the manufacturing, selling, or distributing of identification documents that contain false, fictitious, or altered information that the person manufacturing, selling, or distributing the documents used due diligence to ascertain the truth of the information contained in the identification document.

Laws 1988, p. 760, § 1; Laws 2002, p. 551, § 1; Laws 2008, Act 714, § 1, eff. July 1, 2008; Laws 2009, Act 70, § 1, eff. Oct. 1, 2009.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2002 amendment rewrote this section which, prior thereto, provided:

"(a) As used in this Code section, the term "identification document" means any document issued by a government agency containing a description of the person or such person's photograph, or both, and giving such person's date of birth, and includes without being limited to a passport, military identification card, driver's license, or an identification card authorized under Code Sections 40–5–100 through 40–5–104.

"(b) (1) It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly manufacture, sell, or distribute a false identification document.

"(2) Any person who violates paragraph (1) of this subsection on the first offense shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Any person who violates paragraph (1) of this subsection for the second or any subsequent offense shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000.00 or by imprisonment for not more than three years, or both."

The 2008 amendment by Act 714 rewrote subsec. (c), which formerly read:

"(c)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) or (3) of this subsection, any person who violates paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (6) of subsection (b) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

"(2) Any person who violates paragraph (2), (3), or (6) of subsection (b) of this Code section for the second or any subsequent offense shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $25,000.00 or by imprisonment for not more than three years, or both.

"(3) Any person who manufactures, alters, sells, distributes, delivers, receives, possesses, or offers for sale or distribution three or more identification documents in violation of subsection (b) of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than three nor more than ten years, a fine not to exceed the amount specified by Code Section 17–10–8, or both.

"(4) Any person who violates paragraph (4) or (5) of subsection (b) of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years, a fine not to exceed the amount specified by Code Section 17–10–8, or both.

"(5) Any person convicted of an attempt or conspiracy to violate subsection (b) of this Code section shall be punished by imprisonment, by a fine, or by both such punishments not to exceed the maximum punishment prescribed for the offense the commission of which was the object of the attempt or conspiracy."

Laws 2008, Act 714, § 2, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2008, and shall apply to all offenses committed on or after that date."

The 2009 amendment by Act 70 rewrote subsec. (g) which had read:

"(g) It shall not be a defense to a violation of this Code section that a document contained words indicating that it is not an identification document unless there appears on the front and back of such document the word "novelty" which is in a color which is not transparent on the design of the document, is in block letters not less than 40 point type in size, and is indelible ink."

Laws 2009, Act 70, § 2, provides:

"This Act shall become effective on October 1, 2009, and shall apply to offenses committed on or after such date."

§ 16–9–5. Manufacture, sale, distribution, or possession of counterfeit or false proof of insurance document

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "proof of insurance document" means any document issued by, on behalf of, or purportedly on behalf of an insurer to a motor vehicle policyholder or applicant for motor vehicle coverage, which document is designed to constitute proof or evidence of the minimum motor vehicle liability insurance required by law for the purposes of Code Section 40–6–10.

(b)(1) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to manufacture, sell, or distribute a counterfeit or false proof of insurance document.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any person to possess a counterfeit or false proof of insurance document.

(3) A proof of insurance document shall be deemed counterfeit or false if the proof of insurance document has been altered, modified, or originally issued in any manner which contains false information concerning the insurer, the owner, the motor vehicle, or the insurance thereon.

(c)(1) Any person who violates paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of this Code section on the first offense shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Any person who violates paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of this Code section for the second or any subsequent offense shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $ 5,000.00 or by imprisonment for not more than three years, or both.

(2) Any person who violates paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Laws 1990, p. 1440, § 1; Laws 1991, p. 94, § 16; Laws 2000, p. 429, § 2.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment to subsec. (a) deleted "card, paper, or other" preceding "document issued".

§ 16–9–6. Breach of fiduciary obligation against person who is 65 years of age or older

Unless a greater penalty is specifically provided in this chapter, any violation of this chapter by a fiduciary in breach of a fiduciary obligation against a person who is 65 years of age or older shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than 15 years, a fine not to exceed the amount provided by Code Section 17–10–8, or both.

Laws 2000, p. 1085, § 4.

Article 2

Deposit Account Fraud

§ 16–9–20. Deposit account fraud

(a) A person commits the offense of deposit account fraud when such person makes, draws, utters, executes, or delivers an instrument for the payment of money on any bank or other depository in exchange for a present consideration or wages, knowing that it will not be honored by the drawee. For the purposes of this Code section, it is prima-facie evidence that the accused knew that the instrument would not be honored if:

(1) The accused had no account with the drawee at the time the instrument was made, drawn, uttered, or delivered;

(2) Payment was refused by the drawee for lack of funds upon presentation within 30 days after delivery and the accused or someone for him or her shall not have tendered the holder thereof the amount due thereon, together with a service charge, within ten days after receiving written notice that payment was refused upon such instrument. For purposes of this paragraph:

(A) Notice mailed by certified or registered mail or statutory overnight delivery evidenced by return receipt to the person at the address printed on the instrument or given at the time of issuance shall be deemed sufficient and equivalent to notice having been received as of the date on the return receipt by the person making, drawing, uttering, executing, or delivering the instrument. A single notice as provided in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph shall be sufficient to cover all instruments on which payment was refused and which were delivered within a ten-day period by the accused to a single entity, provided that the form of notice lists and identifies each instrument; and

(B) The form of notice shall be substantially as follows:

"You are hereby notified that the following instrument(s)

Number	Date	Amount	Name of Bank
_____	_____	_____	_____
_____	_____	_____	_____
_____	_____	_____	_____

drawn upon _____ and payable to _____, (has) (have) been dishonored. Pursuant to Georgia law, you have ten days from receipt of this notice to tender payment of the total amount of the instrument(s) plus the applicable service charge(s) of $ _____ and any fee charged to the holder of the instrument(s) by a bank or financial institution as a result of the instrument(s) not being honored, the total amount due being _____ dollars and _____ cents. Unless this amount is paid in full within the specified time above, a presumption in law arises that you delivered the instrument(s) with the intent to defraud and the dishonored instrument(s) and all other available information relating to this incident may be submitted to the magistrate for the issuance of a criminal warrant or citation or to the district attorney or solicitor-general for criminal prosecution."; or

(3) Notice mailed by certified or registered mail or statutory overnight delivery is returned undelivered to the sender when such notice was mailed within 90 days of dishonor to the person at the address printed on the instrument or given by the accused at the time of issuance of the instrument.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection and subsection (c) of this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of deposit account fraud shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished as follows:

(A) When the instrument is for less than $ 100.00, a fine of not more than $ 500.00 or imprisonment not to exceed 12 months, or both;

(B) When the instrument is for $ 100.00 or more but less than $ 300.00, a fine of not more than $ 1,000.00 or imprisonment not to exceed 12 months, or both; or

(C) When more than one instrument is involved and such instruments were drawn within 90 days of one another and each is in an amount less than $ 100.00, the amounts of such separate instruments may be added together to arrive at and be punishable under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph.

(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection and subsection (c) of this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of deposit account fraud, when the instrument is for an amount of not less than $ 300.00 nor more than $ 499.99, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. When more than one instrument is involved and such instruments were given to the same entity within a 15 day period and the cumulative total of such instruments is not less than $ 300.00 nor more than $ 499.99, the person drawing and giving such instruments shall upon conviction be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(3) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, a person convicted of the offense of deposit account fraud, when the instrument is for $ 500.00 or more, shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $ 500.00 nor more than $ 5,000.00 or by imprisonment for not more than three years, or both.

(4) Upon conviction of a first or any subsequent offense under this subsection or subsection (c) of this Code section, in addition to any other punishment provided by this Code section, the defendant shall be required to make restitution of the amount of the instrument, together with all costs of bringing a complaint under this Code section. The court may require the defendant to pay as interest a monthly payment equal to 1 percent of the amount of the instrument. Such amount shall be paid each month in addition to any payments on the principal until the entire balance, including the principal and any unpaid interest payments, is paid in full. Such amount shall be paid without regard to any reduction in the principal balance owed. Costs shall be determined by the court from competent evidence of costs provided by the party causing the criminal warrant or citation to issue; provided, however, that the minimum costs shall not be less than $ 25.00. Restitution may be made while the defendant is serving a probated or suspended sentence.

(c) A person who commits the offense of deposit account fraud by the making, drawing, uttering, executing, or delivering of an instrument on a bank of another state shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years or by a fine in an amount of up to $ 1,000.00, or both.

(d) The prosecuting authority of the court with jurisdiction over a violation of subsection (c) of this Code section may seek extradition for criminal prosecution of any person not within this state who flees the state to avoid prosecution under this Code section.

(e) In any prosecution or action under this Code section, an instrument for which the information required in this subsection is available at the time of issuance shall constitute prima-facie evidence of the identity of the party issuing or executing the instrument and that the person was a party authorized to draw upon the named account. To establish this prima-facie evidence, the following information regarding the identity of the party presenting the instrument shall be obtained by the party receiving such instrument: the full name, residence address, and home phone number.

(1) Such information may be provided by either of two methods:

(A) The information may be recorded upon the instrument itself; or

(B) The number of a check-cashing identification card issued by the receiving party may be recorded on the instrument. The check-cashing identification card shall be issued only after the information required in this subsection has been placed on file by the receiving party.

(2) In addition to the information required in this subsection, the party receiving an instrument shall witness the signature or endorsement of the party presenting such instrument and as evidence of such the receiving party shall initial the instrument.

(f) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Bank" shall include a financial institution as defined in this Code section.

(2) "Conviction" shall include the entering of a guilty plea, the entering of a plea of nolo contendere, or the forfeiting of bail.

(3) "Financial institution" shall have the same meaning as defined in paragraph (21) of Code Section 7–1–4 and shall also include a national bank, a state or federal savings bank, a state or federal credit union, and a state or federal savings and loan association.

(4) "Holder in due course" shall have the same meaning as in Code Section 11–3–302.

(5) "Instrument" means a check, draft, debit card sales draft, or order for the payment of money.

(6) "Present consideration" shall include without limitation:

(A) An obligation or debt of rent which is past due or presently due;

(B) An obligation or debt of state taxes which is past due or presently due;

(C) An obligation or debt which is past due or presently due for child support when made for the support of such minor child and which is given pursuant to an order of court or written agreement signed by the person making the payment;

(D) A simultaneous agreement for the extension of additional credit where additional credit is being denied; and

(E) A written waiver of mechanic's or materialmen's lien rights.

(7) "State taxes" shall include payments made to the Georgia Department of Labor as required by Chapter 8 of Title 34.

(g) This Code section shall in no way affect the authority of a sentencing judge to provide for a sentence to be served on weekends or during the nonworking hours of the defendant as provided in Code Section 17–10–3.

(h)(1) Any party holding a worthless instrument and giving notice in substantially similar form to that provided in subparagraph (a)(2)(B) of this Code section shall be immune from civil liability for the giving of such notice and for proceeding as required under the forms of such notice; provided, however, that, if any person shall be arrested or prosecuted for violation of this Code section and payment of any instrument shall have been refused because the maker or drawer had no account with the bank or other depository on which such instrument was drawn, the one causing the arrest or prosecution shall be deemed to have acted with reasonable or probable cause even though he, she, or it has not mailed the written notice or waited for the ten-day period to elapse. In any civil action for damages which may be brought by the person who made, drew, uttered, executed, or delivered such instrument, no evidence of statements or representations as to the status of the instrument involved or of any collateral agreement with reference to the instrument shall be admissible unless such statements, representations, or collateral agreement shall be written simultaneously with or upon the instrument at the time it is delivered by the maker thereof.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by law, any party who holds a worthless instrument, who complies with the requirements of subsection (a) of this Code section, and who causes a criminal warrant or citation to be issued shall not forfeit his or her right to continue or pursue civil remedies authorized by law for the collection of the worthless instrument; provided, however, that if interest is awarded and collected on any amount ordered by the court as restitution in the criminal case, interest shall not be collectable in any civil action on the same amount. It shall be deemed conclusive evidence that any action is brought upon probable cause and without malice where such party holding a worthless instrument has complied with the provisions of subsection (a) of this Code section regardless of whether the criminal charges are dismissed by a court due to payment in full of the face value of the instrument and applicable service charges subsequent to the date that affidavit for the warrant or citation is made. In any civil action for damages which may be brought by the person who made, drew, uttered, executed, or delivered such instrument, no evidence of statements or representations as to the status of the instrument involved or of any collateral agreement with reference to the instrument shall be admissible unless such statements, representations, or collateral agreement shall be written simultaneously with or upon the instrument at the time it is delivered by the maker thereof.

(i) Notwithstanding paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section or any other law on usury, charges, or fees on loans or credit extensions, any lender of money or extender of other credit who receives an instrument drawn on a bank or other depository institution given by any person in full or partial repayment of a loan, installment payment, or other extension of credit may, if such instrument is not paid or is dishonored by such institution, charge and collect from the borrower or person to whom the credit was extended a bad instrument charge. This charge shall not be deemed interest or a finance or other charge made as an incident to or as a condition to the granting of the loan or other extension of credit and shall not be included in determining the limit on charges which may be made in connection with the loan or extension of credit or any other law of this state.

(j) For purposes of this Code section, no service charge or bad instrument charge shall exceed $30.00 or 5 percent of the face amount of the instrument, whichever is greater, except that the holder of the instrument may also charge the maker an additional fee in an amount equal to that charged to the holder by the bank or financial institution as a result of the instrument not being honored.

(k) An action under this Code section may be prosecuted by the party initially receiving a worthless instrument or by any subsequent holder in due course of any such worthless instrument.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment by Act 837 inserted following the form in subsec. (a)(2) "and any fee charged to the holder of the instrument(s) by a bank or financial institution as a result of the instrument(s) not being honored", deleted in subsec. (b)(4) following "under this Code section" the words "plus the amount of any fees charged to the holder of the instrument by a bank or financial institution as a result of the instrument not being honored.", redefined the statutory reference in "bank" in subsec. (f)(1), inserted in subsec. (f)(3) "and shall also include a national bank, a state or federal savings bank, a state or federal credit union, and a state or federal savings and loan association", added subsec. (f)(7), and inserted at the end of subsec. (j) ", except that the holder of the instrument may also charge the maker an additional fee in an amount equal to that charged to the holder by the bank or financial institution as a result of the instrument not being honored."

The 2000 amendment by Act 918 substituted in subsecs. (a)(2)(A) and (a)(3) "certified mail or statutory overnight delivery" for "certified mail".

The 2003 amendment by Act 9, in subsec. (f), redesignated par. (7) as par. (4), and redesignated pars. (4) through (6) as pars. (5) through (7), respectively.

The 2003 amendment by Act 196, in subsec. (j), substituted "$30.00" for "$25.00".

§ 16–9–21. Printing, executing, or negotiating checks knowing check information is in error, fictitious, or assigned to another account holder

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person to print or cause to be printed checks, drafts, orders, or debit card sales drafts, drawn upon any financial institution or to execute or negotiate any check, draft, order, or debit card sales draft knowing that the account number, routing number, or other information printed on such check, draft, order, or debit card sales draft is in error, fictitious, or assigned to another account holder or financial institution.

(b) Any person who violates subsection (a) of this Code section shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000.00 or by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than five years, or both.

Article 3

Illegal Use of Financial Transaction Cards

§ 16–9–30. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Acquirer" means a business organization, financial institution, or an agent of a business organization or financial institution that authorizes a merchant to accept payment by financial transaction card for money, goods, services, or anything else of value.

(2) "Automated banking device" means any machine which when properly activated by a financial transaction card and personal identification code may be used for any of the purposes for which a financial transaction card may be used.

(3) "Cardholder" means the person or organization named on the face of a financial transaction card to whom or for whose benefit the financial transaction card is issued by an issuer.

(4) "Expired financial transaction card" means a financial transaction card which is no longer valid because the term for which it was issued has elapsed.

(5) "Financial transaction card" or "FTC" means any instrument or device, whether known as a credit card, credit plate, bank services card, banking card, check guarantee card, debit card, or by any other name, issued with or without fee by an issuer for the use of the cardholder:

(A) In obtaining money, goods, services, or anything else of value;

(B) In certifying or guaranteeing to a person or business the availability to the cardholder of funds on deposit that are equal to or greater than the amount necessary to honor a draft or check payable to the order of such person or business; or

(C) In providing the cardholder access to a demand deposit account, savings account, or time deposit account for the purpose of:

(i) Making deposits of money or checks therein;

(ii) Withdrawing funds in the form of money, money orders, or traveler's checks therefrom;

(iii) Transferring funds from any demand deposit account, savings account, or time deposit account to any other demand deposit account, savings account, or time deposit account;

(iv) Transferring funds from any demand deposit account, savings account, or time deposit account to any credit card accounts, overdraft privilege accounts, loan accounts, or any other credit accounts in full or partial satisfaction of any outstanding balance owed existing therein;

(v) For the purchase of goods, services, or anything else of value; or

(vi) Obtaining information pertaining to any demand deposit account, savings account, or time deposit account.

(5.1) "Financial transaction card account number" means a number, numerical code, alphabetical code, or alphanumeric code assigned by the issuer to a particular financial transaction card and which identifies the cardholder's account with the issuer.

(6) "Issuer" means the business organization or financial institution or its duly authorized agent which issues a financial transaction card.

(7) "Personal identification code" means a numeric or alphabetical code, signature, photograph, fingerprint, or any other means of electronic or mechanical confirmation used by the cardholder of a financial transaction card to permit authorized electronic use of that financial transaction card.

(8) "Presenting" means those actions taken by a cardholder or any person to introduce a financial transaction card into an automated banking device with or without utilization of a personal identification code or merely displaying or showing, with intent to defraud, a financial transaction card to the issuer or to any person or organization providing money, goods, services, or anything else of value or to any other entity.

(9) "Receives" or "receiving" means acquiring possession of or control of or accepting a financial transaction card as security for a loan.

(10) "Revoked financial transaction card" means a financial transaction card which is no longer valid because permission to use it has been suspended or terminated by the issuer.

Laws 1960, p. 1113, § 1; Laws 1968, p. 1249, § 1; Laws 1969, p. 128, § 1; Laws 1970, p. 529, §§ 1, 2; Laws 1980, p. 1083, § 1; Laws 1990, p. 304, § 1; Laws 1996, p. 371, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1705.

§ 16–9–31. Financial transaction card theft

(a) A person commits the offense of financial transaction card theft when:

(1) He takes, obtains, or withholds a financial transaction card from the person, possession, custody, or control of another without the cardholder's consent; or who, with knowledge that it has been so taken, obtained, or withheld, receives the financial transaction card with intent to use it or to sell it or to transfer it to a person other than the issuer or the cardholder;

(2) He receives a financial transaction card that he knows to have been lost, mislaid, or delivered under a mistake as to the identity or address of the cardholder and he retains possession with intent to use it or sell it or to transfer it to a person other than the issuer or the cardholder;

(3) He, not being the issuer, sells a financial transaction card or buys a financial transaction card from a person other than the issuer; or

(4) He, not being the issuer, during any 12 month period receives two or more financial transaction cards in the names of persons which he has reason to know were taken or retained under circumstances which constitute a violation of paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of Code Section 16–9–33 and paragraph (3) of this subsection.

(b) Taking, obtaining, or withholding a financial transaction card without consent of the cardholder or issuer is included in conduct defined in Code Section 16–8–2 as the offense of theft by taking.

(c) Conviction of the offense of financial transaction card theft is punishable as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–9–38.

(d) When a person has in his possession or under his control two or more financial transaction cards issued in the names of persons other than members of his immediate family or without the consent of the cardholder, such possession shall be prima-facie evidence that the financial transaction cards have been obtained in violation of subsection (a) of this Code section.

Validity

This section has been held unconstitutional, in part, in the case of Mohamed v. State, 2003, 276 Ga. 706, 583 S.E.2d 9.

§ 16–9–32. Forgery of financial transaction card

(a) A person commits the offense of financial transaction card forgery when:

(1) With intent to defraud a purported issuer; a person or organization providing money, goods, services, or anything else of value; or any other person, he falsely makes or falsely embosses a purported financial transaction card;

(2) With intent to defraud a purported issuer; a person or organization providing money, goods, services, or anything else of value; or any other person, he falsely encodes, duplicates, or alters existing encoded information on a financial transaction card or utters such a financial transaction card; or

(3) He, not being the cardholder or a person authorized by him, with intent to defraud the issuer; a person or organization providing money, goods, services, or anything else of value; or any other person, signs a financial transaction card.

(b) A person falsely makes a financial transaction card when he makes or draws in whole or in part a device or instrument which purports to be the financial transaction card of a named issuer but which is not such a financial transaction card because the issuer did not authorize the making or drawing or when he alters a financial transaction card which was validly issued.

(c) A person falsely embosses a financial transaction card when without authorization of the named issuer he completes a financial transaction card by adding any of the matter other than the signature of the cardholder, which an issuer requires to appear on the financial transaction card before it can be used by a cardholder.

(d) A person falsely encodes a financial transaction card when without authorization of the purported issuer he records, erases, or otherwise alters magnetically, electronically, electromagnetically, or by any other means whatsoever information on a financial transaction card which will permit acceptance of that card by any automated banking device.

(e) Conviction of the offense of financial transaction card forgery shall be punishable as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–9–38.

(f) When a person other than the purported issuer possesses two or more financial transaction cards which are falsely made, falsely encoded, or falsely embossed, such possession shall be prima-facie evidence that said cards were obtained in violation of paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section.

Laws 1969, p. 128, § 1; Laws 1980, p. 1083, § 1.

Formerly Code 1933, § 26–1705.3; Code 1933, § 26–1705.2.

§ 16–9–33. Financial transaction card fraud

(a) A person commits the offense of financial transaction card fraud when with intent to defraud the issuer; a person or organization providing money, goods, services, or anything else of value; or any other person, he:

(1) Uses for the purpose of obtaining money, goods, services, or anything else of value:

(A) A financial transaction card obtained or retained or which was received with knowledge that it was obtained or retained in violation of Code Section 16–9–31 or 16–9–32;

(B) A financial transaction card which he or she knows is forged, altered, expired, revoked, or was obtained as a result of a fraudulent application in violation of subsection (d) of this Code section; or

(C) The financial transaction card account number of a financial transaction card which he or she knows has not in fact been issued or is forged, altered, expired, revoked, or was obtained as a result of a fraudulent application in violation of subsection (d) of this Code section;

(2) Obtains money, goods, services, or anything else of value by:

(A) Representing without the consent of the cardholder that he or she is the holder of a specified card;

(B) Presenting the financial transaction card without the authorization or permission of the cardholder;

(C) Falsely representing that he or she is the holder of a card and such card has not in fact been issued; or

(D) Giving, orally or in writing, a financial transaction card account number to the provider of the money, goods, services, or other thing of value for billing purposes without the authorization or permission of the cardholder for such use;

(3) Obtains control over a financial transaction card as security for debt;

(4) Deposits into his account or any account by means of an automated banking device a false, fictitious, forged, altered, or counterfeit check, draft, money order, or any other such document not his lawful or legal property; or

(5) Receives money, goods, services, or anything else of value as a result of a false, fictitious, forged, altered, or counterfeit check, draft, money order, or any other such document having been deposited into an account via an automated banking device, knowing at the time of receipt of the money, goods, services, or item of value that the document so deposited was false, fictitious, forged, altered, or counterfeit or that the above-deposited item was not his lawful or legal property.

(b) A person who is authorized by an issuer to furnish money, goods, services, or anything else of value upon presentation of a financial transaction card by the cardholder or any agent or employee of such person commits the offense of financial transaction card fraud when, with intent to defraud the issuer or the cardholder, he:

(1) Furnishes money, goods, services, or anything else of value upon presentation of a financial transaction card obtained or retained in violation of Code Section 16–9–31 or a financial transaction card which he knows is forged, expired, or revoked;

(2) Alters a charge ticket or purchase ticket to reflect a larger amount than that approved by the cardholder; or

(3) Fails to furnish money, goods, services, or anything else of value which he represents in writing to the issuer that he has furnished.

(c) Conviction of the offense of financial transaction card fraud as provided in subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section is punishable as provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 16–9–38 if the value of all money, goods, services, and other things of value furnished in violation of this Code section or if the difference between the value actually furnished and the value represented to the issuer to have been furnished in violation of this Code section does not exceed $ 100.00 in any six-month period. Conviction of the offense of financial transaction card fraud as provided in subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section is punishable as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–9–38 if such value exceeds $ 100.00 in any six-month period.

(d) A person commits the offense of financial transaction card fraud when, upon application for a financial transaction card to an issuer, he knowingly makes or causes to be made a false statement or report relative to his name, occupation, employer, financial condition, assets, or liabilities or willfully and substantially overvalues any assets or willfully omits or substantially undervalues any indebtedness for the purpose of influencing the issuer to issue a financial transaction card. Financial transaction card fraud as provided in this subsection is punishable as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–9–38.

(e) A cardholder commits the offense of financial transaction card fraud when he willfully, knowingly, and with an intent to defraud the issuer; a person or organization providing money, goods, services, or anything else of value; or any other person submits verbally or in writing to the issuer or any other person any false notice or report of the theft, loss, disappearance, or nonreceipt of his financial transaction card and personal identification code. Conviction of the offense of financial transaction card fraud as provided in this subsection is punishable as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–9–38.

(f) A person authorized by an acquirer to furnish money, goods, services, or anything else of value upon presentation of a financial transaction card or a financial transaction card account number by a cardholder or any agent or employee of such person, who, with intent to defraud the issuer, acquirer, or cardholder remits to an issuer or acquirer, for payment, a financial transaction card record of a sale, which sale was not made by such person, agent, or employee, commits the offense of financial transaction card fraud. Conviction of the offense of financial transaction card fraud as provided in this subsection shall be punishable as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–9–38.

(g) In any prosecution for violation of this Code section, the state is not required to establish that all of the acts constituting the crime occurred in this state or within one city, county, or local jurisdiction, and it is no defense that some of the acts constituting the crime did not occur in this state or within one city, county, or local jurisdiction. Except as otherwise provided by Code Section 17–2–2, for purposes of venue the crime defined by this Code section shall be considered as having been committed in the county where the commission of the crime commenced.

(h) For purposes of this Code section, revocation shall be construed to include either notice given in person or notice given in writing to the person to whom the financial transaction card and personal identification code was issued. Notice of revocation shall be immediate when notice is given in person. The sending of a notice in writing by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery in the United States mail, duly stamped and addressed to such person at his last address known to the issuer, shall be prima-facie evidence that such notice was duly received after seven days from the date of deposit in the mail. If the address is located outside the United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the Canal Zone, and Canada, notice shall be presumed to have been received ten days after mailing by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery.

Historical and Statutory Notes

The 2000 amendment substituted twice in subsec. (h) "certified mail or statutory overnight delivery" for "certified mail".

§ 16–9–34. Criminal possession of financial transaction card forgery devices

(a) A person commits the offense of criminal possession of financial transaction card forgery devices when:

(1) He is a person other than the cardholder and possesses two or more incomplete financial transaction cards with intent to complete them without the consent of the issuer; or

(2) With knowledge of its character, he possesses machinery, plates, or any other contrivance designed to reproduce instruments purporting to be financial transaction cards of an issuer who has not consented to the preparation of such financial transaction cards.

(b) A financial transaction card is incomplete if part of the matter, other than the signature of the cardholder, which an issuer requires to appear on the financial transaction card before it can be used by a cardholder has not yet been stamped, embossed, imprinted, encoded, or written upon.

(c) Conviction of the offense of criminal possession of financial transaction card forgery devices is punishable as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 16–9–38.

Article 6

Computer Systems Protection

Part 1

Computer Related Crimes Generally

§ 16–9–90. Short title

This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Georgia Computer Systems Protection Act."

Laws 1991, p. 1045, § 1; Laws 1996, p. 6, § 16.

§ 16–9–91. Legislative intent

The General Assembly finds that:

(1) Computer related crime is a growing problem in the government and in the private sector;

(2) Such crime occurs at great cost to the public, since losses for each incident of computer crime tend to be far greater than the losses associated with each incident of other white collar crime;

(3) The opportunities for computer related crimes in state programs, and in other entities which operate within the state, through the introduction of fraudulent records into a computer system, unauthorized use of computer facilities, alteration or destruction of computerized information files, and stealing of financial instruments, data, or other assets are great;

(4) Computer related crime operations have a direct effect on state commerce;

(5) Liability for computer crimes should be imposed on all persons, as that term is defined in this title; and

(6) The prosecution of persons engaged in computer related crime is difficult under previously existing Georgia criminal statutes.

Laws 1991, p. 1045, § 1.

§ 16–9–92. Definitions

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Computer" means an electronic, magnetic, optical, hydraulic, electrochemical, or organic device or group of devices which, pursuant to a computer program, to human instruction, or to permanent instructions contained in the device or group of devices, can automatically perform computer operations with or on computer data and can communicate the results to another computer or to a person. The term includes any connected or directly related device, equipment, or facility which enables the computer to store, retrieve, or communicate computer programs, computer data, or the results of computer operations to or from a person, another computer, or another device. This term specifically includes, but is not limited to, mail servers and e–mail networks. This term does not include a device that is not used to communicate with or to manipulate any other computer.

(2) "Computer network" means a set of related, remotely connected computers and any communications facilities with the function and purpose of transmitting data among them through the communications facilities.
